1·0
2·8
2·5
5·0
3·15
2·2
5·6
3·5
6·3
2·0
4·0
1·1
4·5
1·8
1·25
1·4
1·6

NATIONAL BUREAU OF STANDARDS
MICROCOPY RESOLUTION TEST CHART

START

GREAT BRITAIN
LAW OFFICERS' OPINIONS

Clive Parry
Editor

Erwin C. Surrency
Microfilm Editor

Dobbs Ferry, New York
Trans - Media Publishing Company
1976

GREAT BRITAIN
LAW OFFICERS' # OPINIONS

REEL

2

PROPRIETARY STATEMENT

This film cannot be reproduced in whole or in any substantial part by use of film or microfiche either commercially or for gift without the consent of the publisher, Trans-Media Publishing Company of Dobbs Ferry, New York. Users are free to make reproductions of the decisions for reference use.

Copies of this film may be purchased from Trans-Media Publishing Co.

Trans-Media Publishing Co.
Dobbs Ferry, New York 10522

1867

Printed for the use of the Foreign Office. September 1869.

CONFIDENTIAL.

REPORTS

FROM

THE LAW OFFICERS

OF

THE CROWN.

1867.

1867

ALPHABETICAL INDEX.

BRAZIL.

- Claims of British subjects, 2.
  - ,, Statement presented by British Minister to Mixed Commission, 2.
  - ,, for losses during insurrection, 2.
  - ,, Priority of Treasury, 2.
  - ,, on account of contracts, 2.
- Hollocombe, Acting Consul, 1.
- Lang, Mr. Claim of, 4.
- St. João del Rey Mining Company, 5.
- Slaves. Employment by an English Mining Company. Violation of Statute Law of England by English shareholders, 5.
- "Thames," 1.
- Vessels. Belligerent. Right of crew to claim release, when employed through ignorance of character of, 1.

BUENOS AYRES.

- Stewart, Mr. Imprisonment, 7.

CENTRAL AMERICA.

- Claim of British subjects. Losses during revolution, 7, 8, 9.
  - ,, ,, Reference proposed, 7, 8, 9.
- Hall, Mr., 10.
- Nationality of the son of a British subject born in Guatemala, 10.
- San Geronimo Estate. Claim of owners, 7, 8, 9.
  - ,, ,, Proposed reference, 7, 8. 9.

CHILE.

- "Alice Ward," 13.
- "Colina," 12.
- Criminals. Conveyance of by British mail-packets, 14.
- Diplomatic Agents not called upon to act as legal advisers to British firms, 12.
- Gibraltar. Capture within waters of, 13.
- Loans. Forced. Exemption of British subjects, 11.
- Pacific Steam Navigation Company, 14.
- Spain. Refusal to allow landing of produce during hostilities, 12.
- "Thalaba," 10, 11.
- Transports. Legality of capture of neutral vessels employed as, 10, 11.
- Vessel. British employed as a transport. Legality of capture, 10, 11.

CHINA.

- Aberdeen Island. British jurisdiction, 24.
- Consuls. British. Appointment to Treaty ports, 28.
  - ,, Acting. Power to marry, 29.
- "Concession" and "Municipality." Use of terms, 17.
- Coolies. Kidnapped. Seizure by British vessel of war, 17.
- "Drake," 18.
- Extradition. Slaves, 26.
  - ,, Portuguese deserters, 27.
- France. Claim to jurisdiction at Shanghae, 19.
- Fees. Registration. Payment by Civil servants, 29.
- Great Britain. Chinese subjects. Costume, 22, 30.
  - ,, Rowdy subjects. Notification, 19.
  - ,, Subjects of Chinese origin. Protection, 22.
- Green Island. British jurisdiction, 24.
- Hankow. As to duty of Chinese Government to provide police, 17.
  - ,, Tenure of land, . 7.
- Hong Kong. Jurisdiction over waters adjacent to, 15, 17, 24.
- Hornby, Sir E., 21.
- Jurisdiction over waters adjacent to mainland, 15, 17, 24.
  - ,, British. Mode of conducting business, 21.
- Kellett Island. British jurisdiction, 24.
- Marriage Act. Amendments proposed by Consul Winchester, 18.
- Macao. Deserters from. Extradition, 27.
- "Municipalities" and "Concession." Use of terms, 17.
- Newchwang. Pilotage regulations, 24.
- Notification. Rowdy British subjects, 19.
  - ,, Costume of Chinese British subjects, 22, 30.
- Pilotage Regulations. Chinese, 25.
  - ,, Shanghae, 14.
- Ports. Treaty. Necessity of appointment of Consuls, 28.
- Portugal. Extradition of deserters, 27.
- Protection. British subjects of Chinese origin, 22.
  - ,, Chinese domiciled in ceded places, 22.
- Richardson, Mr., 28.
- Registration Fees. Payment by Civil servants, 29.
- Shanghae. French claim to jurisdiction, 19.
  - ,, French concession, 19.
  - ,, Vice-Admiralty Court, 25.
  - ,, Pilotage Regulations, 14.
  - ,, Land Regulations, 19.
- Slave Trade. Aid of British officers to Chinese authorities, 18.
  - ,, Non-interference with vessels of foreign States, 18.
  - ,, Extradition of a Chinese, 26.
- Vice-Admiralty Court. At Shanghae, 25.
- Winchester. Consul, 18.

COLOMBIA.

- Austin, H. D., 35.
- Barnett, J. E., 35.
- Bidwell. Vice-Consul. Assault on, 34.
- Bonds. Government. Inability to diminish value when guaranteed by Treaty, 31.
- Brandon, P., 31.
- Claims of British subjects. Support of, 35.
- Cotterill and Sons, 35.
- Contributions. Forced. During civil war, 32.
- Consul. Vice. Assault on, 34.
- Decree. Establishment of Prize Court during war between Spain and Peru, 31.
- Diplomatic Agent. Claim on, for house-rent, 35.
- Dues. Import. Payment in Government bonds, 31.
- "Italian Star." Legality of capture, 33, 34.
- Mosquera. General, 35.
- Neutrals. Exemption from forced contributions during civil war, 32.
- Panamá and Australian Royal Mail Company. Tonnage dues levied on, 32.
- Peru and Spain. War. Establishment of Prize Courts in New Granada, 31.
- Prize Courts. Establishment by neutral States, 31.
- Robinson and Fleming, 35.
- Taxes. Commercial. Increase of, 32.
- Treaty guarantee of Government bonds, 31.
- War. Establishment of Prize Courts in neutral States, during, 31.

1867

War. Civil. Neutral subjects exempt from forced contributions, 32.

DENMARK.

Belligerent. Right to sell an iron-clad vessel to, 36.
Blockade. Violation of, 36.
Bremer and Co., 36.
" Chanticleer," 36.
Vessel. Sale of iron-clad built in England, 36.
„ Iron-clad. Right to sell to a belligerent if not equipped for war, 36.

FRANCE.

" Bechir," 37.
Church, British, at Dieppe. Cannot insist upon books, &c., being delivered to Consul, 41.
Dieppe. British Church. Cannot insist upon books and funds being delivered to Superintending Consul, 41.
Great Britain. Law. Detention of foreign ships of war, 37.
„ „ Law. Management, &c., of property of Englishwomen married to foreigners, 38.
India. Poll tax on immigrants from, in French territory, 42.
Law. Detention of foreign vessels of war, 37.
„ Management, &c., of property of English women married to foreigners, 38.
Malta. Detention of Tunisian ship of war, 37.
Marriages. Can only be solemnized in Consular Office, and not at a Vice-Consular station, 40.
„ Approving Foreign Office Circular of 1853, 40.
Railway Shares. French. Transfer of, 41.
Tax, poll, on Indian immigrants in French territory, 42.
Vessels of War. Law of England with regard to detention, 37.

GENERAL.

Law. Possession of slaves by British subjects, 44.
Slaves. Possession of by British subjects. Law, 44.
„ Reception on board British vessels for transport, 44.
Vessels. British. Reception of slaves on board, 44.

GREECE.

" Arkadi," 46.
Blockade. A belligerent has no right to place cruizers in neutral waters to enforce, 45.
„ Runners not justified in firing upon a vessel in pursuit, 46.
Consuls. Liability to be summoned, 47.
Crete. Blockade of. Turkish cruizers in Greek waters, 45.
Pensions. British. Non-payment by Greece, 44.
Weale, Mr., 45.

JAPAN.

Consular Appointments. Right of naturalized British subjects to hold, 49.
Dohmen, Mr., 49.
Great Britain. Naturalized subjects. Right to hold Consular appointments, 49.
Hoey, Mr., 48.
Legation, British. Claim on account of lease, 48.
Police for protection of British Legation. Agreement, 48.

MADAGASCAR.

Consular Jurisdiction, 49.
„ „ Order in Council, 50.
Great Britain. Subjects. Trial for murder, 49.
Imprisonment. British subjects. Instructions for carrying into effect, 50.
Order in Council. Consular jurisdiction, 50.

MEXICO.

Claim of Mrs. Macartney, 51.
Macartney, Mrs., 51.

MOROCCO.

Consuls. Question of legal procedure between British and United States, 51.
Corecs v. Mesod, 51.
Mesod v. Ubarká, 51.

MUSCAT. (See also ZANZIBAR).

Admiralty Court, Zanzibar. Power of Acting Consul to act as Judge, 52.
Consular Court. Rules and regulations, 52.
Consul. Acting. Power to act as Judge in Vice-Admiralty Court, 52.

NEW GRANADA.

Foreigners. Law relating to, 52B.
Great Britain. Subjects. Claim to exemption from industrial tax, 52B.
Law. Foreigners, 52B.
Panamá. Isthmus of, 52C.
Tax on industrial pursuits, 52B.
Treaty of 1825. Non-violation by industrial tax, 52B.
United States. Claim to send armed troops across Isthmus of Panama, 52C.

PERSIA.

Great Britain. Indian subjects. Protection of grandsons, 52D.
Protection of grandsons of British Indian subjects, 52D.

PERU.

Ashurst and Co., 54.
Chancery, Court of. Service of a Bill on Government of Peru, 54.
Consuls. Service of legal citation by, 54.
Decree. Tax on foreigners, 53.
Diplomatic Protection. Discussion with Government of Peru, 53.
Foreigners. Tax on, not an infringement of Treaty with Great Britain, 53.
Protection. Diplomatic. Discussion with Government of Peru, 54.
Tax on foreigners, 53.

PORTUGAL.

" Antelope," 59.
Leatham and Bailey, Messrs., 55, 56, 57.
" Libertos." Transport on board British hired vessels, 55, 56, 57.
Mangles, Mr., 56, 58, 60.
Mangue Grande. Attack on, and claim of Portugal to, 59.
Slaves or libertos. Transport on board of British hired vessels, 55, 56, 57.
South-Eastern Railway Company, 56, 58, 60.

PRUSSIA.

Army. Liability of a British subject naturalized in a foreign country, to serve in, on his return to England, 61.
Bancroft, Mr., 61.
Great Britain. Subjects naturalized in a foreign country. Liability to serve in on return to, 61.
Naturalization in the United States. Correspondence, 61,
United States. Naturalization. Correspondence between Great Britain and United States in 1849, 61.
Warburton, Mr., 62.

RIVER PLATE.

Courts of Law. Foreign. Objection to diplomatic interference with, 63.
Williams, R. and D., 63.

RUSSIA.

Bonds. Stolen. Seizure of, 64.
Nell and Nichol, Messrs., 64.
Passport. Grant to the son of a foreigner born in England, 64.
Wolff, G. 64.

SAN DOMINGO.

Consulates. Grant of asylum to political refugees, 65.
Refugees. Political. Grant of Consular protection. 65.

SIAM.

Order in Council of 1856. Disposal of property of adjudged felons, 66,
Property of British criminal subjects. Disposal of, 66.
Scott, R. S., 66.

SPAIN.

Abbott, W. H., 103.
Alicante. Attack on British sailors on police, 106.
" Alice Ward," 97.
" America," 95.
" Arapiles," 88.
Baptista, 105.
Barter and Co., 107.
Campbell, F., 100.
Captures in Neutral Waters. Neutral State should demand satisfaction, 90.
Collier, Captain, 81, 86, 90, 92, 96.
" Cyclone," 87, 92, 100.
Davidson, Rev. J., 73.
Foreign Enlistment Act. Vessels building for foreign Governments. Section of Act justifying seizure, 88.
„ „ Vessels laden with munitions of war, not subject to detention under, 67, 71.
„ „ Forfeiture of protection by infringement of, 72.
„ „ Non-violation by sale of the " Cyclone " to Chile, 87.
" Forward," 108.
Gibraltar. Attack on Spanish sentry in neighbourhood of, 105.
Great Britain. Subjects. Refusal to allow burial of a child of, in British cemetery, 78.
Hampton and Burgin, Messrs., 95.
Isaac, Campbell, and Co., 67, 72, 94.
MacPherson, Mr., 68, 86, 89, 90, 107.
" Martlett," 67, 71.
McKillop, Captain, 92, 100.
Mould, Mr., 102.
Moxey, Mr., 108.
Neutral Vessels. Capture of. Prize tribunals, 99.
Newspapers. Power of a foreign Government to prevent publication in, 81, 90, 92.
Passengers of a captured vessel. Ill-treatment of, 108.
" Peninsula," 102.
Prize Cases. Legal procedure, 79,
Prize Courts. Bound to adopt procedure not inconsistent with international law. 75.
„ „ English and French. No material difference in procedure, 75.
„ „ Necessity of a belligerent establishing a properly constituted, 99.
Porteous, G., 92.
Protection. Right of a foreign Government to protect its subjects against illegal judgments, 75.
San Domingo. Blockade. Capture of a British vessel for violating, 108.
" Tornado," 67, 68, 69, 72, 73, 74, 75, 77, 79, 81, 82, 85, 86, 89, 90, 92, 94, 95, 97, 98, 99, 100, 101, 103, 104, 105, 106, 107.
Treaty of 1667 does not refer to religious faith of British subjects, 78.
Vessel. Detention when laden with munitions of war, 67, 71.
„ Ironclad. Sale to Chilian Government, 87.
„ Of war building for a foreign Government during hostilities, with the knowledge of the British Government, 88.
„ Of war building in England for foreign States about to go to war. Embargo, 88.
Vessels of War. Iron-clads building for Spanish Government. Seizure, 88.
Vessels of War. Iron-clads. Legality of seizure under Section 7 of Foreign Enlistment Act, 88.
" Victoria," 88.
War. Munitions of. Detention of vessel laden with, 67, 71.
" Wyvern," 107.

TUNIS.

Azzopardi, V., 110.
Consular Courts. Not bound to give copies of sentences, 111.
Curmi, G., 111.
Great Britain. Subjects. Trial at Malta for murder, 110.
Malta. Trial of British subjects for murder at Tunis, 110.
Tortora, C., 110.

TURKEY.

Allard, P., 115.
Bagio, 132.
Bank of Roumania, 113.
Blockade. Difference between formal, and mere closing of ports by a Government, 120.
Cavan, Lubbock, and Co., 115.
Churchill, Colonel, 128.
Civil war. Right of a neutral State to recognize both parties to, as belligerents, 120.
Claims. Payment of interest on. Law of Turkey, 129.
Consular Court. Appeal to Privy Council, 133.
„ (Egypt). Authority to British Legal Vice-Consul to exercise powers under Order in Council of 1866, 112.
„ at Constantinople. Power of Secretary of State to appoint an Acting Judge, 133.
Crete. Insurgents. Vessel fitting out in England to assist, 117, 120.
„ Issue of Proclamation of neutrality, 120.
„ Right of Insurgent Government to issue letters of marque, 120.
Egypt. Claim of English drivers against Railway administration, 117, 118, 119, 129.
„ Consular Court. Authority to British Legal Vice-Consul to exercise powers under Order in Council of 1866, 112.
„ Société Agricole et Industrielle, 115.
„ Sentences of British subjects for murder to be carried out in Malta, 115.
Foreigners. Concession to hold land, 116, 119.
Great Britain. Children of naturalized subjects. Protection in Turkey, 132.
„ „ Vessel supposed to be fitting out for Crete insurgents, 117, 120.
Herz, M. de, 113.
Interest. Payment of, on claims. Law of Turkey, 129.
Jenner, Mr., 135.
Land. Concession to foreigners. Projet de loi, 116, 119.
Lebanon. Establishment of schools, 124.
Letters of marque. Issue by insurgents, 120.
"Levant Herald" newspaper. Suspension, 112, 114, 115.
Malta. Sentences of British subjects for murder to be carried out in, 115.
McCoan, Mr. 112.
Marriages of British subjects. Evidence required in case of divorce, 135.
Mattos, M. de, 129.
Naval Officer. Loan to Turkey. Breach of neutrality, 118.
Naturalized British subjects. Children. Protection. 132.
Neutrality. Breach of, by loan of a British naval officer, 118.
„ Issue of Proclamation of. Crete, 120.
Newspapers. Right of a foreign Government to suspend publication, 112, 114, 115.

1867

Ottoman Financial Association, 111.
Pariente, J., 133.
Petherick, Mr., 125, 133, 134.
Polidano, C. and A., 115.
Press. Law of, extends to British subjects, 114.
Protection of children of naturalized British subjects, 132.
Robinson, W. E., 127.
Roumania, Bank of, 113.
Salt. Sequestration of, 128.
Schools. Establishment in Lebanon. Right of a foreign Government to make regulations, 124.
Schilizzi, 132.
Thompson, Mrs., 124.
Vessel supposed to be fitting out in England for Crete insurgents, 117, 120.

UNITED STATES.

Abduction of a British subject from Canada by United States' authorities, 158.
"Adela," 159.
"Alabama," 139, 145, 148, 156, 157.
"Alexandra." 141.
Archives. Unpublished and confidential. Objection to reference to, 139.
Bemis, Mr., 145.
Betts, Judge, 141.
Blockade. Difference between blockading and closing ports, 139.
  „ Proclamation of. Effect of with regard to judgments of Tribunals, 139.
Canada. Abduction of a British subject by the United States' authorities, 158.
Carmalt, Mr., 148
Cassin, M., 136.
Claims. Commission. United States, 136.
  „ Great Britain and United States. Negotiations for settlement, 139, 145, 148, 155, 156, 157.
  „ Proposed Mixed Commission. Character of, to be submitted to, 156.
Civil war. Losses during. Claims Commission, 136, 148.
Collisions at sea. Law of Great Britain and the United States, 149.
Colonies. British. Colonial Office Circular of 1860, as to extent of jurisdiction of British authorities, 153.
Commission. United States' claims, 136, 148.
Confederate States. Cotton loan, 137.
  „ Recognition of, 139.
Cotton. British. Destruction during civil war. See Property.
"Czarina," 149.
Debts. Conquered States, 137.
Extradition. American seamen at Hong Kong, 153.
Forwood, A. B., 159.
Foreign Enlistment Act. United States' violation of, 141.
  „ „ Pamphlet by Mr. Bemis, 145.
  „ „ Violation of, by United States' ship of war at Demerara, 152.
Great Britain. Policy of, during civil war, 139.
  „ Negotiations for settlement of claims, 139, 145, 148, 155, 156, 157.
Hong Kong. Application for extradition of American seamen, 153.
Hubbard, C., 152.
Jones, E., 136.
"Kedar," 149.
Law of Great Britain and the United States. Collisions at sea, 149.
Lemonius and Co., 149.
Loan. Cotton. Confederate States, 137.
Maguire, Mr., 154.
McDonald, A., 158.
"Meteor," 141.
Neutrals resident in a foreign country. Entitled to same redress as subjects, 150.
Newfoundland. Act for constitution of Marine Court of Inquiry, 156.
O'Keefe, J., 150.
"Penobscot," 152.
Property of Foreigners. Loss during civil war, 136, 148, 149.
  „ „ Claims Commission, 136, 148, 149.
  „ „ Right of enemy to seize, 149.
Russia and United States. Treaty for cession of territory, 158.
"Santissima Trinidad," 141.
"Springbok," 152.
"Sumter," 139.
Treaty. Extradition. Claim to surrender of mutinous seamen, 153.
  „ Russia and United States. Cession of territory, 158.
Vessels of war. Foreign. Warrant for arrest should not be served on board, 152.
"Volant," 151, 154.
Wood and Heyworth, Messrs., 149.

VENEZUELA.

"Bolivar," 159, 160, 161, 163, 164.
Claims of foreigners. Diplomatic interference, 160.
  „ British subjects. Enforcement of, 161.
Foreigners. Settlement of claims of, by tribunals, 160.
Foreign Enlistment Act. Infringement of, 163.
Law. Diplomatic interference. Claims, 160.

ZANZIBAR (See also MUSCAT).

Fraser and Co., 165, 166.
Slave Trade dhows. Proposal with regard to adjudication when captured, 165.
  „ labour. As to right of British subjects to employ, 166.
  „ Penal statutes with regard to employment by British subjects, 166.
  „ Purchase by British subjects forbidden by law, 166.
  „ Contracts for employment by British subjects illegal, 166.
  „ dealing. Liability of statutes to evasion, 166.

LIST OF REPORTS.

Arranged according to Countries.

BRAZIL.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 1 | Mar. 9, 1867 | Queen's Advocate | Seamen of the "Thames." Conduct of Acting Consul Hollocombe. Right of a seaman to claim release from a contract, when employed through ignorance on board a belligerent vessel .. . .. .. .. .. | 1 |
| 2 | 21, | Queen's Advocate | British claims on Brazil. Statement presented to Mixed Commission by Mr. Thornton. General principles which should govern Her Majesty's Government in maintaining these claims. Opinion with regard to claims for losses during insurrections, &c. Priority of Treasury claims with respect to debts of bankrupts. Interference of Her Majesty's Government in favour of British subjects having contracts with a foreign Government .. .. .. .. | 2 |
| 3 | May 22, | Queen's Advocate | Claim of Mr. Lang. Concur in opinion of Mr. Thornton that claim should not be pressed by Her Majesty's Government | 4 |
| 4 | Nov. 30, | Queen's Advocate | Employment of slaves by the St. João del Rey Mining Company. As to violation of statute law of England by the English shareholders of the Company . .. .. | 5 |

BUENOS AYRES.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 5 | Jan. 18, 1867 | Law Officers .. | Imprisonment of Mr. Stewart. Her Majesty's Minister should watch progress of appeal .. .. .. .. | 7 |

CENTRAL AMERICA.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 6 | Aug. 28, 1867 | Queen's Advocate | Claim of owners of the San Geronimo estate, for losses sustained during a revolution. Claim admitted by the Government of Guatemala. Opinion on proposal of the Guatemalan Government that claim should be admitted to reference .. | 7 |
| 7 | Oct. 3, | Queen's Advocate | San Geronimo estate. Proposed condition of reference .. | 8 |
| 8 | Nov. 19, | Queen's Advocate | San Geronimo estate. Further opinion with regard to proposed condition of reference . .. .. .. | 9 |
| 9 | Dec. 5, | Queen's Advocate | Opinion with regard to the right to British protection of Mr. Hall, a natural-born citizen of Guatemala, but the son of a natural-born subject of Great Britain .. .. | 10 |

CHILE.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 10 | Mar. 9, 1867 | Queen's Advocate | Case of the "Thalaba," a British vessel captured on the ground of her being employed as a Spanish transport. Legality of capture .. .. .. .. | 10 |
| 11 | 14, | Queen's Advocate | Exemption from forced loans of British subjects in Chile. Articles of English Treaty of 1854, and French Treaty of 1853 .. .. .. .. .. .. | 11 |
| 12 | Apr. 11, | Queen's Advocate | Case of the "Thalaba." Was rightly condemned as lawful prize .. .. .. .. .. .. | 11 |

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 13 | Apr. 16, 1867 | Queen's Advocate | Case of the "Colina." A British Minister is not called upon to act as legal adviser to British firms, on questions of international law. Refusal of Chilean authorities to allow of landing of Spanish produce, pending hostilities | 12 |
| 14 | May 22, | Queen's Advocate | Case of the "Colina." Approving conduct of Her Majesty's Representative | 12 |
| 15 | Nov. 5, | Queen's Advocate | Case of the "Alice Ward." Evidence is not in favour of her having been captured within the waters of Gibraltar | 13 |
| 16 | Dec. 30, | Queen's Advocate | Pacific Steam Navigation Company. Not competent for a British Company to hire out its vessels to a foreign Government for the conveyance of criminals when sailing under the British flag | 14 |

CHINA.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 17 | Jan. 10, 1867 | Law Officers | Pilotage regulations at Shanghae. Approving | 14 |
| 18 | 15, | Law Officers | Question as to the extent of British jurisdiction over waters which are within three miles both of Hong Kong and of the coast of China. Jurisdiction over waters less than six miles, but interrupted by mainland or islands, still forming part of Chinese territory. Principle with regard to jurisdiction over waters adjacent to mainland | 51 |
| 19 | Feb. 21, | Law Officers | British jurisdiction over waters adjacent to Hong Kong. Approving proposed instructions to Governor of that Colony | 17 |
| 20 | 21, | Queen's Advocate | Tenure of land at Hankow. As to duty of Chinese Government to provide police. Use of terms "concession" and "municipalities" | 17 |
| 21 | Apr. 4, | Queen's Advocate | Seizure, by Her Majesty's ship "Drake," of a Chinese boat laden with kidnapped coolies. Competency of British naval officers to aid Chinese authorities in stopping this Slave Trade. Inexpedient that they should interfere with vessels of foreign Christian States, without consent of Consul of such States | 18 |
| 22 | 4, | Law Officers | Amendments proposed by Consul Winchester in Foreign Consular Marriage Act, 12 and 13 Vict., cap. 68 | 18 |
| 23 | 4, | Law Officers | Notification issued by Her Majesty's Minister at Peking on the subject of the surveillance of British subjects of the rowdy class in China. Legality of such Notification | 19 |
| 24 | 16, | Law Officers | Land regulations at Shanghae. French concession. French claim to jurisdiction | 19 |
| 25 | May 27, | Law Officers | Approving Sir E. Hornby's instructions to Consuls in China and Japan on the mode of conducting their judicial business | 21 |
| 26 | 28, | Law Officers | Protection to be afforded to British subjects of Chinese origin. Approving Circulars issued by Sir R. Alcock, viz., Circular No. 9, 16th June, 1868; No. 13, 26th November, 1866; and Notification of 28th November, 1866 | 22 |
| 27 | 29, | Law Officers | Protection to be afforded to British subjects of Chinese origin. Chinese resident at Hong Kong at period of cession are entitled to British protection, as likewise their children. Chinese domiciled in ceded places, even if naturalized, are not entitled to British protection in China. Chinese born in ceded places, but children of Chinese parents, not entitled to protection. Suggests distinctive costume for Chinese British subjects | 22 |
| 28 | June 10, | Law Officers | Pilotage regulations at Newchwang. Suggests that they should be brought into conformity with regulations at Shanghae | 24 |

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 29 | July 16, 1867 | Law Officers | British jurisdiction over the waters in the neighbourhood of Hong Kong. Green, Kellett, and Aberdeen Islands. All islands or rocks included within, or touched by, lines drawn from cape to cape in Hong Kong or Cowloon form parts of the territory ceded by China | 24 |
| 30 | Sept. 2, | Queen's Advocate | Rules of Procedure of Supreme Court at Shanghae, when sitting as a Court of Vice-Admiralty | 25 |
| 31 | Oct. 7, | Law Officers | General pilotage regulations issued by the Chinese Government. Regulations relative to passengers' luggage, duty-free goods, and steam-tugs. Report on above regulations | 25 |
| 32 | 9, | Queen's Advocate | Extradition of a Chinese slave-girl from Hong Kong. Approving refusal of Governor of Hong Kong to surrender slave-property not being recognized by British law | 26 |
| 33 | Nov. 29, | Law Officers | Application of Governor of Macao to that of Hong Kong for the extradition of deserters. Suggests issue of a Colonial Ordinance for extradition of Portuguese criminals seeking refuge in British territory. Right of Portugal to claim extradition by most-favoured Treaty clause | 27 |
| 34 | Dec. 12, | Queen's Advocate | Case of Mr. Richardson. Chinese Government is justified in refusing to allow British subjects to reside in ports opened by Treaty until British Government have fulfilled Treaty engagements by appointing Consuls | 28 |
| 35 | 19, | Law Officers | Payment of registration fees by Civil servants. Cannot claim exemption under Order in Council of 9th March, 1865 | 29 |
| 36 | 19, | Law Officers | Power of Acting Consuls to celebrate marriages. Consider that they have such power by the true construction of the Act 12 and 13 Vict., cap. 68 | 29 |
| 37 | 30, | Law Officers | Amended notification with regard to costume of British Chinese subjects | 30 |

COLOMBIA.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 38 | Feb. 2, 1867 | Queen's Advocate | Decree issued by the Government of New Grenada relative to the disposal of vessels captured by privateers during the war between Spain and the Republics of Peru, &c. A neutral Power cannot, even with the consent of the belligerents, constitute a Prize Court for the trial of vessels belonging to the subjects of other neutral States, and captured by either belligerent | 31 |
| 39 | Mar. 23, | Queen's Advocate | Claim of Mr. P. Brandon. The Columbian Government is bound by the Treaty of Bogota of the 26th January, 1824, to receive the 8 per cent. bonds issued by the former Government of New Grenada in payment of importation dues. Inability of Colombian State to diminish, by retrospective legislation, the value of particular securities in the hands of a subject of a foreign State, the value of such securities having been guaranteed by Treaty | 31 |
| 40 | July 2, | Queen's Advocate | Increase of commercial taxes in Panama. Tonnage dues exacted from the Panama, New Zealand, and Australian Royal Mail Company. Contrary to international law to compel neutral subjects to aid, by forced contributions, either party in a civil war | 32 |
| 41 | Aug. 17, | Law Officers | Case of the "Italian Star." Legality of capture. Doubtful ownership | 33 |
| 42 | 26, | Law Officers | Case of the "Italian Star." Legality of the capture is properly determinable in the Prize Court of the captor | 34 |
| 43 | Dec. 19, | Queen's Advocate | Assault committed on Vice-Consul Bidwell. Mr. Bidwell should have brought a civil action against M. Peredes instead of the Colombian Government | 34 |

1867

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 44 | Dec. 26, 1867 | Law Officers | Claim for house-rent preferred by Mr. H. D. Austin against General Mosquera, late Columbian Minister in London. Her Majesty's Government not called upon to furnish extract from despatch on the subject which has been received from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Bogota | 35 |
| 45 | 28, | Queen's Advocate | Application of Messrs. Cotterill and Sons for the assistance of Her Majesty's Government, on behalf of the firms of Messrs. Robinson and Fleming, and of Messrs. J. E. Barnett and Sons, in obtaining payment of certain claims on the Government of Colombia. Her Majesty's Representative in Colombia should give official support | 35 |

DENMARK.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 46 | Feb. 14, 1867 | Queen's Advocate | Proposed sale by Danish Government to a British subject, of an iron-clad built for them in England. Wish of Danish Government to know how transfer is to be made. Law would permit English purchasers to sell her to a foreign Government, even if belligerent, provided that she was not equipped. Suggests that no answer should be returned to queries of Danish Minister, so as to avoid any appearance of having facilitated a belligerent in obtaining such vessel | 36 |
| 47 | Dec. 5, | Queen's Advocate | Claim of Messrs. Bremer and Co. on the Danish Government on account of the detention of their vessel the "Chanticleer," for attempting to enter the blockaded port of Swinemunde. Her Majesty's Government not called upon to support claim | 36 |

FRANCE.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 48 | Jan. 14, 1867 | Law Officers | Sequestration of Tunisian ship of war "Bechir" by British authorities at Malta, at instance of certain merchants, creditors of Tunisian Government. Law of England with regard to detention of foreign ships of war | 37 |
| 49 | Apr. 25, | Queen's Advocate | Law of England with reference to the succession and management of property of English women married to foreigners | 38 |
| 50 | June 4, | Queen's Advocate | By the provisions of Act 12 and 13 Vict., cap. 68, a Consul can only solemnize marriages in the office of his Consulate, and not in any Vice-Consular station. Approving Foreign Office Circular of August 28, 1853 | 40 |
| 51 | July 29, | Attorney-and Solicitor-General | Difficulty in transfer of French railway shares, the property of British subjects, on account of refusal of Consul in Paris to sign "certificats de coutume" as required by French law | 41 |
| 52 | Oct. 31, | Queen's Advocate | English Church Establishment at Dieppe. Withdrawal of Government support. Her Majesty's Government have no power of insisting upon books and funds being delivered up to Superintending Consul | 41 |
| 53 | Nov. 14, | Queen's Advocate | Levy of poll tax on immigrants from India, who desire to remain on the French territory subsequent to the termination of their contracts of service. Condition on which such a tax would not be contrary to the spirit of the Treaty of 1861 | 42 |

GENERAL.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 53* | Sept. 18, 1867 | Queen's Advocate | Law respecting British subjects possessing slaves in countries where slavery still exists. Slaves cannot be received on board British vessels for transport | 44 |

GREECE.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 54 | Feb. 28, 1867 | Queen's Advocate | Non-payment of pensions by the Government of Greece. Great Britain is bound, by regard for her national faith and honour, to insist upon the immediate payment | 44 |
| 55 | Mar. 26, | Queen's Advocate | The Turkish Government has no right to station cruizers in Greek waters for the purpose of enforcing the blockade of the ports of Crete | 45 |
| 56 | May 14, | Queen's Advocate | Case of Mr. Weale. As to payment of expenses of trial | 45 |
| 57 | June 22, | Attorney-General | Insufficiency of evidence to warrant seizure of a vessel supposed to be destined for Greece | 46 |
| 58 | July 8, | Queen's Advocate | Case of the "Arkadi." Her employment to convey soldiers, &c., to insurgents in Crete. Not lawful for a blockade-runner to fire at a belligerent ship in pursuit of her. Greek Government cannot complain of the "Arkadi" being fired at in Greek waters | 46 |
| 59 | 19, | Queen's Advocate | Liability of Consuls to be summoned as witnesses. New law promulgated in Greece. Consuls liable to be summoned, if not contrary to Treaty stipulations | 47 |

JAPAN.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 60 | Jan. 31, 1867 | Law Officers | Approving agreement with Metropolitan police to be sent to Japan, to act as escort to Her Majesty's Legation | 48 |
| 61 | Oct. 11, | Law Officers | Claim of Mr. Hoey, arising out of the occupation of certain premises by Her Majesty's Legation at Yokohama. Terms of lease | 48 |
| 62 | Dec. 24, | Law Officers | Position of Mr. Dohmen, a Dutch Interpreter and Assistant in British Consular service in Japan. Nothing to prevent a naturalized subject of the Queen from holding the office of Consul in Japan. Probable difficulty to Mr. Dohmen obtaining a certificate of naturalization | 49 |

MADAGASCAR.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 63 | Mar. 28, | Law Officers | Instructions which should be sent to Consul in Madagascar on subject of trial of two British subjects for murder. Consular jurisdiction | 49 |
| 64 | Apr. 26, | Law Officers | Approving draft Order in Council to enable Her Majesty's Consul in Madagascar to exercise civil and criminal jurisdiction over British subjects in that island. Instructions required for carrying sentences of imprisonment into effect | 50 |

MEXICO.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 65 | Apr. 6, 1867 | Queen's Advocate | Claim of Mrs. Macartney on the Spanish Government. Her Majesty's Government not called upon to interfere | 51 |

MOROCCO.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 66 | Aug. 7, 1867 | Queen's Advocate | Question of legal procedure between British and United States' Vice-Consuls at Mogador. Corcos v. Mesod and Mesod v. Ubarká | 51 |

MUSCAT.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 67 | Feb. 21, 1867 | Law Officers | Approving draft of proposed Rules and Regulations for use of Consular Court at Zanzibar | 52 |
| 68 | Sept. 30, | Queen's Advocate | British Vice-Admiralty Court at Zanzibar. Power of Acting Consul Seward to act as Judge in case of captured slave-vessels | 52 |

NEW GRANADA.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 68 A | Feb. 7, 1866 | Queen's Advocate | Law passed by Columbian Government affecting the rights and privileges of foreigners. The refusal of the British Government to recognize the law should be published in the official newspaper of the Republic See Reports 1865, page 25. | 52B |
| 68 B | 7, | Queen's Advocate | Claim of British merchants at Carthagena to exemption from tax imposed by the Assembly of the State of Bolivar on all persons engaged in industrial pursuits. The Treaty of 1825 has not been violated by such imposition See previous Report 1865, page 25. | 52B |
| 68 C | 13, | Queen's Advocate | As to right claimed by the United States to send troops equipped for war across the Isthmus of Panama. Construction sought to be put upon Article of Treaty of 12th December, 1846, between the United States and the Republic of New Grenada, should not be admitted by Her Majesty's Government | 52C |

PERSIA.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 69 | Nov. 8, 1867 | Queen's Advocate | Grant of British protection to the grandson of a British Indian subject born in Persia | 52D |

PERU.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 70 | Feb. 28, 1867 | Law Officers | Peruvian Decree of the 20th January, 1866, imposing an annual payment upon foreigners resident in Peru, as well as Peruvian subjects. Decree is not an infraction of Treaty between Great Britain and Peru of 10th April, 1850 | 53 |
| 71 | Ma r.23 | Queen's Advocate | Diplomatic protection. Instructions which should be sent to Mr. Barton with regard to discussion between Diplomatic Body at Lima and Government of Peru | 54 |
| 72 | Apr. 7, | Queen's Advocate | Diplomatic protection. No reason to change former opinion | 54 |
| 73 | Aug. 17, | Law Officers | Application of Messrs. Ashurst and Co. for permission to apply to Her Majesty's Consul at Lima to serve a copy of a bill, filed in the Court of Chancery, on the Government of Peru. Inexpedient to grant permission | 54 |

PORTUGAL.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 74 | Jan. 28, 1867 | Law Officers | Transport of slaves, under the name of "libertos," on board the vessels of Messrs. Leatham and Bailey of Hull. As to infringement of Acts of Parliament and Treaties | 55 |
| 75 | June 18, | Queen's Advocate | Claim of Mr. Mangles and others on the late South-Eastern Railway Company of Portugal. Consider that claimants should receive diplomatic assistance | 56 |

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 76 | July 30, 1867 | Queen's Advocate | Conveyance of slaves or "libertos" by vessels of Messrs. Leatham and Bailey. Her Majesty's Government not called upon to address a letter of explanation to agent of Messrs. Leatham and Bailey | 56 |
| 77 | Aug. 13, | Queen's Advocate | Contract of Messrs. Leatham and Bailey with Portuguese Government for conveyance of mails between Portugal and Portuguese Possessions in Africa. As to infraction of British law, by conveyance of slaves on board a British vessel | 57 |
| 78 | 22, | Law Officers | Claim of Mr. Mangles and others. Case should be settled by the Tribunals of the country, and not by diplomatic interference | 58 |
| 79 | Sept. 2, | Queen's Advocate | Attack of Her Majesty's ship "Antelope" on Mangue Grande. Claim of Portugal to above territory not admitted by Her Majesty's Government. Answer which should be returned to Portuguese Government with regard to destruction of Portuguese property | 59 |
| 80 | Oct. 7, | Law Officers | Claim of Mr. Mangles and others. Nothing further can be done through the intervention of Her Majesty's Government | 60 |

PRUSSIA.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 81 | Oct. 12, 1867 | Queen's Advocate | Requests to be furnished with certain correspondence which took place between Lord Palmerston and Mr. Bancroft in 1849, on subject of naturalization in the United States | 61 |
| 82 | Nov. 13, | Queen's Advocate | Opinion with regard to liability of British subjects who have emigrated to the United States, and there become naturalized, to serve in Her Majesty's army and navy on their return to their native country | 61 |
| 83 | Dec. 18 | Queen's Advocate | Imprisonment of Mr. Warburton at Dresden | 62 |

RIVER PLATE.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 84 | July 19, 1867 | Queen's Advocate | Case of Messrs. R. and D. Williams. Complaint at decision of Uruguayan Courts of Law on subject of sale of certain land. Objections to diplomatic interference with decisions of foreign Courts of Law | 63 |

RUSSIA.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 85 | Mar. 23, 1867 | Queen's Advocate | As to grant of a British passport to Mr. G. Wolff. Is a British subject by reason of his birth | 64 |
| 86 | May 31, | Law Officers | Case of Messrs. Nell and Nicholl. Claim on account of seizure of certain stolen bonds. Her Majesty's Government should not further interfere | 64 |

SAN DOMINGO.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 87 | Jan. 26, 1867 | Queen's Advocate | Grant of asylum in British Consulates to political refugees. By international law such right cannot be claimed, but such right may be enjoyed in certain countries by expressed permission or usage | 65 |
| 88 | May 7, | Queen's Advocate | Grant of asylum in British Consulates to political refugees. It being a question of usage, it is a matter for the consideration of the Secretary of State whether it is expedient that such asylum should be granted by Her Majesty's Consuls in San Domingo | 65 |

1867

SIAM.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 89 | Apr. 26, 1867 | Law Officers | Case of R. S. Scott. Opinion as to the disposal of the property of a British merchant who has been convicted of felony under Order in Council of 1856 | 66 |

SPAIN.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 90 | Jan. 9, 1867 | Law Officers | Case of the "Tornado." Further letter from Messrs. S. Isaac, Campbell, and Co., requesting that Consul at Cadiz be instructed to register the "Tornado" as a British vessel. No reason to change former opinion on the subject | 67 |
| 91 | 10, | Law Officers | Case of the "Martlet." Laden with munitions of war supposed to be for Valparaiso. Application of Spanish Minister for detention. Insufficiency of evidence | 67 |
| 92 | 12, | Law Officers | Case of the "Tornado." Letter from Chilean Minister of Marine relative to purchase of ships of war in England. Evidence of destination of "Tornado" not conclusive | 68 |
| 93 | 12, | Law Officers | Case of the "Tornado." Requests further information regarding the decision of the Prize Tribunal at Cadiz. Detention of MacPherson. Release of witnesses, &c. | 68 |
| 94 | 18, | Law Officers | Case of the "Tornado." Observations on evidence. Her Majesty's Government should protest against condemnation by Spanish Prize Court | 69 |
| 95 | 19, | Law Officers | Case of the "Martlet." Application of the Spanish Minister for detention of the "Martlet," on the grounds of her being laden with military stores for Chile. The "Martlet" not being fitted-out as a vessel of war is not liable to detention under the Foreign Enlistment Act | 71 |
| 96 | 21, | Law Officers | Case of the "Martlet." The "Martlet" should be detained if she is equipped, furnished, or fitted-out with intent to be employed as a transport or store-ship in the service of the Chilean Government | 71 |
| 97 | 22, | Law Officers | Case of the "Tornado." Answer to be sent to further letter from Messrs. Campbell and Co. relative to sentence pronounced by the Secret Naval Court. Should it be proved that Messrs. Campbell have infringed the Foreign Enlistment Act, they will have forfeited all claim to the protection or interference of Her Majesty's Government | 72 |
| 98 | 25, | Law Officers | Case of the "Tornado." Application of Rev. J. Davidson on behalf of his brother, one of the crew of the "Tornado." Reply of Spanish Government to demand for release of crew. Her Majesty's Government should not recognize the legality of the Spanish Tribunal | 73 |
| 99 | Feb. 6, | Law Officers | Case of the "Tornado." Observations on reply of the Spanish Government to the protest of that of Great Britain | 74 |
| 100 | 6, | Law Officers | Case of the "Tornado." Further observations on answer of Spanish Government to British protest. Right of a foreign Government to interfere in favour of its subjects, when condemned contrary to the law of civilized nations. No material difference in the process of English and French Prize Courts. The Prize Court of a belligerent is bound to adopt a course of procedure which is not inconsistent with international law. Terms upon which the surrender of the crew of the "Tornado" should be received | 75 |
| 101 | 8, | Law Officers | Case of the "Tornado." Approving draft of answer to Spanish reply to British protest | 77 |
| 102 | 11, | Queen's Advocate | Refusal of Spanish authorities at Bilbao to allow the child of British parents of the Protestant religion, but who had been baptised by a Catholic priest, to be buried in the British cemetery. Treaty of 1667 between Great Britain and Spain does not refer to the religious faith of British subjects | 78 |

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 103 | Feb. 28, 1867 | Law Officers | Case of the "Tornado." Answer to be returned to reply of Spanish Government to British protest. The release of the ship and cargo should no longer be delayed by Spanish Government. Claim to indemnity should still be maintained. Observations on legal procedure in prize cases | 79 |
| 104 | Mar. 2, | Law Officers | Case of the "Tornado." Her Majesty's Government cannot interfere in refusal of Spanish authorities to allow publication of Captain Collier's statement in the Peninsular newspapers | 81 |
| 105 | 2, | Law Officers | Case of the "Tornado." Should demand immediate release of remaining portion of crew. Question of indemnity to be deferred | 81 |
| 106 | 8, | Law Officers | Case of the "Tornado." Further observation on course which should be pursued by Her Majesty's Government. Right to detain portion of crew should not be conceded. In consequence of notices of appeal the surrender of ship should not, for the moment, be insisted upon. Messrs. Isaac, Campbell, and Co. should be again informed of true motive of the British protest | 82 |
| 107 | 11, | Solicitor-General | Case of the "Tornado." Returning certain letters with corrections | 85 |
| 108 | 13, | Law Officers | Case of the "Tornado." Letter from Mr. McPherson, the third mate, explaining his position in the Chilean service. To be informed that Her Majesty's Government have insisted upon his liberation | 86 |
| 109 | 18, | Law Officers | Case of the "Tornado." Continued detention of Captain Collier and Mr. McPherson. Their release should be insisted upon | 86 |
| 110 | 21, | Law Officers | Case of the "Tornado." Messrs. Isaac, Campbell, and Co. should be informed that Her Majesty's Government decline to discuss the question whether the "Tornado" was or was not liable to capture on the high seas by a Spanish ship of war. Her Majesty's Government protested against sentence, in consequence of the illegality of the procedure | 86 |
| 111 | 28, | Law Officers | Case of the "Cyclone." Insufficiency of evidence to prove the violation of the Foreign Enlistment Act by her sale to the Chilean Government by Messrs. Isaac, Campbell, and Co. | 87 |
| 112 | Apr. 10, | Law Officers | Case of "Victoria" and "Arapiles." Vessels building for a foreign Government, pending the existence of a state of war, with the knowledge of the British Government. The mere knowledge does not amount to a leave or license within the Foreign Enlistment Act. Competency of Her Majesty's Government to lay an embargo on vessels in British ports belonging to the State, or the subjects of the State, in which war is imminent | 88 |
| 113 | 10, | Law Officers | Iron-clads fitting-out for the service of Spain. Vessels should be detained, Spain being at war with Chile and Peru. Steps to be taken for the purpose of ascertaining the legality of such seizure. Proceedings regulated by the 7th section of the Foreign Enlistment Act | 88 |
| 114 | 10, | Law Officers | Case of the "Tornado." Opinion on second decision of the Prize Court. Release of D. McPherson should still be insisted upon. Question of indemnity not yet ripe for decision | 89 |
| 115 | 12, | Law Officers | Case of the "Tornado." Still of opinion that the release of D. McPherson should be insisted upon | 90 |
| 116 | 17, | Law Officers | Case of the "Tornado." Affidavits of Portuguese subjects that the "Tornado" was seized in neutral waters. Forcible detention of a Portuguese subject on board the "Tornado." Claim for exemption from the exercise of belligerent rights on the ground of the neutrality of the place of capture ought properly to be made by the neutral State, and not by the State to which the captured vessel is alleged to belong. Right of Spanish authorities to refuse permission for publication of Captain Collier's statement in the newspapers. Measures which should be adopted by Her Majesty's Government | 90 |

1867

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 117 | Apr. 18, 1867 | Law Officers | Case of the "Tornado" and "Cyclone." Statement of Captain McKillop, proving that the above vessels were the property of the Chilean Government. Detention of McPherson. Claim of G. Porteous for wages. Refusal to allow publication of Captain Collier's statement. Question of restoration of ship and indemnity to crew | 92 |
| 118 | 20, | Law Officers | Case of the "Tornado." Her Majesty's Government should decline to entertain demand of Messrs. Isaac, Campbell, and Co., for the immediate release of the "Tornado," and the payment of 25,000*l.* compensation | 94 |
| 119 | May 11, | Queen's Advocate | Case of the "America." Approving proposed answers to Messrs. Hampton and Burgin, on the subject of the condemnation of the above vessel by Mixed Commission at Sierra Leone | 95 |
| 120 | 22, | Law Officers | Case of the "Tornado." Answer to be returned to affidavits of Messrs. Isaac, Campbell, and Co. on subject of hole said to have been cut in one of the berths of the "Tornado" | 95 |
| 121 | 22, | Law Officers | Case of the "Tornado." Inexpedient to prosecute Captain Collier for breach of Sections 150 and 158 of the Merchant Shipping Act | 96 |
| 122 | 22, | Law Officers | Case of the "Tornado." Language which should be addressed to Spanish Government on subject of a new trial | 96 |
| 123 | 23, | Law Officers | Case of the "Tornado." The case of the "Alice Ward" does not change their previous opinion with regard to the case of the "Tornado" | 97 |
| 124 | 23, | Law Officers | Case of the "Tornado." Observations on pamphlet respecting the proceedings and appeals in the Spanish Courts, in the case of the "Tornado." Trial of prize cases in Spain | 97 |
| 125 | 23, | Law Officers | Case of the "Tornado." Observations as to the probable decision which will be come to, as to competency of Prize Court at Cadiz. The Spanish Government have a right to make use of the evidence which they have already collected, in the event of a new trial | 98 |
| 126 | 28, | Law Officers | Case of the "Tornado." Observations on Señor Retortillo's Report on the course of the legal proceedings in the case of the "Tornado." Duty of a belligerent to furnish a certain and proper tribunal to decide upon questions of capture of neutral vessels upon the high seas. No opposition should be made to a proper judicial investigation, notwithstanding the delay incident to mistakes of Spanish authorities as to tribunal which was to decide legality of capture of the "Tornado" | 99 |
| 127 | 28, | Law Officers | Case of the "Tornado." Answer to be returned to Mr. F. Campbell's query as to the crew of the "Tornado" being required in Spain in the event of a new trial | 100 |
| 128 | 28, | Law Officers | Case of the "Tornado" and "Cyclone." Further communication from Captain McKillop relative to the connection between Messrs. Isaac, Campbell, and Co., and the Chilean Government | 100 |
| 129 | June 6, | Law Officers | Case of the "Tornado." The character of the vessel must be decided previously to Her Majesty's Government pressing the claims of the crew | 101 |
| 130 | 15, | Law Officers | Case of the "Tornado." Reversal of sentence by the Court of War and Marine. Right of owners to restitution of vessel, with damages and costs. Her Majesty's Government should delay interference | 101 |
| 131 | 15, | Law Officers | Case of the "Peninsula." Her detention by a Spanish ship of war. Her Majesty's Government not called upon to interfere | 102 |
| 132 | 18, | Queen's Advocate | Case of Mr. Mould. Claim against Spanish Government on account of a railway contract. The good offices of the British Minister at Madrid might be exerted in favour of Mr. Mould | 102 |

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 133 | July 12, 1867 | Law Officers | Murderers of Mr. W. H. Abbott. Her Majesty's Government should be satisfied with punishment | 103 |
| 134 | Aug. 7, | Law Officers | Case of the "Tornado." Observations on the "Informe" addressed by the Council of State to the Minister of Marine. If acted upon, Her Majesty's Government will have no cause of complaint against the Government of Spain, nor Messrs. Isaac, Campbell, and Co. any claim to the interference of Her Majesty's Government should the vessel be declared a good prize of war | 103 |
| 135 | Sept. 4, | Law Officers | Case of the "Tornado." Citation of owners | 104 |
| 136 | 27, | Law Officers | Case of the "Tornado." Question as to the inadmissibility of any particular evidence. Her Majesty's Government should not assume that any injustice was meditated by the Spanish authorities | 105 |
| 137 | Oct. 7, | Law Officers | Sentence passed by a Spanish court-martial on a British subject named Baptista, for an attack upon a Spanish sentry in the neighbourhood of Gibraltar | 105 |
| 138 | 7, | Law Officers | Sentence passed upon certain British sailors at Alicante for being concerned in an attack upon the police. Her Majesty's Government not called upon to interfere further | 106 |
| 139 | 21, | Law Officers | Case of the "Tornado." Captain Collier should consult a Spanish lawyer as to his right to appear, in the event of Messrs. Isaac, Campbell, and Co. declining to enter an appearance at the trial | 106 |
| 140 | Nov. 18, | Law Officers | Case of the "Tornado." Her Majesty's Government should not concur in the protest presented by Mr. Mc Pherson. Consul Dunlop should continue to furnish funds to Mr. Mc Pherson | 107 |
| 141 | Dec. 26, | Law Officers | Case of the "Wyvern." The claim of Messrs. Barter and Co. is satisfactorily answered by Señor Arrazola | 107 |
| 142 | 30, | Law Officers | Case of the "Forward." Her capture while attempting to break the blockade of San Domingo. Claim of Mr. Moxey, a passenger. Ill-treatment of crew and passengers. Representation to be made to Spanish Government if further evidence sustains Mr. Moxey's statement | 108 |

TUNIS.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 143 | Mar. 18, 1867 | Law Officers | Murder of a British subject named C. Tortora. V. Azzopardi and his accomplices should be sent to Malta for trial. Admiralty should give proper instructions for conveyance of prisoners | 110 |
| 144 | Aug. 17, | Law Officers | Application of G. Curmi, a native of Malta, for a copy of the sentence passed upon him by Her Majesty's Consular Court in Tunis. Consider that Consular Courts are not bound to give copies of sentences passed in those Courts | 111 |

TURKEY.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 145 | Jan. 3, 1867 | Queen's Advocate | Claim of Ottoman Financial Association on the Turkish Government. Title of the Association to British protection in Turkey | 111 |
| 146 | 12, | Law Officers | British Consular Court in Egypt. Approving, with certain amendments, the draft deputation proposed by Mr. Logie, authorizing the British Legal Vice-Consul in Egypt to exercise the powers specified in the Order of Council of the 10th December, 1866 | 112 |

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 147 | Feb. 14, 1867 | Queen's Advocate | Case of the "Levant Herald" newspaper. Claim of Mr. McCoan on the Turkish Government, on account of its suspension. Right of a foreign Government to refuse to permit publication of a newspaper. Her Majesty's Government not called upon to interfere | 112 |
| 148 | Mar. 14, | Queen's Advocate | Bank of Roumania. Application of M. de Herz, the managing Director, for the support of the French and English Agents at Bucharest to obtain the due fulfilment of the Convention under which the Bank was established. Amount of support which should be granted by the British Agent, Mr. Green | 113 |
| 149 | 23, | Queen's Advocate | Case of the "Levant Herald." Suspension of publication by order of Turkish Government. Right of a foreign Government to issue such order. Turkish Law of the Press extends to British subjects. Her Majesty's Government not called upon to remonstrate | 114 |
| 150 | 28, | Law Officers .. | Conviction, by Legal Vice-Consul at Alexandria, of C. and A. Polidano, for the murder of P. Allard. Culprits should be sent to Malta to undergo their sentences, should the Vice-Consul consider that they would not be fully executed in Egypt | 115 |
| 151 | Apr. 3, | Queen's Advocate | Correspondence with Messrs. Cavan, Lubbock, and Co., respecting claim preferred by the Société Agricole et Industrielle d'Egypte against the Viceroy. Her Majesty's Government cannot interfere further than by directing Colonel Stanton to continue to use his good offices for the adjustment of their claims | 115 |
| 152 | May 7, | Queen's Advocate | Case of the "Levant Herald." "Notification Officielle" relating to the suspension of the above paper. Does not call for any formal complaint on the part of Her Majesty's Government. Hope should be expressed that the Turkish Government does not intend to restrict a fair and temperate criticism by any British newspaper in Turkey | 115 |
| 153 | June 15, | Law Officers .. | Concession proposed to be made to foreigners to hold land in Turkey. Approving "projet de loi," with alterations made by English and French Ambassadors. Should not sanction provisions proposed in Protocol which derogate from the Capitulations | 116 |
| 154 | June 24, | Law Officers .. | Vessel supposed to be fitting-out in England to assist insurgents in Crete. Insufficiency of evidence to cause detention | 117 |
| 155 | 28, | Queen's Advocate | Claims of English drivers against Egyptian Railway Administration. Approving course recommended by Colonel Stanton. Mr. Reade should be empowered to sequester portion of quarterly subsidy to pay drivers | 117 |
| 156 | 29, | Queen's Advocate | Claims of English drivers against Egyptian Railway Administration. Concur in rejection by drivers of the inadequate offers of compensation made to them | 118 |
| 157 | July 15, | Queen's Advocate | Loan of a British naval officer to the Porte. Opinion as to its being a breach of neutrality, considering the insurrection in the Island of Crete | 118 |
| 158 | 16, | Law Officers .. | Proposed laws granting to foreigners the right of holding real property in Turkey. Opinion of amended "projet de loi" | 119 |
| 159 | 22, | Queen's Advocate | Claims of English engine-drivers. No further sum out of the subsidy should be paid by Mr. Reade to the engine-drivers | 119 |
| 160 | Aug. 1, | Attorney and Solicitor-General | Vessels suspected of being fitted-out to assist the Cretan insurgents. Insufficiency of evidence to cause interference on the part of Her Majesty's Government | 120 |

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 161 | Aug. 14, 1867 | Law Officers .. | Insurrection in Crete. Vessels supposed to be fitting-out at Liverpool for service of insurgents. Proposed issue of a proclamation of neutrality. Right of a neutral State to recognize both parties to a civil war as belligerents. What is required of a neutral State, previously recognizing as belligerents persons in insurrection against the Government of a friendly State. Difference between a formal blockade and the mere closing of its ports by a Government. As to right of Provisional Government of Crete to issue letters of marque, &c. | 120 |
| 162 | 17, | Law Officers .. | Question between the Turkish authorities and Mrs. Thompson on the subject of establishing schools in the Lebanon. Right of a foreign Government to make regulations with regard to the establishment of schools. Her Majesty's Government not called upon to interfere in the case of Mrs. Thompson | 124 |
| 163 | Sept. 4, | Queen's Advocate | Claim of Mr. Petherick. Claim for compensation on account of tax inflicted on his trading establishment. Consider that Mr. Petherick is entitled to compensation | 125 |
| 164 | 23, | Queen's Advocate | Claim of Mr. W. E. Robinson against Egyptian Railway administration. Her Majesty's Government not called upon to interfere | 127 |
| 165 | Oct. 4, | Queen's Advocate | Claim of Colonel Churchill on account of the sequestration of a quantity of salt by Turkish authorities in Syria. Opinion as to right to compensation | 128 |
| 166 | 5, | Queen's Advocate | Claim of M. de Mattos on account of coals supplied to Turkish Government. Claims interest on account of delay in paying for coals supplied. The Porte denies liability in consequence of the law of Turkey being contrary to payment of interest. Cannot insist upon payment of interest until state of the law is ascertained | 129 |
| 167 | 10, | Law Officers .. | Claim of English engine-drivers. Observations on Report of Commissioners appointed to consider claim. Consider that the engine-drivers placed themselves in an illegal position by striking, instead of seeking a remedy against the Egyptian Government. Her Majesty's Government not called upon to support claim. Suggests compromise | 129 |
| 168 | 23, | Law Officers .. | Grant of British protection. Cases of Bagio, a Jew, whose parents were Ottoman subjects of Aleppo, but who was alleged to be born in British India; and the children of a naturalized British subject named Schilizzi, who had resided at Manchester, in which city his children were born. The claim of Bagio to British protection depends upon the practice which has hitherto prevailed in Turkey. Neither Schilizzi nor his child born in Turkey are entitled to British protection, and the children born in England, whilst residing with their father, should not be taken under British protection | 132 |
| 169 | 23, | Queen's Advocate | Case of Mr. I. Pariente. Difficulty with regard to an appeal to the Supreme Court at Constantinople, in consequence of Mr. Francis, who was Judge at Alexandria, being promoted to the office of Supreme Judge at Constantinople. Power of Secretary of State to appoint an Acting Judge. Appeal to Judicial Committee of Privy Council | 133 |
| 170 | 24, | Queen's Advocate | Claim of Mr. Petherick. Observations on account submitted by him, setting forth the compensation which he considers due to him by the Egyptian Government. Mr. Petherick should prove connection between the stoppage of the expedition from Khartoum in 1863 and the abandonment of his trading stations on the White Nile | 133 |
| 171 | Dec. 2, | Queen's Advocate | Claim of Mr. Petherick. Compensation to which he considers that Mr. Petherick is entitled, together with 5 per cent. interest. Right of Egyptian Government to impose a poll-tax upon Egyptian subjects | 134 |

1867

TURKEY.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 172 | Dec. 6, 1867 | Law Officers | Application made to the Acting British Consul at Constantinople to solemnize a marriage between Mr. Jenner, Third Secretary in Her Majesty's Diplomatic Service, and Stephanie Emilianoff, a lady who has been divorced from her husband, a Greek subject, to whom she had been married in Russia. Evidence required previously to the marriage being solemnized, as to the legality of such divorce, and as to the right of the lady to again marry under the same | 135 |

UNITED STATES.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 173 | Jan. 12, 1867 | Law Officers | Claims of Mrs. M. Cassin and Mr. E. Jones on account of property destroyed during the civil war. Powers of Special Claims Commission established in the United States. Her Majesty's Government not called upon to interfere with the acts or decisions of the Commission | 136 |
| 174 | Feb. 13, | Queen's Advocate | Confederate Cotton Loan. Memorial from holders for the intervention of Her Majesty's Government in their favour. Observations as to liability of a conquering State to pay the debts contracted with foreign creditors by the conquered State. Her Majesty's Government is not called upon to intervene in this case | 137 |
| 175 | 14, | Law Officers | Claims arising out of civil war in America. Reply of United States' Government to proposals for settlement. Importance of principle asserted by Her Majesty's Government, that no reference should be made to the alleged premature recognition of the Confederate States as a belligerent Power. Opinion in favour of arguments previously employed with regard to the right of recognition. Reply to statement of Mr. Seward with regard to the recognition of the Commissions of the Confederate privateers. Statement of Mr. Seward that it was not necessary for the United States to have claimed the status of a belligerent, if instead of being blockaded the Southern ports had been closed by municipal authority. Passages in Mr. Seward's despatch relating to the cases of the "Sumter" and other Confederate privateers need not be answered except by reference to despatch of the 30th of November, 1866. Objection to reference to what may appear in the unpublished and confidential archives of the two countries. The explanation attempted to be given of the statement in the Judgments of the American tribunals, regarding the effect of the Proclamation of Blockade, cannot be accepted by Her Majesty's Government. The statement of Mr. Seward, that the conduct of England gave to what would have otherwise been a mere insurrection, the importance and proportions of a civil war, is wholly destitute of foundation | 139 |
| 176 | 22, | Law Officers | Case of the "Meteor." Infringement of Foreign Enlistment Act in America. Observations on Judgment of the United States' Court. Judge Betts. Stringent construction of Foreign Enlistment Act by United States' Court. Case of the "Santissima Trinidad." Opinions expressed by the Barons of the Court of Exchequer in the case of the "Alexandra" | 141 |
| 177 | Mar. 7, | Law Officers | Settlement of claims arising out of the civil war in the United States. Amended draft of instructions to be sent to Sir F. Bruce, in reply to proposals of Mr. Seward | 145 |
| 178 | May 16, | Law Officers | American Foreign Enlistment Act. Observations on pamphlet published by Mr. Bemis, entitled "American Neutrality" | 145 |
| 179 | 22, | Law Officers | Case of the "Alabama." Approving proposed draft of instruction to Sir F. Bruce, in reply to answer of American Government founded upon Report of March 7 | 148 |
| 180 | 31, | Law Officers | Claim of Mr. Carmalt. Losses during civil war. Her Majesty's Government not called upon to interfere, if the case has been referred to the Court of Claims | 148 |
| 181 | June 14, 1867 | Law Officers | Claims of Messrs. Wood and Heyworth, and Messrs. Lemonius and Co., against the United States' Government on account of the destruction of their cotton during civil war. Approving course pursued by Mr. Walker. Her Majesty's Government not called upon to intervene | 149 |
| 182 | 14, | Law Officers | Claim of Messrs. Lemonius and Co. on account of cotton destroyed during civil war, Approving course pursued by Mr. Walker. Her Majesty's Government not called upon to intervene | 149 |
| 183 | 15, | Queen's Advocate | Case of the "Kedar" and "Czarina." Collision at sea. Limit of liability of owners under the Merchant Shipping Act. Law of the United States. Case of the "Wild Ranger." Necessity of identical law between the United States and Great Britain | 149 |
| 184 | 29, | Law Officers | Claim of Mr. J. O'Keefe against the American Government, on account of destruction of cotton. Claimant entitled to whatever remedies and redress a subject of the United States might claim. Right of an enemy to seize property. Neutral resident entitled to same remedy as natives | 150 |
| 185 | July 29, | Law Officers | Case of the "Volant." Condemned by a District Court, and sold as a prize, the proceeds being invested in the First National Bank of New Orleans. Sentence of condemnation reversed by Supreme Court of the United States. Owners claim the intervention of Her Majesty's Government to obtain repayment of the money which was produced by the sale, but which was subsequently lost by failure of Bank. Sir F. Bruce should support claim | 151 |
| 186 | 29, | Law Officers | Case of the "Springbok." Decision of United States' Supreme Court. No ground of complaint with regard to decision of Supreme Court. Sale of ship by auction, in accordance with the rules and practice of the United States. Sum offered by the United States' Government to owners might be accepted under protest, and without prejudice to any further claim arising out of losses by sale | 152 |
| 187 | Aug. 7, | Law Officers | Violation of Foreign Enlistment Act by enlistment at Demerara, on board the United States' ship of war "Penobscot," of a British subject named C. Hubbard. Warrant for arrest of Hubbard should not have been served upon him on board the United States' ship | 152 |
| 188 | 7, | Law Officers | Detention at Hong Kong of certain mutinous sailors on the application of the American Consul. The Consul had no right to claim the surrender of the sailors for the purpose of being tried in America. Illegality of their detention, if offence of which they were accused was not properly triable by Courts at Hong Kong. Query as to case coming under Extradition Treaty with the United States. Copy of instructions of Colonial Office of the 30th July, 1860, as to the powers of foreign Consuls, and the extent of the power and jurisdiction of British authorities abroad, should be forwarded to Hong Kong for the guidance of the authorities there | 153 |
| 189 | Sept. 16, | Law Officers | Case of the "Volant." Decision of Supreme Court of the United States that capture was justifiable. The Supreme Court, on adjudging the restitution of vessel and cargo, was not bound to award damages to owners | 154 |
| 190 | Oct. 5, | Law Officers | Claim of Mr. Maguire upon the United States' Government for services in watching suspicious vessels in British ports | 154 |
| 191 | 11, | Law Officers | Case of the "Alabama." Observations on reply of the United States' Government to despatch of Sir F. Bruce of the 24th May on the subject of proposed arbitration | 155 |
| 192 | 12, | Law Officers | Newfoundland. Act relating to constitution of Marine Court of Inquiry. Approving amended Act, but a new Act should be submitted for Her Majesty's assent | 156 |

1867

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 193 | Oct. 23, 1867 | Law Officers | Case of the "Alabama." Proposed answer to Mr. Seward's despatch of the 12th August on subject of arbitration. Amendments suggested. Question of recognition of the Confederate States as a belligerent Power. Observations as to character of the claims which might be brought before proposed Mixed Commission | 156 |
| 194 | Nov. 13, | Law Officers | Case of the "Alabama." Amendments suggested in further draft of instructions to Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Washington on subject of claims | 157 |
| 195 | Dec. 26, | Law Officers | Abduction from Canada of a British subject named A. Macdonald by an officer of the State of Michigan. Approving conduct of Lord Monck in requiring his restoration. Lord Monck cannot press claim for extradition of offender | 158 |
| 196 | 26, | Queen's Advocate | Treaty between Russia and the United States for cession of Russian territory in the United States. Effect of above Treaty on Treaty between Great Britain and Russia of 1825 | 158 |
| 197 | 30, | Law Officers | Case of the "Adela." Mr. A. B. Forwood should be informed that Her Majesty's Government cannot interfere pending proceedings in Supreme Court of the United States | 159 |

VENEZUELA.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 198 | Jan. 3, 1867 | Law Officers | Case of the "Bolivar." Further instructions to British Naval and Colonial authorities not required. Her Majesty's Government not called upon to interfere at present on behalf of the crew. Crew should be sent home as distressed British seamen | 159 |
| 199 | 9, | Law Officers | Case of the "Bolivar." Approve conduct of Lieutenant-Governor Pine in delivering up the "Bolivar" to the Captain of the "Neparari." Her Majesty's Government not called at present to interfere in favour of the captain and crew | 160 |
| 200 | Apr. 23, | Queen's Advocate | Proposed law to have claims of foreigners settled by the Tribunals of the country, and not to allow of diplomatic interference. Legislature of Venezuela cannot compel foreign States to recognize the validity of a law preventing them from interfering in favour of their subjects commorant in that country | 160 |
| 201 | June 29, | Law Officers | Case of the "Bolivar." Evidence which the Captain might be requested to give. Inexpedient for the Law Officers to take the evidence of the Captain of the "Bolivar" as suggested | 161 |
| 202 | July 16, | Law Officers | Claims of British subjects. Opinion as to measures being adopted to enforce their settlement | 161 |
| 203 | Oct. 12, | Law Officers | Case of the "Bolivar." Opinion that the contract entered into by the captain and crew of the "Bolivar" was an infringement of the Foreign Enlistment Act, and that Her Majesty's Government is, therefore, not called upon to interfere in their favour | 163 |
| 204 | Dec. 30, | Law Officers | Case of the "Bolivar." Claim of captain and crew against Her Majesty's Government for having compelled them to deliver up vessel to Venezuelan authorities. Claimants should be informed that Her Majesty's Government cannot admit accuracy of their statements in support of claim | 164 |

ZANZIBAR.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 205 | Jan. 9, 1867 | Law Officers | Proposal of Colonel Playfair that Slave Trade dhows captured in the neighbourhood of Zanzibar should be taken to that port for adjudication, to be dealt with by Her Majesty's Consul in a Vice-Admiralty Court. Approving suggestion | 165 |

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 206 | May 31, 1867 | Queen's Advocate | Slave contract entered into by Messrs. Fraser and Co., of Zanzibar with the Sultan. Approving course proposed to be adopted by Her Majesty's Government of not enforcing penalties incurred by the illegal act of the firm. Emancipation of slaves by the Sultan | 165 |
| 207 | Oct. 22, | Law Officers | Question as to right of British subjects abroad to employ slave labour. Contract between Messrs. Fraser and Co. and the Sultan of Zanzibar is not illegal. Penal statutes with regard to the employment of slaves by British subjects. Nothing to prevent a British subject out of Her Majesty's dominions employing a slave as a servant or labourer. Purchase of slaves by British subjects forbidden by law. Transfer by a native to a British subject of slaves, e.g., for a term of years, is forbidden by the statute. Should decline to give an opinion to Messrs. Fraser and Co. as to legality of a particular form of contract. Liability to evasion of statutes against slave-dealing | 166 |

1867

Printed for the use of the Foreign Office. April 1869.

CONFIDENTIAL.

Law Officers' Reports: 1867.

Brazil.

No. 1.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received March 9.)

My Lord, Doctors' Commons, March 9, 1867.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 1st instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me a copy of a newspaper Report of an action at law brought in this country by a sailor of the steamer "Thames" against the owner of that vessel, in which the Lord Chief Baron is reported to have censured the conduct of Mr. Hollocombe, the Acting British Consul at Rio de Janeiro. A Report from Mr. Hollocombe of his proceedings in this case was also inclosed; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to inquire whether it is possible to obtain such authentic report of the Judgment in this case as will enable your Lordship to instruct Mr. Hollocombe as to his proceedings, and to request that I would report to your Lordship as to what those instructions should be.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That there does not appear to be any very material difference in the facts as stated in the newspaper Report and in the Report of Her Majesty's Consul at Rio de Janeiro. The principal facts appear to be, that the "Thames" had practically been employed as a tender to two Peruvian ships of war, either when war was imminent, or after it had broken out; and that, at all events, she was employed in supplying them with warlike stores, though it is alleged by the Consul that the master said these stores would be discharged at Rio.

I have conferred with the Solicitor-General, who appeared at the trial on behalf of the master of the ship, the defendant. The story told by the sailors was, that they were engaged in ignorance of any war between Peru and Spain, and that at Rio they discovered that they were to be employed in assisting Peru in belligerent operations, and therefore claimed to be released from a contract which was broken. The defence was that, at the time they were engaged, Spain and Peru were at peace, and that the contract was not broken up at the time of their arrival at Rio, when a new state of having arisen, they were free to remain with the ship, or not, as they pleased. The verdict was for the sailors, the plaintiffs; but the question of law was reserved. It seems also that the truth of the statements made by the sailors is very questionable. In any case, however, the conduct of the Consul was incorrect. Her Majesty being neutral in the war between Spain and Peru, her subjects ought not to be employed in carrying contraband of war to either belligerent, still less in acting as a crew on board a tender to a belligerent ship of war. In the former case they were liable to be seized, with the vessel, as prize, and to be detained as witnesses during the trial; in the latter case they were liable to be treated as prisoners of war. The statement of the master to the Consul, that the warlike stores would be delivered at Rio, did not justify the Consul in telling the sailors that they ought to return to the vessel which was to be so employed.

The carriage of contraband in time of war gives rise to very nice questions of international law, and the vessel, with her crew, would certainly have been exposed to capture, whatever the result of the trial might be. The men ought not, in these circumstances, to have been ordered back to the ship, or to have been treated as deserters.

I have, &c.
(Signed) ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 2.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received March 21.)

My Lord, Doctors' Commons, March 21, 1867.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 11th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Rio de Janeiro (No. 10, February 5), transmitting a statement which he has drawn up on the position of the English claims presented to the Mixed Commission which was organized under the terms of the Convention between this country and Brazil of June 2, 1858; that I should see that Mr. Thornton was anxious to have the opinion of the Law Officers of the Crown upon certain points connected with these claims; and Mr. Hammond was, in compliance with Mr. Thornton's wishes, to request that I would furnish your Lordship with any observations I may have to offer thereon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have considered these claims, and have the honour to report—

That I have read the observations of Mr. Thornton upon each of these fifty-two claims.

The question as to what general principles should govern Her Majesty's Government in maintaining these claims is certainly of considerable importance, both on account of the expedience of fixing clearly and adhering steadily to the principles applicable to all such cases; and also on account of the large amount of these claims which, after undergoing a severe, but I doubt not a just, pruning, and including a very moderate European, and not an immoderate Brazilian, rate of interest, reaches a total of 93,280*l*. 9*s*. 11½*d*.

With respect to that important category of claims which are founded on the fact of losses sustained by firms or individuals resident in the Brazilian dominions in consequence of the violent acts of insurgents and rebels overpowering for the time the regular authorities of the State, I am of opinion that the proper rule to be applied is the following:—

These foreign residents are entitled to whatever compensation or redress is accorded to native Brazilian subjects; in other words, that in this particular respect the foreigner is to be considered and treated as a native by the Brazilian Government. This, I may observe, was the rule which the Foreign Office was advised to apply to British subjects resident in the territory of the United States during the late Civil War.

I rather presume that the application of this rule will have the same result in diminishing the claims as that which flowed from Mr. Thornton's opinion that the Brazilian Government was not liable at all to demands of this kind. It may be, however, that native subjects have received some compensation for similar losses.

With respect to Claim No. 1 (Messrs. Hardiman and Co.)—This would be excluded by the rule which I have stated.

With respect to the Claim No. 2 (on behalf of the "Perseverance").—I am clear that it ought not to be received, for the reason alleged by Mr. Thornton, and because it is by no means certain that the collision was not the result of inevitable accident.

As to Claim No. 3.—No remark is needed; and so as to Claim No. 4.

Claim No. 5 is governed by the answer to No. 1.

As to Claim No. 6 (Davenport and Co.)—I agree with Mr. Thornton, that the circumstances take it out of the application of the principle which has been stated, and that it should be satisfied.

As to Lyon and Parkinson (No. 3 of No. 6), I agree with Mr. Thornton in his reasoning on Claim 40, that the Brazilian Government ought not to pay for the gunpowder imported in the ship "Cabotia."

The Claim of Messrs. Rostron and Co. (No. 4) falls under the principle which I have already stated, and is properly excluded.

The Claim of Mr. Marback, arising out of the compulsory destruction of houses to prevent the spreading of the conflagration, appears to me to be properly dealt with by Mr. Thornton.

With respect to John O'Dwyer, no legal claim can be made upon the Brazilian Government; the utmost that can be done is to appeal to the equity of that Government in the particular circumstances of the case; and certainly nothing should be said upon the subject of interest.

In regard to Claim No. 7, I have not sufficient information to form an opinion whether it does fall under the principle which exempts the Government from liability: I should be inclined, from the brief statement of Mr. Thornton, to think the contrary; and with respect to—

Claim 8 (Mr. Vice-Consul Burnett's), I agree that he is entitled to compensation.

Claim No. 9 requires no observation.

Claim No. 10 (officers of "Raleigh" and "Inconstant") is, I presume, properly treated by Mr. Thornton.

Claim No. 11 (creditors of Antonio Uzett).—If the premises of Mr. Thornton be correct, his conclusion that the Brazilian Government ought not to pay is just.

No. 12 (Claims of Messrs. Proudfoot and Co.)—I suppose that Mr. Thornton is satisfied on good grounds that this claim ought to be reconsidered.

No. 13 (owners of Constantine).—I think this claim should be admitted.

No. 14 (Claim for undue seizures, &c.)—I agree with Mr. Thornton.

No. 15.—No remark necessary.

No. 16 (Petty and Co.)—I agree with Mr. Thornton.

No. 17 (Mr. W. Youle).—The interest seems properly added.

No. 18 (Claim of Mr. F. Wilton).—The delay is fatal in this case.

No. 19 (British creditors of Dutton and Co.)—This involves a question of Brazilian constitutional law, namely, whether the Treasury has a privilege of priority with respect to the debts of a bankrupt. Mr. Thornton thinks that it has, and I have no reason to gainsay his opinion.

No. 20 (Mr. Laing's Claim).—This claim is for a large sum of money. I do not agree with what appears to me to be the opinion of Mr. Thornton, that if a foreign Government has shown bad faith in its contract with a British subject, the British Government ought not to interfere; though I agree with him that such interference should not be founded on the mere disappointment of the British subject in not obtaining the gain which he expected to derive from the contract. And, also, I agree with Mr. Thornton that, unless a clear injustice has been done to Mr. Laing, Her Majesty's Government ought not to interfere. And I am bound further to add that, upon a perusal of his statement of the case, I see no sufficient reason to doubt that the refusal of Mr. Thornton to interfere was a sound exercise of the discretion entrusted to him.

No. 21 (Claim of Her Majesty's Government).—I agreed with Mr. Thornton that it would not be expedient that Her Majesty's Government should insist upon this claim.

No. 22 (Claim of Charles Lucas).—I come reluctantly to the conclusion that this claim should not be pressed.

No. 23 (Claim of John Swan).—I have no doubt that Mr. Thornton is right in refusing to press this claim.

No. 24 (Claim of Edward Gibbon Swan).—I agree with Mr. Thornton that Mr. Swan is entitled to be indemnified for the missing articles of his property; and though his misfortunes were certainly brought upon him in the first instance by his own fault, I think that, having regard to the inhumanity of his treatment in prison at Breves, and the conduct of Dr. Danim at Parà, that he is also entitled to some further compensation, in which respect I slightly differ from Mr. Thornton; but the amount of that compensation should not be large, and left entirely to Mr. Thornton's discretion.

No. 25 (Claim of Edward Hammond).—I agree with Mr. Thornton as to the reduction necessary in this claim.

No. 26 (Claim of Mr. John George Young).—I have felt some doubt with respect to this claim; but, on the whole, I see no sufficient reason to dissent from the conclusion at which Mr. Thornton has arrived.

No. 27 (Claim of James Calder).—No observation arises upon this claim.

No. 28 (Claim of Simon Samuel).—I agree with Mr. Thornton that the Brazilian Government are liable to indemnify the owners for the loss of this gunpowder. The circumstances take the case out of the application of the rule with respect to the destruction of property by rebels.

1867

No. 29 (Claim of Messrs. Heskith).—I agree that this claim should be paid.

No. 30 (Claim of Messrs. Broun).—I am clear that Her Majesty's Government ought not to interfere in this case.

No. 31. (Claim of Mr. R. Rogers).—Materials are insufficient to pronounce upon this claim.

No. 32 (Claim of Messrs. Crabtree).—This appears to be a fair claim.

No. 33 (Claim of the Master of the "Indian").—I agree that the utmost demand upon the Brazilian Government should be for the remission of the fine without interest.

No. 34 (Claim of Mr. M. de Lima).—This claim falls under the rule, and ought not to be supported.

No. 35 (Claim of Mr. J. Barber, and others).—I agree that the Brazilian Government are not responsible.

No. 36 (Claim of Messrs. Sadler and Co.); No. 37 (Claim of J. Currell); No. 38 (Claim of J. and W. Bryson).—These claims appear to be just, and founded on a violation of our Treaty.

No. 39 (Claims of eighteen British merchants).—I agree with Mr. Thornton as to this claim.

No. 40 (Claim of Mr. T. Tobins).—I have already referred to this in Claim 3 (of No. 6); and I think that Mr. Thornton's distinction between the parts of the claim which ought to be, and which ought not to be, paid, is just.

No. 41 (Claim of Mrs. Georgina Younghusband).—This claim cannot be urged.

No. 42 (Claim of Messrs. Crabtree).—I agree that "this claim needs no comment."

No. 43 (Claim of Mr. Findlater).—This falls under the rule, and cannot therefore be sustained.

No. 44 (Claim of Messrs. Moon and Co.)—I agree with Mr. Thornton. This should be paid.

No. 45 (Claim of Messrs. Bielby and Co.)—This claim ought not to be pressed as a matter of right; whatever the Brazilian Government may think fit to do, as a matter of generosity.

No. 46 (Claim of Underwriters at Lloyd's)—This refers to Claim 7. It would seem to me that this claim might be fairly put forward; but I think Mr. Thornton should be directed to exercise his discretion respecting it.

Nos. 47, 48, 50 (Messrs. Ewart and Co., and others).—In the absence of the necessary documents these claims cannot be pressed.

No. 49 (Claim of Mr. J. Bradshaw).—I agree with Mr. Thornton that this claim is just.

No. 51 (Claim of Messrs. Amando and Co.)—This is a claim for excess of duties of the same nature as No. 49.

With the general observations upon the whole of this class of cases, made by Mr. Thornton, I entirely agree.

It is most probable that the loss which the merchants really sustained, arose from the diminished consumption of the goods, and the consequent lessening of their profits. Whether Mr. Thornton be right in the criterion which he adopts as fixing the amount of this diminution and loss, I cannot tell; but I am clearly of opinion that a certain rate of compensation, considerably below what is claimed, should be agreed upon to cover all losses.

No. 52 (Claim of Messrs. J. Macnab and Co.)—This is of the same nature as No. 28; and I think it should be paid,

I have, &c.
(Signed) ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 3.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received May 23.)

My Lord, Temple, May 22, 1867.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 18th instant stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the accompanying letter which has been received from Mr. Lang, relative to his claim on the Brazilian Government, together with an opinion formerly given by me. That this case was included in Mr. Thornton's Report on Brazilian Claims which was submitted to me on the 11th March last; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take Mr. Lang's letter into consideration and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the answer which should be returned to that gentleman.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I think an answer should be sent to Mr. Lang to the following tenor and effect:—

That your Lordship has considered his letter and the opinion inclosed in it. That by the opinion Mr. Lang was advised that his best course was to endeavour to obtain an arbitration upon his claim, and that it was reasonable to hope that Her Majesty's Government would assist him in obtaining such an arbitration.

His claim has subsequently been fully and carefully considered in all its details by Her Majesty's Representative at the Brazilian Court. That in the first place he was advised by an eminent lawyer at Rio Janeiro that it was competent to Mr. Lang to have sued the Brazilian Government in the Courts of that State, and that, in several instances, claimants had obtained sentence in these Courts against the Government; but that, however this might be, Her Majesty's Representative was of opinion, that whatever might be the strict law on the principal subject, namely, as to Mr. Lang's refusal to be bound by the opinion of the majority of the Board, that the contract with the Brazilian Government should be cancelled; the equity of the case was in favour of the Brazilian Government, and that at all events the circumstances, fully and duly considered, were not such as to render it proper that this claim should be pressed by Her Majesty's Government upon the Brazilian Government.

That in this opinion Her Majesty's Government agree.

I have, &c.
(Signed) ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 4.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received December 2.)

My Lord, Temple, November 30, 1867.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of October 11th, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me two despatches from Her Majesty's Minister at Rio (No. 2 Slave Trade, and No. 14 Commercial), calling attention to the employment of slaves in the mines of Morro Velho, by the St. João del Rey Mining Company, which he states to be practically an English Company; and he was to request that I would take these papers into my consideration, and favour your Lordship with my opinion as to the legal position of British subjects holding shares in that Company, and as to the course which should be pursued in dealing with the case.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken these papers into consideration and have the honour to report—

That it would be difficult to define in any general terms the legal position of British subjects holding shares in the Morro Velho Company, not merely because different considerations of law will apply to different classes of shareholders, but because it is by no means certain what are the considerations of law which will apply to each class.

This difficulty arises from the different views of the law expressed by the Judges in the case of Santos v. Illidge, which was discussed first in the Court of Common Pleas, and afterwards, on appeal, in the Exchequer Chamber. In this case, some of the Judges held that by 5 Geo. IV, cap. 113, no British subject could lawfully, as regards the statute law of Great Britain, hold slaves in any foreign country, because he could not lawfully acquire possession of them in the course of trade; others held that 5 Geo. IV, cap. 113, did not forbid British subjects to hold slaves, although it imposed a penalty upon the acquisition of them in the course of trade; whilst others held that 5 Geo. IV, cap. 113, did not prevent British subjects from acquiring slaves in the course of trade, or holding them in countries where slavery was sanctioned by the law of the land.

A majority of the Judges were in agreement on this point, that prior to 6 and 7 Vict., cap. 98, there was no statute which made it illegal for a British subject to hold slaves in a country where slavery was sanctioned by the lex loci. Under this view of the statute law, if the most favourable position be assumed for the Company, namely, that the slaves which are represented to be owned by the Company came into its possession prior to the 1st of November, 1843, all British subjects, at whatever period they may have received their shares in the Company, will stand upon a common platform of legality as regards British law by virtue of the exemptions contained in 6 and 7 Vict., cap. 98, s. 6, which exempts from all penalties or punishment under that statute, which was passed to supplement 5 Geo. IV, cap. 113, all persons for receiving any shares in any joint stock company established before the passing of that Act in respect of any slave in possession of the company before that time.

1867

It may be observed that there is nothing upon the face of the account furnished by Mr. Earle to Mr. Watson which forbids the adoption of the most favourable view of the Company's position, inasmuch as the slaves represented to be owned by the Company are only one-sixth of the number employed in the mines, the remainder being hired slaves.

It is possible, however, that a less favourable view may be consistent with the facts of the case, namely, that the Company itself may not have been in possession of all its slaves antecedently to the 1st of November, 1843, but may have come into possession of some of them by operation of law since that time, as being the offspring of slaves which were in its possession prior to that time, such offspring, by the law of Brazil, devolving as slaves to the Company in its character of owner of the parent slaves. This state of things would be attended with different legal results as regards different classes of shareholders. Such shareholders as may have been in possession of their shares prior to the 1st of November, 1843, or may have become possessed of their shares by operation of law subsequently to that time, will be protected from penalties, whilst those who have purchased shares subsequently to that time will have infringed the statute law in respect of the slaves acquired by the Company since the 1st of November, 1843, and will be liable to penalties for having purchased, though not for holding, their shares; whilst a third class of shareholders, who have succeeded by inheritance, bequest, devise, marriage, or other operation of law to shares purchased since the 1st of November, 1843, will not be exposed to penalties.

The least favourable view which can be taken of the shareholders' position is, that the Company may have acquired in the course of trade, since the 1st of November, 1843, a considerable number of the slaves which it now owns, or, as is not very probable, even the whole number of slaves in its present possession. On this supposition, all the present shareholders who are British subjects will have been guilty of a violation of the statute law of Great Britain, whether they were actual shareholders prior to the 1st of November, 1843, or have acquired their shares since that time, unless, in the latter case, they have come into possession of their shares subsequently to the purchase of the slaves, by inheritance, bequest, devise, marriage, or other operation of law. There would thus appear to be no common standard for determining the legal position of British subjects holding shares in the Morro Velho Company, except in two cases—

1. Where all the slaves have been in possession of the Company prior to the 1st of November, 1843;

2. Where the shareholders have succeeded to their shares by inheritance, bequest, devise, marriage, or other operation of law.

In all other cases the position of a British shareholder will be a position of doubtful legality, always liable to be impeached in a civil suit before a British Court of Law, but which may be capable of being sustained upon proof of certain facts, the burden of which proof will fall on the shareholder.

With regard to penalties, one of the Judges in the Exchequer Chamber, in the above-mentioned case of Santos v. Illidge, expressed an opinion that the statute law does not constitute the holding of slaves by British subjects, in a country where such holding is authorized by the lex loci, a penal offence; and as the Judges did not think it necessary to determine this point in order to decide that case, the question may still be regarded as not yet settled.

Under these circumstances, it would be advisable for your Lordship to direct further inquiry to be made into the circumstances under which the Company have become possessed of the slaves which it is represented to own at the present time, before any steps are taken, if your Lordship should be so disposed, to challenge the legality of the position which the shareholders individually occupy.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

Buenos Ayres.

No. 5.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received January 19.)

My Lord, Lincoln's Inn, January 18, 1867.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 4th of January instant, stating that with reference to the Law Officers' Report of the 28th of June last, on the subject of imprisonment of Mr. Stewart, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying further despatch which has been received from Her Majesty's Minister at Buenos Ayres (No. 8), reporting that a sentence unfavourable to Mr. Stewart has been pronounced by the Inferior Court, but that the subject will be brought by appeal before a higher tribunal and inclosing a translation of the Judges' opinion from the Buenos Ayres "Standard;" and Mr. Hammond was also directed to request that we would favour your Lordship with any observations we may have to offer thereupon. The former papers were inclosed therewith.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into our consideration and have the honour to report—

That we have read the Report of the sentence of the District Federal Judge at Buenos Ayres in Mr. Stewart's case, against which sentence we learn from Mr. Mathew's letter an appeal is pending, and on that account he makes no comment at present on the sentence; and we do not think that we can at present give any useful opinion thereon; and we would only suggest that Her Majesty's Minister at Buenos Ayres should be directed to keep himself informed as to the progress of the appeal, and forward a copy of the Judgment to Her Majesty's Government as soon as it has been pronounced.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

Central America.

No. 6.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received August 29.)

My Lord, Temple, August 28, 1867.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Murray's letter of the 17th instant, stating that with reference to the Report of my predecessor of the 23rd of June, 1863, on the claim preferred by the owners of the San Geronimo estate on the Guatemalan Government for losses sustained by them in consequence of depredations committed on that estate in 1838 by revolutionary bands under the command of Laureano Carrera, brother and Lieutenant of Rafael Carrera, who subsequently made himself President of the Republic, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me a correspondence that has passed since that date, by which I should see that Her Majesty's Government have continued to support the claim, although they informed the applicant that they were not prepared to enforce it; that the representations of Her Majesty's Government have led to no result; that the Guatemalan Government admit the claim, but on various grounds postpone a settlement; and that, finally, as will be seen from Mr. Corbett's despatch of the 29th May last, they proposed, with a view to a settlement of the claim, that a person should be appointed on the part of the Guatemalan Government to investigate, in conjunction with a representative of the claimants, the accuracy of the items of the claims, and to examine all the documents and depositions of persons taken at the time the damage was done; and that these two gentlemen should frame a Report showing what amount of compensation is due to the parties interested; but that Captain Harris, the representative of the owners of the estate, declines to agree to this proposal, and urges that more positive instructions be given to Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires; and Mr. Murray was pleased to request that I would reconsider the whole case, and its present position, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion upon the course which Her Majesty's Government should adopt in the matter.

1867

The former papers were inclosed for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken this case into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That the most advisable course, in my opinion, under the existing circumstances of this case, will be for Her Majesty's Government to assent to the proposal of the Guatemalan Government, that the items of Captain Harris' claim shall be submitted to a reference; but I should advise Her Majesty's Government to attach this condition to their assent, namely, that the referees shall be bound to report their award within a stated time after the agreement to go to a reference has been signed, and that the Guatemalan Government shall pay the sum awarded by the referees within a stated time after the award has been made.

The proposal of the Guatemalan Government that the items of the claim shall be submitted to a reference is, in itself, not unreasonable. On the other hand, as the documentary evidence on which it is proposed that the referees shall make their award is ready at hand, there are no good grounds why the referees should not be required to report within a given time, which would serve to remove Captain Harris' objection to the proposal of the Guatemalan Government on the ground of delay.

It may be observed that Captain Harris will derive this double advantage from the reference being agreed to, subject to the condition above suggested, that whilst it will involve an admission on the part of the Guatemalan Government of the principle upon which his claim rests, he will be assured of receiving some compensation within a reasonable time; and as he has already intimated in his letter of the 15th October, 1863, his readiness to acquiesce in a large reduction from his claim if an early settlement of it could be obtained, he will have no difficulty in giving to his representative at the reference such instructions as will enable him to meet in an amicable spirit the views of the Guatemalan Government, who are evidently seeking by the reference to effect some reduction in his claim, and not to avoid it altogether.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 7.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received October 4.)

My Lord, Temple, October 3, 1867.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 16th ultimo, stating that with reference to my Report of the 28th August last on the claim preferred against the Guatemalan Government by the owners of the San Geronimo estate, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me therewith a further letter, dated the 11th ultimo, on the subject, from Captain Harris, in answer to one which, by your Lordship's direction, he addressed to him on the 6th ultimo, on the receipt of my above-mentioned Report; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take these further papers into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken these further papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That, with regard to the conditions of the reference which Captain Harris suggests in his letter of September 11, 1867, for your Lordship's approval, I am of opinion that your Lordship may properly assent to the substance of the first, third, fourth, fifth, and tenth paragraphs; that the second is unnecessary; and that the sixth, seventh, eighth, and ninth conditions should not be approved by your Lordship, as the Commissioners ought to have full discretion as to the evidence to be received by them, and the weight to be given to it.

CENTRAL AMERICA.

No. 6*.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received September 10.)

My Lord, Temple, September 10, 1867.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 2nd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the translation of a letter from Señor Martinez, Envoy from Nicaragua, relating to the arrangements come to under the Treaty of Managua of 1860, with regard to the Mosquito territory, and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take that paper into consideration, and report to your Lordship my opinion as to the answer which should be returned to Señor Martinez' note.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands, I have the honour to report—

That I have carefully considered the three questions discussed in the letter of his Excellency Señor Tomas Martinez, the Envoy from Nicaragua, and am of opinion that the position which his Excellency seeks to maintain on behalf of the Nicaraguan Government on each of those questions is wholly untenable.

The first of those questions has regard to the payment of the subvention stipulated by Article V of the Treaty of Managua. His Excellency asserts that Nicaragua has "neither denied nor refused the payment of the stipulated subvention, which is reserved for the satisfaction of those persons or individuals only of whom the Convention speaks, and not of those who have come from without to appropriate what does not belong to them."

It will be seen, however, that the Treaty of Managua stipulates in express terms that the subvention shall be paid by half-yearly payments to the person authorized by the Chief of the Mosquito Indians to receive it, and there is no provision in the Treaty which entitles the Nicaraguan Government to control the use of it by the Chief. It will be the plain duty, therefore, of the Nicaraguan Government to make the half-yearly payment to the agent of the Chief, irrespective of any consideration touching the contingent application of it by the Chief, and the only ground upon which the Nicaraguan Government can with any pretence of right refuse to pay the subvention will be the want of due authority on the part of the individual applying for it.

His Excellency appears to lay some stress upon the fact that the agent for the Chief of the Mosquitos is an alien, not a native Indian, but he does not impeach the validity of his mandate quâ Agent; on the contrary, the observations of his Excellency seem directed against the title of the Chief himself. In other words, he impugns the election of the present Chief of the Mosquitos. It may be necessary, therefore, to consider what are the Treaty rights of the Republic of Nicaragua as regards the election of the Chief of the Mosquito Indians. The Treaty contains no express provisions on this head, but the IIIrd Article, which is concerned with the government of the Mosquito Indians, secures to them the right of governing themselves, and all persons resident within the Mosquito Reserve, "according to their own customs, and according to any Regulations which may from time to time be adopted by them, not inconsistent with the sovereign rights of the Republic of Nicaragua."

The Treaty elsewhere recognizes a Chief of the Mosquito Indians, to whom the subvention is to be paid, and whom it regards as the Head of the Mosquito Government.

His Excellency in objecting to the election of the present Chief, as being an infant, expresses a view on the part of the President of the Republic of Nicaragua, that it was brought about by foreign adventurers, and was not carried out by the Mosquitos themselves.

1867

His Excellency, however, has not suggested that the election of an infant, as Chief, is a proceeding at variance with the customs of the Mosquitos, it being borne in mind that the uncle of the present Chief, his immediate predecessor, was an infant when he was crowned at Belize, and recognized as Chief by Her Majesty's Government; or that his election is inconsistent with the sovereign rights of the Republic of Nicaragua; whilst it cannot have escaped his Excellency's attention, that the Republic of Nicaragua has expressly bound itself by the concluding words of the IIIrd Article of the Treaty of Managua to respect the acts of the Government of the Mosquitos, subject only to the reservation that they are not inconsistent with the sovereign rights of the Republic.

There being nothing alleged on the part of the Nicaraguan Government as regards the succession of the present Chief to show that it is inconsistent with the provisions of the Treaty of Managua, Her Majesty's Government may, in my opinion, reasonably insist upon the Government of the Republic of Nicaragua fulfilling its Treaty obligations as respects the payment of the half-yearly subvention.

The second question touched upon in his Excellency's letter regards the Decree of the 4th December, 1864: that Decree, according to his Excellency's own words, "directs that the importation of foreign goods intended for the consumption of the Mosquito Indians should take place by the port of San Juan del Norte, the goods being subject to the same regulations and the same imposts as those intended for the consumption of the rest of the Republic."

In other words, that Decree has constituted San Juan del Norte the only place of entry for foreign goods intended to be imported into the Mosquito Reserve, and, further, has authorized the same duties to be levied upon those goods, which are paid upon goods intended to be imported into the inland districts of the Nicaraguan territory.

Now, there is no provision in the Treaty of Managua which authorizes the Government of Nicaragua to control the foreign trade by sea with the Mosquito Reserve, or to prohibit any such trade except through the port of San Juan del Norte: on the contrary, the spirit of the Treaty in securing to the Mosquito Indians the right of governing themselves, and in expressly recognizing a sea frontier to the Mosquito Reserve, forbids the exercise of any such control on the part of the Nicaraguan Government.

Further, in regard to the duties, which his Excellency states to be levied by the Nicaraguan Government upon goods imported from foreign countries into San Juan del Norte, and re-exported by sea to the coast of the Mosquito Reserve, such duties are in my opinion levied in direct violation of the VIIth Article of the Treaty of Managua, which declares San Juan del Norte to be a free port.

There is one consideration as regards the claim of the Nicaraguan Government on this point which may deserve not to be overlooked, as being practically conclusive against their claim, namely, that if the Government of Nicaragua were at liberty to constitute San Juan del Norte the only port of entry for foreign goods to be imported into the Mosquito Reserve, and were at liberty to levy duties on the importation of such goods into the Mosquito Reserve, it would virtually have the power not merely to elude, but to invert, the provisions of the Treaty as regards the subvention to be paid by it to the Mosquito Chief; and would be able to compel the Mosquito Indians, as the consumers of those goods, not merely to supply the funds necessary to make up the stipulated subvention due from the Nicaraguan Government to their Chief, but also to supply funds in subvention of the Government itself of the Nicaraguan Republic.

The third question may be briefly disposed of. His Excellency states that the Nicaraguan Government, in granting to certain British subjects the privilege of cutting mahogany along the coast of the Mosquito Reserve, has been actuated by a wish to increase its revenues with a view not merely to discharge what remains of its internal debt, but also to prepare the means to liquidate and cancel that which exists in favour of Her Britannic Majesty's subjects.

However much the motives of the Government of the Republic may commend themselves to Her Majesty's Government, the question which it has to consider is whether the position of his Excellency upon the question of right is tenable when he urges that, the Reserve being under the sovereignty of Nicaragua, and being a part of the territory of the Republic, as it is declared to be by the Treaty of Managua, it is quite evident that the Government of the Republic has the right to make such concessions.

I think that his Excellency's view of the rights incidental to the sovereignty of Nicaragua over the Mosquito Reserve is not well founded. The term "sovereignty," which is used in the Treaty to mark the new relations of the Republic of Nicaragua to the Mosquito Indians, as distinguished from the term "protection," which marked the former relations of the British Crown to them, implies, no doubt, some degree of territorial jurisdiction, and the degree itself of jurisdiction may be gathered from the various provisions of the Treaty to be merely a supremacy, or what jurists have termed the right of eminent domain (dominium eminens, or dominium supremum), a modified sovereignty, analogous to that which the Supreme Lord enjoyed under the feudal system, and by right of which he could prevent the alienation of the fief in favour of a third party. Such a right is secured to the Republic of Nicaragua by Article II of the Treaty of Managua, whilst the other Articles secure to the Mosquito Indians the undisturbed possession of the Mosquito Reserve, and all the rights of government within that Reserve.

I am of opinion that the Mosquito Indians have not been divested of any possessory right by this Treaty; that the forests within the Mosquito Reserve are part of the possessions of the Mosquito Indians, and that it appertains to the Mosquito authorities to make such Regulations as they shall think fit for the cutting of the timber in those forests, short of alienating the land to a foreigner, to the exclusion of all interference on the part of the Nicaraguan Government.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

1867

I may add that I think Captain Harris would be well advised if he were to reduce his claim for interest.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 8.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received November 20.)

My Lord,
Temple, November 19, 1867.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of 31st ultimo, stating that with reference to my Report of the 3rd ultimo, on the claim of the owners of the San Geronimo estate against the Guatemalan Government, he was now directed by your Lordship to transmit to me, therewith, a further letter, dated 28th ultimo, from Captain Harris, in answer to one which was addressed to him, on the 8th ultimo, on the receipt of my above-mentioned Report, and which was also inclosed; and Mr. Egerton was pleased to request that I would take these papers into my consideration and favour your Lordship with my opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That Captain Harris' further letter of 28th October appears to have been written under an imperfect apprehension of the terms of the proposal made by the Guatemala Government, as stated in the despatch of Mr. Corbett of 29th May, 1867. That proposal contemplates the appointment of two referees whose business it will be to examine the documents and depositions of persons taken at the time when the damage was done, and upon that examination to frame their Report as to the amount of compensation due to the persons interested.

Under the terms of this reference it will be competent to Captain Harris to produce before the Commissioners the documents upon which he justly lays stress in the ninth of the conditions submitted for your Lordship's approval in his letter of September 11th, 1867; and it will be the duty of the Commissioners to examine them as being the depositions, to use the words of Captain Harris, "of witnesses of the sacking of the estate taken before the proper authorities immediately afterwards," and, as such, clearly within the scope of the reference; but when Captain Harris requests your Lordship to insist upon his ninth condition, that these documents "shall be received as bonâ fide evidence of actual damage done," he either means that your Lordship should insist that they shall be received as the statements of witnesses speaking with good faith, which is unnecessary, regard being had to the specific terms of the reference; or if he means that your Lordship should insist beforehand that the Commissioners shall be bound to give unqualified credit to the items, such a condition would be inconsistent with the special object of the reference.

The seventh of Captain Harris' proposed conditions is almost identical with the proposal of the Guatemalan Government, except that it limits the inquiry to the depositions of parties "living at or in the vicinity of the estate at the time of its pillage and destruction."

I think it would be unreasonable to propose the limitation of the inquiry and to exclude from the notice of the Commissioners any contemporaneous documents, or any depositions taken at the time of the pillage which the Guatemalan Government might produce, because the parties were not actually living at or in the vicinity of the estate. On the other hand, the eighth condition proposed by Captain Harris, that the claimants should be allowed to produce such evidence as they may think proper, subject to the limitation that it shall be the evidence of persons living at or in the vicinity of the estate at the time of the pillage, would enlarge the inquiry beyond what is contemplated in the proposal of the Guatemalan Government, whilst it is calculated to open a door for evidence fabricated ad hoc on either side, as the Guatemalan Government would reasonably claim a like liberty, and the result of admitting such evidence might prove more disastrous than advantageous to Captain Harris.

The remaining condition, which is the sixth in Captain Harris' list, I have considered to be not a becoming condition for your Lordship to propose to the Guatemalan Government, namely, that "Her Majesty's Government cannot assent to the reception of the evidence of a notorious criminal either for or against the claim." Captain Harris appears to have taken alarm at a statement made to him by the Private Secretary of the Guatemalan Minister, as detailed in Captain Harris' letter of July 30th, 1867, that his Government had a letter from a notorious criminal named Knoth, which may account for his suggesting such a condition. Upon a careful reconsideration of the above four conditions, I am unable to arrive at any other conclusion than that which I ventured to submit to your Lordship in my former Report. If, however, there should be any doubt or difficulty in regard to the documents referred to in Captain Harris' seventh condition, as being in the Archives of the British Consulate, I see no objection to special provisions being made in settling the terms of the reference that they shall be accepted by the referees as genuine documents. It is possible that such may be the meaning of Captain Harris in wishing it to be stipulated that they shall be received as bonâ fide evidence.

1867

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 9.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received December 5.)

Temple, December 5, 1867.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 3rd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me a despatch and its inclosure from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires to the Central American Republics (No. 46), together with a Memorandum drawn up in the Foreign Office, asking whether Mr. Hall, Her Majesty's Consul at Sonsonate, is entitled to the privileges of a British subject within the Republic of Guatemala; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take these papers into my consideration, and favour your Lordship with my opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That Mr. Hall, being a natural-born citizen of Guatemala, cannot claim, within the territory of Guatemala, the protection of Her Majesty's Government against the Government of Guatemala; but as Mr. Hall, although born abroad, is, by the law of Great Britain, deemed to be a natural-born subject of the Crown, by reason of his being the child of a natural-born subject of Her Majesty, your Lordship may properly consider Mr. Hall to be entitled to the good offices of Her Majesty's Government, if any difficulty should arise between him and the Guatemalan Government.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

Chile.

No. 10.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received March 9.)

Doctor's Commons, March 9, 1867.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 2nd instant, stating that, with reference to my Report of the 9th of November last on the case of the British vessel "Thalaba," captured by a Chilean man-of-war on the ground that she had been chartered as a Spanish transport and was laden with stores for the Spanish squadron, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me a letter which has been received from Messrs. Freshfield and Newman requesting, on behalf of an Insurance Company and of certain underwriters at Lloyds, information as to the condemnation of the "Thalaba" by a competent Tribunal; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take this paper into consideration and inform your Lordship what reply should be returned to Messrs. Freshfields' and Newman's application.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I think the proper answer to Messrs. Freshfield and Newman would be to the effect that the "Thalaba" appears to have been seized by a Chilean ship-of-war as lawful prize, and to have been tried before a Chilean Prize Court; but that Her Majesty's Government have, as yet, received no information as to whether sentence of condemnation has or has not been passed upon this vessel.

I have, &c.
(Signed) ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 11.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received March 14.)

Doctors' Commons, March 14, 1867.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 7th instant, stating that, with reference to my Report of the 24th December last with regard to the rights of British subjects in Chile to exemption from forced loans, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me a despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Santiago, inclosing a copy of a law which had been passed by the Chilean Congress, imposing a contribution of 5,000,000 dollars on the inhabitants of Chile; that Mr. Thomson inclosed a copy of a circular which he had addressed to the British Consular officers in Chile, giving instructions as to the steps to be taken when British subjects are called upon to pay their quota towards the sum in question; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take these papers into consideration, and inform your Lordship of my opinion as to the nature of the reply which should be returned to Mr. Thomson's despatch.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I think an answer should be sent to Mr. Thomson to the following effect:—

That he is right in considering the imposition of 5,000,000 dollars as coming under the category of "a forced loan," and in his opinion that the XIth Article of the Treaty of Santiago, October 4, 1854 (Hertslet, vol. ix, page 948), exempts Her Majesty's subjects from the compulsory payment of a contribution to such loan. I see that by the IIIrd Article of the French Treaty (St. Cloud, August 8, 1853) French subjects are exempted from the payment of "emprunts forcés," and I suppose, therefore, that the French Minister will act in concert with Mr. Thomson.

I have, &c.
(Signed) ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 12.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received April 12.)

Temple, April 11, 1867.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 9th instant, stating that, with reference to his letter of the 2nd of March last, and to the previous correspondence relative to the seizure by the Chilean authorities of the British vessel "Thalaba," he was directed by your Lordship to forward to me therewith a further despatch on the subject which has been received from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Santiago (No. 20, February 15, 1867), inclosing a copy of the sentence by which the vessel is declared to be a good prize; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take these papers into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with any observations which I may have to make thereon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have considered these papers, and have the honour to report—

That according to the grounds laid in the sentence, this vessel was rightly condemned as lawful prize.

If, as probably was the case, the evidence warranted the conclusions drawn by the Court, the "Thalaba" was certainly in the service of the belligerent, and justly treated as enemy's property.

I have, &c.
(Signed) ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

No. 13.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received April 17.)

My Lord, Doctors' Commons, April 16, 1867.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 15th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me therewith two despatches from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires in Chile relative to the refusal of the authorities at Valparaiso to admit the British vessel "Colina," arrived there from Malaga with a cargo of Spanish produce; and to request that I would take these papers into consideration and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to any instructions which should be sent to Mr. Thomson in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken these papers into consideration and have the honour to report—

That I think instructions should be sent to Mr. Thomson to the following effect: That with respect to the general duty of Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires as to advising British subjects resident at Valparaiso, Mr. Thomson is right in his view that he is not bound to act as legal adviser of any British firm upon questions of international law, and even when an actual grievance is complained of, it may often be necessary that he should refer the matter to Her Majesty's Government and await instructions from home before he decides upon the course which is proper to be pursued. At the same time no general rule can be wisely laid down on this subject which would          , in all cases, without regard to circumstances, the discretion of Her Majesty's Representative.

It does not appear, for instance, that any harm would have accrued if Mr. Thomson had in this particular instance caused a reply to have been sent to Messrs. Huth and Co., to the effect that it appeared to Mr. Thomson that it was competent to the Chilean Government to prohibit the landing of the goods, but that Messrs. Huth and Co. would do well to take proper advice upon the subject.

It should be observed that Consul Rouse, in his letter No. 10 of the 22nd of February, 1867, to Mr. Thomson, states clearly and correctly the international law upon the subject in the following passages: "I have not failed verbally to remind them that British merchants taking up their residence in Chile might be considered not as neutrals but as Chileans; that war existing between Spain on the one hand, and Chile on the other, all commercial intercourse between the subjects of each must cease."

I have, &c.
(Signed) ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 14.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received May 23.)

My Lord, Temple, May 22, 1867.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 15th instant, stating that, with reference to my Report of the 15th ultimo, relative to the case of the British vessel "Colina," he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me together with the former papers, the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Santiago; and was to request that I would take these papers into consideration and report to your Lordship my opinion as to any fresh instruction which should be addressed to Mr. Thomson in this matter.

In abedience to your Lordship's commands, I have considered these papers and have the honour to report—

That I am of opinion that the course pursued by Her Majesty's Representative at Santiago has been right and proper; and that the answer which he has given to Messrs. Huth and Co. should be approved of by your Lordship.

It does not appear to me necessary to send any fresh instrnctions in this matter.

I have, &c.
(Signed) ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 15.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received November 5.)

My Lord, Temple, November 5, 1867.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 19th ultimo, stating that, with reference to my predecessor's Report of the 9th of May, 1866, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me a note, dated the 14th ultimo, and its inclosures, from the Minister of the Chilean Republic at this Court, respecting the capture of the Chilean barque "Alice Ward" by Spanish cruizers in the Bay of Gibraltar; and Mr. Egerton was pleased to request that I would take these papers into my consideration and favour your Lordship with my opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That the documents inclosed in the despatch of his Excellency the Minister of the Chilean Republic are insufficient to establish any such presumption as suggested by his Excellency of a violation of the neutral waters of Great Britain by the Spanish captors of the Chilean barque "Alice Ward," as would warrant your Lordship in acceding to the request of his Excellency that you should reconsider this matter, and make further investigation respecting it.

The document upon which his Excellency places reliance, as raising a presumption that the vessel was boarded and captured within British waters, is a protest made at Gibraltar on 28th April, 1866, by the master, the second mate, and a seaman of the Chilean barque, but his Excellency is probably not aware that the second mate and the seaman, upon whose evidence he lays stress as eye-witnesses of the capture, have made depositions on oath at Gibraltar, five days before they set their names to the protest, which are calculated to deprive the protest of all pretension to be regarded as evidence on the part of eye-witnesses of the place where the barque was boarded.

Those depositions, which are inclosed in the despatch of Lieutenant-General Sir Richard Airey of 26th April, 1866, state that the second mate and the seaman left the barque shortly before 4 A.M., whilst she was still adrift, and after they had been told by the Spanish boatmen, whom they had hailed from the barque, that she was in Spanish waters, and that they left the barque in charge of the first mate, and that when they left her there were no Spanish boats near her. They state further that they pulled away to Her Majesty's ship "Samarang," and reported to the Commander that the barque was adrift, and that they were directed by that officer to go on shore and inform the captain of the barque, who was on shore, of that fact. It is clear from these depositions that not a single one of the three persons who have signed the protest can speak of the place of capture from knowledge; on the other hand, it appears from the official Report made by the Captain of the Port of Gibraltar on 24th of April, 1866, which is also inclosed in Sir Richard Airey's despatch, that the barque was observed from the "Samarang," about 5 A.M., on the 22nd of April, 1866, being about an hour after the second mate had left her, and that at such time she was brought up on the Spanish coast, and shortly afterwards was taken possession of by the Spanish gun-boat.

The other documents which his Excellency has forwarded to your Lordship contain statements from third parties as to the calm state of the weather, and circulation of Spanish boats in the Bay of Gibraltar, on the morning of 22nd February, when the barque went adrift, and his Excellency suggests that those statements raise a presumption that the Spanish boats which captured the barque had maliciously dragged or cut the chain of the barque whilst she was in British waters. But the depositions already referred to show that the chain was not cut at all, as more chain was let out to the starboard anchor when the second mate found the barque was adrift, and before the port anchor was let go; and with regard to the alternative suggestion, that the Spanish boats had contrived to drag the anchor of the barque, it deserves to be borne in mind that she had brought up very near to Her Majesty's ship "Samarang," in waters where no Spanish boat would venture, whilst there is a total absence of evidence that any Spanish boat was near her when she went adrift; on the contrary, the same depositions show that the barque had already drifted into deep water before the crew were called up to let out more chain, and that they were in the middle of the Bay, where they could get no soundings, before they saw any Spanish boat. Further, the Captain of the Port of Gibraltar reports that the night was squally, with wind from the eastward, and that the master had been cautioned that it was not safe to ride at single anchor.

I am of opinion that neither of these suggestions of his Excellency as to a fraud against the neutral rights of Great Britain having been committed by the Spanish boats, rest on any basis of fact; on the contrary, the facts in evidence all point the other way.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 16.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received December 30.)

Temple, December 30, 1867.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 21st instant, stating that, in transmitting to me a despatch which had been received from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Santiago (No. 95, November 1), inclosing a copy of a contract between the Pacific Steam Navigation Company and the Government of Chile, for the establishment of a line of packets between Liverpool and Valparaiso, he would call my attention to that part of the contract by which the vessels of the Company may be called upon to convey criminals; and he was to request that I would take this point into my consideration as regards the competence of a British Company to enter into such an engagement with a foreign Power.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands, I have taken the point above stated into consideration, and have the honour to Report—

That it would not be competent for a British Company to hire out its vessels, if they sail under the British flag, to a foreign Power for the conveyance of criminals, if such criminals are to be kept under duresse, by the authority of the foreign Power when the vessels of the Company are on the high seas.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

China.

No. 17.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received January 10.)

Lincoln's Inn, January 10, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 4th January instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us despatches and their inclosures from Her Majesty's Minister at Peking and Her Majesty's Consul at Shanghae, relative to certain regulations for pilotage in that port; and also to transmit to us a letter from the Board of Trade, to which office these despatches were referred, on the same subject; and to request that we would take the correspondence into our consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion on the subject of these regulations.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the matter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we see no objection to these Regulations.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.

---

No. 18.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received January 16.)

Lincoln's Inn, January 15, 1867.

My Lord,

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 20th December last, in which he stated that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter, dated the 17th ultimo, with its inclosures from the Colonial Office relative to a question which had arisen as to the extent of British jurisdiction over waters which are within three miles both of Hong Kong and also of the coast of China.

Mr. Hammond was pleased to say that we would perceive that Lord Carnarvon suggested that our opinion should be asked on this point with a view of coming to an understanding with the Chinese Government in regard to the pursuit of criminals in those waters, and also upon another point as to what islands were acquired by the British Government on the cession of Hong Kong and Cowloon; and that for facility of reference in regard to these questions, copies of the Treaty of Nanking of 1842, and of the Convention of Peking of 1860, as well as the Acts of Parliament referred to in the Colonial Office letter were sent therewith, and also the Order in Council of March 9, 1865.*

Mr. Hammond also states that he was to request that we would take the several points into our consideration in connection with the Law Officers reports of the 3rd of December, 1862, and 1st of May, 1863, on the subject of the Queen's jurisdiction over the banks of the Bahamas and Bermudas, and favour your Lordship with our opinion on the whole matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands, we have taken the matters submitted to us into consideration and have the honour to report—

That, in order to advise on the matters submitted to us by your Lordship, it is necessary to call attention to the Treaties and Acts of Parliament relating to the cession of Hong Kong by the Emperor of China to Her Majesty.

This island was ceded by the IIIrd Article of the Treaty of Peace and Amity of 29th August, 1842 (Hertslet, vol. vi, p. 222), for special reasons and on special grounds pointed out in that Article, and the Island was to be governed by such laws and regulations as Her Majesty's shall see fit to direct.

By Order in Council, 4th January, 1843 (page 228 same volume), reciting the 3rd and 4th William IV, and the Order in Council, 9th December, 1833, empowering a Court with Criminal and Admiralty Jurisdiction to be held at Canton, or on board a British ship in the port or harbour of Canton, by the Chief Superintendent, Her Majesty ordered that the Court should thenceforth be held in the island of Hong Kong; and that the same should have jurisdiction for the trial of offences committed by Her Majesty's subjects within the said island, and within the dominions of the Emperor of China in the ports and havens thereof, and within the high seas within 100 miles of the coast of China.

The Order in Council in effect transferred the Court which had been constituted under the Act of William IV, and the Order in Council made in pursuance of the 6th section of that Act, from Canton to Hong Kong; and it appears to have treated the Jurisdiction for the trial of offences committed by Her Majesty's subjects within the Island of Hong Kong, on the same footing as offences by the same persons within the dominions of the Empire of China.

In August 1843, the Act of the 6th & 7th Vict., cap. 80, was passed, by which Her Majesty was empowered to authorize the Superintendent of Trade to enact, with the advice of the Legislative Council of the Island of Hong Kong, "such laws and ordinances as may from time to time be required for the peace, order, and good government of Her Majesty's subjects being within the dominions of the Empire of China, or being within any ship or vessel at a distance of not more than 100 miles from the coast of China;" and section 3 reserves powers to Her Majesty also to make laws for the government of Her Majesty's subjects within similar limits.

The Commission giving powers to the Superintendent of Trade, issued in pursuance of this Act, will be found in same volume, page 255, and it bears date August 1843.

The Treaty of 8th October, 1843, page 262, does not call for special remarks.

Then follows the Ordinance, 24th January, 1844 (ib. 270), vide especially 1, 2, and 3 Articles, giving the Court of Hong Kong jurisdiction over British subjects committing crimes beyond the limits of Hong Kong.

---

* Hertslet, vol. vi, p. 221; Ibid., vol. xi, 112; 6 & 7 Vict., caps. 80 and 94.

1867

It is also important to notice the Order in Council, 17th April, 1844, same volume, 276, and which is framed with reference to the 6th & 7th Vict., cap. 94, the Foreign Jurisdiction Act. Hong Kong being appointed as the British Colony wherein crimes and offences committed by British subjects in China should be tried.

Passing over some further Ordinances relating chiefly to Consuls and Consular authority made before 1853 (and which will be found in vols. vii, viii, and ix, of Hertslet), we come to the British Order in Council of 13th June, 1853, Hertslet, vol. ix, page 210 (now repealed), which, amongst other things, recites the Foreign Jurisdiction Act, and consolidates and amends existing Ordinances.

The Treaty of June, 1858 (Hertslet, vol. xi, p. 86), need not be specially referred to.

The Act of 1859, 22nd and 23rd Vict., cap. 9, has no immediate bearing upon the questions proposed to us.

By the Convention of 1860 (Hertslet, vol. xi, p. 112), Article 6, that portion of the township Cowloon, of which a lease was granted to H. S. Parkes, Esq., is ceded to Her Majesty, "with a view to the maintenance of law and order in and about the harbour of Hong Kong," the lease being cancelled.

The last Order to which we need advert, is that sent to us with these papers, viz., the Order of Her Majesty of the 9th March, 1865, establishing a Supreme Court at Shanghae for China and Japan, repealing several Orders, and amongst others that of June 1853, and declaring under head xii, the authority and jurisdiction of the Courts of China and Japan, and that of Hong Kong, over British subjects who have committed crimes within British, Chinese, or Japanese vessels, or vessels not lawfully entitled to claim protection of the flag of any State, within 100 miles from the coast of China.

We are informed that no Treaty, or as we understand, engagement of any kind is in existence, which gives a right to exercise jurisdiction over Chinese subjects within 100 miles of the coast of China; nor is there, as far as we are aware, any express stipulation that the water to the distance or extent of a marine league or any greater or less distance from the shores of Hong Kong, is to be deemed to be ceded with Hong Kong, and to be British territory.

The map which has been sent to us shows generally the geographical position of Hong Kong, and its harbour, and the surrounding islands, &c.; and the questions proposed for our consideration are, whether any and what islands have been acquired by the British Government as appurtenant to Hong Kong or Cowloon; and next, what is the extent of jurisdiction, if any, of Her Majesty over the seas surrounding Hong Kong (whether broad seas or straits), or over islands near the coast of Hong Kong, which beyond doubt have never been ceded to this country, and are not appurtenant to Hong Kong or Cowloon.

As regards the first question, we notice that Stone Cutter's Island was a part of the territory included in the lease to H. Parkes, Esq., and we think that (if, by that lease, and during the continuance of it, this island was treated as a "part of the township of Cowloon, in the Province of Kwangtung, and if the island has since been occupied by the British as a portion of the part of the township ceded), it may well be considered to be a part of Her Majesty's dominions.

From the information before us, we do not think that any other neighbouring island can be claimed as having formed part of the ceded territory.

We think, too, that (it may reasonably be contended that), the whole of the water of the Victoria harbour between the shores of that part of Cowloon which was ceded, and Hong Kong, is exclusively under British jurisdiction.

And we also think, that water between headlands may also be considered as such.

As regards open sea, that is, water which extends for considerably more than six miles from the shores of Hong Kong without being met by Chinese lands, we think that (it may reasonably be contended that) for a marine league in extent, such water passed on the cession of Hong Kong to Her Majesty, so as to vest in Her Majesty the same rights in and over the same, as that which she possesses in or over the waters to that distance from any other part of Her Majesty's dominions.

But as regards the narrow waters, that is, sea which is interrupted by mainland or islands (still part of Chinese territory), less than six miles distant from the coast of Hong Kong, we do not think that the rule of the marine league can be considered applicable; and although we think that the free right of passage over these waters may be claimed by Her Majesty for the purpose of having the full use of the ceded territory, Her Majesty cannot claim, in the present state of our Treaty engagements with China, exclusive jurisdiction at all events over the marine league from the shores of Hong Kong; but we think that Her Majesty's Government would be, under the circumstances, justified in insisting that the medium filum of such waters should be claimed as the boundary of territorial jurisdiction. In straits, such as the Leymoru Pass, we also think that the claim to exclusive jurisdiction cannot be maintained, although in this case again the right from the shore to medium filum (with of course the unlimited privilege of passing and repassing over the whole of the straits), may reasonably be claimed.

We advise, it must be clearly understood, upon the assumption that no custom or usage exists by which the territorial limits of the British and Chinese possessions can be more clearly defined. The marine-league rule is one of which the application must in many cases be controlled by the geographical conformation of the land, by usage, and perhaps by other circumstances. It is founded on the principle that the State to which the land belongs shall be secured from injury by exercising for this purpose a territorial jurisdiction over adjacent waters. The reason of the thing, aided by usage rather than by any arbitrary law universally applicable and generally recognized, must in each case govern the question of common or exclusive jurisdiction over narrow straits and land-locked waters.

We are clearly of opinion that the questions involved in the case should, if possible, be settled by Treaty, for, in the present state of things, no satisfactory conclusion can be arrived at as to the extent of the British territory or jurisdiction.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 19.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received February 21.)

Lincoln's Inn, February 21, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 6th February instant, stating that with reference to our Report of the 15th January last, relative to the extent of British jurisdiction over certain waters in the neighbourhood of Hong Kong, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from the Colonial Office, inclosing a draft of a despatch on the question which it is proposed to address to the Governor of that Colony, and to request that we would inform your Lordship whether we concur in the terms of the draft.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we are of opinion that, subject to the slight alterations we have made, the letter of the Earl of Carnarvon to the Governor of Hong Kong is right and proper to be sent.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 20.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received February 21.)

Doctors' Commons, February 21, 1867.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 12th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me a despatch from Sir R. Alcock (No. 45) and its inclosures, on the subject of the tenure of land at Hankow; and to request that I would take these papers into consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion thereupon.

The former despatches from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Peking (Nos. 35, 50, 52, and 147) on the subject, which were submitted to Her Majesty's Law Officers on the 5th June, 1865, were also inclosed for convenience of reference, together with a despatch to Mr. Wade, which was founded on the Law Officers' Report of the 11th July, 1865.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That the most material question considered in the despatches of Mr. Wade and of Sir R. Alcock, appears to be that which relates to the duty of the Chinese Government to provide (under Article XVIII of the Treaty of 1858) the police necessary for the protection of life and property, and the inexpediency of any measure adopted by the British land renters, whereby the Chinese Government would be relieved from this obligation. And upon this question it appears from Sir R. Alcock's despatch of November 20, 1866, that he does not practically differ from the opinion of Mr. Wade, which has been misunderstood as to this matter by Sir E. Hornby.

1867

Sir R. Alcock and Mr. Wade are agreed that the exclusive employment of a Chinese native police force would be impracticable, and both are agreed that the Chinese Government ought to discharge a part, if not the whole, of the cost of an efficient police. Sir R. Alcock's proposal that there should be introduced into the Municipal Council (or whatever it is to be called) a Representative of the Chinese Government, and that then the police should be under the direction of this Council, so constituted as to give the Chinese Government "a controlling vote in all that touched their jurisdiction or their interest," appears to be a wise solution of the difficulty, which arises from the abstract Treaty obligation of the Chinese, on the one hand, to furnish the necessary protection, and their, apparently, notorious practical inability, on the other hand, to discharge this obligation.

With respect to the remaining questions as to the use of the terms of "concession" and "municipality," the answer of Sir E. Hornby (whose opinion upon the subject Lord Russell desired should be taken, and which had not been received when his Lordship directed the discontinuance of these terms) does seem to me to go far towards establishing the position that, without impugning the soundness of the general reasoning of Mr. Wade against their original adoption, their discontinuance now is, on the whole, inexpedient.

I have, &c.
(Signed) ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 21.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received April 4.)

My Lord,

Temple, April 4, 1867.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 1st instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me a letter and its inclosures from the Admiralty relative to the detention of a Chinese boat taken with kidnapped coolies by Her Majesty's gun-boat "Drake" and to request that I would take these papers into consideration and furnish yonr Lordship with my opinion as to the proceedings reported therein, and as to the instructions which the Admiralty should be requested to send to their officers in China for their guidance in such cases.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands, I have the honour to report—

That I am of opinion that my Lords of the Admiralty should be informed that it is competent to the Commanders of Her Majesty's ships, with the advice of Her Majesty's Consul, to act in aid of the proper Chinese authorities in stopping this Slave Trade, carried on by Chinese subjects under the pretext of transporting coolies; that difficulties may arise in the case of such a trade being carried on under the flag of a foreign Christian state; and that, where such flag is lawfully borne, and the vessels really belongs to the subject of a foreign Christian State, I do not advise (though the occupation of such vessels is not far removed from piracy) that Her Majesty's ships be directed without the consent and co-operation of the Consul of the State to which the vessel belongs, as well as of the Chinese authority, to seize such vessels. It may be necessary, it would certainly seem to be expedient that communications should be entered into with the Representatives of the foreign Christian States, (whose subjects are traders at Swatow) having for their object to concert a common plan for the prohibition of this nefarious traffic; and it is most desirable that direct, positive, and, if possible, written authority should be obtained from the Mandarin or Principal Chinese authority, authorizing the Consul to request the Commanders of Her Majesty's ships to seize all Chinese vessels belonging to Chinese suspected of carrying on this new Slave Trade.

I have, &c.
(Signed) ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 22.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received April 5.)

My Lord,

Lincoln's Inn, April 4, 1867.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 5th ultimo, stating that he was directed to transmit to us a letter which has been addressed by Her Majesty's Consul at Shanghae to the Registrar-General inclosing the Returns of Births, Deaths, and Marriages, for the year 1866. That this letter which has been sent under flying seal to the Foreign Office contains remarks on the operation of the Foreign Marriage Act, and that, as it appears to your Lordship to enter into matters beyond the province of the Registrar-General, your Lordship does not think it necessary to forward it to that officer; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take this letter into consideration, and furnish your Lordship with our opinion as to the course that should be pursued with regard to it.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands, we have the honour ro report—

That, with reference to the first reason urged by Consul Winchester for an amendment of the Foreign Consular Marriage Act, 12 and 13 Vict., cap. 68, we are of opinion that unless it should be found that the Foreign Marriage Act is not effective in other Foreign ports and places besides China and Japan, it would not be expedient to amend the Act simply to provide for the cases referred to by Mr. Winchester.

If, however, the same inefficiency of the law as it now exists in China should be shown to prevail elsewhere, the remarks of Mr. Winchester will be valuable, and entitled to due consideration in the event of an amendment of the existing Act being proposed. They appear to us to show that some amendment is necessary.

With respect to the second reason of Mr. Consul Winchester, we are of opinion that the amendment proposed is not expedient.

And lastly we agree with your Lordship that there is no necessity for any communication with the Registrar-General on the subject.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 23.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received April 5.)

Lincoln's Inn, April 4, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 28th ultimo, stating that he was directed to transmit to us a despatch from Sir E. Hornby, forwarding a Notification which, on his recommendation, has been issued by Her Majesty's Minister at Peking with regard to the surveillance of British subjects of the rowdy class in China.

And Mr. Hammond also inclosed despatches from Sir R. Alcock and Sir H. Parkes, sending copies of correspondence on the subject; and requested that we would take these papers into consideration, and furnish your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this case into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That it appears to us that there does exist a state of things with respect to Her Majesty's subjects in China, which renders the issuing of this Regulation expedient, and we think that such a Regulation may legally be issued under the authority of the 85th section of the Order in Council of 1865, and that it shall be duly approved by your Lordship in compliance with the requisitions of that Order.

The reasons assigned by Sir H. Parkes for thinking that it is not necessary at present to publish this Regulation in Japan appear to us to be sufficient.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 24.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received April 16.)

Lincoln's Inn, April 16, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 8th January last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a collection of papers which, for our greater convenience, had been stitched together, having reference to a question that had arisen at Shanghae respecting the Land Regulations at that port, and a claim set up by the French in regard to what is called the French Concession; and he was to request that we would report to your Lordship our opinion whether the new Regulations so far as regards the British Settlement are proper to be approved, and to what extent the claims set up by the French Government and authorities in regard to the French Concession should be accepted or acquiesced in by Her Majesty's Government.

1867

We were also favoured with a further letter from Mr. Hammond, dated the 12th of February last, in which he stated that with reference to his letter of the 8th of January, submitting papers for our opinion on the question of the Land Regulations at Shanghae, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a further volume of papers on the subject, which he requested we would also take into consideration before making our Report to your Lordship.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers submitted to us into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That in order to express our opinion satisfactorily on the two questions submitted to us in your Lordship's letter, viz.:—

1. The propriety of these Land Regulations;
2. As to the claims of the French Government;

We think it expedient to state what we conceive to be the most material facts upon which our Report is to be founded. They appear to be the following:—

1. By the Treaties of Nanking, Hoomun-chow, and Tien-tsin, the Emperor of China has ceded to Her Majesty absolute jurisdiction over her subjects commorant or being wheresoever in the Imperial dominions.

2. Whatever be the character of the grants made by the Emperor of China to France with respect to their occupation of territory south of the Yang-tze (Kiang), it is subsequent in date to the concession made to England by the Treaties above referred to. It was not, therefore, competent to the Emperor of China to make any concession to France which would intrench upon this previously granted privilege, whatever authority over his own subjects the Emperor might think fit to concede to France.

3. Certain territory on the north and south side of creeks called Yong Kin Pong and Loo-chow, formed by affluents of the great arteries of China the Yang-tze (Kiang) were permitted by the Emperor of China to be rented by Europeans for the purposes of a commercial establishment, the Emperor retaining as lord of the soil, the dominium eminens, and receiving rent from the European occupiers.

4. It soon became necessary that some authority should control the European renters. The English led the way in forming a Committee, to be elected by the majority of renters, but intended to be composed of all Europeans, who were to institute and pay a police force for keeping order within these districts. The subjects of the United States of North America, of Prussia, and of Holland, appear to have heartily co-operated in this scheme, though the American Consul always maintained that at present no binding legal validity could be given to the resolutions of this Committee.

It appears, however, that a general sense of the usefulness of their resolutions has at present supplied the place of positive law.

The French, however, insisted on placing the Executive authority in the hands of their Consul-General, who claimed a right to nominate on behalf of the French occupation or site the members of the Committee.

5. Two-thirds of the French occupation or site, unhappily termed "concession," were inhabited by English and other foreigners. The object of the French Consul was to confine the power to French authorities over French subjects, an object which a free election would obviously have defeated.

6. Eventually the French Consul referred the matter to his Government, which issued a certain "Règlement d'organisation municipale de la concession Française en Shanghae," which put an end to all notion of a fusion between the English, American, and French settlements, and a common Municipal Government elected by land renters.

7. It was quite competent to the French to adopt this system of separate Municipal Government under the control of their Consul, so far as the French subjects were concerned, but it was not competent to the French Government to assume or exercise thereby any personal jurisdiction over the subjects of other States resident or commorant in the French occupation or site, or on any other part of the Chinese territory, inasmuch as those subjects had obtained by Treaty with the lord of the soil the right of exemption from all jurisdiction but that of their own State.

8. The 16th Article of the Règlement was so expressed as to lead to the conclusion that the French Government claimed such jurisdiction within the limits of their concession. M. Drouyn de Lhuys has, however, distinctly disclaimed any such intention on the part of the French Government, which, however, claims the right of keeping order within their limits, and maintaining that the Chinese Government has assigned exclusively to them as sole lessees the land enclosed in those limits, and all authority over it.

9. It is certainly very difficult to distinguish, so far as the Chinese Government is concerned, the claim of the French as to this "concession" from the claim of governing an independent Colony; and there is much in the remarks of Consul Winchester which is worthy of grave consideration by Her Majesty's Government upon the inevitable tendency of such a "concession" to become simply a territorial possession of France. Any such claim or pretension if advanced on the part of France, should we think be strenuously resisted.

We think Article XVI of the French Règlement as it stands in print would have been objectionable; but assuming that such Article were to be altered in accordance with the spirit of the Memorandum without date or signature in the last page of the volume first sent us, and which follows the letter of the 17th September, 1866, from the French Consul to his colleagues, we think the article would be satisfactory, or if the French Government have bound themselves to an interpretation of the 16th clause in harmony with that Memorandum it might we think he assented to. We do not find amongst the papers any actual modification of the text of the 16th clause agreed to by France. But M. Drouyn de Lhuys, in his letter to Lord Cowley of the 6th June, 1866, in speaking of the modifications he proposes in the clause, says, "Les étrangers habitants la concession Française ne cessent pas d'être justiciables de leurs juges naturels," and more to the same effect, and the French Consul in his letter of the 17th September, 1866, to which we have above referred, speaking of the same modification of or interpretation to be put upon the 16th clause, says that that the Consuls of other European Powers may at their pleasure send their warrants to the French Consul-General, to be countersigned or address themselves directly to the Chief of the French municipal police, who by an agent of his police will accompany the foreign constable. This is not in our minds so satisfactory as an admission that the French make no claim of right to interfere with the regular warrants issued by the competent authority of the other Treaty Powers, they agreeing as a matter of courtesy to have their warrants sanctioned by the French authorities, which is the language of and is proposed by the Memorandum at the end of the first volume. It may be that the French Government intend to keep this claim of right alive. But probably Her Majesty's Government will think it right to accept the arrangement proposed by the French Government, on the distinct understanding that its acceptance does not involve an admission by Her Majesty's Government of any such right on the part of the French Government to interfere with regular warrants issued by competent authorities of the British Government, or any admission of territorial right in France to the so-called concession.

10. It remains to express our opinion on the validity of the British Land Regulations in their bearing upon British subjects, a subject analogous to that which is stated to have come under the consideration of the Supreme Courts in "Kerwick and others v. C. Willis and another," in construing the Order of Council of the 13th June, 1853.

We think that these Regulations may be fairly said to relate to "the peace, good order, and government of British subjects resident in and resorting to China," and that under Article 85, Section 7, of the subsequent Order of the 9th March, 1865, regulations might be made binding upon British subjects by the approval of Her Majesty, duly signified through one of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 25.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received May 29.)

Lincoln's Inn, May 27, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 4th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Sir E. Hornby, Chief Judge of Her Majesty's Supreme Court for China and Japan, forwarding a printed copy of the Instructions which he has addressed to Her Majesty's Consular Officers in those countries on the mode of conducting their judicial business; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take this document into consideration, and furnish your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

1867

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the Instructions appear to us to be generally useful and adapted to their object.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 26.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received May 29.)

Lincoln's Inn, May 28, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 1st of April last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister in China (No. 3), forwarding copies of a circular and notification which he had recently issued to the Consuls under his superintendence respecting the protection to be afforded to British subjects of Chinese origin, and which is, in part, founded on a Report from the Law Officers of the late Government, dated March 10, 1866.

Mr. Hammond was also pleased to inclose a letter dated the 23rd March ultimo, and its inclosures, on the same subject, from the Colonial Office, and to request that we would take these papers into our consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we do not find amongst the papers the Regulations described by Sir Rutherford Alcock in his despatch to your Lordship of the 17th January, 1867, as having been submitted to him by Sir E. Hornby, and forwarded for your Lordship's approval in his despatch No. 5.

Addressing ourselves to the Circular No. 9 of 16th June, 1866, from Sir R. Alcock to Her Majesty's Consuls, and a similar Circular, No. 13 of the 26th November, 1866, with the Notification of the 28th November, we are of opinion that these Circulars are in point of authority legal, and may properly receive your Lordship's sanction, if their policy is approved by your Lordship. Their object appears to be to warn all persons of Chinese race entitled to protection as British subjects that they are not entitled to establish themselves in the interior of China and assume the privileges of Chinese subjects; and to provide that all such persons so acting on being taken by the Chinese authorities to a Consular port will be liable to punishment, as any other British subject would be for a similar violation of Treaty; and further to provide that passports should not be granted for the interior of China except for a time to be limited by reference to the exigencies of the occasion for which individuals may propose to go there.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 27.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received May 29.)

Lincoln's Inn, May 29, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 1st instant, stating that with reference to his letter of the 1st ultimo (upon which we have already made our Report), he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a further despatch (No. 12) and its inclosures from Sir R. Alcock relative to the amount of protection to be afforded to British subjects of Chinese extraction; and Mr. Hammond was to request that we would take these papers into consideration, together with those then before us, and furnish your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

We are also honoured with Mr. Hammond's letter of the 14th instant stating that with reference to his two former letters, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch (No. 19), with its inclosures, from Her Majesty's Minister in China, in regard to this subject; and was to request that we would take these papers into consideration, together with those previously sent to us, and furnish your Lordship with our opinion as to the course to be pursued in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these further papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That the further papers before us appear to suggest the following matters for consideration:—

1. The case of Chinese resident at Hong Kong or Cowloon, at the time of the cession of these places to Her Majesty.

We are of opinion that they are entitled to British protection everywhere, even in China, according to the rules and principles of international law applicable to the subject; and that the duty of affording this protection in case of need cannot properly be relinquished or neglected.

The same observation applies to the children of these persons.

2. The case of Chinese who have become domiciled in the ceded places.

They are not entitled to British protection beyond British territory, and certainly not in the dominions of the Emperor of China, whose subjects they originally were. Even if naturalized by our Colonial laws, such naturalization would, we think, under the provisions of the 10th and 11th Vict., c. 83, not extend beyond the limits of the Colony.

3. The case of Chinese born in the ceded places, but the children of Chinese parents.

We may assume that the Chinese authorities would claim the allegiance of such persons when in China, and we think it should be conceded to them, and that no claim of jurisdiction over such persons when in China should be asserted or allowed by Her Majesty's Government. It would be quite consistent with principles of international law to abstain from the assertion of any such jurisdiction.

Applying the foregoing opinions to the facts stated in the papers before us, it appears that there are but few Chinese entitled to be ranked as British subjects. We think it would be a legitimate exercise of power by Her Majesty's Government (if, as a matter of policy, it should be thought right to exercise it) to lay down a regulation that British subjects of the Chinese race, travelling or being in China, if they propose to claim British protection in case of need, shall, while in China, adopt some distinctive habit or costume which shall distinguish them from the admitted and avowed subjects of the Emperor of China; and that if they sue in Courts of Justice, or otherwise appear in public before the authorities of the Empire, they will be required to pay due respect to the Chinese authorities, not involving thereby an admission of subjection.

We understand that a view somewhat inconsistent with this has been on a former occasion expressed in a despatch from the Foreign Office to the Consular authorities in China; but unless it has been widely circulated or largely acted on, we think the advantages of imposing some terms of this kind on the protection to be afforded to Chinese entitled to the character of British subjects are sufficient to justify the attempt to impose them.

We are not prepared to advise that the suggestion of the Governor of Hong Kong, namely, that recourse should be had to Imperial legislation on the subject, should be adopted.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

1867

No. 28.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received June 11.)

My Lord, Lincoln's Inn, June 10, 1867.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 28th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Consul at Shanghae (No. 4), and one from Sir Edmund Hornby, Judge of the Supreme Court of China and Japan (No. 16), relative to the Pilotage Regulations for the Port of Newchwang, which have been sanctioned by Her Majesty's Minister in China.

Mr. Hammond was also pleased to transmit to us a letter from the Lords of the Committee of Privy Council for Trade upon this subject, to whom he referred the above despatches, together with a copy of the Pilotage Regulations in force at Shanghae, adverted to by their Lordships; and he was to request that we would take these papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands, we have taken these papers into consideration and have the honour to report—

That we agree with the opinions expressed by Sir E. Hornby and the Board of Trade, with reference to the Pilotage Regulations at Newchwang; and we think that the earliest opportunity should be taken of bringing them into conformity, so far as local circumstances will permit, with the Pilotage Regulations of Shanghae.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 29.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received July 17.)

My Lord, Lincoln's Inn, July 16, 1868.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 13th of July, 1867, stating that with reference to our letters of the 15th of January and 21st of February, on the subject of the extent of British jurisdiction over the waters in the neighbourhood of Hong Kong, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a copy of a letter, dated the 12th instant, from the Colonial Office forwarding a further despatch on the same subject from the Governor of Hong Kong; and he was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion on the points raised by Sir Richard McDonnell.

The previous papers were inclosed for our information.*

In obedience to your Lordship's commands, we have taken this matter into consideration and have the honour to report—

That the despatch of Governor Macdonnell and the plan accompanying it, contain material information, not previously before us, on the question of what neighbouring islands could be claimed as having formed part of the ceded territory of Hong Kong and Cowloon.

It now appears that Green Island and Kellets Island are within the limits of the Harbour of Victoria as delineated on the the Ordnance map of 1845, and that this harbour is alluded to in the Convention of 1860, and is thereby recognized by the Chinese Government (as we understand) as a harbour belonging to the territory of Hong Kong. We think it will be right to presume that the limits of the harbour thus recognized are those described in the Ordnance map, and that, consequently (independently of the other reasons urged in Governor McDonnell's despatch), it will be right to hold that these islands form part of the ceded territory.

As to Aberdeen Island, it appears not only that a line drawn from cape to cape in the territory of Hong Kong would include nearly the whole of the island, but that the British Government has made grants and issued licenses for occupation of land within it, and otherwise assumed and exercised rights of absolute ownership over it, and that no doubt has hitherto arisen of his having passed by the cession of Hong Kong. We think that the fact of the island being situate within a line drawn from cape to cape in Hong Kong, if not of itself conclusive of the right of the British Government thereto,

---

* Colonial Office, December 17, 1866; February 2, 1867.

---

CHINA.

No. 28*.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received June 12.)

Lincoln's Inn, June 12, 1867.

Jurisdiction in French Land Concession at Shanghae. Revision of Article 16 of Regulations.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands, signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 27th ultimo, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 16th April on the subject of the Regulations proposed to be established for the government of the French Settlement at Shanghae, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit the draft of an Instruction which has since been addressed to Her Majesty's Minister at Paris, stating what were the views of Her Majesty's Government in regard to the point under discussion with the French Government up to that time, the objections being, as we are aware, confined to the 16th Article of the Regulations. A despatch from Earl Cowley, containing the reply of the French Government on this subject, was also inclosed, and Mr. Hammond was pleased to state that your Lordship would be glad to be furnished with any observations we may have to make upon the French answer before your Lordship replies to it.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands, we have the honour to

Report—

That we beg leave to refer to our former Report on this subject; that we are of opinion that the Article which M. Moustier proposes to substitute for the existing 16th Article of the French Règlement, and that the practical means by which he suggests it should be executed, ought to be accepted as on the whole satisfactory to your Lordship. There can be no doubt that it is expedient that an "entente aussi complète que possible" (to borrow the words of M. Moustier) ought to prevail among the authorities of the different Settlements on the Yang-Tzee (Kiang), and that reciprocal aid, so far as is practicable, should be furnished for the due execution of justice and for the general maintenance of the Municipal Regulations of each quarter.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

1867

forms a strong ground for such a construction of the Treaty as would include the island within the ceded territory, and the Treaty of Nanking and Convention of Peace having now been acted on by both parties upon this construction for some years, we think Her Majesty's Government may properly continue to act on this construction and assume (and in case of need insist) that not only Aberdeen Island but all other islands or rocks included within, or touched by lines drawn from cape to cape in Hong Kong or Cowloon form parts of the ceded territory.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 30.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received September 2.)

Temple, September 2, 1867.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 28th ultimo, stating that, with reference to the Law Officers' Report of the 27th May, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me a despatch from Sir E. Hornby (No. 27, July 5), inclosing Rules of Procedure for the Supreme Court at Shanghae when sitting as a Court of Vice-Admiralty; and to request that I would take these Rules into consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That there is no objection to your Lordship approving the Rules of Procedure for the Supreme Court of Shanghae when sitting as a Court of Vice-Admiralty, with the exception of the introductory and concluding paragraphs of Appendix (A), which refer to the sealed packets, known in the High Court of Admiralty of England as the Preliminary Acts. It would be advisable that the introductory paragraph should be modified so as to provide that the preliminary Acts may be brought into and deposited in the Registry, instead of the Court, as the Court itself may not be always sitting, whereas the Registry of the Vice-Admiralty should be at all times accessible; and that the concluding paragraph should run as follows: "Such packets shall remain sealed, and shall not be opened save by order of the Judge, until the pleadings and proofs are filed; they may be referred to as the hearing of the cause."

That it is advisable that the words, "and used as evidence," should be omitted, as liable to mislead parties, the preliminary Acts not being evidence for the parties who bring them in.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 31.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received October 8.)

Temple, October 7, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands, signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 29th of August last, stating that with reference to the Law Officer's Reports of the 10th of January, and of the 10th of June, relative to the Pilot Regulations at Newchwang and Shanghae, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a copy of the General Pilotage Regulations which have now been issued by the Chinese Government.

Mr. Hammond was, at the same time, to inclose a copy of certain regulations relative to passengers' luggage, duty-free goods, and steam-tugs, and to request that we would take these several regulations into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these regulations into consideration, and have the honour to Report—

That with regard to the Chinese General Pilotage Regulations, we are of opinion that the second paragraph of Article XIII, which provides, that "any damage sustained by a pilot-boat while alongside the ship piloted, shall be made good by such ship, the damage to be assessed by two competent persons, one to be chosen by the pilot, and the other by the master of the ship concerned," is too absolute, and may be worked unjustly against the ships, as no exception is allowed where such damage may have been caused by the fault of the pilot or his mates, or by the fault of third parties.

1867

We think that this rule should be modified, so as to exclude cases where damage is sustained by the default of those in charge of the pilot-boat, or by third persons, or it might be advantageously provided that "disputes relative to damage sustained by any pilot-boat while alongside the ship piloted, shall be referred to two competent persons, one to be chosen by the pilot, and the other by the master of the ship piloted; and in case of disagreement between the referees, the dispute shall be referred to the Consul, who shall decide it summarily."

With regard to the regulations relative to passengers' luggage, duty-free goods, and steam-tugs, they appear to us to be unobjectionable, except as regards the third branch of the first (Passengers' Luggage) rule. We presume it is not intended, for instance, that the presence of dutiable goods amongst luggage is to subject all the luggage to confiscation, even where the presence of such dutiable goods is declared by the owner of the luggage. This part of the rule appears to us to require some modification.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
C. J. SELWYN.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 32.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received October 11.)

Temple, October 9, 1867.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 3rd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me a letter from the Colonial Office dated the 28th ultimo, forwarding a correspondence which has passed between Her Majesty's Consul at Canton and the Governor of Hong Kong, with regard to the extradition of a Chinese girl from that Colony; and requesting that I would take the same into consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion of the case.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That, as it appears from the correspondence between Her Majesty's Consul at Canton and the Governor of Hong Kong, that the Chinese girl referred to in that correspondence was not charged with having committed any crime, I am of opinion that the application for her extradition from Hong Kong was not warranted by any Treaty engagement between Great Britain and China; and although the representation of the Consul may be correct, that the master of the girl would have had a clear right by the law of China to demand within Chinese territory the restitution of what the Consul considers "may be termed his property in the girl," the Consul is in error in supposing that there is any obligation arising out of "the law which prevails amongst nations," which required the Governor of Hong Kong to give effect to the municipal law of China within British territory. Further, if it be assumed that Her Majesty's Consul at Canton may have intended to speak of the obligations of "international comity" when he alludes to the "law which prevails amongst nations," and that the comity of nations might have required the Governor of Hong Kong to direct the property of a Chinese subject, which had been abducted unlawfully from the Nanking territory, and found in the possession of the thief at Hong Kong, to be restored to its lawful owner on the application of the Chinese authorities, if such property had been a brute animal, the analogy would fail altogether in the case of a girl alleged to be a slave, and as such the property of the Chinese subject on whose behalf she is claimed, inasmuch as British law forbids all recognition of rights of property over a human being within British territory; I am of opinion, therefore, that in every view of the case the Governor of Hong Kong was perfectly justified in declining to accede to the request of Her Majesty's Consul at Canton.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 33.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received November 29.)

Temple, November 29, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 30th of October ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from the Colonial Office forwarding a despatch from the Governor of Hong Kong relative to a demand for the extradition of deserters made upon him by the Governor of Macao; and to request that we would take these papers into our consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion thereupon, and especially on the suggestion made by the Governor that powers of extradition should be conferred upon the Government of Hong Kong.

Mr. Egerton was also pleased to state that the correspondence on the same subject which passed between the Foreign Office and the Colonial Office in 1862, and which is alluded to in Mr. Elliot's letter, was inclosed for our information.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we see no objection on principle to an Ordinance being passed by the Legislative Council of Hong Kong for the extradition of individuals charged with having committed offences within the territorial jurisdiction of His Majesty the King of Portugal, and of Portuguese subjects charged with having committed offences within those parts of the Chinese dominions within which the King of Portugal is empowered by Treaty Engagements with the Emperor of China to exercise jurisdiction over Portuguese subjects, and that such Ordinance should come into force like the Malta Ordinance of February 21, 1863 (Hertslet, xi, p. 872), upon the Portuguese Government enacting an Ordinance of reciprocal intent with regard to individuals charged with having committed offences within the territorial jurisdiction of Her Majesty the Queen, and with regard to British subjects charged with having committed offences within those parts of the Chinese dominions within which Her Majesty the Queen is empowered by Treaty Engagements with the Emperor of China to exercise jurisdiction over British subjects.

The details of such an Ordinance and the particular crimes to which it would be expedient to extend its provisions, would, of course, be matter for further and careful consideration.

With regard to the rendition of deserters, we observe that his Grace the Duke of Buckingham is of opinion that it would not be expedient to confer such a power on the Government of Hong Kong. Apart from the question of policy we think that in point of law, the surrender of deserters, who obtain shelter and seek refuge on British soil, might be granted, but we are not aware that Great Britain has engaged herself explicitly by any Treaty with any Power to surrender persons who may have deserted the military or naval service of such power, except in the case where the desertion has taken place within British territory, as provided for in the Treaty with Portugal of the year 1842. Upon this point, however, we would remark that the Acting Attorney-General of Hong Kong states that the Governor of Macao bases his demand on the XVIth Article of the Treaty of 1842 (Hertslet, vi, 608), and observes, "I may add that if the Governor of Macao thinks he has a claim on this Government under the second paragraph of Article XVI, it is for him, I apprehend, to direct our attention to the circumstances under which it arises."

We do not find that that the Governor of Macao has intimated whether he does, in any way, rely on circumstances bringing the case within this paragraph, but we think it right to call attention to the following considerations relative to this matter.

The paragraph referred to is as follows:—

"It is further agreed and declared that if either of the High Contracting Parties shall grant to any State any new favour or facility with respect to the recovery of deserters, such favour or facility shall be considered as granted also to the other Contracting Party in the same manner as if the said favour or facility had been expressly stipulated by the present Treaty."

In the Treaty with China in 1843 (Hertslet, vi, 262), is the following stipulation at p. 265:—

"IX. If lawless natives of China having committed crimes or offences against their own Government shall flee to Hong Kong, or to the English ships of war, or English merchant ships for refuge, they shall, if discovered by the English officers, be handed over at once to the Chinese officers for trial and punishment, or if before such discovery be made by the English officers, it should be ascertained or suspected by the officers of the Government of China, whither such criminals and offenders have fled, a communication shall be made to the proper English officer in order that the said criminals and offenders may be rigidly searched for, seized, and, on proof or admission of their guilt, delivered up. In like manner, if any soldier or sailor, or any other person, whatever his caste or country, who is a subject of the Crown of England, shall, from any cause, or on any pretence, desert, fly, or escape into the Chinese territory, such soldier or sailor or other person shall be apprehended and confined by the Chinese authorities and sent to the nearest British Consular or other Government officer. In neither case shall concealment or refuge be afforded."

1867

In the carrying into effect of the provisions of this Treaty, it may be that the term "lawless natives of China having committed crimes or offences against their own Government," have been treated as including deserters from the Chinese forces, and if this should be so, the Portuguese would, as it appears to us, be entitled under the Treaty of 1842, to like "favours and facilities" with respect to the recovery of deserters as those conceded to China, and your Lordship may think it right to call the attention of the Governor of Hong Kong to this point in any communication which your Lordship may address to him on the subject of the desired extradition.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
C. J. SELWYN.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 34.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received December 13.)

Temple, December 12, 1867.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 6th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me a despatch from Sir R. Alcock, forwarding correspondence respecting a claim preferred by a British subject named Richardson against the Chinese Government, on account of the obstructions he met with in an attempt to domicile himself for purposes of trade at Chao-chow-foo; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take Sir R. Alcock's despatch into my consideration, in connection with my predecessor's Report of the 28th May, 1866, on the right of trade at Kiung-chow, in Hainan, and favour your Lordship with my opinion as to the merits of the case.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken Sir R. Alcock's despatch into consideration, in connection with my predecessor's Report of the 28th May, 1866, and have the honour to report—

That the privileges of trade to be allowed to British subjects at the additional ports to be thrown open under the Treaty of Tien-tsin, being declared to be the same with those which they enjoy at the ports opened to their trade under the Treaty of Nanking, must be taken to be subject to the same conditions of mutuality which applied to the trade under the earlier Treaty, the obligations of which, as they are set forth in the second Article, under which the Emperor of China agreed to allow British subjects to trade at the five ports; and Her Majesty the Queen of Great Britain agreed to appoint Consular officers to reside at each of the said ports, in order to be the medium of communication between the Chinese authorities and the said merchants are clearly reciprocal and concurrent,

It follows from this view of the analogy between the Treaties that the Emperor of China cannot be called upon to allow British subjects to reside in any of the additional ports for purposes of trade, until Her Majesty the Queen shall be pleased to appoint Consular officers to reside therein. Further that the opening of the trade of the additional ports, will be subject to the fulfilment of the same conditions which preceded or attended the opening of the trade at the five ports, either under the supplemental Treaty of Hoomun-chae, or under diplomatic arrangements between the two Governments. What those diplomatic arrangements may have been, does not clearly appear from the correspondence before me, but as it appears that certain preliminary arrangements were thought necessary and were adopted by the two Governments before the five ports were opened to trade, with a view to secure the peace, order, and good Government of the places in which foreigners were for the first time to be allowed to reside, I think that the Chinese Government may reasonably require that no British subject shall establish himself for trading purposes in any of the additional ports until analogous arrangements have been made between the two Governments; and, accordingly, that Mr. Richardson was not justified under the Treaty of Tien-tsin in proceeding to Chao-chow-foo, and establishing himself there for purposes of trade before the necessary arrangements had been completed between the Chinese and British authorities, and the opening of the port for trade formally notified as in preceding cases.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 35.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received December 20.)

Temple, December 19, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 29th of November last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Peking, inclosing a copy of a despatch from Mr. Winchester relative to the registration of the civil servants of the Crown at Shanghae without the payment of fees; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take these papers into our consideration and report to your Lordship our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands, we have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That there does not appear upon the face of Her Majesty's Order in Council of 9th March, 1865, Article 114, under which every British subject resident in China or Japan, and every British subject arriving at any place in China or Japan, is required to register himself at the Consular Office of the place under a penalty, to be any exception in favour of the civil servants of the Crown, and we think that the civil servants are within the rule, and must register, and under Article 115, pay the prescribed fee. Your Lordship, may, however, think it proper to exercise the discretion which you have, under the Order in Council, Article 115 to mitigate, even to a nominal amount, fees in case of the civil servants.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
C. J. SELWYN.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 36.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received December 20.)

Temple, December 19, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 6th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Sir R. Alcock forwarding correspondence on the question of the power of Acting Consuls to celebrate marriages; and he was to request that we would take these papers into our consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion thereupon, and as to the answer to be returned to Sir R. Alcock.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we think that, upon the true construction of the Act 12 & 13 Vict., cap. 68, it is not necessary that a person otherwise "duly authorized to act in the absence of a Consul," who has himself been directed or authorized by writing under the hand of one of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, to solemnize and register marriages, should be specially authorized in that behalf by writing or otherwise. Whether a particular person is so "duly authorized to act in the absence of the Consul," appears to us not to be a matter of law, but a question of fact. No particular mode of appointing such locum tenens is provided by the Act; and the practice or rules which have hitherto been pursued in such appointments would, we think, determine the question as to the due authority of the appointee. If the practice has varied materially, so that doubts may exist whether particular persons have been "duly authorized," it may be very expedient to pass a short Declaratory Act to validate any marriages which have been performed by persons whose authority to act may be questionable.

1867

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
C. J. SELWYN.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 37.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received December 30.)

Temple, December 30, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 28th ultimo, stating that, with reference to the Law Officers' Reports of the 28th and 29th May, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us, together with the previous papers, a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Peking, inclosing the draft of a notification which it is proposed to issue in regard to the adoption of a distinguishing dress by men of Chinese origin claiming British protection; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take the subject into consideration, and furnish your Lordship with our opinion as to whether the notification is right and proper to be enforced.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands, we have the honour to report—

That we have considered the Draft Notification proposed to be issued by Her Majesty's Minister at Peking, and have made certain alterations in it for greater simplification. As altered it merely notifies that those who do not observe the regulations will not be entitled to British protection, but leaves it open to the British authorities to extend such protection in cases where they think that circumstances warrant their overlooking the violation of the order. We would suggest that it might be expedient that the British and Chinese authorities should together determine what distinctive badge or costume should be adopted.

Having regard to the statement of Her Majesty's Consul at Amoy that the Chinese authorities hold the wearing of the queue to be a mark of fealty to the reigning dynasty, it will be deserving of consideration whether all British subjects of Chinese descent should not be required to dress their hair in a manner different from that adopted by Chinese subjects, on pain of their not being entitled to British protection in Chinese territory in the event of disobedience to the regulations.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
C. J. SELWYN.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

Inclosure in No. 37.

Draft Notification.

WHEREAS many persons of Chinese descent who are, or claim to be, British subjects, go to, reside, or travel, in the dominions of the Emperor of China; and whereas serious difficulty exists in distinguishing such British subjects from natives amenable to Chinese laws only, and in consequence great practical inconvenience frequently results to the parties themselves and to the authorities of both countries: And whereas it is desirable, with a view to the maintenance of order and good government of British subjects of Chinese descent resorting to China, and for the maintenance of friendly relations between British subjects, and Chinese subjects, and authorities, that a remedy should be provided for such inconvenience: Therefore, by the authority and power vested in me by the 85th section of the China and Japan Order in Council, 1865, I do declare and order that all male British subjects of Chinese descent shall, while residing or being in Chinese territory, wear

And all female British subjects of Chinese descent shall, while residing or being in Chinese territory, wear

And I do further warn all British subjects of Chinese descent so residing or being in the Chinese dominions, as aforesaid, that in the event of their infringing, or not observing, this order and regulation, they shall not be entitled to claim British protection or interference on their behalf in any Court of Justice, or elsewhere, in the Chinese dominions.

And I do further order that every British subject of Chinese descent who shall sue in any Chinese Court of Justice, or appear in public before the authorities of the Empire, shall be, and he is hereby required to pay all due respect to the Chinese authorities according to the customs and usages of the country, save and except that such British subject shall not be bound, or required to observe any custom or ceremony whereby he would admit that he is a subject of His Imperial Majesty.

Given under my hand and seal, this day of (Seal.)

J. B. K.
C. J. S.
T. T.

---

Colombia.

No. 38.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received February 2.)

Doctors' Commons, February 2, 1867.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 26th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me a despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Bogotá, inclosing a copy of a Decree which has been issued by the President of the Colombian Union with regard to the disposal of vessels captured by privateers during the continuance of the war now existing between Chile, Peru, and Ecuador on the one part, and Spain on the other; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take these papers into consideration, and report to your Lordship my opinion as to the reply which should be given to Mr. Bunch's request for instructions with regard to this measure as to its possible effect on British commerce.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands, I have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Bogotá should be directed to make an immediate and strong protest on behalf of Her Majesty's Government against this Decree; on the ground that it is not competent to one neutral State, even with the consent of the belligerents, to constitute a Prize Court, for the trial of vessels belonging to the subjects of other neutral States, and captured by either belligerent. That such an attempt is at variance both with the plain duty of a neutral State, and all the recognized principles of international law applicable to the subject, and that Her Majesty's Government will not permit any Court in the United States of Colombia to exercise the jurisdiction, incident to a Prize Court, over the property or persons of Her Majesty's subjects captured by either belligerent, upon the high seas, during the existing war.

I have, &c.
(Signed) ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 39.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received March 26.)

Doctors' Commons, March 23, 1867.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 13th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the accompanying despatch from Mr. Bunch, Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires and

1867

Consul-General to the United States of Colombia (No. 5, January 7, 1867), inclosing a correspondence which has taken place with the Colombian Government relative to a claim of a British subject, Mr. Percy Brandon, against that Government arising out of certain bonds issued by the former Government of New Granada; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take these papers into consideration and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to what instructions should be sent to Mr. Bunch. Some despatches referred to by Mr. Bunch were also inclosed for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That the Circular referred to by the Colombian Government as having been issued from the Foreign Office in this country, may be laid altogether out of consideration as in no way affecting the merits of this case.

That the bonds (or "vales") in question, upon which the demand of Messrs. Watts and Jones, or their representative, arises, may be placed in two categories:—

(1stly.) Those which have never been disposed of to a Colombian subject, but have always remained in the possession of the agent of Messrs. Watts and Jones.

(2ndly.) Those which before the Decree of General Mosquera, in 1861, had been sold to a Colombian subject (Mr. Laverde) and had been repurchased by the agency of Messrs. Watts and Co., at what exact period does not appear, but after the Decree in question, and sometime before the formal application, in September 1866, by the representative of Messrs. Watts and Jones (Mr. Brandon) to the Colombian Government.

With regard to the bonds which come under the first category, there cannot be the slightest doubt whatever that, by the Convention of Bogotà (January 26th, 1824), the Colombian Government are bound to receive these bonds at the Custom-houses of the State in payment of 8 per cent. of duties of importation; and that by no subsequent Municipal Law can they divest themselves of this international engagement formally contracted with a foreign State.

With regard to the bonds which come under the second category, the Colombian Government maintain that by the Decree of 1861, the value of these bonds was reduced, and that they were placed on a different footing; that this Decree was binding upon its own subjects; and that at the time when this Decree was issued a Colombian subject was the owner of a portion of (they erroneously state all) these bonds, which were subsequently purchased or repurchased by the claimant; that the vendee cannot have greater rights than the vendor as to the thing which he has purchased; and they rely upon the maxim of jurisprudence, "Nemo plus juris ad alium transferre potest quam ipse haberet."

But I think that the above-mentioned Convention of Bogotá prevents the application of that maxim to this particular case. By that Convention the Colombian Government recognized the existence of an unpaid debt to certain British subjects; and, according to the 3rd Article, binds itself to issue, for the payment of such debts, a special "floating-stock receivable in payment of 8 per cent. of the importation dues under the same conditions as the floating-stock actually in circulation." This is the only mode of redemption for those bonds stipulated in the Treaty; there is no provision that this stipulated mode of redemption may be altered in the case of the holder selling them to a Colombian purchaser and repurchasing them. They are, in fact, guaranteed to bear that value in the market of securities; and, in my opinion, whatever may be the abstract competence or actual power of the Colombian State to diminish by retrospective legislation the existing value of public securities in the hands of its own subjects, it cannot do so with respect to these securities in the hands of a subject of a foreign State with whom it has entered into a Treaty engagement that they shall bear a particular value and be redeemable only in a particular way.

I have, &c.
(Signed) ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 40.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received July 2.)

Temple, July 2, 1867.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 29th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me, together with the previous correspondence, and a letter from the Admiralty on the same subject, the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Acting Consul at Panama, relative to the increase by the President of the State of Panama of commercial taxes in Panama; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take these papers into consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the course which Her Majesty's Government should pursue in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That with respect to the tonnage dues exacted from the Panama, New Zealand, and Australian Royal Mail Company, I have nothing to add to the Report which, upon this subject generally, I have had the honour to make to your Lordship.

That with respect to the increase of the commercial taxes in Panama for the purpose of assisting the President of Panama in resisting the Federal forces of the States of Colombia, it appears that the execution of this Decree will in all probability be suspended; but directions should be sent to Her Majesty's Consul to remonstrate strongly against the imposition of this tax upon the commerce of British subjects, and the ground properly taken by the Memorialists should be mainly insisted upon, namely, that it is contrary to general good faith, as well as to Treaty engagements, to compel neutral subjects, without any previous warning or due opportunity offered of withdrawing themselves and their commercial establishments from the country, to aid by forced contributions either party in a civil war, more especially to aid the Government of one State against the general Government of the Union with whom their country is at peace, and to whom Her Majesty has for a considerable period sent an accredited Diplomatic Representative. I think orders should be sent to the proper authorities of Her Majesty's navy to support the Consul in this remonstrance.

I have, &c.
(Signed) ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 41.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received August 27.)

Temple, August 17, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 13th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us two despatches from Her Majesty's Consul at Carthagena (No. 38 of June 29 and No. 39 of July 2), upon the subject of the seizure of the British schooner "Italian Star" by the Colombian war-steamer "Colombia," acting under the orders of General Lopez; and to request that we would furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the legality of the seizure of the vessel in question, and as to the instructions which should be addressed to Consul de Fonblanque upon this subject.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That this vessel, with a provisional British register, but apparently an Italian captain, and a crew for the most part, if not actually, foreign, with a cargo of contraband of war belonging to a foreigner, and with a letter on board from a person dating "Colon," and signing himself "The Secretary-General of State, Eugenio Baccia," a letter ostensibly, indeed, directed to Curacoa, is captured within twelve or fifteen miles of that part of the Colombian coast called Galera de Zamba, close to Santa Martha, which is alleged to have been blockaded, but which, at all events, is a port in the possession of one of the belligerents. The vessel, moreover, appears to have changed her register and flag at Colon, and to have become ostensibly the property of a British owner, who, however, had no share in the vessel (see Inclosure No. 2 in Consul de Fonblanque's No. 39, 1867).

In these circumstances the seizure of the vessel on the high seas by a belligerent appears to have been justifiable, and that Her Majesty's Government ought not to interfere on behalf of the vessel, even if she were a bonâ fide British vessel. But we think that the present evidence tends to show that she was not the property of a British owner, and that a Prize Court would be warranted in not treating her as such, and in considering the assumption of the provisional British register as part of the scheme by which the real object and destination of the vessel was to be concealed.

We assume in this Report that the state of things relative to the civil war in 1867

Columbia is such as to constitute both the parties who claim to represent the Government of the country as de facto belligerents in their relation to foreign States.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
C. J. SELWYN.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 42.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received August 27.)

My Lord,

Temple, August 26, 1867.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Murray's letter of the 21st instant, stating that with reference to Mr. Egerton's letter of the 13th instant, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the further despatch from Her Majesty's Consul at Carthagena (No. 43), relating to the case of the British schooner "Italian Star," and to request we would take this despatch into our consideration, together with the former papers now before us.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this further paper into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we think that the legality of the capture is properly determinable in the Prize Court of the captor.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
C. J. SELWYN.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 43.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received December 20.)

My Lord,

Temple, December 19, 1867.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 25th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me a despatch and its inclosures from the Acting British Consul at Panama (No. 15), respecting an assault committed on him in the public street by a native of that city, together with one from Her Majesty's Consul at the same place (No. 1), transmitting the decision of the Judge in the case; and Mr. Egerton was pleased to request that I would take these papers into my consideration, and favour your Lordship with my opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That it appears from the official Report of Consul Henderson that Mr. Vice-Consul Bidwell has unfortunately mistaken in the first instance the course of proceeding which was alone open to him under the Criminal Code of Colombia, and that he ought to have brought a personal action against Mr. Paredes, instead of the Colombian Government, on his complaint, instituting ex officio proceedings, which have been quashed by the Courts of the country for informality.

I do not think that your Lordship can properly interfere in this stage of the case, as the Executive Government has placed every facility in the way of Mr. Vice-Consul Bidwell obtaining judicial redress; and I presume the Civil Courts at Panama are still open to him if he should be disposed to bring a civil action against Mr. Paredes.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 44.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received December 27.)

My Lord,

Temple, December 26, 1867.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 19th of December instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying correspondence, as marked in the margin,* respecting a claim for house-rent, preferred by Mr. H. D. Austin against General Mosquera, late Columbian Minister at this Court; that Mr. Austin, in his letter of the 11th instant, requested to be furnished with an extract from the despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Bogotá, reporting the steps which he had taken in the matter; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take the papers into our consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion as to the answer which should be returned to Mr. Austin's above-mentioned letter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we think that your Lordship is certainly not bound to give a copy of, or extract from Mr. Bunch's letter to Mr. Austin, and that he should be informed that his request cannot be complied with.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
C. J. SELWYN.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 45.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received December 30.)

My Lord,

Temple, December 28, 1867.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 26th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me therewith a letter from Messrs. Cotterill and Sons, applying for the assistance of Her Majesty's Government on behalf of the firms of Messrs. Robinson and Fleming, and of Messrs. J. E. Barnett and Sons, in obtaining payment from the Government of the United States of Colombia of claims which they respectively have against that Government, of which the particulars are specified; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take this paper into my consideration, and inform your Lordship whether, in my opinion, Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires and Consul-General in Colombia may properly be instructed to bring the case officially before the Colombian Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken this paper into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That as it appears from the statement of Messrs. Cotterill and Sons that the claims of Messrs. Robinson and Fleming, and of Messrs. J. E. Barnett and Sons arise out of contracts made with the Representative for the time being of the Colombian Government in this country, your Lordship may properly instruct Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires and Consul-General at Colombia to give his official support to the agent of those gentlemen, who is now at Bogota, without pledging Her Majesty's Government to the details of the accounts, if this should be disputed by the Colombian Government.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

* To Mr. Bunch, No. 36, of July 13; Mr. Bunch, No. 93, October 15; Mr. Austin, October 30; to Mr. Austin, October 31; to Mr. Austin, December 7; Mr. Austin, December 11, 1867.

1867

Denmark.

---

No. 46.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received February 15.)

Doctors' Commons, February 14, 1867.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 12th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me a note which has been addressed to your Lordship by the Danish Minister at this Court on the 9th instant, stating that the Danish Government propose to sell to a British subject an iron-clad which has been built for them in an English naval yard, and asking the opinion of Her Majesty's Government as to the proposed mode of handing the vessel over to the purchasers, and Mr. Egerton was to request that I would take General Bulow's note into consideration, and report to your Lordship my opinion as to the answer to be returned to it.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have considered General de Bulow's note, and have the honour to report—

That I understand this vessel to be built for war, clad with iron for that purpose, and not fitted for the merchant service. The proposal of the Danish Government is to sell her in an English port to an English subject. It is highly improbable that she should be bought for any other purpose than that of a subsequent sale to a foreign Government. Nevertheless the law would certainly permit the English purchaser to sell her to a foreign Government not now belligerent; and in the present state of our neutrality laws it would be very difficult to maintain that this vessel might not be sold by the English purchaser to a belligerent Government, provided that she received no equipment for war, and underwent no change as to her existing equipment, subsequent to her purchase in any British port.

I venture to submit, nevertheless, that your Lordship should answer the Danish Minister to the following effect: that having regard to the exclusively warlike character of the vessel which it is proposed to sell to an English subject in an English port, and to the present existence of a maritime war in which Her Majesty is neutral, between States with whom Her Majesty has amicable relations, Her Majesty's Government think that they ought not to take any step which might hereafter appear to have facilitated the acquisition by either belligerent of a ship of war in one of Her Majesty's ports. Her Majesty's Government therefore find themselves under necessity (which they are sure the Danish Government will appreciate) of declining to send an official answer to the questions put to them by the Danish Government.

I have, &c.
(Signed) ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 47.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received December 7.)

Temple, December 5, 1867.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of 26th November last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the accompanying papers* relative to a claim which has been preferred by the firm of Bremer, Bennett, and Bremer, on account of the detention in 1864 of their steam-ship "Chanticleer" by the Danish frigate "Zealand," for supposed intention to break the blockade of Swinemunde. The papers include a report of the case by Her Majesty's Minister at Copenhagen and a memorandum by the Solicitor-General of the Danish Naval Department; and Mr. Egerton was pleased to request that I would be good enough to favour your Lordship with my opinion as to the merits of the claim, and as to whether any steps should be taken with regard to it by Her Majesty's Government.

---

* Bremer and Co., October 30; Sir C. Murray, No. 52.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That it will not be proper for Her Majesty's Government to take any steps in support of the claim preferred by Messrs. Bremer, Bennett, and Bremer.

It appears from the statement on behalf of the claimants, and the memorandum from the Danish Naval Department, that the ship papers of the "Chanticleer" disclosed a contingent destination to Swinemunde, which was under actual blockade, and that the "Chanticleer" when she fell in with the blockading squadron was steering a course under steam much to the south-west of the proper course for Colberg, and which, if pursued without interruption, would have been favourable to her slipping into Swinemunde.

Under these circumstances I think the blockading squadron was justified in detaining the "Chanticleer," and sending her into a Danish port for inquiry.

I observe that the owners of the "Chanticleer" speak of her having been captured on the high seas in neutral waters: but her position at the time when she was captured, as gathered from the bearings set out in the statement on behalf of her owners, negatives that fact, as they place her on the high seas beyond the limits of any territorial waters; whilst the nearest territorial waters, if she was, contrary to her statement, really navigating within three miles of the coast, were those of Prussia, one of the belligerent Powers.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

France.

---

No. 48.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received January 15.)

Lincoln's Inn, January 14, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 19th ultimo, stating that he was directed to transmit to us the accompanying letter from the French Ambassador at this Court, referring to the case of the Tunisian ship "Bechir," which was sequestered in the port of Malta by order of the British authorities at the instance of certain merchants, creditors of the Tunisian Government. That we should perceive that the French Ambassador has been instructed by his Government to ascertain unofficially the view taken generally by Her Majesty's Government of this case, involving, as it does, certain judicial proceedings taken against a ship of war of a friendly Power in time of peace.

A correspondence which has already taken place upon this subject, and part of which has been referred to Her Majesty's Advocate-General, whose Report was also inclosed, was also transmitted; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to state that your Lordship thinks it advisable to defer replying to the French Ambassador until your Lordship receives our opinion as to the nature of the answer which should be returned to his Excellency's communication.

We are also honoured with Mr. Hammond's letter of the 1st instant transmitting a letter, and its inclosures, from the Colonial Office.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this case into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That the Attorney-General and Solicitor-General agree with the opinion expressed by the Queen's Advocate in his Report of the 12th of December last, with respect to the exemption of ships of war belonging to a friendly State from all civil process of the State within whose territorial waters they happen to be.

If it be thought that an answer entering into details should be given to the letter of the French Minister, we advise that his Excellency be informed that Her Majesty's Courts of Justice generally, in common with Her Majesty's Government, fully recognize the principle of international law, that ships of war of an independent State entering the ports of a foreign friendly Power are ordinarily exempt from local jurisdiction, and that when process is issued for the purpose of detaining or interfering with such ships, the Courts in this country and in the colonies and dependencies have ample power to inquire into the character of the vessel, and are bound, upon ascertaining her character to be such as entitles her to immunity from the application of the local law, to set aside the process under which she may have been seized or detained.

1867

That it cannot be assumed that Courts of law will come to an erroneous conclusion upon points of law or fact brought before them; but should a case arise in which a decision should be open to complaint, Her Majesty's Government would readily lend to the friendly Power against whose vessel process may have issued every assistance in their power for the purpose of promoting before the legal Tribunals of the country the just claim of a friendly State for the immunity of her armed vessels from detainer, and for the due recognition of the privilege attaching to such vessels. That Her Majesty's Government have no power of arbitrary interference with the Courts of Law so as to prevent them from dealing with questions of privilege from arrest or detainer brought before them for determination; but the rules acted upon in the determination of such questions are well defined and established, and are amply sufficient to secure the recognition of the proper rights, in Her Majesty's dominions, of vessels of war belonging to a foreign State at amity with Her Majesty.

It will, we think, be right to add that this answer is returned to his Excellency's question in the same spirit as that in which the question was proposed. That Her Majesty's Government, therefore, do not advert particularly to the case of the Tunisian vessel, the "Bechir," mentioned in his Excellency's letter, which was some time since brought under the attention of Her Majesty's Government, and which has already received their careful consideration.

With respect to the letter from the Colonial Office (26th December), we are of opinion that the course which Lord Carnarvon has pursued has been right and proper, and we entirely agree with his Lordship that if the law of Malta be not now sufficient (which seems to us improbable) to remove the sequestration from a ship of war of a friendly State, it ought to be made, without delay, sufficient for this purpose.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 49.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received April 27.)

My Lord, Temple, April 25, 1867.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Murray's letter of the 22nd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Consul at Havre, forwarding a letter from M. Duval, Avocat-Général to the Court of Appeals at Rouen, in which he asks for certain information in regard to the law of England with reference to the succession and management of property of Englishwomen married to foreigners; and Mr. Murray was pleased to request that I would furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the answer to be returned to M. Duval. Mr. Murray was pleased to add that I should observe that M. Duval is anxious to receive this information three or four days before the 2nd of May.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken this matter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That in order that my answer to these questions, propounded by the Avocat-Général of Rouen, may be satisfactory, it is necessary to impress upon him the peculiar character of personal property according to English law. Personal property is not quite identical with the terms bona mobilia or mobiliers which are in use in countries whose law is founded upon the Roman law. Personal property includes leaseholds for any determinate period, which have the name of chattels real.

The alien subject of a friendly State cannot hold real property or freehold in England; his capacity to hold what are called chattels real, in which category leaseholds of land and houses are included, is limited by the express terms of the Statute passed during the present reign, the exact language of which it is expedient to recite (7 and 8 Vict., c. 66, ss. 4, 5):—

"That from and after the passing of this Act every alien being the subject of a

No. 48*.

The Law Officers of the Crown and the Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received March 14.)

My Lord, Lincoln's Inn, March 13, 1867.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 26th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to acquaint us that Her Majesty's Government and the French Government have deemed it expedient to come to a new arrangement relative to the fisheries of the two countries in the seas surrounding the United Kingdom and adjacent to the Atlantic coast of France, such arrangement to be substituted for the Convention of the 2nd August, 1839,* and that a draft of Articles,† a copy of which Mr. Egerton was pleased to inclose, had accordingly been prepared by a Commission which recently met at Paris for that purpose, and that the draft, after having been printed, was examined first by the Board of Trade, and then by your Lordship's Department. That the printed alterations made in the draft are those suggested by the Board of Trade, and those in red ink are the additional alterations which occurred to your Department, and are chiefly of a verbal character.

Mr. Egerton was pleased also to say that the point on which your Lordship feels most difficulty arises out of Articles XII and XIII of the Paris draft, and the Article numbered XIV proposed by the Board of Trade to be added thereto, relative to the lights to be carried by fishing-vessels; so far as regards lights to be carried to prevent collisions at sea, Regulations having been established by an Order in Council dated the 9th January, 1863, issued in pursuance of the Merchant Shipping Act Amendment Act of 1862,‡ which Regulations state that the lights prescribed therein, and no others, shall be carried by various classes of vessels from sunset to sunrise. That a new Act could, of course, repeal or alter the provisions of the Act of 1862 and of the Order in Council of 1863. But the Regulations in question have been proposed by Great Britain and France to, and have been acceded to and adopted by, nearly every maritime Power in the world, and therefore, although such accessions were not embodied in any formal Treaty, have thus acquired an international character. That, under these circumstances, it appeared to your Lordship doubtful whether any of the Powers who have adopted the Regulations can, in good faith to the others, make exceptions or even additions thereto.

Mr. Egerton was pleased to add that your Lordship requested that we would take the draft Articles into our consideration, and report our opinion thereupon, especially with reference to those which concern the question of lights.

---

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the draft Articles into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That, with the exception of the XIIth and XIIIth Articles of the Paris draft, and Article XIV, printed in italics, we see nothing in the Articles calling for any special Report from us.

The Articles above referred to are certainly inconsistent in point of law with existing Regulations, and would require to be legalized by Statute in order to exempt Her Majesty's subjects from penal consequences under the Merchant Shipping Act and Regulations as they now stand.

Whether, as matter of expediency, the alteration should be made and allowed, is perhaps hardly a question for us to answer; but we do not see that if the alteration should be made, the other maritime Powers who have acceded to existing Regulations could complain of the alteration as a breach of faith.

It seems extremely important that, in order to give effect to the Convention and to protect drift-net fishing, some distinctive lights should be carried by boats anchoring when drift-net fishing is actually going on by

---

* Hertslet, vol. v, p. 86.

† For copy of draft Articles see letter from Board of Trade, February 19, 1867.

‡ 25 & 26 Vict., cap. 63, sec. 25.

1867

the boats engaged in drift-net fishing. Possibly, the lights provided for by Articles XII and XIII were actually in use under the Convention of 1839 and Regulations of 1843; but on this point we have no information.

If this were the case, there would be the less objection to legalizing the lights for these particular boats on the occasions on which they are to be provided.

If it should be deemed right to legalize these lights, it would, we think, be right to notify the change to the different maritime Powers who have practically acceded to the existing Regulations.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

friendly State shall and may take and hold by purchase, gift, bequest, representation, or otherwise, every species of personal property except chattels real, as fully and effectually to all intents and purposes, and with the same rights, remedies, exemptions, privileges, and capacities as if he were a natural-born subject of the United Kingdom.

"That every alien now residing in, or who shall hereafter come to reside in, any part of the United Kingdom, and being the subject of a friendly State, may by grant, lease, demise, assignment, bequest, representation, or otherwise, take and hold any lands, houses, or other tenements for the purpose of residence, or of occupation by him or her, or his or her servants, or for the purpose of any business, trade, or manufacture, for any term of years not exceeding twenty-one years, as fully and effectually, to all intents and purposes, and with the same rights, remedies, exemptions, and privileges, except the right to vote at elections of Members of Parliament, as if he were a natural-born subject of the United Kingdom."

I have thought it right, having regard to the "bail" of a house in London, mentioned in the will of Robert Beeby, to give M. Duval the ipsissima verba of the Statute, though probably it will not affect this case, as it does not appear to me that the alien husband was in 1844 (the date of the Statute) "residing in," or has "since come to reside in, any part of the United Kingdom."

Having premised these observations, I proceed to answer categorically the questions propounded by M. Raoul Duval, as follows:—First. As to the law of England upon the rights of an alien husband relative to the personal property or bona mobilia of his wife situate in England, and not including chattels real, such as leaseholds.

(1.) What is the legal position, with regard to her fortune and nationality, of an Englishwoman married to a foreigner?

(1.) a. According to the law of England, the law of the matrimonial domicil, in the absence of an express contract to the contrary, will govern the rights of the husband and wife as to their property.

(b.) With respect to the national character of the wife, it is, during coverture, the same as that of her husband.

(2.) What execution could be obtained in England of a marriage settlement made in France?

(2.) The Courts of Equity in England would enforce the law of France with respect to all property governed by the marriage contract situate within the jurisdiction of England.

(3.) In the particular case could Madame de Chateauvillard receive alone, and without assistance of her husband, the amount of the sums in question?

(3.) As, according to the French law, during coverture, "the husband alone could dispose of the income arising from his wife's fortune, and could alone receive and employ the capital exclusively according to his own judgment under the obligation of restituting the entire capital to the wife or her heirs at the expiration of the marriage," Madame de Chateauvillard could not receive alone, and without the assistance of her husband, the amount of the sums in question.

(4.) On the contrary, could M. de Chateauvillard obtain the execution of his settlements, and receive himself alone, or with his wife's participation?

(4.) M. de Chateauvillard could obtain in England the execution of his settlements over property within the jurisdiction of the English Court, and without the participation of his wife, because the English law would adopt the French law in the circumstances of the case.

Secondly. It remains to consider the rights of the alien husband with respect to bona immobilia, under which category I include what we call, (a) real or freehold property, (b) chattels real, such as leaseholds of lands or houses situate in England.

Upon this head my answer is that an Englishwoman married to an alien (to use the exact technical term and spelling of our law) is a feme sole, though in suing with respect to such chattels she must join her husband, that is, use her husband's name as a formal co-plaintiff with herself.

So far as the "bail" is concerned, it is possible that the wife alone received the rent of the house in London.

I have, &c.
(Signed) ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

1867

No. 50.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received June 5.)

Temple, June 4, 1867.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Murray's letter of the 1st instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me a despatch from Her Majesty's Consul at Havre, inquiring whether he is authorized to solemnize marriages at Vice-Consular stations within his Consular district, or whether his powers in this respect are limited to Havre itself; and Mr. Murray was to request that I would furnish your Lordship with my opinion upon this point, and was also to add that the office of the Consul is in Havre, and and that at Vice-Consular stations the offices belong to and are maintained by the Vice-Consuls themselves.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That having regard to the provisions of the Statute 12 and 13 Vict., cap. 68, more especially to the Sections 3, 9, and 19 of that statute, I am of opinion that it is incumbent upon the Consul to take care that marriages solemnized by him, or allowed by him to be solemnized by any other persou in his pressence, shall take place at the office of his Consulate only, and not at any Vice-Consular station within his district.

The instructions which I find were given on this subject by a Circular from the Foreign Office dated August 28, 1853, are perfectly correct.

I have, &c.
(Signed) ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

Annex to No. 50.

Circular addressed to Her Majesty's Representatives abroad.

Foreign Office, August 20, 1853.

HER Majesty's Government having been informed that, since the passing of the "Marriages in Foreign Countries facilitating Act" (12 & 13 Vict., cap. 68), doubts have in some instances arisen as to the person by whom, and the place where, marriages rendered valid by that Act are to be solemnized, I have to inform you that, in pursuance of the Act in question, British Consuls-General, Consuls,—or any person duly authorized to act in the absence of such Consul,—Vice-Consuls, and Consular Agents may, subject to the rules therein laid down, solemnize such marriages, provided they shall have previously received a warrant from the Secretary of State specially authorizing them to solemnize and register marriages, or to allow marriages to be performed in their presence. No other persons whatsoever are qualified by the Act to solemnize marriages, or to allow them to be solemnized by any other person in their presence.

Any form of ceremony, according to the creed of the contracting parties, may be used, and the religious portion of the ceremony may be performed by a clergyman of any denomination; but the presence of the duly authorized Consular Officer is necessary to render such marriage valid: and if the ceremonial be not that of the Church of England and Ireland, which can only be duly performed by an ordained clergyman of that Church, the contracting parties are to make a declaration before the Consul, in words prescribed by the Act, that they know not of any lawful impediment why they may not be joined in matrimony, and that they call upon the persons present to witness that they take each other respectively to be lawful wedded husband and wife; and such declaration, in the absence of any religious ceremony, is sufficient.

The only place where marriages, under this Act, may be solemnized, is the "British Consulate," that is, the public office of the Consul-General, Consul, Vice-Consul, or Consular Agent, as the case may be; and every such marriage must be solemnized with open doors, between the hours of 8 and 12 in the forenoon, in the presence of two or more witnesses.

Hence, it follows that no marriages performed at other places, or under other circumstances, will be valid under this Act; and accordingly marriages cannot be solemnized under this Act in any churches or chapels, even though attached to British Missions, or connected with British Consulates abroad; nor can they be solemnized under this Act by an Ambassador, Minister, or other Diplomatic Agent of the Crown.

I transmit to you, for your information, a copy of the Act of Parliament in question. You will, however, therein perceive that the Act 4 Geo. IV, cap. 91, also herewith inclosed, remains still in force, and legalizes marriages solemnized by a Minister of the Church of England, in the chapel, or house, of any British Ambassador or Minister residing within the country to the Court of which he is accredited.

I may add, that all marriages duly solemnized according to the local law in force, so as to be valid by that law in the country where they are solemnized, will be valid in England.

I am, &c.

---

No. 51.

The Attorney- and Solicitor-General to Lord Stanley.—(Received July 29.)

Temple, July 29, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Murray's letter of the 12th instant, stating that with reference to the Reports of the Attorney-, Solicitor-, and Advocate-General, dated the 13th March and the 5th April of last year, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter from Mr. Mourilyan, dated the 9th instant, representing the difficulty which arises in the transfer of French railway shares, the property of deceased British subjects, owing to the refusal of Her Majesty's Consul at Paris to sign "certificats de coutume" in the form required by French Law. Mr. Murray was also to inclose the correspondence upon which the above-mentioned Reports were founded, together with the instruction which was addressed to Consul Atlee in accordance therewith, and to request that we would take these papers into our consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether the Consul may be authorized to issue certificates in the form quoted in Mr. Mourilyan's letter; or, if not, what course he should be instructed to take in this and any similar case, with the view of meeting, if possible, the requirements of the French law.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we think that (following the advice given by our predecessors) the Consul should guard himself against giving certificates in which he vouches directly or impliedly for the accuracy of the law as laid down in the opinions of solicitors or notaries. It seems probable that the Companies, by insisting on the words struck through in red ink, wish to make the certificate of the Consul equivalent to such a voucher, and we think that, in this view, he ought not to sign it.

It would, we think, be right that, where an opinion is given by a competent solicitor, the Consul should certify that such solicitor is, from his position and character, worthy of credit; but that no form of words should be used which should amount to a voucher by the Consul for the correctness of the opinion of the solicitor: and we think it somewhat unreasonable on the part of the French Companies that they should dictate in each case the form of the certificate which they will insist upon from the Consul and without which they will not act.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
C. J. SELWYN.

---

No. 52.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received November 1.)

Temple, October 31, 1867.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 13th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me therewith a correspondence respecting the affairs of the English Church Establishment at Dieppe, which until lately has been placed under the Act 6 Geo. IV, cap. 87, but from which the Government support has been withdrawn; and Mr. Egerton was pleased to request that I would furnish your Lordship with my opinion whether the powers conferred upon the Secretary of State by that Act will justify Her Majesty's Government in insisting that the books and funds belonging to that Establishment before its withdrawal from the operation of the Act shall be given up to the Superintending Consul, and, if so, what steps it will be advisable to take in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands, I have the honour to report—

That I do not think that your Lordship has any power under 6 Geo. IV, cap. 87, to insist upon the Treasurer and the Trustees of the English chapel at Dieppe delivering up their books and any funds which may be in their hands to the Superintending Consul.

On referring to the Regulations of 1848, in conformity with which the Treasurer and Trustees have been annually elected by the subscribers, it will be seen that they do not direct any book to be kept except a register book, which must be kept at the British Consulate. The Regulations direct the Committee to collect subscriptions and render an account to the subscribers at a second general meeting to be held shortly before the close of each year, and afterwards to render their account to Her Majesty's Government in a specified form as soon as possible after 31st December, for examination by the Secretary of State, in order to obtain a grant of money from the Treasury; but they are silent as to those accounts being entered in any official book. All, therefore, which your Lordship can call for in regard to the temporalities of the chapel is an annual account after a particular form, as a condition of their receiving any grant; and if the Treasurer or the Trustees should have any book or books in which they have entered the subscriptions received by them, or the expenses incurred by them, I am disposed to think that such books are private books, and are the property cither of the Treasurer and the Trustees, or of the subscribers, according to circumstances. In either case, your Lordship will have no legal power to compel the Committee to hand over those books to the Superintending Consul. On the other hand, any funds which the Committee may have in hand, they hold in trust for defraying the ordinary expenses of the church, or any extraordinary expenditure authorized by the subscribers, and the members of the Committee will continue in office until the end of the current year.

With regard to any further measures which your Lordship may be desirous to adopt, it is not unimportant to bear in mind that, although it has been intimated to the Consul and to the Committee that the Government has determined to withhold all future grants of money, the chaplain, under Article 15 of the Regulations, will remain in office until the pleasure of the Crown to dispense with his services has been signified to him by your Lordship, and as the Committee will continue also legally in existence until the conclusion of the current year, there may be antagonistic claims in regard to the control of the chapel, from which it would perhaps be desirable that your Lordship should relieve the chaplain, as you may be otherwise subject to further applications consequent on further disputes between him and the Committee.

The affairs of the chapel are, in fact, in such a state of confusion that nothing but the good feeling of the parties, if it could be restored, can set them straight. Neither the Statute Law nor the Regulations passed in pursuance of it supply your Lordship with the means of reducing that confusion to order against the will of the Committee, and I think there is ground for apprehending, if recourse were to be had to a law, that it would be found that the Committee are the representatives of a voluntary body over whom your Lordship has no direct coercive authority, and that the Regulations of 1848 have only the force of requirements by authority (Article 2), to which the subscribers and the Committee must conform themselves as a necessary condition for placing themselves within the benefits of 6 Geo. IV, cap. 87, from which they have received notice that they are henceforth excluded.

I have, &c.

(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 53.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received November 15.)

Temple, November 14, 1867.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's command's signified in Mr. Murray's letter of the 11th instant, stating he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the accompanying correspondence with the French Government and with Her Majesty's Consul at Réunion, regarding a question which has arisen respecting the right of the French Government at Réunion to levy an annual poll tax on all immigrants from India whose contracts of service have expired and who desire to remain in the island upon an independent footing, and as to whether such a measure is, or is not, a violation of the letter or spirit of the Convention between France and England of the 1st of July, 1861, of which a copy is annexed.

And Mr. Murray was pleased to request that I would take these papers into my consideration, and favour your Lordship, at my early convenience, with my opinion upon this question.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That the imposition of the proposed charge for a license to reside in the Colony of Réunion, during the first three years of their residence, upon such of the immigrant labourers from India as may desire to reside in the Colony after their engagement has terminated, without contracting a new engagement, as a condition precedent to their gratuitous admission to a definitive residence, as explained in the despatch of the French Chargé d'Affaires at this Court, does not appear to me to be a violation of the letter of the Convention of July 1, 1861.

Three conditions of things consequent on the termination of the immigrant's engagement seem to be contemplated in the Treaty.

The first is re-engagement, under Article IX, section 4, in which case the immigrant continues to be under the full protection of the Treaty.

The second is actual renunciation of his right to a free return passage, under the terms of the contract of service under Article VIII, section 1, in which case the immigrant is under the protection of the Treaty as regards the fulfilment of those terms; and accordingly provision is made in Article XIX, section 2, that every fresh engagement or act of renunciation of the right to a free return passage shall be communicated to the Consular Agent.

There is, lastly, a condition of things which may be styled constructive renunciation of his right to a free return passage, upon his being allowed to reside in the Colony without any engagement, under Article IX, section 3, in which case the immigrant will cease to be under the protection of the Treaty, and thenceforth can only claim the assistance of the British Consular Agent in the same manner as other British subjects and conformably to the ordinary rules of international law. But as regards this last case, although the option of a free return passage at the expiration of his engagement is secured to the immigrant by the Treaty, the Treaty does not impose upon the French Government any obligation to allow him to reside unconditionally in the Colony if he chooses to renounce his right to a free return passage at the expiration of his engagement. Article IX, section 3, provides as follows:—"If he can show that his conduct has been regular, and that he has the means of subsistence, he may be allowed to reside in the Colony without an engagement, but from that time he will lose his right to a free return passage." The French version of the Treaty is: "S'il justifie d'une conduite regulière et de moyens d'existence, il pourra être admis à résider dans la Colonie sans engagement; mais il perdra, dès ce moment, tout droit au repatriement gratuit."

I am of opinion that a free discretion is given by this Article of the Treaty to the French Government to allow the immigrant to reside in the Colony without any new engagement, if he can show to its satisfaction that his conduct has been regular, and he has the means of subsistence, and that in the exercise of that discretion the French Government is at liberty to declare in what precise manner and by what tests it will require to be satisfied on these two heads before it admits the immigrant to reside without an engagement.

With regard to the spirit of the Treaty, the despatch of the Chargé d'Affaires of the French Embassy at this Court is silent as to the time at which, under the proposed scheme, the immigrant will lose his right to a free return passage. One great object of the Treaty is to impose upon the French Government an obligation towards the British Government to provide the immigrant, at the conclusion of his engagement, with a free return passage, in order to secure that he may not be turned adrift in the Colony without any employment or means of subsistence when his contract of service has expired. It will be perfectly in accordanee with the spirit of the Treaty as regards this object, that the French Government should not allow the immigrant to reside in the Colony without any engagement, in which case he would forfeit his right to a free return passage, without having fully satisfied itself by some practical preliminary test that he will be able to support himself in the Colony. I do not, therefore, think that your Lordship can object to the scheme proposed by the French Government of placing the immigrant, if he is so minded, under a three years' probation, during which he will have to pay for a license of residence before he is gratuitously admitted to a definitive residence, on any grounds of its being a violation of the spirit of the Treaty, provided that the immigrant is not to forfeit his right to a free return passage until he has completed his probation and has been admitted definitively to residence.

1867

The spirit of the Treaty seems to require that the immigrant's right of repatriation should be suspended during his probation, not forfeited; in other words, that he should retain his option to a free return passage as long as the French Government claims the right of exercising an option to allow him to reside or not.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

General.

No. 53*.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received September 19.)

Temple, September 18, 1867.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 9th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me a letter from the Italian Chargé d'Affaires requesting information as to the state of the law respecting slaves, together with a Memorandum on the subject prepared in the Foreign Office; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would inform your Lordship whether that Memorandum correctly represents the state of the law.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the Memorandum correctly represents that the law on the subject of British subjects possessing slaves in those countries where slavery is still allowed, as, for instance, in Brazil, and, further, as to their transporting slaves in British merchant-ships from one port to another of such countries, is contained in the Acts 5 Geo. IV, cap. 113, and 6 and 7 Vict., cap. 98. That British subjects are forbidden to possess slaves in such countries except under the circumstances of their devolving to them by law in any of the modes specified in those Statutes.

That, with regard to the transport of persons in the condition of slavery from one port to another of such countries, it is contrary to law for such persons to be received on board as slaves, and to be transported in such character in a British merchant-ship.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

Greece.

No. 54.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received February 28.)

Doctors' Commons, February 28, 1867.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 23rd instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying despatch, with its inclosures, which have been received from Her Majesty's Minister at Athens (No. 52), in reply to the inclosed instruction which was

General.

No. 53.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received March 18.)

Lincoln's Inn, March 18, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 13th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter which has been received from the Council Office, inquiring whether there is any Treaty under which the Lords of the Council would be prevented from prohibiting the importation of cattle into any particular port of the United Kingdom. That your Lordship is not aware of any Treaty stipulation bearing in express terms upon the importation of cattle, but that in most, if not all, our Treaties of Commerce* there exists a stipulation that no prohibition shall be imposed on the importation of any article the produce or manufacture of one of the Contracting Parties into the dominions and possessions of the other which shall not equally extend to the importation of the like articles the produce or manufacture of any other country. That such Treaties also contain a stipulation that the subjects of each of the Contracting Parties shall have liberty freely and securely to come with their ships and cargoes to all places, ports, and rivers in the dominions of the other to which other foreigners are or may be permitted to come. But that if although these stipulations, if construed to the letter, would be at variance with any partial prohibitions of importation as regards any particular country, or any particular port, yet your Lordship apprehends that such measures when required by considerations of public health are to be justified, like other exceptional and temporary measures in the nature of quarantine, which may be at variance with rights acquired under Treaty by the imperative necessity of the case. That your Lordship would, however, be glad if we would take the matter into consideration, and report our opinion at our earliest convenience.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this case into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we are not aware of any Treaty by the express stipulations of which the Lords of the Council would be prevented from prohibiting the importation of cattle into any particular port in Her Majesty's dominions. The Treaty referred to between Her Majesty and the King of Italy contains the usual reciprocity clauses with respect to the free importation of any article of produce of the country of one of the Contracting Parties into the country of the other. But we are of opinion that no clauses of this description can be rightly considered as restraining the power of the Government to prohibit, when exceptional circumstances, as the present, exist, and for the sake of public health, and well-being of the country, the importation of foreign cattle.

It is a maxim of international law that cases of this kind are always considered as tacit and necessary exceptions from the Treaty.

The law is stated by Vattel, L. 2, c. 12, s. 170, "De la collision de ses Traités avec les devoirs envers soi-même:"—

"Si l'assistance et les offices qui sont dus en vertu d'un pareil Traité se trouvent, dans quelque rencontre, incompatibles avec les devoirs d'une nation envers elle-même, ou avec ce que le Souverain doit à sa propre nation, le cas est tacitement et nécessairement excepté dans le Traité. Car ni la nation ni le Souverain n'ont pu s'engager à abandonner le soin de leur propre salut, du salut de l'État, pour contribuer à celui de leur allié."

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
J. B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

* See, for example, Treaty with Italy. "Hertslet," vol. ii, p. 1112, Articles 1, 2, and 3.

1867

addressed to Mr. Erskine, on the 13th of December, founded on my Report of the 12th of that month, respecting the proceedings of the Greek Government in regard to certain pensions and other accounts; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take these papers into consideration, together with the former ones, and report to your Lordship my opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That I entirely agree with the opinion expressed by Mr. Erskine as to the conduct of the Greek Government. It seems impossible to doubt that their object is to avoid, by evasion and delay, the fulfilment of their solemn engagements towards these pensioners and to this kingdom.

Mr. Erskine is, in my opinion, quite right in maintaining that the Greek Government make no answer to Her Majesty's Government in saying that the claims are not yet inserted in the Budget, and cannot be paid till they are. Her Majesty's Government has nothing to do with the manner in which the Government of Greece chooses to fulfil its obligations. To admit such an excuse is to open a wide door to chicane, of which it is plain the Greek Government will fully avail itself. Great Britain is bound, by regard for her national faith and honour, to insist upon the immediate payment being made to these persons; and this observation extends as much to the new case of the Roman Clergy at Corfu as to the cases which were before me upon a former occasion.

I have, &c.
(Signed) ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 55.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received March 26.)

Doctors' Commons, March 26, 1867.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 25th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Athens, respecting the proceedings of the Turkish Government in stationing Turkish cruizers off the harbour of the Piræus to watch the Greek vessel "Arkadi," under the circumstances therein set forth; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take this question into consideration, and report to your Lordship my opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I am clearly of opinion that it is not competent to a belligerent to make use of neutral waters for the purpose of exercising hostilities therefrom, and more especially for the purpose of exercising hostilities against the vessels of the neutral State when they put to sea from the port in which the belligerent ship is lying.

I am of opinion that the objection of the Greek Government to the anchoring of a Turkish vessel of war off the Piræus, for the purpose of enforcing the blockade of the ports of Crete, is well founded.

It appears also that two Turkish vessels, anchored in Greek ports, have sent boats from thence to row and patrol round Greek shipping, and thus to exercise a sort of police supervision in a neutral port over the vessels of a neutral State.

This is an indignity to which a neutral State is not obliged to submit, and an unlawful use of belligerent force.

I have, &c.
(Signed) ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 56.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received May 14.)

Temple, May 14, 1867.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 6th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the accompanying despatches from Mr. Erskine (Nos. 31, 53, and 124), respecting the case of Mr. Weale, which had been received at the Foreign Office since he was furnished with instructions with regard thereto, founded on my Report of the 29th of December last. The rest of the correspondence which has taken place, relative to this matter, was likewise inclosed; and Mr. Hammond was to request that I would take Mr. Weale's case into consideration, and report to your Lordship my opinion as to the course which Her Majesty's Government should pursue.

1867

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have considered this case, and have the honour to report—

That it appears that the criminal charge against Mr. Weale will be tried in July next, and I think that no further steps can be properly taken by Her Majesty's Government until the result of that trial be known. As the Greek authorities seem to be aware that Her Majesty's Government are determined that the perpetrator of this outrage shall be really tried, perhaps justice will eventually be done.

There is more difficulty upon the question of damages.

M. Tricoupi says that Mr. Weale can recover them in a separate civil action; if this be so, I think Mr. Erskine might be instructed that the expenses of this action might be defrayed by the Consul. They ought not to be large, inasmuch as Mr. Weale ought to recover costs of the action, as well as the damages themselves, if his version of what has happened be true.

Mr. Erskine will probably know whether Mr. Weale is likely to be successful in this action.

I have, &c.
(Signed) ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 57.

The Attorney-General to Mr. Hammond.—(Received June 22.)

Lincoln's Inn, June 22, 1867.

My dear Sir,

I HAVE read the papers relating to the vessel supposed to be destined for Greece, in conjunction with the Solicitor-General, and we are of opinion that the statements therein contained do not warrant the seizure and detention of the vessel.

We have not been able to see the Queen's Advocate, who is probably out of town, and we, therefore, send you this note, and will send you the formal Report on Monday.

I am, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.

---

No. 58.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received July 9.)

Temple, July 8, 1867.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 6th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the accompanying papers, as marked in the margin, respecting the proceedings of certain Turkish ships of war at Cerigotto, one of the islands of the Hellenic Kingdom, into which a steam-vessel called the "Arkadi," which had for some time been employed in conveying arms and volunteers to take part in the Cretan insurrection, had sought refuge from their pursuit; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take these papers into consideration and report to your Lordship my opinion as to the legality of the course adopted by the Turkish vessels under the circumstances set forth in those papers.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That, according to the Turkish statement, the "Arkadi" having carried soldiers and contraband to Crete, was pursued on her return by the blockading ships (four in number) of the Turkish navy, and she fired cannon shot at these ships on the high seas before she had reached Greek waters. This, if the "Arkadi" refused to stop, when duly summoned to do so, was a lawful act on the part of the belligerent ship.

According to the Greek statement the "Arkadi" had been engaged in carrying soldiers and contraband to Crete, and was chased on her return by the Turkish ships, but did not herself fire until she had been fired at in Greek waters.

These papers do not perhaps furnish certain evidence as to the truth of either story; but having regard to the report of Mr. Consul Lloyd, of the statement made by the "Arakdi's" engineer to him, this vessel began to fire when between Krio and Cerigotto, and before she was in Greek waters; and this seems to me the most probable version of the affair.

It is certainly not lawful for a blockade-runner to fire upon the belligerent ship who pursues her; by such an act alone, and independently of the character of her cargo, she becomes herself belligerent, is liable to be sunk or destroyed as enemy's property, and her crew are liable to be treated as enemy's subjects. On the other hand, it is not lawful for the belligerent to fire, even in pursuit, at a vessel once arrived in neutral waters; but this is an unlawful act, for which she is responsible to the neutral State, and it does not justify the blockade-runner in firing.

If the Greek Government gives shelter in the ports of their country to a ship like the "Arkadi," habitually employed in carrying soldiers to aid the insurrection in Crete, she has very little, if any, right to complain that a few shots were fired by the Turkish ships in pursuit of a vessel so habitually engaged and so sheltered, even after she may have passed the exact line of territorial waters.

I have, &c.
(Signed) ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 59.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received July 20.)

Temple, July 19, 1867.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Murray's letter of the 16th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me a despatch from Her Majesty's Consul-General at Corfu, relative to a new law which has been promulgated in Greece, and by which it is provided that persons summoned to appear as witnesses, and failing to attend, are liable to imprisonment.

That we should observe that Mr. Saunders says that the above law is declared in Greece to be applicable to the Diplomatic and Consular Agents of foreign Powers, as well as to all other persons; and that in a case of a criminal prosecution at Corfu, the British Vice-Consul had been summoned to appear as a witness, and had been served with notice that, if he did not attend, the law would be put in force against him.

That the Consul-General, in consequence, puts the question whether this law can properly be enforced against the British Vice-Consul; and Mr. Murray was pleased to request that I would furnish your Lordship with my opinion thereupon.

He was also pleased to add that your Lordship would be glad to obtain this opinion, notwithstanding a doubt has been raised whether the summons, of which a translation has been sent by Mr. Saunders, applies to the Vice-Consul Cortazzi himself, and whether the "Frederick," last mentioned in the summons, means his father or his son. A Memorandum, drawn up by the Librarian of the Foreign Office, on the question of the liability of Consuls to arrest and imprisonment was also inclosed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That, by general international law, Consuls have no privilege of exemption from being compelled to appear as witnesses, and give their evidence in any Court of Justice within the territories of the State within which they exercise the functions of their office. It appears that, by Treaty (October 4, 1837, Article 8), British Consuls in Greece are to be placed on the footing of the Consuls of the most favoured nation. If, therefore, the Greek law permits the Consuls of any State to have this privilege, British Consuls would be also entitled to claim it. I do not find, however, that any such exemption is accorded by the Greek law to the Consul of any State, and I am therefore of opinion that the British Consul cannot claim any such exemption.

I have, &c.
(Signed) ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

1867

Japan.

No. 60.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received February 1.)

Lincoln's Inn, January 31, 1867.

My Lord,

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 22nd January instant, in which he stated that he was directed by your Lordship to inform us, that it had been decided to send to Japan a force consisting of an inspector, a serjeant, and twelve men, chosen from the metropolitan police, to act as the escort for Her Majesty's Legation; and that, among other arrangements connected with the dispatch of these men, it is considered desirable that each of them should sign a formal agreement binding himself under certain penalties to fulfil the conditions of the service upon which he is about to enter, and the accompanying draft agreements had accordingly been prepared for the purpose.

Mr. Hammond was pleased further to state, that, before approving the drafts, your Lordship was desirous of ascertaining whether they meet with our concurrence, and that he was accordingly to request that we would take them into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we see no objection to these agreements.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 61.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received October 15.)

Temple, October 11, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of 31st August last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us two letters from Mr. Hoey, dated the 16th and 20th April last, with their inclosures, relative to a claim arising out of the occupation of premises belonging to him at Yokohama by Her Majesty's Legation, together with a despatch and its inclosures from Sir Harry Parkes reporting on the subject (No. 111); and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take these papers into consideration, and furnish your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into consideration and have the honour to report—

That the questions in dispute arise upon the proper construction to be put on an informal lease couched in every unintelligible terms.

The first question is, whether the lessee was bound to give three months' notice before quitting at the expiration of three years from the commencement of the first term, viz., 1st April, 1864. We think that the lessee must, in the events which have occurred, be considered as having exercised his option of continuing the term under the lease after the expiration of the first year, and that he continued it to its utmost limits stipulated for, viz., to the end of the three years mentioned in the lease, and we think that then the lease expired by efflux of time without the necessity for any notice.

The other question is as to the repairs, and we think that the reasonable interpretation of the clause as to delivering up the premises in good condition and complete repair is, that this stipulation was to be fulfilled whenever the term came to an end, under the provisions of the lease—whether it terminated by efflux of time or by a notice before the three years expired, although the wards of the lease hardly support this liberal construction in favour of the lessor. As to the nature of the repairs. We think that though their character and extent would depend in some measure on the description of house demised, the stipulation made must be fulfilled, even if the original structure had been weak and ill-constructed and had fallen into decay from warping of timber, shrinking of unseasoned wood, or other like causes, affecting its original state and completeness.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
C. J. SELWYN.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 62.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received December 24.)

Temple, December 24, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 7th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister in Japan, relative to the position in the Consular Service of Mr. Dohmen, a Dutch Interpreter and Assistant, and to request that we would take the papers into consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether, in case Mr. Dohmen could obtain a certificate of naturalization as a British subject, such certificate would enable him to hold the office of Consul in Japan, and discharge the judicial duties attached to it under the Order in Council.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers submitted to us into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That it appears to us that there is nothing to prevent a naturalized subject of the Queen from holding the office of Consul in Japan. We think it right, however, to point out that there would probably be considerable difficulty in Mr. Dohmen's way in obtaining a certificate of naturalization under 7 and 8 Vict., cap. 66, which statute contemplates residence in Great Britain or Ireland with intent to settle there, as a condition to the granting the certificate.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
C. J. SELWYN.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

Madagascar.

No. 63.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received March 28.)

Lincoln's Inn, March 28, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Murray's letter of the 21st instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Consul in Madagascar, reporting the steps he had taken with regard to a charge of murder preferred against two British subjects residing at Tamatavé, and requesting instructions for the guidance of his future conduct in the matter, and Mr. Murray was pleased to request that we would take this despatch into consideration, and furnish your Lordship with our opinion as to the instructions which should be addressed to Mr. Consul Pakenham.

A copy of the Treaty referred to was also inclosed, and Mr. Murray was pleased to add that an Order in Council is in course of preparation for the purpose of enabling Her Majesty's Consul in Madagascar to exercise the power of jurisprudence conceded by this Treaty.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That this case falls under the provisions of the XIth Article of the Treaty, but the Treaty does not confer jurisdiction on the Consul to try cases, and we assume that an Order in Council (which can give jurisdiction) will be sent out at once before the trial takes place. If the prisoner or prisoners be found guilty, the sentence must, in the present state of the law, be executed in Madagascar with the aid of the proper officers of the place.

The trial will of course take place according to the rules of English law, and the punishment will be awarded according to the same law. Great care will be taken to ascertain by the evidence that the crime really amounts to murder, and does not fall within the category of manslaughter.

It is doubtful whether the law of forfeiture as it exists in England is in force in Madagascar; but we think that if no objection is raised to such a course by the native authorities, the Consul might allow the property of the convicts to be expended in the payment of their respective debts, and that the relatives, if any, should be allowed to take the surplus of the property.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 64.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received April 27.)

Lincoln's Inn, April 26, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 10th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a Draft Order in Council to enable Her Majesty's Consul in Madagascar to exercise civil and criminal jurisdiction over British subjects in that Island; and Mr. Hammond was to request that we would furnish your Lordship with our opinion whether the proposed Order is right and proper, and may be submitted for Her Majesty's approval.

A copy of the Treaty with Madagascar, copies of the Foreign Jurisdiction Acts, a despatch from Her Majesty's Consul, and a correspondence with the Colonial Office upon the subject, were also inclosed for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That Mr. Consul Pakenham, in his letter to your Lordship of the 12th December, asks for instructions as to the means to be employed in carrying into effect sentences of imprisonment, there being no native prisons of any description in Madagascar; and the proposed Order in Council, while it contemplates sentences of imprisonment, does not point out the prison or place of confinement where, or the means by which, the sentence is to be carried into execution. But we assume that such directions have been, or will be, given by your Lordship as will supersede the necessity for any provisions on the subject being inserted in the Order in Council. Subject to the above observations, and with the slight alteration made at page 11, sec. 19, of the proposed Order in Council, we think the same is right and proper, and may be submitted for Her Majesty's approval.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

Mexico.

No. 65.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received April 8.)

Temple, April 6, 1867.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 2nd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me a despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires in Mexico (No. 22, February 25), relative to a claim which Mrs. Macartney, the widow of a British subject, has against the Spanish Government, and in the prosecution of which she requests the support of Her Majesty's Government; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take this paper into consideration, and report to your Lordship my opinion as to the nature of the reply which Mr. Middleton should be instructed to return to Mrs. Macartney's application.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken this case into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That I am of opinion that instructions should be sent to Mr. Middleton to the effect that, after a careful consideration of all the circumstances stated in the letter of Mrs. Macartney, your Lordship has come to the conclusion that Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid cannot, with propriety, be instructed to intervene in the manner requested by this lady on her behalf with the Spanish Government or with the Commission which appears to be sitting for adjudicating on claims of this description.

I have, &c.
(Signed) ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

Morocco.

No. 66.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received August 7.)

Temple, August 7, 1867.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Murray's letter of the 6th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me therewith a despatch from Her Majesty's Consul at Tangier, No. 4, inclosing a correspondence which has passed between him and the United States' Consul-General at that port, respecting a difference which has arisen under the circumstances therein stated on a point of legal proceedure between Mr. Carstensen, the British Vice-Consul at Mogador; and the United States' Vice-Consul at the same place; and Mr. Murray was likewise to transmit to me a Memorandum on the subject, drawn up by Sir J. D. Hay, Her Majesty's Minister in Morocco, now on leave of absence in this country; and was to request that I would take these papers into my consideration and furnish your Lordship with my opinion thereon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have considered these papers and have the honour to report—

That I agree with the opinion expressed by Mr. Consul White, and by Sir J. D. Hay, as to the conduct of Mr. Vice-Consul Carstensen, and the conduct of Mr. Corcos, the Vice-Consul of the United States at Mogador.

It appears to me that Mr. Vice-Consul Carstensen was justified in declining to hear the case of Corcos v. Mesod, until the case of Mesod v. Ubarká had been heard by the Kadi, because the latter cause had, as I understand, been instituted before the former; and, in the interest of justice, ought, regard being had to the manner in which the two cases appear to have been connected with each other, to have been heard first; and, moreover, such a course would, I learn from Sir J. D. Hay's letter, have been in accordance with the general usage in the Consular Courts at Morocco, and because the United States' Vice-Consul prevented, as it seems to me, upon no lawful or reasonable ground, the appearance of Ubarká before the Kadi.

I can hardly conceive that there can be two opinions as to the impropriety of the language adopted by the United States' Consul, Mr. McMath, in his letters to Mr. Consul White; and the attempt to distinguish between the individual Mr. Carstensen, and the Vice-Consul Mr. Carstensen, does not seem to me to offer any valid excuse for such impropriety.

I have, &c.
(Signed) ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

Muscat.

No. 67.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received February 22.)

Lincoln's Inn, February 21, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Murray's letter of the 6th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from Colonel Playfair, submitting a draft of certain rules and regulations which he has prepared for the use of the Consular Court at Zanzibar, and which, as we should see by the accompanying letter, have been approved by the Secretary of State for India.

Mr. Murray was also pleased to request that we would take these rules into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion whether they are right and proper, or with any observations we might have to offer thereupon.

The documents as marked in the margin were annexed for reference.*

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into our consideration and have the honour to report:—

That we are of opinion that these rules, with the slight alterations made by us, are right and proper.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 68.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received October 1.)

Temple, September 30, 1867.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 9th instant, stating that with reference to the letter from Her Majesty's Law Officers, of the 9th January last, respecting the establishment of a Vice-Admiralty Court at Zanzibar, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me a despatch received from Mr. Acting Consul Seward upon the subject (No. 257/15, May 30, 1867), together with a private letter from Colonel Playfair, dated the 1st instant, commenting

---

* Act 6 & 7 Vict., c. 94; Act 28 & 29 Vict, c. 116; Act 29 & 30 Vict., c. 87; Order in Council, August 9, 1866; Circular from Judge of Supreme Court at Constantinople; Rules of Supreme Court at Constantinople.

upon this despatch, and former correspondence, as noted in the margin;* and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take the same into my consideration, and favour your Lordship with my opinion upon the points raised by Mr. Seward.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the doubts suggested by Mr. Acting Consul Seward in his despatch of May 30, 1867, as to the competency of a British Vice-Admiralty Court to adjudicate under present Treaty arrangements, within the Zanzibar territories, in a matter of confiscating vessels, the property of subjects of the Sultan of Zanzibar, which have been seized by ships of Her Majesty's Navy, on suspicion of being engaged in the Slave Trade within the Sultan's dominions, are not well-founded.

The Convention of October 2, 1845 (Hertslet, vii, p. 819), grants to the ships of Her Majesty's Navy permission to seize and confiscate any vessels the property of His Highness the Sultan, or of his subjects, engaged in the Slave Trade. But it is of the essence of good faith on the part of Her Majesty's Government, in availing itself of this Treaty right of confiscating the property of the subjects of the Sultan, to provide that due inquiry should precede confiscation; and with this object Her Majesty, by her Order in Council of August 10, 1866, has empowered every person duly authorized to act in the capacity of British Consul within the dominions of the Sultan of Zanzibar, to exercise in regard to vessels captured on suspicion of being engaged in the Slave Trade within those dominions, all such jurisdiction as for the time being ordinarily belong to Courts of Vice-Admiralty in Her Majesty's possessions abroad. Mr. Seward, therefore, as Acting Consul, has full power under this Order, to exercise in regard to all such captures, the jurisdiction which the Judge of a Vice-Admiralty Court may exercise in Her Majesty's possessions abroad.

I am of opinion that the Convention of Commerce of May 31, 1839 (Hertslet, v, p. 611), under which it is provided by Article V, that "when differences arise between a subject of the dominions of His Highness the Sultan, and a British subject, if the former is the complainant, the cause shall be heard by the British Consul or Resident Agent, who shall administer justice thereupon." "But if the British subject is the complainant against any of the subjects of His Highness the Sultan, or the subjects of any other Mahometan Power, then the cause shall be decided by the highest authority of His Highness the Sultan, or by any person nominated by him," has not any application to cases where vessels carrying on the Slave Trade within the Sultan's dominions, the property of the subjects of the Sultan, have been seized by ships of Her Majesty's Navy. That provision simply adopts in the case of civil suits between the subjects of the Sultan or any other Mahometan Power, and the subjects of Her Majesty, the well-known principle of the civil law, actor sequitur forum rei, whereas the subsequent Convention of October 2, 1845, which authorizes the capture by ships of Her Majesty's Navy of all vessels, the property of subjects of the Sultan, engaged in the Slave Trade within his dominions, has authorized the captors to confiscate such vessels, in other words, has authorized the captors to proceed to confiscation before their own authorities, in the manner in which they may be directed by their own Government. Whilst, therefore, on the other hand, disputes as to such seizures could not have been in the contemplation of the parties to the Convention of 1839, as such seizures had not been authorized at that time by any Convention between the Sultan and Her Majesty; on the other hand, the Convention of 1845 being subsequent in time, will have superseded the provisions of the earlier Convention in regard to all such disputes, if that Convention might otherwise have become applicable to them.

On these grounds I consider that the further suggestion of Mr. Acting Consul Seward as to the proper mode of proceeding in cases of contraband Slave Traffic, as being cases of breach of Treaty falling by right wholly under the cognizance of the Zanzibar Tribunals, are not well-founded.

With regard to Mr. Acting Consul Seward having declined to dispose of several cases of Zanzibar dhows, brought before him for adjudication by the Senior Naval Officer of Her Majesty, under Admiralty instructions, on the ground that no special and personal authority had been vested in him for that purpose; and that in the absence of this warranty his decisions would be probably invalid. I am of opinion that Her Majesty's Order in Council would have given full validity to his decisions; but inasmuch as it appears from his despatch that Colonel Playfair has been appointed Judge of Her Majesty's Vice-Admiralty Court within the Zanzibar territories, it would be proper, with a view to secure regularity of proceeding, and to prevent any conflict of jurisdiction between the Judge of the Vice-Admiralty Court, and an Acting Consul,

---

* To Admiralty, December 24, 1866, and January 19, 1867; Admiralty, December 27, 1866; Law Officers, January 9, 1867; to Law Officers, December 29, 1866.

1867

that instructions should be given to Mr. Acting Consul Seward, and to all persons duly authorized to act in the capacity of Consul within the dominions of the Sultan of Zanzibar, as to the circumstances under which they may be properly called upon to exercise under Her Majesty's Order in Council, the jurisdiction of a Vice-Admiralty Court.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

New Granada.

No. 68 A.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received February 8.)

Doctors' Commons, February 7, 1866.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 3rd instant, stating that with reference to my Report of the 22nd of July last, on the subject of a law passed by the Columbian Government affecting the rights and privileges of foreigners residing in Columbia, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me two further despatches, with their inclosures, from Her Majesty's Acting Chargé d'Affaires at Bogotá on the subject;* and Mr. Hammond was to request that I would take these papers into consideration, together with the previous papers relating thereto, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to whether any instructions should be sent to Mr. O'Leary in this matter; my Report of the 22nd July was also inclosed, for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have take these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report,—

That it is satisfactory to find that the Government of the United States of North America take the same view of this law which the Governments of Her Majesty and of France have taken.

It would seem to me expedient that the same publicity should be given to the refusal of Great Britain to recognize the competency of the Columbian Government to pass this law as has been given to the like refusal on the part of the United States; that it should be published in the "Diario Official," or whatever be the official newspaper. It would be expedient that the French protest should also be published. The same course should be pursued in the other South American Republics which have adopted this law.

But I do not think that at present any other steps are necessary.

I have, &c.
(Signed) ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 68 B.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received February 8.)

Doctors' Commons, February 7, 1866.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 5th instant, stating that with reference to my report of the 13th July last, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me a further despatch, together with its inclosures (No. 77, December 5, 1865), from Her Majesty's Acting Chargé d'Affaires at Bogotá, relative to the claim advanced by British merchants at Carthagena to exemption from the tax imposed by the Assembly of the State of Bolivar on all persons engaged in industrial pursuits within the limits of that State; and Mr. Hammond was to request that I would take these papers into consideration, together with the previous papers which were also inclosed, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to any further instructions which should be sent to Mr. O'Leary on this subject. My Report of the 13th of July last was also inclosed for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report,—

That a perusal of all the papers leads me to the same conclusion as that at which Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires has arrived.

The only ground upon which Her Majesty's Government should, in my opinion, direct any remonstrance to be made to the Columbian Government, is the unfair assessment of the tax, and not as to the illegality of its imposition.

I see no reason to complain of the sentence of the Supreme Court in this matter.

It appears that there is no ground for saying that Her Majesty's subjects are placed in a worse position than the foreigners, so far as this tax is concerned (Consul Fonblanque's letter, October 26, 1865). I think, therefore, that Article 7 of the Treaty of 1825 has not been violated.

It would be very desirable that there should be a joint remonstrance of the Representatives of foreign States to the Columbian Government; but, in any event, I think that Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires should be instructed to make to that Government a proper representation on the subject of the unfair assessment of the tax, supporting such representation by an allegation of particular instances, according to his discretion. But I do not advise any other steps to be taken.

I have, &c.
(Signed) ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 68 C.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received February 13.)

Doctors' Commons, February 13, 1866.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 7th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me two despatches from Her Majesty's Acting Chargé d'Affaires at Bogotá (Nos. 67 and 76), together with a correspondence which has passed between him and the Columbian Government relative to the privileges accorded to the United States' troops on their passage across the Isthmus of Panamá; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take these papers into consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion whether the United States are entitled, under the Treaty referred to, to the privilege of sending troops armed across the Isthmus, and, if so, whether, Her Majesty's Government can properly claim the same privilege.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken this case into consideration, and have the honour to report,—

That it appears to me to be correctly stated by Mr. O'Leary that the true question is whether the 35th Article of the Treaty of December 12th, 1846, between the United States of America and the Republic of New Granada does grant to the United States of North America a privilege, denied to all other States, of sending soldiers equipped for war across the Isthmus.

The words in the 35th Article which more especially raise this point are these:—"The Government of New Granada guarantees to the Government of the United States that the right of way or transit across the Isthmus of Panama upon any modes of communication that now exist, or that may be hereafter constructed, shall be open and free to the Government and citizens of the United States, and for the transportation of any articles of produce, &c."

It is maintained—apparently for the first time—that these words convey to the United States what jurists term a jus transitûs of a very peculiar kind, namely, an unlimited right of sending armies across the Peninsula. I think that these words ought not to be so construed, for the following, among other, reasons:—

1. Such a construction is not to be presumed in any case, for it confers an unusual and invidious privilege; and though it is a possible, it is by no means a necessary, construction. "The Government" and the "citizens of the United States" are indeed mentioned in the disjunctive; a right of transit is given to both: but a meaning may be well assigned to these terms without extending it so as to include, by implication, the passage of armies belonging to the Government. So very important and unusual a

---

* Mr. O'Leary, No. 69, November 6; No. 78, December 7, 1865.

1867

concession would naturally be conveyed in explicit terms, and not be left to rely upon an ingenious inference.

2. Usage is a great interpreter of Treaties. For seventeen years the Government of New Granada has put no such construction on the Treaty, but, on the contrary, has, both generally during this period, and specifically during the course of last year (in answer to a remonstrance from the French authorities), expressly denied that any such construction flowed from the present Treaty; though, having regard to the peculiar interests of the United States in the matter, it thought that such a privilege might be properly conferred upon them by a future Convention.

3. I lay aside, in arriving at this conclusion, all consideration of the very curious and interesting communication which Mr. O'Leary has discovered to have passed between the United States and the New Granada Governments, because it ought not to affect the construction of that Treaty so far as it concerns the interests of other States.

It is true, indeed, that in ordinary circumstances a third State would have no right to interfere in the question of the construction of a Treaty between two other States; but this important subject of transit over the Isthmus of Panamá, and generally of the communication between the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans, has of late years been recognized as affecting the interests of all civilized States, and has been the subject of various negotiations and treaties.

It is not too much to say that New Granada could not now grant an exclusive privilege of transit to one State without giving other States a right to remonstrate, on the ground that thereby an injury had been indirectly inflicted upon them.

On the whole, I am of opinion that the construction now sought for the first time to be put upon this Article of the Treaty, ought not to be admitted by Her Majesty's Government.

I have, &c.
(Signed) ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

Persia.

No. 69.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received November 8.)

Temple, November 8, 1867.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 2nd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the accompanying despatch and its inclosures from Her Majesty's Minister in Persia (No. 90), respecting a question which has been raised by the British Resident at Bushire as to the nationality of the grandson of a British Indian subject born in Persia, under the circumstances therein set forth; and to request I would take these papers into my consideration, and report to your Lordship my opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That a reasonable distinction may be made by your Lordship between persons resident in Persia and claiming British protection who are, in fact, natural born subjects of Persia, but are at the same time, by construction of British law, natural born subjects of Great Britain, according as their domicile of origin is British or Persian; and that where the domicile of origin of any such person is Persian, and it is coupled with the fact of permanent residence in Persia, under which circumstances the national character of such person under the Law of Nations would be exclusively Persian, such person, although he may be entitled to the good offices of the British Government, by reason of the relation in which he stands under British law towards the British Crown, ought not to have British protection extended to him in the sense in which that protection would withdraw either his person or his property from the ordinary jurisdiction of the Persian tribunals.

Thus the son of a natural-born British subject, although he may have been in fact born within the allegiance of the Crown of Persia, may still have, under the Law of Nations, a British national character by reason of his father's domicil being British. But, if after the death of his father, he should continue to reside in Persia, and have a son born to him there, and should be domiciled de facto in Persia, the grandson born in Persia will have a Persian domicile of origin. Under such circumstances, as the grandson would be in fact a native of Persia, and would have at the same time a Persian domicile, which would be conclusive criteria of a Persian national character under the Law of Nations, it would be an unreasonable construction of Treaty right for Great Britain to insist upon the Persian Government exempting from the operation of its laws a person resident within its territory who, under no principle of international law, would be entitled in Persia to the British national character, upon the sole ground that the municipal law of Great Britain had extended to him all the privileges of a natural-born British subject; for the British statute (13 Geo. III, c. 21), which has enacted that every person shall be taken and deemed to be a natural-born British subject for all purposes whatever, although his father may been born abroad, if his grandfather, by the father's side, was in fact a natural-born British subject, belongs to that class of laws which can only give rise to personal relations between a Sovereign and subjects to be enforced within his own dominions, but which do not rightfully extend to other nations (Story's "Conflict of Laws," sec. 22).

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

Peru.

No. 70.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received February 28.)

Lincoln's Inn, February 28, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 9th instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 7th November last, on the subject of an annual payment imposed upon foreigners resident in Peru, as well as on Peruvian subjects, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Lima replying to the instruction which was addressed to him upon our letter above-mentioned; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take the same into consideration, and furnish your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we think the Decree of the 20th January, 1866, ought not to be construed, all the circumstances of the case duly considered, as an infraction of the Treaty of April 10, 1850, between Peru and England; and that an answer to this effect should be returned to Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Lima. We have not the Decree of the 10th September, 1866, before us, but if it substantially follows that of the 10th January our conclusions on it would be the same.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

1867

No. 71.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received March 23.)

Doctors' Commons, March 23, 1867.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 19th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me a despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Lima (No. 3, February 9, 1867), reporting certain proceedings which had taken place between the Peruvian Government and the Diplomatic Body with the object of establishing an understanding on the question of diplomatic protection; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take this paper into consideration, and acquaint your Lordship with my opinion as to the nature of the reply which should be returned to Mr. Barton.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That an answer should be returned to Mr. Barton to the following effect:—That Her Majesty's Government are of opinion that the Peruvian State is entitled to the same international rights, and bound by the same international duties as every other Christian State.

That Her Majesty's Government see no reason for any formal enunciation by the Diplomatic Body at Lima of the principles of that portion of international law which relates to the privileges incident to the dwelling of the accredited Representative of a foreign State.

These principles are well recognized, and rest upon the same foundation as other portions of international law. An attempt to make a precise statement in detail of the number and nature of the rights of the diplomatic residence might lead to future misapprehension, and are not, in the judgment of Her Majesty's Government, required at the present moment.

I have, &c.
(Signed) ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 72.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received April 10.)

Doctors' Commons, April 7, 1867.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 5th instant, stating that, with reference to his letter of the 19th ultimo, transmitting a despatch from the Acting British Chargé d'Affaires at Lima (No. 3, February 26), reporting certain proceedings which had taken place between the Peruvian Government and the Diplomatic Body, with the object of establishing an understanding on the question of diplomatic protection, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the accompanying further despatch from Mr. Barton on the same subject. The previous papers were also inclosed for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That neither these further papers nor the printed pamphlet "Mensage que el Jefe Supremo Provisorio de la República presenta al Congreso Constituyente de 1867," appear to me call for any observations in addition to those which I had the honour to make on this subject in my Report of the 23rd March last.

I am still of opinion that the course which I ventured to indicate as proper to be pursued by Her Majesty's Representative at Lima should be pursued by him in dealing with this subject of diplomatic privilege.

I have, &c.
(Signed) ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 73.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received August 21.)

Temple, August 17, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 14th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter, dated the 12th instant, from Messrs. Ashurst, Morris, and Co., who are acting for a client, a large bondholder of the Peruvian Government Loan of 1862, and requesting, for the reason therein stated, the permission to apply to Her Majesty's Consul at Lima or Callao to serve a copy of a bill filed in the Court of Chancery on the Peruvian Government; and Mr. Egerton was to request that we would furnish your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer to be returned to those gentlemen.

In obedience to the directions of your Lordship we have perused and considered this case, and have the honour to report—

That we do not think it expedient that Her Majesty's Consul should, under the circumstances stated, be employed to serve notice of legal proceedings taken in England upon the Peruvian Government.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
C. J. SELWYN.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

Portugal.

No. 74.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received January 28.)

Lincoln's Inn, January 28, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Murray's letter of the 4th instant, stating that, with reference to our letter of the 22nd November, in which we requested to be furnished with a copy of the contract made between Messrs. Leatham and Bailey and the Portuguese Government, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Lisbon, inclosing a translation of the above-mentioned contract, together with the papers noted in the margin,* which were transmitted to us in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 27th of October.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That it appears from the contract that these steamers of Messrs. Leatham and Bailey are not chartered to a Portuguese Company, or indeed to any Company. Their vessels are managed and worked under the contract by themselves. Messrs. Leatham and Bailey are described as a firm established in Hull, and they engage to carry on temporarily a regular line of steam navigation "between Lisbon and the port of London, &c."

Though this Company is to be considered by the charter as domiciled at Lisbon, and subject to Portuguese law, we do not think that these conditions will protect the vessels from seizure and condemnation, if slaves, under the name of libertos, are conveyed in them in violation of the Treaties and Acts of Parliament for the suppression of the Slave Trade, nor shield Messrs. Leatham and Bailey personally if they are designedly parties to any such transaction.

We think, however, that the contract between Messrs. Leatham and Bailey and the Portuguese Government was entered into bonâ fide by Messrs. Leatham and Bailey, and was not in any way in contemplation of infringement or evasion of law or Treaties. By the contract Messrs. Leatham and Bailey engage with the Portuguese Government for carriage of mails in consideration of a subsidy, having the right to carry passengers in the steamers, and the mere fact that they convey passengers, presenting themselves as libertos, furnished with passports by the Portuguese Government, will not, we think, subject Messrs. Leatham and Bailey, personally, to the consequences of infringing the Slave Trade Acts, whatever may be the real status of these individuals. It is to be observed that under the Treaties with Portugal, it is not necessarily unlawful to carry slaves from one place to another, but if the libertos spoken of are slaves, and ought not to be carried according to the Treaty, strong remonstrance should be made to the Portuguese authorities; but we think that though the vessels may be liable to condemnation if the provisions of the Acts are thereby violated, yet that, if Messrs. Leatham and Bailey, resident in England, are indicted for feloniously infringing the Slave Trade Acts, on the facts we have referred to, they would be acquitted.

---

* Sir A. Paget, No. 4, December 1866; Mr. Lytton, Nos. 4, 8, 9, and 12.

We have, &c.
(Signed) ROBERT PHILLIMORE.
(And for Attorney- and Solicitor-General.)

---

No. 75.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received June 18.)

Temple, June 18, 1867.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 15th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the accompanying letter from Mr. Mangles, relative to a claim on the part of himself, his brother, and other British subjects, against the late South-Eastern Railway Company of Portugal, for the sum of 430,000*l.*; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take these papers into consideration, and report to your Lordship my opinion whether the matter is one in which Her Majesty's Government can properly interfere, and if so, on what grounds they should base a representation to the Portuguese Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the circular letter addressed by Lord Palmerston when Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs in 1848, to the Representatives of Her Majesty in Foreign States, appears to me to contain a true exposition of the principles of international law applicable to cases like the present, and a just distinction between the question of the right of interference incident to the Government of the subject aggrieved by the conduct of a foreign Government, and the question of public policy as to the exercise of that right. (2 Phillimore, " International Law," page 9.).

It is (in my opinion) a sound position of international law that the Government of a State which enters into a contract with the subject of a foreign State, on the faith of which money is obtained from him by that Government, cannot lawfully deny the right of interference incident to the Government of that subject to protect and enforce his claim to the fulfilment of the contract.

It seems, from the averments in the Memorials, that the Portuguese Government guaranteed to the Memorialists a priority of lien upon the property and profits of these railways; that this priority was part of a contract between this Government and (the Memorialists) certain of Her Majesty's subjects. What counter-statement may be made by the Portuguese Government remains to be seen. But I think a primâ facie case is made out which would warrant Her Majesty's Government in supporting by diplomatic assistance, to a certain extent at least, the claim of these Memorialists, and that Her Majesty's Representative at Lisbon might be properly instructed to represent to the Portuguese Government that the grievance complained of by the Memorialists, namely, the practical setting aside of the guarantee given by the act of the State, whereby a priority of lien was secured to the Memorialists for the money advanced by them, appears to Her Majesty's Government to require serious reconsideration by the Government of Portugal.

I have, &c.
(Signed) ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 76.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received July 30.)

Temple, July 30, 1867.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 27th instant, stating that, with reference to the Law Officers Report of the 28th January last, relative to the position in which Messrs. Leatham and Bailey (British subjects) were placed as regards the laws of this country for the suppression of the Slave Trade, in consequence of their having entered into a contract with the Portuguese Government for the conveyance of mails between Portugal and the Portuguese possessions in Africa, and being called upon, under the terms of their contract, to carry slaves under the name of libertos on board their vessels, he was directed to transmit to me two despatches from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Lisbon, from which it would appear that the Portuguese Government are anxious that Her Majesty's Government should cause the letter which was addressed, on the 21st of February last, to the agents of Messrs. Leatham and Bailey, warning them of the responsibility they incurred by carrying libertos on board the Company's vessels to be withdrawn, or to be so explained that the Company should not feel itself called upon to refuse to convey in its vessels, passengers provided with legal passports by the Portuguese authorities, and by so doing thus commit a breach of its contract with the Portuguese Government; and Mr. Egerton was pleased to request that I would take these papers into consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the instructions which it may be proper to give to Mr. Harris in the matter.

The previous papers in this case were also inclosed for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the view taken of this matter by Mr. Harris in his letter of July 15th, 1867, (Inclosure 3 in No. 1 of July 16th) to M. Cazal Ribeiro is correct, and that instructions to this effect should be sent to Mr. Harris. I do not think that Her Majesty's Government ought to address any letter of explanation to the agent of Messrs. Leatham and Bailey.

I have, &c.
(Signed) ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 77.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received August 13.)

Temple, August 13, 1867.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 8th instant, stating that, with reference to my Report of the 30th ultimo, relative to the position in which the British firm of Leatham and Bailey are placed in regard to the laws of the country for the suppression of the Slave Trade, in consequence of their having entered into a contract with the Portuguese Government for the conveyance of mails between Portugal and the Portuguese possessions in Africa, and being called upon, under the terms of their contract, to carry slaves under the name of libertos on board their vessels, he was directed to transmit to me two further despatches, relating to this case, from Mr. Harris, Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Lisbon (Nos. 3 and 4, August 6, 1867). That, by the provisions of the Vth Article of the Treaty of 1842, between this country and Portugal, for the suppression of the Slave Trade, a Portuguese subject in voyages to and from the Portuguese possessions off the African coast may legally be accompanied by two slaves, bonâ fide household slaves, and if removing definitively with his family, he may take with him ten slaves, being bonâ fide household servants. That it would appear that doubts have arisen as to whether British ships can, under any circumstances, be employed in conveying slaves between the Portuguese possessions and the African coast, without violating the provisions of British law; and Mr. Egerton was pleased to request that I would take these papers into consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion upon this point, with special reference to the provisions of the Vth Article of the Treaty of 1842.

The previous papers were inclosed for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That, having regard to the 5 Geo. IV, cap. 113, and 6 and 7 Vict., cap. 98, sec. 1, I am of opinion that it is not lawful for any British subject to receive on board his ship, slaves or other persons for the purpose of their being carried away or removed as, or in order to their being dealt with as slaves.

I understand that these Portuguese subjects are to be dealt with as slaves—although bonâ fide household servants—when they are disembarked at St. Thomas; and I think that, notwithstanding the provisions of the Vth Article of the Treaty of 1842, a British master knowingly carrying such slaves would violate the provisions of the English statute law; but I agree with the opinion expressed in the Memorandum of Mr. Murray, that it is not advisable for Her Majesty's Government to interfere in any way between Messrs. Leatham and Bailey and the Portuguese Government in any differences that may arise between them in regard to the terms of their contract.

1867

I have, &c.
(Signed) ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 78.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received August 24.)

Temple, August 22, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 6th instant, stating that, with reference to the Report of the late Queen's Advocate of the 18th June last, relative to a claim on the part of Mr. Mangles, his brother, and other British subjects, against the late South-Eastern Railway of Portugal, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us an instruction to Her Majesty's Minister at Lisbon founded on that Report, and two despatches from Sir A. Paget bearing on the case; also a further letter from Mr. Mangles, and a despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Lisbon, forwarding a Memorandum which he has received from the Portuguese Government, in which they deny that the bondholders have any legal claim against them; and Mr. Egerton was pleased to request that we would take these papers into consideration and report to your Lordship our opinion as to the instructions which should be sent to Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires in this case.

We are also honoured with Mr. Egerton's letters of the 8th, 9th, 10th, 15th, and 19th instant, transmitting further papers with reference to this case.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That from the whole of the papers now before us it appears that the opinion of the late Queen's Advocate of the 18th June last was given by him upon an assumed state of facts which turns out to be unfounded.

The case of Mr. Mangles and the other bondholders does not in any way rest upon the foundation of the Portuguese Government having entered into a contract with the bondholders which that Government now repudiates; but it is alleged that the bondholders have entered into a contract with the Company by virtue of which they were to have a first lien upon the whole undertaking; and that the Government knowing this, and having acknowledged and sanctioned the lien, have entered into an arrangement with the Company whereby, in certain events, they may sell the undertaking of the Company without recognizing or providing for the priority of the charges of the bond or debenture holders.

It would certainly appear that, if this were done, it would be a very inequitable proceeding, and it is one which the Courts of Justice of Portugal would, we should think, refuse to sanction, and would by their interference prevent.

But we think that, if the law of Portugal should recognize the priority of the right of the Government over, and to the detriment of, the bond and debenture holders, this would not necessarily be a ground for official interference; and we further think that if, by invoking the aid of the law, the bond and debenture holders can prevent the Government from attempting to insist on a right claimed by them against law, the bond and debenture holders should resort to the Courts of Law for protection and relief before they seek the official interference of Her Majesty's Government. Possibly the Portuguese Government will assent to the proposal of Mr. Harriss, which would, we understand, be satisfactory to Mr. Mangles and those whom he represents; but if not, we think that if the Portuguese Government contend that by their law they have a right to the priority they claim, the question at issue must be determined by the tribunals of the country, and not through diplomatic agency.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
C. J. SELWYN.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 79.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received September 3.)

Temple, September 2, 1867.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 29th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me a note received from the Portuguese Minister at this Court, claiming compensation for the losses sustained by Portuguese merchants whose factories were destroyed either during or in consequence of an attack by the boats of Her Majesty's ship "Antelope" upon Mangue Grande, a place on the West Coast of Africa, which he asserts to be in Portuguese territory.

Mr. Hammond was also pleased to inclose other correspondence upon this subject, including detailed accounts of the affair at Mangue Grande by the Commander of the "Antelope," which differ in many material points from the accounts given by the Portuguese, together with a printed memorandum and correspondence showing the line which has hitherto been taken by Her Majesty's Government respecting the claims put forward by Portugal to sovereignty over that part of the West Coast of Africa lying between 5° 8′ and 8′ south latitude; and also to request that I would take these papers into my consideration, and inform your Lordship what answer should be returned to the Portuguese Minister.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That an answer should be returned to the Portuguese Minister to the following effect:—

That Her Majesty's Government does not admit that the village of Mangue Grande is situated in territory belonging to the Crown of Portugal, and on this subject beg to refer the Portuguese Minister to the note of the Earl of Clarendon addressed to the Portuguese Minister on November 26th, 1853.

That with regard to the events which occurred at Mangue Grande on 23rd and 24th February last, in which the Commander and crew of Her Majesty's ship "Antelope" took part, Her Majesty's Government, from information on which it relies, attaches to them a character which varies most materially in all important points from the view which the Portuguese Minister has formed from the accounts placed before him.

That Her Majesty's Government declines to discuss with the Portuguese Minister the events of 23rd February, for the reasons above stated—that it does not admit those events to have occurred in territory belonging to the Crown of Portugal. Further, the Portuguese Minister does not represent that any damage occurred on that day to the persons or property of any Portuguese merchants residing at Mangue Grande.

That Her Majesty's Government learns with regret from the Portuguese Minister, that in the course of the operations of the 24th February, which were provoked and rendered immediately necessary by the hostile aggressions of the native inhabitants of the village of Mangue Grande and the neighbourhood, who opened fire upon the boats of Her Majesty's ship "Antelope" as they approached the shore, property belonging to Portuguese merchants should have been damaged and destroyed; but Her Majesty's Government has information upon which it relies, that no building or house at Mangue Grande, if any such was a Portuguese factory, or was the property of a Portuguese merchant, was damaged and destroyed on the said 24th February, unless fire had been first opened from it upon Her Majesty's officers and men, and it had become necessary for them in self-defence to silence such fire. Her Majesty's Government has also information upon which it relies, that the only two buildings or houses which had the appearance of being Portuguese factories, the Portuguese national flag being displayed upon them, were scrupulously respected during the events of the 24th February, and remained uninjured at the time when Her Majesty's officers and men returned to Her Majesty's steamer "Antelope" on the evening of that day.

That after the fire of the natives had been silenced on that day, the Portuguese occupants of those two houses, upon which the national flag of Portugal was displayed, communicated freely with Her Majesty's officers before they returned to Her Majesty's ship "Antelope," and did not ask for protection, nor intimate any apprehension of the violence to which his Excellency represents them to have been afterwards exposed. Her Majesty's Government in referring to that part of the note of the Portuguese Minister in which he admits that it is not known how these two houses came to destruction, cannot but express its regret that his Excellency should have placed any faith in a statement made by some one whom his Excellency does not name, that the English, before destroying the factories, carried off the merchandize that was in them, to take it on board the "Antelope."

1867

That his Excellency may not be under any misapprehension of the views of Her Majesty's Government on this part of his Excellency's note, Her Majesty's Government beg in all frankness to repeat to his Excellency that it has information, upon which it fully relies, that the two houses or factories above-mentioned, upon which alone the national flag of Portugal was exhibited, were perfectly uninjured, and had not been plundered when Her Majesty's officers and men re-embarked in their boats on the evening of the 24th February; and that on the morning of the 25th February the Commander of Her Majesty's ship "Antelope," on landing at Mangue Grande for the purpose of offering protection or assistance to the occupants of the two houses or factories above-mentioned, if any should be needed, found that the two houses or factories above-mentioned had been destroyed from the rear during the night and were empty, and that the Portuguese occupants had abandoned them, but under what circumstances the said commanding officer was unable to ascertain.

With regard to the representation of the Portuguese Minister that the Commander of Her Majesty's ship "Antelope" proceeded to destroy Mangue Grande without previous notice to the Portuguese factories of his determination to do so, Her Majesty's Government begs leave to repeat that the native inhabitants commenced firing upon Her Majesty's boats before they reached the shore on the 24th February, and that after the fire of the natives had been silenced by the return fire of the boats, so as to enable Her Majesty's officers and crews to land, the natives recommenced firing upon Her Majesty's officers and men on shore, who were obliged in self-defence to return the fire, and to dislodge the natives from the shelter in the villages, which result could not be effected without the destruction of many huts, and of the buildings or houses from which fire had been previously opened upon Her Majesty's officers and men as above-mentioned.

Her Majesty's Government beg to observe, in conclusion, that it has been always its wish and its instructions that Her Majesty's officers and men should give efficient protection to any Portuguese merchants residing on the West Coast of Africa, beyond the territories possessed by the Crown of Portugal on that coast to the south of the Equator, if they should at any time need protection.

That the Commander of Her Majesty's ship "Antelope," in pursuance of such instructions, took occasion on sailing northward from Mangue Grande to send his boat's crew on shore wherever any houses were visible on the 26th and also on the 27th of February, with a view to offer such protection; and that his services were accepted and gratefully acknowledged on the 27th of February by the occupants of the Portuguese factories at Cabeca de Cobra, on the occasion of their being attacked by the natives, when the Commander of Her Majesty's ship "Antelope" effectively protected them.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 80.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received October 8.)

Temple, October 7, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 13th ultimo, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 22nd of August, on the claim of Mr. Mangles, his brother, and other British subjects, against the late South-Eastern Railway of Portugal, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith a further despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Lisbon, together with the other papers on the subject;* and to request that we would take these papers into our consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

The previous papers were sent for convenience of reference.

We are also honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 24th ultimo, stating that, with reference to his letter of the 13th of that month, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith a further despatch (No. 29) from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires relative to the case of the bondholders of the South-Eastern Railway of Portugal; and to request that we would take this paper into our consideration, in connection with the papers on the subject already before us.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That it does not occur to us that more can be done at this moment through the intervention of Her Majesty's Government than has already been done to secure a fair adjustment of these claims.

We think it extremely important that Messrs. Mangles and those whom they represent should be promptly and fully advised by Portuguese lawyers as to their position. It may be that, in the event of a sale of the railway undertakings by the Government, some formal notices should, according to the law of Portugal, be given to the purchaser of the claims of the bond or debenture holders, or some other steps taken to secure, as far as possible, the rights, lien, or preference which they claim.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
C. J. SELWYN.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

* Mr. Harriss, Nos. 28 and 18; to Mr. Mangles, September 3; Queen's Advocate, June 18; to Sir A. Paget, No. 33, June 21; Sir A. Paget, No. 66, July 4, No. 72, July 10; Mr. Mangles, August 1; Mr. Harriss, No. 13, July 30; No. 15, August 1; No. 16, August 3; to Mr. Mangles, August 6; Mr. Mangles, August 9; Mr. Harriss, No. 17, August 7, 1867.

---

Prussia.

No. 81.

The Queen's Advocate to Mr. Hammond.—(Received October 15.)

Temple, October 12, 1867.

Dear Sir,

BEFORE answering your letter on the subject of United States naturalization, I should be glad to see a correspondence which took place between Lord Palmerston and Mr. Bancroft in 1849. Some extracts from the correspondence are to be found in the Appendix to the Lawrence's second annotated edition of "Wheaton's Elements (1863)," page 925, as taken from the Congressional Documents: but I do not think that the correspondence, which appears to have an important bearing on the question submitted by the Prussian Legation, has been published in the collection of State Papers.

Faithfully yours,
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 82.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received November 14.)

Temple, November 13, 1867.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 10th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the accompanying note (with translation) from the Prussian Chargé d'Affaires at this Court, expressing the desire of his Government to be furnished with information regarding the liability to serve in Her Majesty's army and navy of British subjects, who having emigrated to the United States, and there become naturalized citizens of the Republic, subsequently return to their native country.

Mr. Egerton was pleased to request that I would take this document into my consideration, and favour your Lordship with my opinion as to the reply which should be given to the inquiry of the Prussian Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken this document into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That no practice has prevailed in England since the Peace of 1815, which has any bearing on the question of the treatment in Prussia of those subjects of the King of Prussia liable to military service, who, after they have emigrated to the United States and been naturalized therein, come back again to Prussia, inasmuch as the practice in England has always been both before and since the Peace of 1815, to recruit the Royal army by voluntary enlistment.

On the other hand, the militia of the counties which used to be called out by ballot, has ceased to be so called out since 1829; and on the last occasion when the militia was embodied during the Russian war in 1854, the quota of each regiment was furnished by volunteers. There has thus been no opportunity for a tacit practice to grow up either in regard to the army or the militia, under which any privilege of exemption from the liability to military service has become established in Great Britain in favour of those subjects of the Queen, who, after they have emigrated to the United States, and been naturalized therein, have returned to Great Britain.

With regard to the Royal Navy the same observations apply, as the practice of impressment has been allowed to fall into desuetude, and the Royal Navy has been for some time recruited by voluntary enrolment.

It would also be an error to suppose that the question at issue between the United States and Great Britain, which was the occasion of the declaration of war on the part of the United States in 1812, was founded on any distinction between natural-born British subjects who had been naturalized in the United States, and subsequently returned to England, and others who had so returned without any such claim to American citizenship.

The question really at issue was the inviolability of the national flag of the United States on the high seas, to the exclusion of a municipal prerogative, which Great Britain claimed to exercise over all her natural-born subjects, although they were under the safeguard of the American flag. It may be perfectly true that Great Britain claimed at that time to exercise such a prerogative over her natural-born subjects who had been naturalized in the United States, and that President Madison, in his message of June 1, 1862, to Congress ("Annual Register, 1812"), dwelt upon the hardship of so many American citizens having been torn away by British cruisers from under their national flag, under the pretext of searching for British subjects; but no contention had been raised by the United States at that time as to the exclusiveness of the national character, which American naturalization was entitled to confer upon the natural-born subjects of Great Britain, although they might return to the country of their birth; nor can it be said that the principle of such exclusive nationality has ever been conceded by Great Britain, either under express Treaty engagement, or in her diplomatic correspondence. On the contrary, the reciprocal liberty of commerce within the territories of Her Britannic Majesty in Europe, and the territories of the United States, which was secured after the peace of Ghent by Article I of the Treaty of Commerce of the 3rd of July, 1815, in favour of the inhabitants of the two countries respectively, is coupled with the condition that they shall enjoy that liberty in the parts of the two countries, subject to the laws and statutes of the two countries respectively; whilst in the correspondence which took place between the British Foreign Secretary and the United States' Minister in 1849, when the question was for the first time explicitly raised, it was distinctly maintained by Lord Palmerston, on the part of Great Britain, in his note of August 16, 1849, published in the documents submitted to the American Congress (Document 36, Congress, 1st September), "that natural-born subjects of Great Britain who may have become naturalized in a foreign country, but who return to the United Kingdom, are as amenable as any other of Her Majesty's subjects to any law which may be in force either of a permanent or temporary character."

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 83.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received December 19.)

My Lord, Temple, December 18, 1867.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 17th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Berne, inclosing a letter addressed to him by a Mr. James Warburton, under the impression that he was Her Majesty's Representative at Dresden, calling his attention to the imprisonment of his brother in that city; and Mr. Egerton was pleased to request that I would favour your Lordship with my opinion whether the circumstances of Mr. Warburton's incarceration, as they are to be gathered from the Memorandum forwarded by his brother, are such as to warrant the interference of Her Majesty's Government on his behalf.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands, I have taken this case into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That it will be proper for your Lordship to obtain some further information from Mr. James Warburton, who appears to reside at Hythe, as to the grounds upon which his brother has been arrested, and is incarcerated at Dresden, before Her Majesty's Government interferes on his behalf.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

River Plate.

No. 84.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received July 9.)

My Lord, Temple, July 9, 1867.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 5th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me two despatches from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Monte Video, relative to the alleged grievances of Messrs. R. and D. Williams, arising out of a decision of the Uruguayan Courts of Law, by which they are deprived of a certain portion of land to which they lay claim; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take the correspondence contained in these despatches into consideration, and inform your Lordship of my opinion as to the nature of the instructions which should be sent to Mr. Lettsom with regard to his conduct in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the cases are extremely rare in which a foreign Government is justified in officially interfering on behalf of its subject who complains that the local tribunals of another country have given a wrong decision, either upon the law or the facts relative to his title to landed property, which property is properly subject to the law of those tribunals.

The evidence, which is not before me, as to the ownership of the land in this case, is probably of a very complicated character, and the appreciation of it much dependent on local knowledge.

It seems to be admitted, however, that the Government of Monte Video have sold the land in question to two separate purchasers, and that on this account the Messrs. Williams (Her Majesty's subjects) are, according to the municipal law of the land, entitled to compensation from the seller; but it also appears that the Government may be sued on this account like a private person. I see no reason why Messrs. Williams should not take this course; but I think that Mr. Lettsom may be instructed to endeavour, by the use of his good offices, to effect an equitable arrangement between Messrs. Williams and the Government, though he ought not to be instructed formally and diplomatically to make any remonstrance to the Government of Monte Video.

I have, &c.
(Signed) ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

1867

Russia.

---

No. 85.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received March 23.)

Doctors' Commons, March 23, 1867.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 18th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Ambassador at St. Petersburgh, requesting to be informed whether, under the circumstances therein stated, he would be justified in granting Mr. George Wolff a passport as a British subject; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would report to your Lordship my opinion as to the answer which should be returned to Sir A. Buchanan.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands, I have the honour to report—

That Mr. G. Wolff is a British subject, according to our law, by reason of his birth. The circumstances too of his having an English mother, having resided in England till he was 11 years of age, and of being a member of the English Church, are to be considered in this matter. He appears to have claimed no privilege belonging to the son of a Hanoverian father.

I think that if due notice be given to the proper authorities at St. Petersburgh, that he is no longer to be considered as included in the family passport, Sir A. Buchanan would be justified in giving him a passport as a British subject.

I have, &c.
(Signed) ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 86.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received June 1.)

Temple, May 31, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 29th ultimo, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 27th of December last, respecting the seizure at Odessa of certain bonds belonging to Messrs. Nell and Co., he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us, together with the previous papers, a further despatch from Sir A. Buchanan, inclosing the answer of the Russian Government to the representation respecting this case, which, in accordance with instructions founded on our above-mentioned Report, he addressed to Prince Gortchakoff; and Mr. Egerton was pleased to request that we would take the same into consideration, and furnish your Lordship with any observations we may have to offer thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the explanation now furnished by Prince Gortchakoff in answer to the despatch of Sir A. Buchanan is such as to satisfy us that further appeal or interference by Her Majesty's Government on behalf of Messrs. Nell and Nicholl should cease. It appears from the Prince's despatch that the stolen bonds purchased by the claimants in England were, by law, in April 1864 declared to be annulled before the date of the purchase, and that any recourse to the Polish Tribunals is useless.

The character and capabilities of the expert who gave evidence in the Chancery suit, are seriously attacked by the Prince, who also denies that the Russian Consul-General was a party to, or interested in, the suit instituted before the Vice-Chancellor. The bonds were seized in Russia by the authority of law; and, finally, the Prince states that a statute exists which enjoins the delivery to the holder of annulled bonds of a certificate of seizure, for the purpose of affording to him the means of prosecuting the persons who have fraudulently passed the bonds to him; which certificate the claimants may, if they desire it, obtain, and which will in a Court of Justice have all the force of the original bonds.

We think that the substance of this despatch should be communicated to Messrs. Nell and Nicholl, and that if the arguments and assertions of the Prince are not successfully controverted in substantial particulars, it will be useless—to use the Prince's words—"any longer to continue a barren discussion" on this subject.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

San Domingo.

---

No. 87.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received January 28.)

Doctors' Commons, January 26, 1867.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 22nd instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me a despatch from Her Majesty's Acting Chargé d'Affaires at San Domingo, stating the circumstances under which a person who had been expelled from the country for political offences, had taken refuge in the house of the French Consul, who refused to give him up to the authorities; and to request that I would take this case into consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the reply which should be returned to Mr. Leon's application for instructions as to the course which he should pursue under similar circumstances.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken this case into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That I beg leave to refer your Lordship to my two former Reports of the 22nd of December, 1865, and 12th March, 1866. That in these Reports I had the honour to state a proposition of law and a proposition of fact with respect to the privileges of the British Consulate at San Domingo. The proposition of law was in substance that, by general international law, the Consul had not the privilege of sheltering refugees in his Consular dwelling, inasmuch as his house was not exempt, as that of the Ambassador is, from the operation of the municipal law of the country in which he resides; that it was, however, possible that in certain countries, by express permission, or usage implying such permission, the Consul might have obtained in this matter a privilege incident by the general law to the diplomatic Minister only. The proposition of fact was to the effect that as far as I was able to judge upon the rather imperfect information laid before me, usage had conferred this privilege on the Consul at San Domingo. I stated also that it appeared to me that the privilege was one which it would be desirable to abandon as soon as possible, and that proper measures should be taken for this purpose. I do not know what has been done since in the matter.

I have, &c.
(Signed) ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 88.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley—(Received May 8.)

Temple, May 7, 1867.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 2nd instant, stating that with reference to my report of the 26th January last relative to the right of Her Majesty's Consul at San Domingo to afford an asylum to political refugees, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me a further despatch on the subject from the Acting Chargé d'Affaires at that place, pointing out that it had previously been the custom to grant such an asylum at Her Majesty's Consulate, and that the practice is now followed by the Consulates of other nations at San Domingo; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take

Mr. McLeon's observations on this subject into consideration, and inform your Lordship what reply should in my opinion be returned thereto.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I have nothing material to add to the opinion which I expressed in my three former Reports on this subject (22nd December, 1865, 12th March, 1866, 26th January, 1867).

It is of course competent to the Government of San Domingo to concede to the house of the Consul of a foreign State the right of asylum usually incident to the house of the diplomatic Minister. This Government must concede the same privilege to all foreign States. Whether the Government has so conceded this privilege must depend in this case upon usage, as I understand Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires such usage does exist and is recognized by the Government.

It appears to me, therefore, that it is a matter entirely for the consideration of your Lordship; whether, regard being had to the peculiar state of that country, it be expedient or not that Her Majesty's Consul should afford an asylum to political refugees.

I have, &c.
(Signed) ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

Siam.

No. 89.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received April 26.)

My Lord, Lincoln's Inn, April 26, 1867.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 5th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Consul at Bangkok (No. 9), asking for instructions as to the course which he should pursue in dealing with the estate of a British merchant, named R. S. Scott, who has been convicted of felony; and Mr. Hammond was to request that we would take this despatch into our consideration, and furnish your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer which should be sent to Mr. Knox.

A copy of Her Majesty's Order in Council for Siam was also sent to us.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have considered these papers, and have the honour to report—

That we think that the Consul acted rightly in declining to exercise jurisdiction in bankruptcy under the Order of Council of 28th July, 1856;

We think that the power of attorney did not authorize Mr. Littlejohn to declare Salt bankrupt;

We think that the Consul may properly treat the convict's personal property as forfeited to the Crown, and may seize it for the benefit of the Crown.

As regards the houses built on land leased from the Siamese, we think the Consul should obtain the consent of the authorities to his dealing with these in the same manner as with the personal property; for it is doubtful whether in foreign territory the Crown can have any right to seize and hold landed property, except with the consent of the ruling Power of the country.

We think that the Crown may properly be advised that the expenses of the prosecution should be defrayed out of the convict's property, and may direct that the surplus may be distributed pro ratâ, among the creditors, after deduction of the Consul's expenses, and all costs of realization.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

Spain.

No. 90.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received January 10.)

My Lord, Lincoln's Inn, January 9, 1867.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 31st day of December, 1866, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith a further letter from Messrs. S. Isaac, Campbell and Co., requesting that Her Majesty's Consul at Cadiz should be instructed to register the "Tornado" as having arrived at that port as a British vessel; and to request that we would report to your Lordship whether the statements contained in Messrs. Isaac, Campbell and Co.'s letter are such as to induce us to alter the opinion on this point which was expressed in our letter of the 9th of November, 1866.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That no circumstances are stated in the letter of Messrs. Isaac, Campbell and Co. of the 28th of December, 1866, which induce us to come to any conclusion other than that which was arrived at by the Law Officers in their former Reports on this subject.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 91.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received January 10.)

My Lord, Lincoln's Inn, January 10, 1867.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 4th of January, 1867, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith a translation of a letter from the Spanish Minister at this Court, calling attention to the proceedings in connection with the barque "Martlet" about to sail from the port of London, ostensibly for Punta Arenas, but in reality it is alleged for Valparaiso, laden with munitions of war; and Mr. Hammond was also to transmit to us the accompanying letter which had been received from the Treasury, with the report from the Commissioners of Customs, stating the result of the inquiries which have been made with respect to the "Martlet;" and to request that we would take these papers into our consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion whether the circumstances of the case call for the interference of Her Majesty's Government.

We are also honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 7th instant, stating that, with reference to his letter of the 4th of this month, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying further letter which had been received from the Spanish Minister at this Court, giving evidence as to the destination of the "Martlet," and requesting that immediate steps might be taken to prevent her departure; and to request that we would take the same into our consideration with the former papers already before us.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That upon the facts stated by the Spanish Minister, and those which have been ascertained by the Commissioners of Customs, and mentioned in their Report, there is no evidence at present upon which the Government can act.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

1867

No. 92.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received January 12.)

Lincoln's Inn, January 12, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 31st ultimo, stating that, with reference to the case of the "Tornado," he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires in Chile (No. 34), inclosing extracts from a Report of the Minister of Marine of that Republic, relative to the purchase of ships of war for their use; and requesting that we would take the same into consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the papers render the Chilean destination of the "Tornado" probable; but their bearing on that question is not immediate, and certainly not by any means conclusive.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 93.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received January 12.)

Lincoln's Inn, January 12, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 7th day of January instant, stating that, with reference to his letter of the 31st ultimo, on the subject of the detention of the "Tornado" and of her crew at Cadiz, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us two despatches relating to this matter, from Her Majesty's Consul at that port; and to request that we would take the papers into consideration, together with those then before us.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That in Mr. Dunlop's despatch of the 31st December, he speaks of a tribunal which has pronounced the "Tornado" a prize, and ordered the prize-money to be distributed. This is the first that we have heard of such a decision. We should be glad to know whether any copy has been sent home of such a decision, or whether any thing more is known of it, and to be furnished with as complete a record of the proceedings that have hitherto taken place as can be obtained.

The proceedings, according to Mr. Dunlop's despatch, have arrived at a stage when all British subjects who have been hitherto detained as witnesses only, should be set quite at large, and when the owners, if we understand the Spanish procedure, should insist on appearing and supporting their claim.

As to McPherson, it is necessary to know whether his detention is placed on the ground of his being a prisoner of war; and we cannot report as to what should be done in his case till we know more of the proceedings. The statements made by McPherson may become important if a claim should hereafter be made by Her Majesty's Government on the Spanish Government by reason of the vessel being improperly condemned.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

P.S.—Our Report on the papers sent in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 31st December had been prepared before the further papers inclosed in his letter of the 7th of January reached us.

J. R.
J. B. K.
R. P.

---

No. 94.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received January 18.)

My Lord, Lincoln's Inn, January 18, 1867.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 16th instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 12th instant, on the subject of the case of the "Tornado," he was directed by your Lordship to state to us that Her Majesty's Consul at Cadiz has been called upon to explain whether, in speaking of the Decree of the Prize Court condemning the vessel he alluded to, any other proceeding than that recorded in the case of the "Sumario," of the case which was received from Sir John Crampton on the 11th instant, and the translation of which has only been now completed. A copy of this translation was also transmitted, together with a despatch since received from Consul Dunlop, reporting that the lawyers who have been consulted on behalf of the parties, are of opinion that the whole of the proceedings taken in the case are informal, and therefore invalid. That we should see by the further correspondence with Sir John Crampton, also inclosed, that the promise of the Spanish Minister for Foreign Affairs, in regard to the release of the crew not having been fulfilled, Sir J. Crampton was desired to ask an explanation, and press for their immediate release. That Sir J. Crampton reports that he has executed his instructions, and the answer of the Spanish Government on this point is now awaited. That Sir J. Crampton has been instructed to report specifically as to the grounds on which McPherson is detained.

Mr. Hammond was also pleased to inclose the previous papers which have been confidentially printed, and to state that your Lordship would be glad if we would take into our early consideration the new facts submitted to us, and report to your Lordship our opinion as to the course which, as matters stand, it would be proper for Her Majesty's Government to pursue.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That before we express our opinion upon the questions raised by the papers now before us, it seems expedient to state briefly the usual course of procedure in Courts which administer the law of prize. The proceedings in the Prize Courts of Great Britain and the United States of North America (agreeing substantially with those in France, and we believe also in Holland and Spain), are conducted in the following manner:—

The vessel is brought into port; all her papers are brought into the Prize Court, a certain number of her crew in England, usually three, are examined upon settled interrogatories by an officer of the Judge; when their depositions are completed the cause comes on for trial in open Court, the claimant and the captor being at liberty to apply to the Court for permission to introduce further proof.

But as the crew are of course, the claimant's witnesses, and the Court is reluctant to allow, for various reasons, captors an opportunity of introducing new matter into the case, in most cases the cause is decided after full argument by the Admiralty Court from whose decision there is an appeal to a higher Tribunal. The Spanish Prize Court in this case has not only examined the crew by a public functionary, or rather by a Court composed of public functionaries, but has also imported a great variety of extrinsic evidence (if it is to be so called) from newspapers, from diplomatic correspondence, public acts of the State, the conduct of other vessels, and various other sources; all this evidence has been produced behind the back of the claimants, and it is to be observed that it is wholly different in kind from the evidence afforded by the ship's papers, and the depositions of the crew. Moreover, on this kind of evidence so received the Court has proceeded to pass a sentence of condemnation without notice to the claimants and without hearing them.

These proceedings, followed by the sentence of condemnation, certainly afford good ground for serious complaint on the part of Her Majesty's Government, and moreover they appear to us to be inconsistent with the promises given from time to time, as we understood by the Spanish authorities, that no sentence should be pronounced without a full opportunity being afforded to the claimants for making their defence. A sentence pronounced without allowing the party affected by it to be heard, is necessarily null and void, being inconsistent both with natural justice and with the usage and practice of the Prize Courts of all civilized States. Nor does the offer of an appeal remove the original injustice.

If, indeed, the proceedings had been of a different character such as justice, international law, and the usage of States would have warranted, we are not prepared to say that there are not material facts stated in the Auditor's Report which might have supported the sentence.

Discarding from our notice all the evidence extrinsic to that which may be assumed to have been furnished by the ship's papers and crew, we are bound to say that from them arises a strong presumption that the "Tornado" was destined for the military service of the Chilean State with whom Spain is at war; and of course, if this should prove to be the case, both her seizure by the captor, and her due condemnation in a regular proceedure in a Prize Court, would be within the legitimate exercise of the rights of the Spanish belligerent.

As we have not before us at present the documents referred to in the Report of the Auditor, as having been found on board the vessel which constitute most material and legitimate evidence in the case, we are unable to pronounce a positive opinion; but the following facts and circumstances are, to say the least, extremely adverse to the contention of the claimants:

1. The ship's papers leaving in doubt the true ownership of the vessel; according to the register she belongs to persons of the name of Galbraith and Denny (page 83 in fine); according to the roll to a Mr. Isaac; according to the claim to Messrs. Isaac Campbell and Co.; and it appears that the captain deposed that she possibly still belongs to Galbraith and Denny.

2. The vessel appears, both by the evidence of the captain, and of competent skilled witnesses to be unquestionably and exclusively built for warlike purposes (page 90).

3. Her crew actually amounted to fifty-five persons, and sixty-six are enumerated on the roll (page 84).

4. The "Tornado" had on board for the use of the crew 200 hammocks and 150 mattresses (page 91).

5. She had no cargo but coal, an article ancipitis usûs which may or may not be contraband of war, according to the true destination of the vessel.

6. The circumstance of her departure from Madeira, and her attempt to escape from the Spanish vessel, her deviation from her proper course to the alleged port of her destination, Rio Janeiro, are also circumstances of suspicion of which it appears probable that proof has been furnished.

7. It appears also probable that after the capture, papers were surreptitiously destroyed by the captain of the "Tornado," a circumstance which our own Prize Courts has always treated as a very strong presumption of guilt.

But, lastly, there is a circumstance which at present appears to us to go very far towards warranting the condemnation of this vessel by a proper Court in which the proceedings are regularly conducted. She had on board her ostensibly as third mate, a person of the name of John McPherson who admits himself to have been the chief engineer of the Chilean Government and whom the documentary evidence shows to have been actively employed in obtaining the crew of this ship as well as in superintending the construction in England of privateers for the service of Chile. It appears that the name of this person was not noted in the log-book, in the book of accounts, or in the bill of health. It appears that in the roll the Commissary or Accountant of the "Tornado" was entered without his surname, but that he has owned himself to be William McPherson, the son of the aforesaid John, and also in the employ of the Chilean Government (page 84). The Auditor reports that it was deposed by the captain than John McPherson was specially recommended to him by the owners of the vessel in order that he might be provided with a place on board (page 94).

We do not now enter into further details, but looking to the precedents of the English Prize Courts and the principles which animated them, it must be admitted that, assuming these facts to be capable of due proof, there are strong presumptions of belligerent interest in this vessel and cargo. With respect to the crew, even if the ship should be proved to belong to the Chilean Government, we are unable at present to express a positive opinion whether the facts, if proved, are or are not sufficient to establish the right of Spain to consider them as persons engaged in the military service of the enemy, and to treat them as prisoners of war.

We are not aware whether it is the intention of the claimants to appeal, under protest or otherwise, but in order to prevent any proceedings whatever being taken under the alleged judgment, we think it would be expedient that Her Majesty's Representative at Madrid should be apprised, with the utmost promptitude, that Her Majesty's Government protest against the sentence by which the "Tornado" is decreed to be prize, and her officers and crew placed as prisoners of war at the disposal of the Captain-General of the Department as a nullity.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 95.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received January 19.)

Lincoln's Inn, January 19, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 18th instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 10th instant, with reference to the case of the "Martlet" denounced by the Spanish Minister as destined to carry military stores to Chile, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us, together with the papers which we have already had before us, a further letter from the Spanish Minister, inclosing a copy of the articles of that ship, and a statement of a portion of her cargo consisting of military stores, and requesting that she may be prevented from putting to sea which it is expected she intends to do to-morrow.

Mr. Hammond was pleased to inclose a copy of Her Majesty's proclamation of neutrality in the war between Spain and Chile, and to request that we would take this matter into immediate consideration, and report to your Lordship whether sufficient grounds exist for interfering with the departure of the vessel.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the matter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That it appears from the Report of the Custom-house officers (Treasury, January 4, 1867), that the "Martlet" is a small vessel, barque-rigged; the information of the Spanish Minister renders it probable that she is carrying contraband of war to Chile. Her Majesty has warned by her Proclamation all her subjects that they will not be protected by her if they carry "articles considered or deemed to be contraband of war according to the law or modern usage of nations," for the use of either belligerent, and if the "Martlet" be engaged in this occupation she is liable to capture by the Spanish belligerent, and the contraband which she carries, and possibly also (but this depends upon circumstances) the ship herself, are liable to condemnation after a full and proper trial before a duly constituted prize tribunal of the belligerent.

But the "Martlet" not being equipped or fitted out, partially or entirely, as a vessel of war herself, is not liable to detention by Her Majesty's Government under the provisions of the Foreign Enlistment Act.

It is not alleged that any of her crew are engaged or enlisted in the service of Chile.

Her Majesty's Government, in these circumstances, cannot prevent the sailing of the "Martlet" on the ground that she probably has contraband merchandize on board of her.

We have, &c.
(Signed) ROBERT PHILLIMORE.
(And for Attorney- and Solicitor-General.)

---

No. 96.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received January 21.)

Lincoln's Inn, January 21, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 19th instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 19th instant, on the subject of the "Martlet," he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter and its inclosures from the Treasury respecting that vessel; and to request that we would take these papers into consideration, and furnish your Lordship with our opinion on the suggestion put forward by the Solicitor to the Board of Customs, whether the vessel might not, on the grounds stated by him, be liable to detention under the 7th section of the Foreign Enlistment Act.

1867

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we have taken into consideration the letter from the Treasury and its inclosures, and are of opinion that the "Martlet" cannot, on the suggestion put forward by the Solicitor to the Board of Customs, upon the evidence already furnished or on any other ground, be liable to detention under the 7th section of the Foreign Enlistment Act.

The facts, as now disclosed, appear to be that the seamen (number not stated) have signed articles for Valparaiso; that Valparaiso probably is not, and that some other port on the west coast of South America (probably Panamá) is, her true destination; and that her cargo has been all shipped by one person, and consists of shot, shell, and guns, with a few packages usually shipped as stores.

Though these facts make it probable either that the shot, shell, and guns have been purchased by and belong to the Chilean Government, and have been shipped by the vendors or the Chilean Government for the purpose of being conveyed to the Chilean authorities, or that the British owners have shipped and consigned them to the west coast for the purpose of selling them, if possible, to the Chilean Government, yet they do not, in our opinion, afford sufficient legal ground for either of such conclusions.

If the munitions of war shipped belong to British owners, and are being shipped for the purpose of sale, we think it clear that it would not be held that the vessel had been equipped, furnished, or fitted out with intent or in order that she should be equipped in the service of Chile as a transport or store-ship within the meaning of the 7th section of the Foreign Enlistment Act. If, on the other hand, these munitions of war belong to Chile, and are being shipped for the use of the Government of Chile, and the ship in which they are laden is equipped, furnished, or fitted out with intent that she shall be employed in the service of that Government as a transport or store-ship, in connection with the war which is carried on with Spain, we think the vessel may be deemed to fall within the 7th section of the Foreign Enlistment Act, and be liable to condemnation, and if, as suggested by Mr. Dickins in his letter to Mr. Hamilton, legal proof can be obtained that the vessel is so employed, her detention may be justified. The detention having been commenced should, we think, be continued for the present, in order that it may be ascertained what further proof is forthcoming as to the character, destination, and employment of the vessel.

We have, &c.
(Signed) ROBERT PHILLIMORE.
(And for Attorney- and Solicitor-General.)

---

No. 97.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received January 23.)

Lincoln's Inn, January 22, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 18th instant, stating that, with reference to his letter of the 16th instant, in which the papers relating to the case of the "Tornado" were again referred to us, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a further letter on the subject from Messrs. Isaac, Campbell, and Co., commenting on the sentence which has been pronounced by the Secret Naval Court before which this vessel was sent for adjudication, and to request that we would take this paper into consideration in connection with those already before us. Mr. Hammond was also pleased to add that since this letter was written our Report on the "Sumario" had been received, and he was pleased to inclose a copy of the instruction which your Lordship, in consequence, addressed to Sir J. Crampton.

We are also honoured with Mr. Hammond's letter of the 19th instant, transmitting further papers respecting this case.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we think an answer should be sent to Messrs. Campbell to the following effect:—

That Her Majesty's Government have directed Her Majesty's Representative at Madrid to protest against the lawfulness of the sentence by which the "Tornado" has been condemned and her crew pronounced to be prisoners of war. Her Majesty's Government have taken this step both because they had been previously assured by the Spanish authorities that the proceedings which were being taken were a preliminary character only, and that the trial would follow upon them, when the claimant would be duly heard, and also because the sentence being pronounced behind the backs of the claimants, and without hearing them, must be considered as a nullity. At the same time, Her Majesty's Government are advised that the circumstances disclosed during the investigation are, after making every reasonable deduction, at present, and until explained, such as to render it highly probable that this vessel was destined for the military service of Chile, and was conveying officers in the Chilean naval service to Chile, and if this should turn out to be so, her condemnation by the proper Spanish Prize Court on due proof, would be a perfectly legitimate exercise of the rights of the belligerent.

If, in fact, the "Tornado" was a Chilean vessel of war, there would be strong ground for believing that Messrs. Campbell and Son have been guilty of an infringement of the Foreign Enlistment Act, and have neglected the warnings contained in Her Majesty's Proclamation of Neutrality.

That Her Majesty's Government have received intelligence, on which they believe they may rely, that the "Cyclone," a vessel of war (built apparently at the same time, by the same builders) which has escaped the Spanish cruizers, is now in the Chilean service, and that her captain received his secret instructions from Messrs. Campbell and Son.

If this be so, Messrs. Campbell and Co. appear to have infringed, in this case also, the Foreign Enlistment Act, and to have neglected the warning of the Proclamation.

Your Lordship will remark that Messrs. Campbell and Co. state their intention of taking no further step for the purpose of contesting the validity of the proceedings in the Spanish Courts, but that they look to your Lordship's Department for redress.

We think that, having regard to this statement, it should be pointed out to Messrs. Isaac, Campbell, and Co., that they must take such course as they may be advised in reference to their contesting or not contesting the condemnation in the Spanish Courts, but if it should turn out that they have infringed the Foreign Enlistment Act, and have disregarded the warnings of Her Majesty's Proclamation, they have forfeited their right or claim to insist on Her Majesty's protection or interference for redress.

We forbear from making any further observations upon this case until the result of the Protest be known.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 98.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received January 27.)

Lincoln's Inn, January 25, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 23rd instant, stating that, with reference to his letter of the 19th instant, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a further despatch from Sir J. Crampton, inclosing a copy of the answer which he had received from General Calonge in reply to his application for the immediate release of the crew of the "Tornado," and to request that we would take this despatch into consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion as to any instructions which should be sent to Sir J. Crampton on the General's answer.

We are also honoured with Mr. Hammond's letters of the 24th instant, transmitting a despatch from Mr. Consul Dunlop, inclosing a reply to, and protest against, the proceedings prepared by the Spanish lawyer and signed by the Captain of the "Tornado," and a letter from the Rev. J. Davidson, requesting the interference of Her Majesty's Government on behalf his brother Andrew Davidson, one of the crew of the "Tornado."

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That it does not appear to us that the letter of General Calonge requires any observations upon the law applicable to this case in addition to those which we had the honour to submit to your Lordship in our last Report; but we think it right to advert to the tone of General Calonge's letter. It will be seen that he asserts that the "Tornado" has been submitted to the judgment of a Tribunal, the competence and legality of which the British Cabinet cannot but recognise, and that he elsewhere speaks of the crew as now justly prisoners.

Her Majesty's Government will not, of course, recognise the competence or legality of the Tribunal which are seriously impugned in the protest presented on behalf of the ship and owner; and as to that part of the letter which refers to the Judgment pronounced by the Tribunal, and speaks of the crew as prisoners, we would refer your Lordship to our last Report, in which we contested the validity of the Judgment as affecting either the ship or crew, and expressed our opinion that such Judgment should be treated as a nullity. The assertion by General Calonge that there is no failure by the Spanish Government in the fulfilment of its promises would not we think be warranted by a reference to his former despatches.

In answer to Mr. Hammond's letter covering the protest presented to the Spanish Tribunal on behalf of the ship and crew, we beg to report that the protest is an able exposure of the irregularities and injustices which vitiate and avoid the alleged sentence of the Spanish Prize Court, and with which, for the most part, we agree; and having been presented, as we understand it has been, on behalf of the owners and captain of the "Tornado," we think it has been judiciously presented, and that in any subsequent communication from Her Majesty's Government to the owners, or from Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid, or Consul at Cadiz, it will be right to express satisfaction at the course the owners and Captain have in this respect taken. But we think it will not be expedient at present for Her Majesty's Government to make any reference to the protest in any communication with the Spanish Government, or to any of the points therein argued, or any other points than those referred to in our Report of the 18th instant, namely, the sentence against a British vessel and British subjects without a hearing, especially after an assurance to the contrary by the Spanish Minister.

What further course it may be right to take should the sentence be annulled is a question of much difficulty, and we prefer postponing our opinion on it until it is known what answer is given by the Spanish Government to the representations now made by Her Majesty's Government.

In answer to Mr. Hammond's letter of the 24th instant, inclosing a letter from the Rev. J. Davidson, we beg to report that we think Mr. Davidson should be informed that your Lordship is taking prompt measures for the release of all the prisoners. We may add that it will not in our opinion be advisable to make a special formal application under existing circumstances for the release of any one of the prisoners in particular.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.

I agree generally to this Report. But I think that in lieu of the words, "Your Lordship is taking prompt measures for the release of all the prisoners," the following sentence should be substituted: "Your Lordship has insisted on the release of all the prisoners who shall not have been duly proved to have been engaged in the military service of Chile."

(Signed) ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 99.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received February 6.)

Lincoln's Inn, February 6, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 28th instant, stating that, with reference to our letter of the 18th ultimo, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying further despatches from Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid, relative to the case of the "Tornado;" and to request that we would furnish your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

We are also honoured with Mr. Egerton's letter of the 1st instant, transmitting the accompanying despatches from Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid, and from Her Majesty's Consul at Cadiz, which have been received at the Foreign Office respecting the case of the "Tornado."

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That this letter of General Calonge of the 21st of January does not meet the complaint made by Her Majesty's Government, which is that not merely an examination of witnesses, but a sentence, has taken place behind the backs of the parties accused, and against which they have had no opportunity of being heard.

In the second letter of General Calonge (22nd January), he states that "the case of the 'Tornado' is an affair between two parties, which is being followed up before a tribunal the competency of which the British Government has recognized, as it could do no less than recognize it, and as a sentence has been issued which is not definitive, and against which the condemned party may have recourse to the proper legal proceedings, it is the province of the condemned party to make use of those proceedings, if he shall think fit, within the term and in the manner prescribed by the Spanish law, to which law he is submitted."

These proceedings are here for the first time (as far as we are aware) described by the Spanish Government as proceedings which had been carried on against the "Tornado" by a private suitor, and not by the Spanish Government.

If by this it is intended to represent that the proceedings of the captors are to be treated as identical in character with the proceedings of mere private parties in a litigation, and that the Spanish Government have no other control over them than they would have over any private litigation, we dissent altogether from this representation.

The expression "the sentence is not definitive" appears to us to admit that a sentence has been pronounced, but that it is still subject to appeal. We have already pointed out in a former Report that the offer of an appeal against a sentence pronounced without affording a party interested the opportunity of being heard, does not, in our opinion, remove the injustice or nullity of the sentence.

It does not, however, appear necessary to us that your Lordship should make any reply to these letters until an answer has been received from the Spanish Government to the last despatch of your Lordship upon this subject.

In reference to Mr. Egerton's letter of the 1st February, it is right to observe that the explanation given by General Calonge in his letter of the 24th January of the reasons for refusing Mr. Dunlop access to the crew is not satisfactory, but on this point also it does not appear necessary to address the Spanish Government till the reply above referred to has been received.

Mr. Consul Dunlop's despatch to Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid of the 27th of January appears, however, to call for a prompt communication to Her Majesty's Minister. He states that there is reason to suppose that all the British subjects taken on board the "Tornado" will shortly be delivered over to Consul Dunlop, with a statement that they are released from their imprisonment, and pardoned by the Queen of Spain. If this should take place, we apprehend that the proper course of action will be for Consul Dunlop to receive them, but to do so without waiving the protest already made by Her Majesty's Government against the irregularity of the proceedings.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 100.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received February 6.)

Lincoln's Inn, February 6, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 4th of February instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Sir John Crampton, inclosing the translation of the answer of the Spanish Government to the protest which he was directed to present against the proceedings in the case of the "Tornado;" and to request that we would take the same into our immediate consideration, and report to your Lordship at our earliest convenience our opinion as to the course now to be observed by Her Majesty's Government.

For convenience of reference Mr. Hammond was pleased to inclose the printed collection of previous papers.

We are also honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 4th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith a despatch from Sir John Crampton, requesting instructions as to the course which should be pursued by Her Majesty's Consul at Cadiz in the event of the crew of the "Tornado" being consigned to him; and to request that we would take the same into our immediate consideration, and report to your Lordship at our earliest convenience our opinion as to what those instructions should be.

1867

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these matters into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That the gravamen of the complaint contained in the letter of Sir J. Crampton to General Calonge of the 21st January last, viz., that the sentence of the Spanish Tribunal of the 15th December last was pronounced without allowing those affected by it to be heard, and that the offer of an appeal did not remove the original injustice, remains without any satisfactory explanation.

Our opinion that such a sentence is null and void is unaltered. The only attempt at explanation is that the sentence is not "definitive." It is clear that this only means that it is open to appeal. Unless appealed from, it is final and conclusive. By virtue of it the "Tornado" or its proceeds will be distributed amongst the Commander, officers, and crew of the capturing vessel, and the crew of the "Tornado" are already by the same sentence prisoners, and as General Calonge states (19th January, 1867), "now justly prisoners."

The injustice of such a sentence is aggravated if the fact be as stated in the protest of the Captain (page 121 of printed papers) that the tribunal which has passed sentence in the first instance is to constitute the Court of Appeal.

Nor does General Calonge in the despatch now before us give any answer to the complaint that the sentence of condemnation was inconsistent with the promises given from time to time by Her Catholic Majesty's Government otherwise than by saying that the sentence is not a sentence.

The observations of General Calonge as to the independence with which every State acts in establishing the forms of proceeding in Prize cases, and as to the Assessor not being a Judge, and his Report only a proceeding which may serve as a foundation for his opinion, and for the information of the Court, may all be conceded for argument's sake, and yet the sentence of condemnation would remain open to all the objections already urged against it.

But we remain of opinion that the mode of proceeding adopted by the Assessor, and the evidence received and acted on by him, and the detention of the crew for five months during the preliminary proceedings, are also open to the objections already urged, though they are not of the same flagrant character as that of pronouncing the sentence of condemnation without allowing the parties interested to be heard.

In answer to the concluding passage in General Calonge's letter, that the Spanish Government cannot recognize in any foreign Government the right to substitute itself for one of the parties in a legal suit during the course of the proceedings, we would observe that the proceedings are concluded by a sentence subject only to an appeal, and that that sentence condemns several of Her Majesty's subjects to the condition of prisoners of war, and that Her Majesty's right to interfere on their behalf if that sentence is not within the limits established by civilized people (to use General Calonge's own words) is undoubted.

It is probably not necessary for us to enlarge on the other statements and arguments in General Calonge's letter. If our views as to the irregularity of the procedure and the nullity of the sentence are right, those statements and arguments are immaterial, and the answer to them obvious.

But we desire to make an observation on that part of General Calonge's letter which relates to the mode of procedure in the Spanish Court. It is contended by General Calonge—

1. That this is analogous to that of France.

2. That it is a matter solely within the cognizance of the Spanish law, and that the State whose ship has been seized without the territory of Spain has no right of interference or remonstrance in the matter.

We demur to both these statements.

First. The process of English and French Prize Courts is not substantially or materially different. Neither the French nor any other Prize Court of a civilized State pronounces sentence (and this is the very gist of our complaint) without judicial investigation, and without giving the owners of the captured vessel an opportunity of being heard; nor, indeed, does General Calonge when his statement is examined prove this point, for an "instruction" and a "judgment" are quite distinct things; and the statement of General Calonge that the Queen of England disposes of prizes made by Her Majesty's ships, omits the material fact that this disposition takes place after the regular sentence of a properly-constituted Court.

Secondly. The Prize Court of the belligerent, though constituted by municipal law, is bound to adopt a course of procedure which is not inconsistent with international law. The neutral State consents that the ship of his subject may be seized upon the high seas upon the faith and understanding that international and not municipal law shall be administered in the Prize Court—above all, upon the faith that the requirements of natural justice (which is the foundation of international law) shall be observed, and that neither a delay which is tantamount to wrong, nor a sentence pronounced in the compulsory absence of the parties interested, shall defeat the ends of that justice.

It remains for your Lordship's consideration what course should now be taken. If the Spanish Government had offered to annul the sentence, and to start either with or without the Report of the Assessor upon a new or open trial, regularly conducted before a competent tribunal, a question of some difficulty would have arisen. But it appears to us in existing circumstances, that if the Spanish Government adhere to the conclusion announced in the letter of General Calonge, nothing remains to be done but to insist on the nullity of this sentence which has been passed, the delivery up of the ship, and the release of the prisoners, as a necessary consequence of that nullity.

Whether in the particular circumstances compensation shall be hereafter demanded will be a matter for future consideration.

In answer to Mr. Hammond's second covering letter of the 4th, we have to report that the despatch of Consul Dunlop of the 27th January to Sir J. Crampton had already been forwarded to us with Mr. Hammond's letter of the 1st February, and that we had observed thereon in our Report of this day's date.

In addition we have only to say that the instruction to Mr. Dunlop contained in Sir J. Crampton's letter of the 30th of January to that gentleman appears to us to have been right; and we would further observe, that we think that whatever course the Spanish Government may take in delivering up the crew of the "Tornado," the Consul should only receive them as British subjects, and disclaim any power to waive the protest already delivered against the legality of the proceedings, whereby the vessel was declared void, and the crew prisoners of war.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 101.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received February 8.)

Lincoln's Inn, February 8, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 7th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a draft of the answer which your Lordship proposes to return to Sir J. Crampton's despatch No. 37, inclosing the reply of the Spanish Government to the protest made by Her Majesty's Government as to the proceedings in the case of the "Tornado," which despatch was referred to us on the 4th instant, and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would furnish your Lordship with our opinion whether the proposed instruction is right and proper.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this case into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we are of opinion that the proposed despatch is right and proper to be sent. We have suggested a few alterations which we have written in the margin of the despatch, and which we submit to your Lordship's consideration.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

P.S.—The Attorney-General and Queen's Advocate during the necessary absence of the Solicitor-General from London, have thought it expedient, as the matter was urgent, to send in the Report signed by themselves only.

No. 102.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received February 12.)

Doctors' Commons, February 11, 1867.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 6th instant, stating that with reference to my Report of the 4th of May last, relative to the refusal of the authorities at Bilbao to allow the burial in the British cemetery of a child of British parents of the Protestant religion, but which has been baptized by a Spanish priest, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid, inclosing a copy of the reply which he has received to the representation which he has been directed to address on the subject to the Spanish Government; and Mr. Hammond was to request that I would take this case into consideration, and report to your Lordship my opinion as to any further instructions which should be addressed to Sir J. Crampton thereon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That as far as I am able to understand the answer of General Calonge, it is to this effect: not that the plain language of the Treaty is not violated in the present instance, but that England persecuted Roman Catholics at the time when the Treaty was made, and therefore Protestants only could have been interested in the stipulation, and that Roman Catholic British subjects had a right to be buried in Spanish burial-grounds; and that Her Majesty's Government are now seeking to deprive them of that right; and, moreover, that the Treaty, thus interpreted according to its plain meaning, would be contrary to the ecclesiastical law of Spain.

It is obvious that here is no answer to the demand of Her Majesty's Minister. The Treaty refers to all Her Majesty's subjects, and has no reference whatever to their religious faith; it cannot be justly violated by alleging that it is contrary to the ecclesiastical laws of Spain; those laws may perhaps forbid the exercise of any religious rite whatever by the Minister of any Church but Rome, but such exercise is accorded by all Roman Catholic States, under limitations, to the subjects of other States. The further answer that the Spanish Government is maintaining the right of the British subject against the British Government, is simply to assert that the Roman Catholic priest, and not the parents of the child, have a right to dispose of the body of the child—perhaps as strong an instance of religious persecution as any exercise by Great Britain in 1667. The objection urged from the legitimate consequences of the claim of the Spanish priest is not touched, namely, that, according to this claim, a child baptised without the consent of the parent, or after its legitimate baptism by an English priest, would become (so to speak) equally the property of the Roman Church.

It is of course for your Lordship to decide whether the matter should be pressed further, but I venture to suggest that Sir J. Crampton should be instructed to reply that Her Majesty's Government find no answer whatever to their remonstrances in the letter of the Spanish Minister. That neither the plain language of the Treaty, nor the usage of international comity, nor the natural rights of parents over the bodies of their children ought to be set aside, in order to satisfy the unjust demands of the Spanish Church over foreign subjects. And perhaps it would be well to add, that the Spanish Minister's argument would deprive him of any ground of complaint if, either in England or in any of Her Majesty's Colonies, the English priest should insist that all Spanish Roman Catholic subjects dying in his parish, be buried in his churchyard according to the rights of his church.

I have, &c.
(Signed) ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 103.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received February 28.)

Lincoln's Inn, February 28, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 19th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the inclosed despatches from Sir John Crampton respecting the case of the "Tornado," of which that marked No. 48 contains the answer of the Spanish Government to the demand which he was instructed to make for the release of the crew, and Nos. 49 and 50, with Consul Dunlop's telegram Report of the release of the greater portion of the crew.

Mr. Hammond also inclosed a translation of the papers referred to in Sir J. Crampton's despatch No. 27 of the 25th ultimo, which we had not before had before us, among which he stated we should find the opinion of the Spanish lawyers on the proceedings; and in the same collection we should find, at page 19, the reply of the Court of Cadiz to the protest made by the captain of that vessel on the 14th January.

And, lastly, Mr. Hammond also inclosed a letter from Messrs. Isaac, Campbell, and Co., controverting the conclusions drawn from the "Sumario," as set forth in your Lordship's despatch No. 10, Confidential, of the 19th ultimo, and requesting that their letter may be presented to Parliament.

And Mr. Hammond was to request that we would take these several papers into our consideration, and furnish your Lordship with our opinion, as well in regard to the further instructions to be addressed in the present state of the case to Sir J. Crampton, as in regard to any reply which should be made to Messrs. Isaac, Campbell, and Co.'s letter previously to its being presented to Parliament, which the parties had been informed would be done in due course.

Mr. Hammond was also pleased to inclose a copy of the papers on the case of the "Tornado," which have already been presented to Parliament.

We are also honoured with Mr. Hammond's letter of the 22nd instant, transmitting to us the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid (No. 52, February 17), inclosing the reply of the Spanish Government to the note which he was instructed to address to them, maintaining the protest of Her Majesty's Government against the proceedings of the Prize Court at Cadiz in the case of the "Tornado," and requesting our consideration thereof.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have considered these papers, and have the honour to report—

That in reference to the several subjects mentioned in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 19th instant, we think further instructions should be addressed to Sir J. Crampton to the following effect:—

That while Her Majesty's Government are glad to learn that the greater part of the crew of the "Tornado" have been at length set at liberty, they must require the Spanish Government, without delay, to liberate the seven officers and one seaman who appear to be still, for some reason unknown to Her Majesty's Government, improperly detained as prisoners;

That Her Majesty's Government have to observe that, inasmuch as the so-called sentence decreed that the crew of the "Tornado" were to be delivered over as prisoners of war to the Spanish authorities, and as they have since been set at liberty, it is impossible any longer to maintain that the "Sumario" was not the formal sentence of a Court, but a mere preliminary investigation;

That Her Majesty's Government must again urgently press upon the Spanish Government that, as all the proceedings before the Court were null and void, for the reasons which Sir J. Crampton has been before instructed to state, the release of the ship and cargo unlawfully detained by the Spanish authorities in consequence of the so-called sentence of that Court, ought to be no longer delayed.

We have not thought it necessary to discuss the other subjects—some of importance—referred to in the opinions of the Spanish lawyers, and in the other papers which accompanied the first letter from Mr. Hammond.

That with respect to Messrs. Isaac, Campbell, and Co., we think it would be expedient that an answer should be sent them, calling their attention to the fact that on the 23rd January a letter was addressed to them by Mr. Hammond, stating "that Her Majesty's Government were advised that the circumstances disclosed during the investigation were, after making every reasonable deduction, ~~at~~ present, and until explained, such as to render it highly probable that the vessel was destined for the military service of Chile, and was conveying officers in the Chilean naval service to Chile; and if this should turn out to be so, her condemnation by the Spanish Prize Court, on due proof, would be legitimate exercise of the rights of the belligerent;" and that no explanation of these circumstances was offered by Messrs. Campbell and Co. (though there was a general denial in their letter of the 24th January, 1867),* till their letter of the 15th February, now under discussion.

We have also to observe that we understand your Lordship in the despatch No. 91

---

* Printed Correspondence, page 126, No. 106.

1867

addressed to Sir J. Crampton, pointed out for his guidance that some of the conclusions arrived at in the "Sumario," if established, might most properly be taken into consideration in determining the question whether the "Tornado" might or might not be liable to be condemned as lawful prize by a properly-constituted Court; and without discussing whether the statements of Messrs. Isaac, Campbell, and Co., in their letter of the 15th February, 1867, if duly established, furnish an answer or contradiction to the conclusions arrived at in the "Sumario," to which the despatch No. 91 specially refers, we remain of opinion that if those conclusions were legally established, they would be extremely important and cogent in determining the true character of the vessel seized.

And we are of opinion that it should be stated that the intervention of your Lordship on behalf of the owner of the "Tornado" with the Spanish Government, had been, and must, in the circumstances, continue to be exclusively founded upon the injustice and illegality of the proceedings which, whatever may be the real merits of the case, have been adopted by the Spanish authorities in the prosecution of their claim against the "Tornado."

The claim for indemnity made by Sir J. Crampton in his letter of the 11th of February, pursuant to your Lordship's instruction in your Lordship's despatch of the 8th February, ought not, we think, to be abandoned, but should not at present be further pressed.

We have also taken into consideration the letter of the 16th February of General Calonge to Sir J. Crampton, which has reached us while the papers accompanying Mr. Hammond's letter of the 19th instant were under our notice. It is of much importance, and assists to reduce the issues between the two Governments to definite points.

We agree that publicists have not laid down any positive forms of procedure for prize cases, but it is inaccurate to say, as General Calonge does, that when Treaties are found wanting, as most frequently happens in prize cases, the national law of the captor is applied.

The law then to be applied must, as General Calonge immediately afterwards admits, be based on principles universally admitted; and the law then assumes the character of public law, not the less because these principles may also happen to be in harmony with the national law of the captor.

The vital objections hitherto urged against the sentence have been founded on the procedure, more especially the delay in bringing the preliminary examination to a close, and the pronouncing a sentence of condemnation without hearing the parties.

To these main issues the answer of General Calonge as to the delay is, that it is immaterial, because, as his Government recognize their liability to indemnify the captured parties for losses which may have been unjustly caused, the investigation cannot be considered prejudicial because (as we understand his argument) if guilt is proved, no injustice will be done, and if innocence, there will be indemnification.

This argument cannot for one moment be accepted as an excuse for unjust delay. It might serve, if once admitted, as a foundation for the grossest injustice, and condemns itself.

With regard to the sentence of condemnation, without hearing the parties, the struggle now is evidently to prove that the sentence is not a definitive sentence, and works no prejudice, and is, in fact, the commencement of the litis contestatio.

The arguments are—

1. The sentence is only the expression of the result of the "Sumario," which is founded on the ship's papers, and in the examination of the captured parties themselves.
2. This examination is equivalent to a hearing.
3. That there is no litis contestatio till the sentence.

And lastly, that there is no prejudice from the lis beginning in the form of an appeal.

The second and third of these points are inconsistent with each other, but the objections to the whole of them have been so repeatedly urged by us that we think it unnecessary to repeat them. Though the form of procedure in prize cases justifies a preliminary examination, it does not sanction such a proceeding as that of the Spanish Government in the present case, or except it from the character already given it in your Lordship's previous despatches, as being in violation of natural justice.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 104.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received March 2.)

Lincoln's Inn, March 2, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 26th ultimo, stating that, with reference to previous correspondence on the case of the "Tornado," he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith a despatch from Sir John Crampton (No. 58), inclosing a copy of a letter which had been addressed to him by the master of the vessel, complaining of the conduct of the Spanish authorities at Cadiz in preventing the publication in a local paper of an article which he had written for the purpose of setting right certain statements publicly made respecting the trial of the "Tornado;" and to request that we would take this paper into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the nature of any instructions to be given to Sir John Crampton thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That if, as we assume, the laws regulating the press in Spain allow the Government or any of its officials to control the press, and to direct the exclusion of particular articles or communications, and if, as we also assume, such a direction has been given in reference to the communication of Captain Collier to the "Peninsular" newspaper, we think that Sir John Crampton might be properly instructed to state to Captain Collier that, while Her Majesty's Government regrets that incorrect and prejudicial statements should be allowed to be circulated in the public prints with reference to the "Tornado" and her master, and that any explanation or refutation of such statements should be excluded from the journals, as Captain Collier states, by order of the authorities, Captain Collier has no ground for appealing to Her Majesty's Government for assistance in the matter, and we think that Sir John Crampton should be directed not to interfere.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 105.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received March 2.)

Lincoln's Inn, March 2, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 27th ultimo, stating that, with reference to the case of the "Tornado," he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Consul at Cadiz (No. 15), inclosing a letter addressed to him by the liberated forty-nine men of the "Tornado," and also communications he has received from the eight men still in custody, the object of the former being to obtain compensation, that of the latter to obtain their release.

That Sir J. Crampton has been instructed to report the grounds on which the seven officers and one seaman are still detained as prisoners; and Mr. Hammond was to request that we would report to your Lordship our opinion as to any steps which should be now taken with reference to them.

We are also honoured with Mr. Hrmmond's letter of the 28th ultimo, transmitting a copy of a telegram received from Sir J. Crampton :—"Madrid, February 27th. The Spanish Minister for Foreign Affairs informs me that seven officers and one seaman of the 'Tornado' are detained by the Prize Court as witnesses for the accusation; the remainder of the crew were liberated because the defendants abandoned their right of retaining any of them as witnesses on their side."

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we are of opinion, as stated in our Report of the 28th ultimo, that the immediate liberation of the seven officers and one seaman should be required. The reasons assigned in the telegram for their detention makes this requisition, in our opinion, not less imperative than before.

The idea of detaining them as prisoners under the sentence appears from the telegram to be now abandoned, and the proposition that they should, after six months' detention, the lengthened examinations they appear to have been subjected to, and the decree that the crew were prisoners be further detained as witnesses, made, as it appears to us, for a particular purpose, ought not to be entertained by Her Majesty's Government.

1867

The statement made by General Calonge that part of the crew still detained are kept as witnesses, and that the remainder of the crew are liberated because the defendants abandoned their right of retaining them as witnesses on their side, cannot, we think, be accepted as truly representing the state of the case. This appears to be a statement made to justify if possible the contention of the General, that the "Sumario" was not a sentence, but a mere preliminary act or proceeding. There has been nothing before us to show that the release of the crew was conceded on the grounds stated by General Calonge.

The application for indemnity for the seamen is one of serious importance, but we think the question cannot be satisfactorily disposed of till the course to be finally taken by the Spanish Government in reference both to the remaining prisoners, and the ship is known, and we think that an intimation to this effect ought to be sent to the applicants.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 106.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received March 8.)

Lincoln's Inn, March 8, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 28th of February last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to acquaint us that, before sending instructions to Sir John Crampton on the case of the "Tornado," founded on our Report of the 28th ultimo, your Lordship would be glad to receive from us some further explanations as to the course which we recommend, and the grounds of our recommendation.

Mr. Hammond was also pleased to state that, as regards the communication to be addressed to the Spanish Government demanding the immediate liberation of the seven officers and one seaman still detained as prisoners, we shall have seen by his letter of that morning that the grounds on which those persons are still detained are, that they are required as witnesses for the prosecution in the further proceedings in the case.

That, as regards the ship, your Lordship is not sure whether you rightly understand us to report that Sir John Crampton should be instructed to demand its immediate release, not on the merits of the case, but merely on the ground that the sentence appended to the "Sumario" was defective, and therefore null and void, and that, consequently, the parties are not called upon to appeal against it, and to endeavour to quash it in due course of law, nor the Spanish Government at liberty to continue to proceed against the vessel, either as supporting the original sentence or by adopting a new course altogether. That, in point of fact, the original proceedings were so defective in form, and so inconsistent with justice and international right, that Her Majesty's Government are entitled to claim that the ship shall be immediately set free, and, if their claim is not admitted, take measures to enforce it.

That the consequences possibly involved in making such a demand as we suggest, are so serious, that your Lordship would wish to be assured that you clearly understand our opinion.

That your Lordship finds it more necessary to do so, because we say further in our Report that we remain of opinion that if the conclusions arrived at in the "Sumario"—and as yet they have not been set aside—were legally established, they would be extremely important and cogent in determining the true character of the vessel seized; and your Lordship wished to understand distinctly whether the illegality and injustice of the proceedings hitherto taken in the case would justify Her Majesty's Government in enforcing a demand for the liberation of the vessel, wholly irrespective of the merits of the case.

That if so, your Lordship would be glad also to be informed on what ground we recommend that the demand made by Sir John Crampton, not indeed by instruction from the Foreign Office, but under a misconception of the terms of the instruction of the 8th of February, should not at present be further pressed.

That if the release of the vessel is now to be demanded at all hazards, irrespective of the merits of the case, it may be doubted whether it would be necessary to notice, as we propose, the arguments in General Calonge's letter of the 16th of February, at all events in support of that demand, though they might properly be contested hereafter, if on the release of the vessel, if conceded, Her Majesty's Government should be advised by us to claim compensation for the owners.

Mr. Hammond was also pleased to state that your Lordship was also in some doubt as to the answer which should be returned to the owners. That if Her Majesty's Government demand the release of the vessel, it would seem useless to prosecute a controversy with the owners as to whether there were any grounds for proceeding against her; and it would seem unadvisable to state to them that Her Majesty's Government were continuing to argue the case on the ground of the injustice and illegality of the proceedings, when Sir John Crampton was instructed to cease from argument, but to insist on his demand for the absolute, immediate, and unconditional release of the ship.

We are also honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 3rd of March instant, stating that, with reference to the case of the "Tornado" now before us, he was directed by your Lordship to call our attention to the passages marked in the inclosed "Official Gazette" of Chile," which, though published on the 4th of October, was only received at the Foreign Office by the last mail.

That the translation of the first passage is as follows: "Three more vessels are to arrive in order to take our flag. Two of them superior to those which have been hitherto acquired."

That the translation of the second passage is as follows: "Vessels acquired by Chile. Telegraphic despatches. Valparaiso, September 27, 1866. Among the passengers brought by the steamer 'Santiago,' together with Don Ambrosio Rodriguez, came the officers Simpson, Fuentes, Castillo, and Guerrero. It appears that the 'Cyclone' will arrive in due course, and it is supposed beyond doubt that the 'Pampero' will arrive in like manner, seeing that she had no orders to approach ('pasar a') the Spanish coast, and consequently will have incurred no risk of being captured."

Mr. Hammond was at the same time to inclose to us a copy of a telegram sent yesterday to Sir John Crampton, desiring him to report on the present state of the proceedings in the case of the "Tornado," and he was also to inclose translated extracts of other Chilean newspapers relating to these two vessels.

Mr. Hammond was further pleased to state that to these papers he was to add a despatch received this morning from Sir John Crampton, reporting his conversation with General Calonge and Señor Retortillo on the subject of the continued detention of the officers and one seaman of the "Tornado."

We are also honoured with Mr. Hammond's letter of the 4th of March, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith, with reference to his letter of yesterday, a copy of a telegram received that morning from Sir John Crampton, giving an account of the present state of proceedings in the case of the "Tornado."

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this case into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That in reference to that part of Mr. Hammond's letter of the 28th February, in which we are desired to give further explanations as to the course which we recommended and the grounds of our recommendation, we beg leave to state:—

That in advising on this case we have always assumed that the sentence pronounced against the ship upon the "Sumario" operated as a sentence of condemnation of the vessel, and that, as regarded the crew, the sentence declared them to be prisoners of war, and that such sentence was final if not appealed against.

Such seems to us to be the obvious effect of the sentence (see the sentence itself, p. 92, of Blue Book), and such, so far as we can construe it by its language, appears to be its meaning, notwithstanding the constant endeavours of General Calonge to interpret it as a mere preliminary proceeding, and one of no effect, unless a definitive sentence is pronounced hereafter.

This being our view, we had to consider whether such a sentence was or was not valid, and, if invalid, what course should be adopted.

We judged it to be invalid, mainly, because the vessel was condemned, and the crew declared prisoners of war, without any hearing having taken place on behalf of owners or crew. In our opinion a sentence so pronounced was null and void, as being contrary to natural justice and international law. It followed, in our opinion, that British subjects and others on board what was primâ facie a British ship were illegally detained as prisoners under a void sentence, and on this ground we advised a protest against the judgment, and a demand for delivery up of the crew.

1867

We also advised that the restoration of the vessel should be demanded. When captured she was, apparently at least, a British vessel, owned by British subjects, and sailing under a British flag. She remained the property of those British subjects, unless the property was changed by a legal sentence.

The only sentence was, in our opinion, an illegal one, and void; and it followed, in our judgment, that it should be treated as no sentence, and that the vessel should be demanded. In this view of the case we did not deem it necessary to consider, nor had we the means of forming any safe opinion, whether, if valid proceedings had been adopted, and the vessel duly declared prize, there was evidence sufficient to warrant her condemnation.

If the sentence be, as we think it was, void, we do not think it can be made valid by subsequent confirmation. Indeed, as we understood, no confirmation would be needed, unless the owners chose to appeal.

On these premises our advice has been given, and we still think that our conclusions were correct, and that, as matter of right, Her Majesty's Government might interfere to demand restoration of the ship, as well as of the crew, detained under a void sentence.

Whether it would be proper to insist upon this right, and whether it should be insisted upon at this moment, are questions of discretion for Her Majesty's Government. On these questions we beg leave to offer the following remarks:—

The recent telegrams as to the state of proceedings contain new and important information.

If the proceedings already taken in the Spanish Law Courts had been taken under a mistake which might be rectified, and which it was intended to rectify in proceedings taken de novo, it would, in our judgment, be too much to say that Her Majesty's Government should altogether deny the competence of the proper Spanish Tribunal to investigate, with due observance of law and practice, the character of the vessel, even though the delay has been excessive.

Hitherto, and until the last papers sent to us, we were not aware that two appeals were actually pending against the legality and competency of the Court by which the existing sentence has been pronounced, and that the Spanish authorities (if the Court be held incompetent and without jurisdiction) intend to commence new proceedings or treat the affair administratively.

The detention of the remainder of the crew is now justified (telegram March 3, 1867), and the right to detain them re-asserted.

It is stated in the telegram that "the detention of part of the crew is grounded on the requirements of the captors of their evidence as witnesses, either in case the Prize Court is declared competent and the proceedings already had by it carried on to their term, or else in case the Prize Court is declared incompetent, and the affair is entered upon de novo, and treated administratively, or tried by other proceedings."

We think that, after the long detention of the crew that has already taken place, the right to keep any members of it should not be conceded. Even if the Spanish Government, as they now allege, are detaining certain of the crew, because their evidence may be wanted, we think that their release should still be insisted upon. The claim so to detain them might lead to their detention for an indefinite period. Our opinion has, however, already been expressed that the crew are really detained as prisoners of war under the sentence, which in the same telegram it is said, "the Spanish Government do not consider definitive," but it appears to us to be conclusive unless appealed against.

Following up the view already expressed as to the nullity of the sentence, we still think that the restoration of the vessel might be insisted upon. But, having regard to the statement that two appeals are pending, and to what is also stated as to the intention of taking proceedings de novo in the event of the incompetence of the Court being declared, it may deemed right, as matter of policy and discretion (while still insisting on the protest), to delay at present the claim for the return of the ship. The difficulty, however, of insisting on this will certainly be materially increased if the tribunal of appeal should hold that the First Court was competent, and has acted within the scope of its jurisdiction. The grave doubt that exists as to the true character and destination of the vessel (increased by some of the additional papers now sent us), will, however, probably determine your Lordship's course, and induce your Lordship not to insist on the restoration of the ship at this stage.

With respect to the answer which we advised your Lordship to send to the letter of Messrs. Isaac, Campbell, and Co., we have to state that your Lordship was pleased to ask what reply should be sent to their letter of the 15th of February, in which they complained of the despatch No. 91 (page 104, Blue Book) addressed by your Lordship to Sir John Crampton on the 19th January, 1867, and attempted to explain some of the matters adverted to by your Lordship in that despatch, which, as stated by your Lordship, might be extremely adverse to the claimants.

We thought that, in replying to that letter, your Lordship might properly advert to the previous correspondence with the owners to which we referred, and add that, without discussing the question whether the statements of Messrs. Isaac, Campbell, and Co., if established, answered or contradicted the conclusions arrived at in the "Sumario" to which special reference was made, those conclusions, if well founded, would be extremely important and cogent in determining the true character of the vessel; but that the intervention of Her Majesty's Government was exclusively founded upon the injustice and illegality of the proceedings which, whatever might be the real merits of the case, had been adopted by the Spanish authorities in the prosecution of their claim against the "Tornado."

We still think that this would be a proper reply to the letter of the 15th of February.

The writers appear to complain of your Lordship having taken a view hostile to them, on the merits of the case, and to urge that they were entitled to be treated as perfectly innocent owners of the vessel. The answer which we suggested was in conformity with Mr. Hammond's letter of the 23rd January, 1867 (No. 99), and was intended to apprise Messrs. Isaac, Campbell, and Co. that your Lordship was not discussing the merits of the case, and that the protest made by your Lordship was against the lawfulness of the sentence which had been pronounced without hearing the parties interested.

It seems to us that the true ground on which the protest was made should, under the circumstances, be again brought prominently to the notice of Messrs. Isaac, Campbell, and Co.

We do not think that it will be found, as suggested by Mr. Hammond in his letter of the 28th February, that we proposed that the arguments of General Calonge's letter of the 16th February should be noticed or replied to by a despatch embodying the comments made by us on those arguments. General Calonge's letter, however, having been sent to us, and views upon it requested, we thought it right to point out what we conceived to be the fallacies of the General's arguments contained in that despatch.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 107.

The Solicitor-General to Mr. Hammond.—(Received March 12.)

House of Commons, March 11, 1867.

Dear Sir,

THESE letters have been perused by the Law Officers, and subject to certain alterations shown by marginal notes and brackets, and which we suggest for consideration, have been approved of by them.

As time presses I have sent the letters in this evening, and a formal report shall be presented to-morrow.

Very faithfully yours,
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.

---

No. 108.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received March 14.)

Lincoln's Inn, March 13, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 7th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us, for any observations we may have to offer thereupon, the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Consul at Cadiz, inclosing a letter addressed to your Lordship by Mr. Mc Pherson, third mate of the "Tornado," disclaiming that he is a man of consequence in the Chilean service, and stating his reasons for having embarked on board that vessel.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the letter of Mr. Mc Pherson scarcely calls for any reply beyond an acknowledgment of its receipt, but there can be no objection to informing him that Her Majesty's Government cannot express any opinion upon, or discuss the several statements contained in, his letter; but Her Majesty's Government have insisted on his liberation and that of the rest of the crew.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 109.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received March 18.)

Lincoln's Inn, March 18, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of this day's date, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the following telegram received this morning from Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid:—"As stated in my telegram of yesterday, six of the crew of the 'Tornado' have been released, consequently everybody belonging to that vessel are now free except Captain Collier and McPherson, who are detained prisoners on parole, I presume as being liable to be proved Chilean officers, and consequently prisoners of war." And Mr. Hammond was to request that we would report our opinion, at our earliest convenience, on the facts disclosed in the telegram.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands, we have the honour to report—

That we are of opinion that the further detention of Captain Collier and of McPherson is unwarranted, and that their immediate liberation should be insisted on.

This opinion is founded, as we have frequently stated, on the nullity of the sentence pronounced against them. Nothing, therefore, turns on the merits of the case as against any of the prisoners, and we think the liberation of all should be equally insisted on. The telegram presents no new fact, and our opinion as stated in former Reports remains unaltered.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 110.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received March 21.)

Lincoln's Inn, March 21, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 16th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to us the accompanying further letter, dated the 14th instant, from Messrs. Saul Isaac, Campbell and Co., on the case of the "Tornado," in reply to a letter which was addressed to them, founded on our Report of the 12th instant, and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would report to your Lordship our opinion as to the answer which should be returned to this letter. A copy of a letter, which by your Lordship's direction, has been addressed in the meanwhile to them, and Part No. 2 of the Printed Papers in the case of the "Tornado," which have been laid before Parliament was also inclosed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands, we have the honour to report—

That having perused the letter already sent by Mr. Hammond to Messrs. Isaac, Campbell and Co., we think that an answer should be sent to those gentlemen to the following effect:—That the passage in the letter of these gentlemen with reference to the supposed opinion of the Law Officers, namely, that the refutation by Messrs. Isaac, Campbell and Co., of what they term "the unwarranted and ex parte allegations contained in the Cadiz Sumario, must have been found complete and conclusive," is wholly inaccurate and unfounded.

That your Lordship is advised, and concurs in the advice, that a satisfactory conclusion cannot be arrived at as to the merits of this case upon any statements or documents which are now before your Lordship, and that it was upon this ground that these gentlemen were informed in the letter of the 12th March, that while the protest for the reasons pointed out had been, and still is, maintained, Her Majesty's Government had entirely refrained from discussing the merits of the case with the Spanish Government. That for the same reasons your Lordship must continue to decline to express any opinion whether this vessel was, or was not, liable to be captured on the high seas by a Spanish man-of-war, and condemned by a Prize Court, in a regular course of procedure. Your Lordship might add, that in the present state of things it would be premature for your Lordship to come to any decision, whether, regard being had to all the circumstances of this case, any demand for compensation or redress, should, or should not, be made to the Spanish Government.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 111.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received March 28.)

Lincoln's Inn, March 28, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 27th March instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to acquaint us that Mr. Gregory, the member for the county of Galway, had given notice of his intention to ask your Lordship this day, "if it is the intention of Her Majesty's Government to bring to justice the owners of the 'Cyclone' for their violation of the Foreign Enlistment Act;" and to request that we would report immediately to your Lordship our opinion as to the answer which you should make.

Mr. Hammond was pleased to add, that with reference to this question it might be convenient, to us, to be referred to the passages marked at pages 103 and 121 of the Ist Part of the "Tornado" papers.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we are of opinion that your Lordship's answer should be to the effect that Her Majesty's Government has not at the present time evidence which will justify them to take proceedings against the owners of the "Cyclone" for a violation of the Foreign Enlistment Act. The information which Her Majesty's Government have received is derived chiefly from statements made by Commodore Powels to the Secretary of the Admiralty, dated 3rd December, 1866, and from paragraphs contained in certain Chilean newspapers; and though these statements, if capable of due corroboration by evidence, would appear to implicate Messrs. Isaac, Campbell and Co. in the commission of an offence against the Foreign Enlistment Act, they do not constitute proof which would warrant Her Majesty's Government in instituting any proceedings at present against these gentlemen under the statute.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

No. 112.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received April 10 )

Lincoln's Inn, April 10, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 9th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us with reference to his letter of the 8th instant, copies of correspondence which passed last year between the Foreign Office and the Spanish Legation in London, by which we should perceive that the "Victoria" and "Arapiles" have been acknowledged as being building for the Spanish Government. That your Lordship apprehends that this acknowledgment, coupled with the continued existence of a state of war between Spain on the one part, and Chile and Peru on the other, in which her Majesty is neutral, is of itself sufficient to justify Her Majesty's Government in preventing the vessels from leaving this country, an instruction to which effect has been given to the Commissioners of Customs. That if we should be of opinion that some further and more specific information is required, Mr. Hammond was to request that we would acquaint your Lordship without delay what that information should go to establish.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands, we have the honour to report—

That we infer from the letters of the Spanish Minister to Lord Clarendon of January 23rd and February 3rd, 1866 (though we have not Lord Clarendon's letter referred to in the latter), that these ships have in fact been built with the knowledge, and with the acquiescence of Her Majesty's Government, during the time that a state of war existed between Spain and Chile. We think, however, that this acquiescence did not amount to a leave and license within the Foreign Enlistment Act, and that consequently the equipment of these vessels is an infringement of that Act; but it will be for your Lordship to consider whether, under the circumstances, it will be proper to put in force its provisions.

But apart from the provisions of the Foreign Enlistment Act we would call your Lordship's attention to the general law, by which, when war is imminent though not declared, it is competent to Her Majesty's Government to lay an embargo on vessels in Her Majesty's ports belonging to the State, or the subjects of the State, with which war is so imminent.

This course has been pursued repeatedly on former occasions. (The authorities are collected in 3 Phillimore's "International Law" c. 3, p.36.)

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 113.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received April 10 )

Lincoln's Inn, April 10, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's of the 8th April instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to acquaint us that he had received information from the Board of Admiralty that there are at present two Spanish iron-clads fitting out in the river and nearly ready for sea; and that he was to request, with reference to Her Majesty's Proclamation of neutrality in the war between Spain and Chile and Peru, and with reference also to the circumstances that two Chilean iron-clads are now under detention in the river, that we would report to your Lordship our opinion whether it would not be right and proper to detain under the Foreign Enlistment Act these two Spanish vessels, and if so, what steps it will be competent to Her Majesty's Government to take for doing so.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we think it will be right and proper to detain under the Foreign Enlistment Act the two Spanish vessels in question. We assume that there is no doubt they are being equipped, furnished, and fitted out as vessels of war, and for the service of Spain, and as Spain is at war with Chile and Peru, with neither of which countries is England at war; we think that there is just ground for concluding that the ships are being so equipped, furnished, and fitted out with intent to commit hostilities against one or both of those Powers.

We should add, however, that if these vessels are seized and proceedings taken under the Foreign Enlistment Act for their condemnation, the questions will again be raised which were discussed in the case of the "Alexandra," Regina v. Sillem and others, and which cannot be considered as settled. But we think that as it is probable that one vessel at least may depart at once with the view in all probability of fitting out and completing her armament beyond the limits of this kingdom, that the Government may reasonably incur the risk of a decision against the validity of the seizure when the case comes to be tried.

The course of proceedings will be for some officer of Her Majesty's Customs or Excise, or of Her Majesty's Navy, empowered to make seizures under the Laws of Customs and Excise or under the Laws of Trade and Navigation to seize the ships, and then for proceedings to be prosecuted against them in like manner as if they had committed a breach of the Revenue Laws or of the Trade and Navigation Laws.

The whole of this is regulated by the 7th section of the Foreign Enlistment Act 59 Geo. III, c. 69.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No 114.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received April 10.)

Lincoln's Inn, April 10, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 3rd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the correspondence which has passed respecting the case of the "Tornado" since the date of our Report of the 8th ultimo, concurring in the instructions proposed to be sent to Sir J. Crampton, and which were sent to him on the 12th of March.

That in this correspondence, which is included in Parts III, IV, and V of the Papers, and in a further collection not yet published, we should find various letters which have passed between the Foreign Office and the owners, the letter to them of the 21st of March being founded on our Report of the 21st of that month; a reference to the appearance in the Chilean Navy List of the name of John McPherson (Part III, page 6); the depositions sworn by the crew on the 23rd of February (Part IV, page 1); translations of the Papers given by the Spanish Government to Sir J. Crampton in February last (Part IV, page 4); a statement given to Sir John Crampton by the Advocate of the owners, Señor Retortillo, explaining the different appeals now in progress (Part V, page 31); translation of the further sentence of the Court of Cadiz confirming the previous sentence of the 15th of December (page 1 of the further Papers); a despatch from Consul Dunlop containing a Report of the further examination of a portion of the crew at Cadiz (page 40 of the further Papers).

That these several papers will show the present state of the case as regards the vessel; and that as regards the crew, we should find that all have been set free, and they are stated by the owners to be on their way home, with the exception of McPherson and Captain Collier, who are stated by Sir John Crampton to be still detained.

That we should see that the second decision of the Prize Court says of the crew: "although they ought to be considered as prisoners of war, let it be according to the decision of Her Catholic Majesty's Government" (Part V, page 31).

And Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take the case, as now set forth in the Papers now transmitted to us, into consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion as to what steps should now be taken by Her Majesty's Government. The answer of the Spanish Government to the despatch of March 12, Mr. Hammond was pleased to add, has not yet been received.

We are also honoured with Mr. Hammond's letter of the 4th instant, transmitting further papers in this case.

We are also honoured with Mr. Hammond's letter of the 5th instant, transmitting a further despatch from Sir J. Crampton, inclosing a translation of the second sentence of the Prize Court in the case of the "Tornado," and commenting on the detention of Captain Collier and McPherson.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

1867

That until the arrival of the answer of the Spanish Government to your Lordship's despatch of the 12th of March, we shall not be in a condition to tender our full advice upon the whole case.

That it appears that all the crew, with the exception of J. McPherson, have been set free.

We remain, notwithstanding these further papers, of opinion that the release of this person should be still insisted upon. It does not appear upon what ground Captain Collier has been released.

With respect to the intimation contained in the letter of Daniel McPherson (March 30) to your Lordship, namely, that there is a probability that the Spanish authorities may "decide to propose a new trial of the case against the "Tornado," we can only at present observe that, in the event of any such proposal being made, it will be matter for very serious consideration whether it should or should not be acceded to. All the subjects referred to in Mr. D. McPherson's letter, together with all the circumstances of the case, will then of course, be before us.

It appears to us that at present the letter of Mr. D. McPherson requires only a simple acknowledgment from your Lordship.

With respect to the alleged taking away from Robert Kinlop, the carpenter, of his tools, &c.,—property said to be worth 50*l*.—this appears to us to be a part of the greater question, whether any indemnity should be demanded on behalf of the crew: first, on the ground of detention or ill-usage; secondly, on the ground of deprivation of property; and we think that this question is not at present ripe for decision.

We should not omit to notice the fact of the second sentence. It implies that the former proceedings on the 15th of December, following the Auditor's Report, were, and operated as, a sentence or decree affecting vessel and crew, and confirms our former opinion.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 115.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received April 12.)

Lincoln's Inn, April 12, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 10th instant, stating that with reference to his letter of the 8th instant, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Consul at Cadiz, inclosing a copy of a despatch which he has addressed to Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid, stating that McPherson has been ordered into the interior as a Chilean prisoner of war; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take these papers into consideration and report to your Lordship our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the despatch from Her Majesty's Consul at Cadiz does not, nor does the copy of the despatch therein inclosed from the Consul to Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid, alter, in our opinion, the course to be taken in reference to McPherson as advised in our former Reports.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 116.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received April 17.)

Lincoln's Inn, April 17, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 6th April instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Mr. Dunlop (No. 25, April 1) inclosing affidavits made by Portuguese subjects that the "Tornado" was seized in neutral waters, and also a letter from Captain Collier, inclosing a chart marking out where the "Tornado was captured; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take the papers into consideration together with the papers already before us.

We were also honoured with a further letter from Mr. Hammond dated the 8th April instant, in which he stated that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit the accompanying despatches relative to the case of the "Tornado" which had just been received from Sir John Crampton: and to request that we would take them into our immediate consideration.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers submitted to us into consideration and have the honour to report—

That with respect to the first letter from Sir John Crampton (March 25, 1867, No. 82) we have the honour to report that we entirely agree with the opinion expressed by his Excellency in the matter of this Portuguese subject forcibly taken and detained on board the "Tornado."

We think the letter of the Portuguese Consul perfectly proper, and we must add that Mr. Dunlop has been betrayed by his apparent excess of zeal into the adoption of a tone in his letter to the Portuguese Consul which cannot be justified. The alleged misconduct of Captain Collier with respect to this Portuguese subject has no connection whatever with the subsequent conduct of the Spanish authorities in reference to the "Tornado."

If, as appears most probable, this Portuguese was so taken by the Captain, he is undoubtedly entitled to recover damages against the Captain, and the letter of the Portuguese Consul states fairly and temperately the case.

2. With respect to the second letter from Sir J. Crampton (March 26, 1867, No. 84) and the letter of Captain Collier, March 30, 1867 (both with inclosures), on the subject of the capture (as now insisted upon) having been made within the neutral waters of Funchal, we have to offer the following observations:—

(a.) That this claim for exemption from the exercise of the belligerent rights on the ground of the neutrality of the place of capture ought properly to be made by the neutral State, and not by the State to which the captured vessel is alleged to belong.

This is the clear rule of international law between belligerents; and though it be competent to a neutral State to allege that the vessel said to be the property of her subject, was not captured in a place where the right of the belligerent could be lawfully exercised, nevertheless the captor may reply that he has evidence to prove that the vessel was not the property of the subject of the neutral State but of his enemy, and that if any reclamation is to be made on this ground it can only be made by the other neutral, whose territorial rights have been infringed.

(b.) That the fact itself if not urged by the neutral is one to be urged by the claimant before the Prize Court.

(c.) That the fact itself as to the place of seizure is a matter of dispute, and the statements of the claimants cannot be accepted as disproving the counter-statements made by the captors.

3. That with respect to the third letter of Sir J. Crampton (30th March, 1867, No. 90) and the inclosures in it, as to Captain Collier not being permitted to publish his account of the capture of the "Tornado" in a Spanish newspaper, we have already had the honour to report to your Lordship our opinion that this is a matter altogether within the discretion of the Spanish authorities, and that it is not expedient that your Lordship should address any remonstrance on the subject to them.

4. That with respect to the fourth letter of Sir J. Crampton and the inclosures in it (April 1, 1867, No. 92), as to the re-examination of the crew, and to the letter of Consul Dunlop on the some subject, dated March 26, 1867, we think it unnecessary to offer any observations.

5. With respect to the fifth letter from Sir John Crampton and the inclosures in it (April 5, 1867, No. 96), the reply of General Calonge may be considered under two heads:—

(1.) The retention of McPherson, notwithstanding the liberation of the Captain and crew, a matter upon which Mr. Hammond's letter of the 12th April, contains further important information, and on which, therefore, we propose to report in answer to that letter.

(2.) The alleged inconsistency of your Lordship in claiming restitution of the vessel on the ground of the nullity of the pretended judicial proceedings, and yet waiting for the sentence upon them.

The answer on this latter point appears to us simple and obvious.

1867

As your Lordship was apprized that a proceeding was pending which might declare the sentence null and void, Her Majesty's Government, without waiving any right, thought it prudent not to have recourse to extreme measures until the result of this proceeding was ascertained, which might render recourse to such measures unnecessary. The exact grounds of this forbearance are stated in your Lordship's despatch to Sir J. Crampton of the 12th March.

6. That with respect to the sixth letter from Sir J. Crampton, and the inclosures in it (1st April, 1867, No. 97), we propose to report in answer to Mr. Hammond's letter of the 12th April.

7. That with respect to the last letter from Sir J. Crampton, and the inclosures in it (5th April, 1867, No. 98), we think that the course pursued by his Excellency has been right and proper.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 117.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received April 18.)

Lincoln's Inn, April 18, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 12th instant, stating that, with reference to the papers in the case of the "Tornado" now before us, and to our Reports of the 10th instant and 12th instant, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us some further papers which have been received, among which we should find the letter from Captain McKillop of the Royal Navy to the First Lord of the Admiralty, setting forth certain facts which would seem to place beyond doubt that the "Tornado" equally with the "Cyclone" was the property of the Chilean Government, and intended for purposes of war.

That your Lordship would be glad to receive our opinion on this last named paper, and, with reference to it, and to the opinions which we maintain in our recent Reports as well as former ones that Her Majesty's Government should persist in demanding the release of McPherson, Mr. Hammond was to request that we would inform your Lordship whether, assuming that Captain McKillop's statement in his letter as to the ownership of the "Tornado" is correct, and assuming that the condemnation of the vessel as Prize is a point which Her Majesty's Government are not prepared to say they will not allow, and which if they did allow would seem to carry with it the right of the Spanish Government to deal with all persons found on board her as prisoners of war, Her Majesty's Government ought now to press for the immediate release of McPherson, and if so, on what ground, with the knowledge which they possess and which must presently be imparted to Parliament, the question of McPherson's release can be peremptorily pressed on the Spanish Government.

Mr. Hammond was also pleased to add that since the above was written, your Lordship received the further letter inclosed forwarding a statement made by a person named Trotter, of a conversation with John McPherson respecting the "Tornado."

We are also honoured with Mr. Hammond's letter of the 13th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit a despatch from Sir J. Crampton inclosing a copy of the reply which General Calonge made to a question made to him in the Spanish Congress, on the case of the "Tornado;" and also a despatch from Consul Dunlop inclosing a further letter from the Agent of the owners on the present state of the proceedings of the case.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we have taken into our consideration the severals sets of papers transmifted to us by Mr. Hammond; and, in reference to Sir J. Crampton's despatch of the 18th March (No. 77), we remain of opinion that it will not be expedient at this moment to press more distinctly than has already been done, the question of indemnity to the officers and crew of the "Tornado" and in connection with the same subject, we would observe that the claim of Gilbert Porteous on Isaac, Campbell and Co., for wages, is not one that can be enforced or insisted on by Her Majesty's Government against Isaac, Campbell and Co, but must be left, if the parties differ, to the decision of a Court of Law, and that Porteous's claim for indemnity against the Spanish Government must be disposed of in common with the claims of the other officers and crew of the "Tornado," and is, for the present, covered by the demand for indemnity already made on their behalf.

In reference to Sir John Crampton's despatch of the 8th April (No. 79), we think as expressed in previous Reports that the Spanish Government is free to regulate the press of their own country, and that the refusal to publish Captain Collier's pamphlet is not a ground on which Her Majesty's Government can properly offer any remonstrance to the Spanish Government.

The observations made in the Congress of Deputies on the subject of the "Tornado" do not appear to call for any particular observation from us; and the fact that McPherson has been ordered into the interior as a prisoner of war, does not alter the character of the controversy in any respect. The lawfulness of this order depends on the right of the Spanish Government originally to treat him as a prisoner of war.

The subject of the despatch of Mr. Consul Dunlop of the 7th April (No. 27), namely, the alleged fact that the capture of the "Tornado" by the "Gerona" took place in Portuguese waters, has been considered and reported on by us in our Report of yesterday's date.

There remains only for consideration, the important additional evidence now transmitted to us on the question whether the "Tornado" is really a Chilean, and not a British vessel, and whether McPherson is an officer in the Chilean Naval Service. As to the statement of Francis Trotter forwarded to your Lordship by Mr. Brearey, we think it cannot be absolutely relied on, though it may be substantially accurate. Trotter speaks of having known one Daniel McPherson several years ago in Spain, and then, assuming that this was the same person as William McPherson now detained as a Chilean prisoner of war, he narrates a supposed admission made by William McPherson to Jenkins, Chief Engineer of the Spanish Government, and communicated by Jenkins to Trotter. Without in the least doubting Trotter's accuracy, we think such a hearsay statement, coming through the medium of an Engineer in the Spanish Service, cannot at present be accepted as conclusive. Further information might perhaps be obtained from Trotter.

But the letter of Captain McKillop, R.N., of the 12th instant, to the First Lord of the Admiralty, appears to us to go far to establish the warlike character and destination of the "Tornado." It is possible, however, that the property in the ship had not been actually transferred from Messrs. Isaac, Campbell and Co., to the Chilean Government, and that the contract was not completed by payment and delivery of possession; and so long as any reasonable doubt remains whether this vessel, sailing from a British port, with British papers and crew, and under the British flag, and ostensibly bound to a neutral port, is really what she, primâ facie, appears to be, and so long as this vessel remains uncondemned by the sentence of a proper Prize Court, passed with due observance of law, Her Majesty's Government are, we think, entitled to insist that the ship should be treated as British, and, consequently, that every person on board her, including, if such there be, Chilean subjects or others engaged in the military or naval service of Chile, shall be set free. If the letter of Captain McKillop contains correct information it leads strongly to the conclusion that the vessel was being sent out to be used as a ship-of-war by the Chilean Government, and that the information furnished from time to time by Isaac, Campbell and Co., to Her Majesty's Government has neither been candid nor accurate.

We have always advised that the real error of the Spanish authorities was, thus after undue delay in conducting the proceedings in the Prize Court, even if properly constituted, a Judgment was pronounced without the claimants being heard in the defence.

In Consul Dunlop's letter of the 8th April a letter from the agent of Isaac, Campbell and Co. (Mr. Daniel McPherson), is sent to be forwarded to your Lordship immediately.

Mr. Daniel McPherson adverts to the possibility of the former proceedings being no longer insisted on by the Spanish Government, and of the matter being submitted to new trial; and his legal adviser, whose opinion he cites, earnestly protests against any such course being taken.

This brings us to the consideration of a very delicate and important question.

As we have already said, the statement of Captain McKillop, confirmed to some extent by that of Trotter, tends to show that the "Tornado" is really a Chilean vessel.

Will it be right then for Her Majesty's Government, with the knowledge now possessed by them, to refuse—should such a proposal be made by the Spanish Government—to allow the proceedings already taken to be waived and a new and proper trial to be had?

We think that in this case it cannot be said that the original seizure was unlawful, or that the proceedings taken, although, in our judgment, informal and unjust, were illusory or intentionally irregular; and in these respects we may observe the case differs entirely from that of the "Queen Victoria" on which we have recently advised. If, therefore, a fair proposal should be made on behalf of the Spanish Government for a new judicial investigation of the case we think that the good-faith which regulates the intercourse between Government and Government would (to say the least) justify Her Majesty's Government in assenting to such a proposal: the more so, because, with all the knowledge now possessed by the Government with respect to the vessel, it seems more than probable that if proper proceedings after the original seizure had been taken she would have been justly condemned as good prize.

We would suggest, therefore, to your Lordship the expediency, before taking any further step, of ascertaining from Sir John Crampton whether he is aware of any intention on the part of the Spanish Government to take this course.

We think, however, that in the present juncture, notwithstanding the further information with reference to the character and position of the vessel and the engineer McPherson, still detained as a prisoner of war, that the demand for his liberation should not be waived, although it should not at this moment be further insisted on.

If the Spanish Government still insist on the so-called sentence as the ground for detaining McPherson a prisoner of war, we think that such position, having regard to our view that such sentence is illegal and void, cannot be maintained. McPherson, the engineer, was taken from a ship under British flag, upon the high seas, against which ship no legal sentence of condemnation has been pronounced.

Until the presumption arising from this state of things is displaced, we think that McPherson cannot, in strict law, be treated as a prisoner of war; and if he is not legally a prisoner of war, the right of Her Majesty's Government, arising from the fact of his being taken from a British ship, to demand his restoration, appears to us to remain in strictness unimpaired.

If, indeed, the Government acting administratively, think fit to admit that the "Tornado" was a Chilean vessel of war, and that McPherson was a Chilean engineer, a question of much gravity will arise.

On the one hand, if the Spanish Government are allowed to disregard the obligation to give a fair hearing to claimants in their Prize Courts on the present occasion, they may claim a similar license on other occasions when the neutral character of the captured ship is not doubtful. On the other hand, there is the difficulty of peremptorily insisting on the restoration of a ship which Her Majesty's Government would then know to have been lawfully captured, though informally condemned, and of insisting on indemnity to persons whose illegal conduct would then appear to have originated the whole of the "Tornado" difficulty between the two countries. The question will be one of great difficulty. The solution of it may perhaps be assisted by the course taken by Spain in relation to the "Victoria." It would, however, be a question of policy, and is perhaps not strictly within our province, though having regard to its great importance and natural connection with the legal circumstances of the case we have ventured to draw the attention of your Lordship to it.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 118.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received April 20.)

Lincoln's Inn, April 20, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 16th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter from Messrs. Isaac, Campbell and Co., dated the 15th instant, requesting that Her Majesty's Government would insist upon the immediate release of the "Tornado," and the payment of 25,000*l*. as compensation, as well as reimbursement of the amount of wages paid by them to the crew; and he was to request that we would take this letter into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer which should be returned to Messrs. Isaac, Campbell and Co.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we are of opinion that Messrs. Isaac, Campbell and Co. should be informed, in reply to their letter to your Lordship of the 15th April, that the requisition thereby made by them on Her Majesty's Government to insist without further delay, on the Spanish Government compensating them for their personal losses and outlays in connection with the "Tornado," is one which Her Majesty's Government in present circumstances declines to entertain.

We think also, that a copy of the letter of Captain McKillop and the communication of Mr. Trotter should be sent to Messrs. Isaac, Campbell and Co., and that they should be apprized that Her Majesty's Government are of opinion that these communications have an important bearing on the questions both of the character of the vessel, and of the true position and status of McPherson; that your Lordship will duly consider any explanation which Messrs. Isaac, Campbell and Co. may think fit to offer thereon; but that if Her Majesty's Government should be eventually convinced that the ship was at the time of its original seizure either a Chilean ship, or had been expressly built for the purpose of being employed as a ship of war in the Chilean service, and was really on her way to her Chilean destination at the time of her capture, and that therefore not only was the original seizure lawful, but that if the procedure of the Spanish Prize Court had been consistent with international law, the condemnation would have been just; then, although Her Majesty's Government reserve to themselves the right to take such proceedings as they may consider proper to vindicate the interests of public justice, they will not be disposed to press upon the Spanish Government the personal claims to compensation of the owners of any such vessel, inasmuch as it would then appear that Messrs. Isaac, Campbell and Co. had placed themselves in a position which would preclude them from claiming the intervention or assistance of Her Majesty's Government.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 119.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received May 11.)

Temple, May 11, 1867.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 9th instant, stating that, with reference to my Report of the 1st December, 1865, and to previous correspondence on the case of the Spanish vessel "America," condemned by the Mixed Commission Court at Sierra Leone, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me a letter and its inclosures which your Lordship has received from Messrs. Hampton and Burgin, on behalf of the owners of that vessel, together with a draft of the answer which your Lordship proposes to return to their application; and Mr. Egerton was to request that I would take these papers into consideration, and report to your Lordship whether I concur in the intended reply.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I do concur in the proposed reply, to which I have attached my initials.

I have, &c.
(Signed) ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 120.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received May 23.)

Lincoln's Inn, May 22, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 8th of May instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us two further letters, dated the 6th instant, from Messsrs. Isaac, Campbell and Co., inclosing certain affidavits which had been made in the case of the "Tornado;" and to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion upon those papers, and at the same time that we would inform your Lordship whether it will not be proper at all events, to say that those points must be urged before the Tribunal in Spain by the parties interested.

1867

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we think your Lordship's answer should be confined to informing Messrs. Isaac, Campbell and Co., that your Lordship has received and read the affidavits inclosed, which relate to only one of the many incidents of the case; but that your Lordship has no power to decide upon the accuracy of the facts which they state, or the value of the evidence which they adduce, respecting the hole cut in one of the berths of the "Tornado."

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 121.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received May 23.)

Lincoln's Inn, May 22, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 9th instant, stating that with reference to his letter of the previous day's date, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter dated the 7th instant, which your Lordship had received from the Lords of the Committee of Privy Council for Trade, containing information respecting John McPherson, one of the crew of the "Tornado."

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That with regard to this paper from the Board of Trade we wish to observe that all the circumstances of the case being considered, it does not appear to us desirable that the Board of Trade should be instructed to prosecute Captain Collier for a breach of the 150th and 158th sections of the Merchant Shipping Act.

We agree with the inference drawn by the Board of Trade from the printed papers as to McPherson being engaged in the Chilean service. We think that further inquiry by the Board of Trade is not at present expedient, and it appears to us also that no advantage can result from publishing Mr. Farrer's letter, or the substance of it.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 122.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received May 23.)

Lincoln's Inn, May 22, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 6th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the inclosed despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid (No. 125), containing the answer of the Spanish Government to the inquiry which he was instructed to make on the 23rd ultimo, as to their intentions with regard to a fresh trial in the case of the "Tornado;" and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take the same into consideration, and furnish your Lordship with our opinion as to whether this declaration is satisfactory.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the answer of General Calonge to Sir J. Crampton on the question of a new trial is not without weight, and is sufficient to justify Her Majesty's Government, under the circumstances of the case, not to do more, pending the appeal by the claimants, than to instruct Sir J. Crampton to apprise General Calonge that while Her Majesty's Government will leave to the Spanish Government, or to their legal authorities, to determine what is the proper tribunal for hearing and deciding the case of the "Tornado," yet that the nullity of the sentence already pronounced must be insisted upon by Her Majesty's Government as a matter of public policy irrespective of the merits of the case; and probably Sir J. Crampton might be able to convey to General Calonge the views of Her Majesty's Government that a new trial and judgment, after hearing the claimants, would put the Spanish Government right not only in the eyes of England but of all civilized States, without any derogation from the rights which a State claiming to be captors of an enemy's ship is entitled to.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 123.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received May 23.)

Lincoln's Inn, May 23, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 30th April last, stating that, with reference to our report of the 18th ultimo respecting the case of the "Tornado," he inclosed for our information a despatch founded on that report which your Lordship addressed to Sir John Crampton on the 20th ultimo (No. 73), and a letter of the same date to Messrs. Isaac, Campbell and Co., with their respective answers.

Mr. Hammond was also pleased to inclose a despatch from Consul Dunlop, dated the 15th ultimo, forwarding a document received from the agent of the parties respecting the bearing which the case of the "Alice Ward" has upon the proceedings at Cadiz in the case of the "Tornado."

Mr. Hammond also inclosed a despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires in Chile, dated the 9th March, giving some particulars that he has succeeded in obtaining there respecting the "Tornado;" and stated that the foregoing papers are embodied in the Part VII of the "Tornado" papers, presented on the 30th of April to the House of Commons, therewith inclosed (see pages 47 to 57).

Mr. Hammond was also pleased to inclose a confidential Memorandum of information, obtained through the Treasury, respecting the character and object of the "Tornado," which, however, will not be published, at all events at present; and to request that we would take these papers into consideration, and report to your Lordship such observations as may occur to us on the statements contained in them.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into consideration, and have the honour to report.

That a perusal of these papers tends to confirm the opinion which we have had the honour to express in our previous reports on the subject of the "Tornado;" and they do not appear to call for further observation from us beyond saying that the case of the "Alice Ward," referred to in the document received by Consul Dunlop from the agent of the parties, and forwarded by him to your Lordship, does not change our views as to the proceedings at Cadiz in the case of the "Tornado."

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 124.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received May 23.)

Lincoln's Inn, May 23, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands, signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 24th of April last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith, for any observations which may occur to us, the accompanying translation of the pamphlet regarding the proceedings and appeals in the Spanish Courts in the case of the "Tornado," which has been published by the parties interested in that vessel, as stated in the letter of Messrs. Isaac, Campbell and Co., which forms Paper No. 8 of Part V of the "Tornado" Papers.

1867

In compliance with your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That the principal object of the pamphlet, as also that of the report of the Fiscal referred to in another report which we have had the honour to make, is to establish that questions of prize are not tried in Spain before any judical tribunal, but are disposed of administratively as questions of public policy by the Crown and the Government. It is very probable that a close investigation of the subject would show that there exists no substantial difference between the mode of deciding whether a vessel be lawful prize or not, in Spain and in other civilized countries. The statement made by the Fiscal of the Supreme Court of War and Marine at Madrid (line 50 in page 49 of Parliamentary Papers, Part VII) is "that all booty belongs to the Sovereign who makes the war, and he disposes of it, sometimes in indemnifying privateers, and sometimes also in rewarding the services which the captors render to the nation. But as equity counsels that, before adjudicating the prize, there shall be an examination whether it has been justly and legally made, without offence to the rights of neutral nations, so it has been found necessary to establish tribunals to conduct that examination, and in creating them, it has also been requisite to determine the nature of such matters. No nation has ever confounded the trial of maritime prizes with ordinary trials, with civil processes." This statement is, we think, correct, and the Prize Court in England (the character of which we may observe, in passing, is but imperfectly understood by the writer of the pamphlet) sits under the authority of a Special Commission from the Crown, issued at the breaking out of every war, though it is possible that the High Court of Admiralty may possess the inherent jurisdiction on the subject of prize.

It occurs, however, to us to observe that so long as a fair and impartial investigation is conducted into the question of the legality of the capture and the rights of the neutral before a Tribunal, or other authority appointed by the Government of the captors for that purpose, whatever may be the particular name of that Tribunal or authority, the neutral state, provided that the principles of International Law are applied to the case, ought to be satisfied. And it appears to us that your Lordship is not under the necessity of taking any objection to the constitution of the Tribunal exercising jurisdiction in the case of the "Tornado," or of prosecuting any inquiry into the antiquarian question as to the origin, or the constitutional question as to the proper authority through the agency of which justice is administrated to the neutral claimant.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 125.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received May 23.)

Lincoln's Inn, May 23, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 30th ultimo, stating that he was directed to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Consul at Cadiz (No. 38), inclosing a copy of a report to Sir J. Crampton informing him of the probable nature of the decision which will be come as to the competency of the Prize Court at Cadiz, which tried the case of the "Tornado;" and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take the same into consideration, and furnish your Lordship with any remarks we may have to make thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we are of opinion that whatever doubts or difficulties may exist as to the technical mode of procedure in prize cases, (a subject on which in another report, we have addressed some observations to your Lordship), your Lordship should insist upon the claimants having an opportunity afforded them of being fully heard upon any evidence on which the Court may proceed before any sentence is pronounced.

It is a question of great importance whether the Spanish Government is entitled to avail itself retrospectively of any authorized acts of inquiry already made, should that Government decide to proceed to a new trial, and afford the claimants an opportunity of being heard upon such trial.

We have carefully considered this question, and have come to the conclusion that they are entitled so to avail themselves of the previous inquiry, up to the close of that inquiry; and in reference to the report resulting therefrom, nothing had occured which in our opinion made it the duty of Her Majesty's Government to refuse to allow the report to be used. It was against the subsequent procedure to sentence and condemnation, without hearing the claimants, that we have always protested. Under these circumstances we think there is no just ground for insisting that Spain should not be at liberty to use the evidence already collected, if she desires to re-open the case, and to hear the claimants thereon before the same or any other Tribunal.

But we think, having regard to the exceptional circumstances of this case, that the owners ought to be allowed to produce evidence explanatory or contradictory of the Sumario.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 126.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received May 28.)

Lincoln's Inn, May 28, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 23rd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Sir John Crampton (No. 134), inclosing a copy of a communication from Señor Retortillo, the claimants counsel in the case of the "Tornado," reporting on the course of the legal proceedings in the case; and Mr. Hammond was to request that we would take these papers into our consideration, and furnish your Lordship with any observations which may occur to us on Señor Retortillo's report.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have considered these papers, and have the honour to report—

That we desired to preface our report by observing that the objection to the Tribunal was raised, and has been insisted on by the Spanish Council for the owners; and the objection which Her Majesty's Government has been advised by us to take, has been to the condemnation of the vessel without hearing the parties interested, and not to the Tribunal itself, as to the proper constitution of which we did not express an opinion.

That if, according to the expectation of Señor Retortillo, the case of the "Tornado" be removed from the Tribunal which has hitherto dealt with it, and be treated in the manner termed "administratively," it will be important to watch the case so as to insure that these administrative proceedings are, substantially, of such a judicial character as the neutral State has a right to demand. Upon this point it will be expedient that full and accurate information should be procured as soon as possible.

There is no doubt that the delay which has taken place, and the uncertainty and doubt as to the proper Tribunal, constitute ground of serious complaint on the part of the neutral State. It is the duty of the belligerent to furnish a certain and proper Tribunal to decide upon questions of the capture of neutral vessels upon the high seas.

The neutral owner ought not to be subjected to the inconvenience, delay, and expense incident to the mistakes of the Spanish authorities, as to the Tribunal which is to decide upon the legality of the capture of his vessel. The belligerent Government ought to be prepared with the means of discharging its duty by the proper and prompt administration of international law to the subjects of the neutral State, or it ought to abstain from exercising the right of capture to which this duty is correlatived.

Still, as we have already advised, it will, in our opinion, be right, under the particular circumstances of this case, not to object, even at this late period, to a proper judicial investigation whatever name the Tribunal which conducts it may bear.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

No. 127.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received May 28.)

Lincoln's Inn, May 28, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 23rd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from Mr. Forbes Campbell, dated the 23rd instant, inquiring whether, in the event of a new trial taking place, the master and crew of the "Tornado" would be required to present themselves for re-examination, and how far their voluntary absence might prejudice their claims for compensation against the Spanish Government; and Mr. Hammond was to request that we would take Mr. Campbell's letter into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the reply which should be returned to that gentleman.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That an answer should be sent to Messrs. Campbell and Co. to the following effect:—

That they would do well to consult their legal adviser in Spain upon this subject, upon which it is not within your Lordship's province to offer any opinion; but it may be proper to add that, in the event of a new judicial investigation taking place, it would seem probable that Messrs. Campbell and Co. would themselves require the attendance of Captain Collier and some of the crew in Spain for the purpose of establishing the innocent character of their vessel.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 128.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received May 28.)

Lincoln's Inn, May 28, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 24th of May instant, stating that, with reference to the statements contained in Captain McKillop's letter of the 12th ultimo relative to the "Tornado" and "Cyclone," and to the observations made thereon by Messrs. Isaac, Campbell and Co., in their letter of the 24th ultimo, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us, for any observations which we might have to make thereon, a further communication from Captain McKillop relative to the connection of Mr. Isaac, Campbell and Co., with the Chilean Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, referring to Isaac, Campbell and Co.'s letter of the 24th of April last, it would appear that they might be justified in stating "that in May 1866 they were ignorant of the existence of Captain McKillop" (No. 44); but the present communication from Captain McKillop shows that he was introduced by the Agent of the Chilean Government to Mr. Samuel Isaac early in June 1866; that the vessel was purchased on or about the 21st of June, 1866; and that after the purchase Mr. Samuel Isaac left this country for Hamburgh, and Mr. Saul Isaac (one of the partners in the claimants' firm), "acted as the active agent in his absence."

It is unnecessary to say that this letter affords very strong corroboration of the belligerent character of the "Tornado," and of the position of McPherson.

We think that a copy of this letter, without comment, should be sent to Messrs. Isaac, Campbell and Co., unless your Lordship should consider that there is any reason (which does not occur to us), arising from the mode in which the information was obtained, that ought to prevent this course from being taken.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 129.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received June 7.)

Lincoln's Inn, June 6, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 1st instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 28th ultimo, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a further letter from Mr. Forbes Campbell respecting the crew of the "Tornado;" and Mr. Hammond was to request that we would report to your Lordship our opinion as to the answer which should be returned to it.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That an answer should be sent to Mr. Forbes Campbell to the following effect:—

That upon reference to the letter of Mr. Hammond, it will be found that "the legal advisers" of Messrs. Isaac, Campbell and Co., and not of the crew, were referred to.

That Her Majesty's Government have not lost sight of the claims which have been preferred on behalf of the crew against the Spanish Government; but inasmuch as such claims, so far as the Spanish Government is concerned, may depend on the character of the vessel, your Lordship does not consider that this is the time for determining whether any claims exist which can rightfully be pressed against that Government.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 130.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received June 15.)

Lincoln's Inn, June 15, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 5th instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 28th ultimo, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us two despatches from Sir J. Crampton and Mr. Consul Dunlop upon the subject of the sentence lately pronounced in the case of the "Tornado" by the Supreme Court of War and Marine. A letter from Messrs. Isaac, Campbell and Co., and the last instructions to Sir J. Crampton dated the 26th and 30th of May, founded on our Reports of the 22nd and 28th of that month, were also inclosed; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take this letter into consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion as to whether any further instructions should be addressed to Sir J. Crampton in the present state of the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That it appears to be the opinion of Señor Retortillo "that the Court of War and Marine, in revoking the Act of the 30th of January, has given its assent to the pretensions set forth in Mr. Collier's letter of the 14th of January, and has declared—1st, that the Junta is without jurisdiction in the case of the 'Tornado;' 2ndly, that there is ground for nullifying the whole proceedings of the Junta, including the Act of the 15th of December; 3rdly, that Mr. Collier's claim to recover damages holds good."

Messrs. Isaac, Campbell and Co. state that they are legally advised that, according to Spanish law, they are entitled to an immediate restitution of the vessel, with damages and costs, and reimbursement of the wages of the crew.

We think that, having regard to these opinions, Sir J. Crampton should take no steps which would interfere with any right which may accrue to or be claimed by the owners by reason of this reversal of the sentence, but that he should be instructed to await the next proceeding on the part of the Spanish Government; and to communicate with Her Majesty's Government before he makes any official communication on the subject of a new trial to the Spanish Government.

With respect to the letter of Messrs. Isaac, Campbell and Co., these gentlemen may be informed that there can be no official interference in the present state of the proceedings by Her Majesty's Government.

1867

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 131.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received June 15.)

Lincoln's Inn, June 15, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 5th June instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid (No. 140), inclosing a copy of a report from the Consul at Cadiz relative to the detention of the British trading steamer "Peninsula" by a Spanish man-of-war; and to request that we would take the case into consideration and inform your Lordship what reply should be returned to Sir John Crampton on the subject.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the case into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That it is not quite clear to us whether the visitation of the ship "Peninsula" by the Spanish captain was in the exercise of the rights of a belligerent, or in order to enforce a municipal rule applicable only to Spanish waters. But in either case we are of opinion that your Lordship is not called upon to take any official notice of this particular transaction.

According to the British captain's statement the conduct of the Spanish captain does appear to have been objectionable, and if such conduct should become habitual we think it will afford a justifiable cause for remonstrance with the Spanish Government.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 132.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received June 18.)

Temple, June 18, 1867.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 13th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit the accompanying letter from Mr. Mould, inclosing copy of a petition which he has addressed to the Cortes relative to a railway contract under which he has a claim against the Spanish Government, and requesting that Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid be instructed to support his petition; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take these papers into consideration, and report to your Lordship whether this is a case in which Her Majesty's Government might use their good offices in favour of Mr. Mould.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken this case into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That there is clearly no ground for any official instruction on the part of Her Majesty's Government on behalf of Mr. Mould.

There can be no objection, however, to instructing Her Majesty's Representative at Madrid to exercise his discretion as to using his good offices in supporting the prayer of Mr. Mould to the Cortes.

I have, &c.
(Signed) ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 133.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received July 13.)

My Lord, Lincoln's Inn, July 12, 1867.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 17th June ultimo, stating that with reference to a letter from Her Majesty's Law Officers of the 22nd of August, 1864, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us, for any remarks we might wish to make thereon, the accompanying despatch with its inclosures from Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid (No. 146), reporting that the supposed murderers of Mr. William H. Abbot, at Puerto Plata, in the Island, on the 28th of August, 1863, have been sentenced to a further imprisonment of three years; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to add that the former papers relating to the case were sent therewith.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have perused the papers forwarded to us, and have the honour to report—

That we have not before us in detail the evidence upon which the persons implicated in the murder of Mr. Abbot, were found guilty and sentenced to three years' imprisonment in addition to the confinement they had undergone before sentence.

It appears to us that, under the circumstances of the case, Her Majesty's Government may be satisfied with the proceedings that have been taken in this case in compliance with the requisitions made by Her Majesty's Government.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 134.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received August 8.)

My Lord, Temple, August 7, 1867.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 2nd August instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid, inclosing a confidential note which he had received from the Spanish Minister for Foreign Affairs, with a copy of the "Informe" of the Council of State addressed to the Minister of the Marine, relative to the case of the "Tornado;" and that we would perceive from that despatch that the Spanish Government consider that the "Junta Economica de Cadiz" was the proper Court to try the case, but that the Court erred in treating the matter "judicially" instead of "administratively;" and they propose that the case should be sent back to them to be "rectified" and "amplified" as an administrative affair, and to be definitively decided upon by the Government after hearing the Council of State; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take the proposition of the Spanish Government into our consideration and report to your Lordship our views on the matter. Mr. Hammond also added that the last papers about the "Tornado" case which had been printed, but not yet laid before Parliament, accompanied his letter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the proposition of the Spanish Government into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That in the event of the advice contained in the "Informe" of the Council of State being acted upon, we think that Her Majesty's Government will have no ground of complaint against the Spanish Government, and that Messrs. Isaac, Campbell and Co. will have no claim against the Government for interference in their behalf in the event of an ultimate determination that the vessel is good prize of war.

The elaborately prefaced "Informe" of the Council of State sets forth that the Tribunal before which proceedings were originally instituted, the Junta Economica of Cadiz was a properly constituted body to entertain the question whether the vessel was or was not prize. But in treating the matter judicially and not administratively they acted altogether in error. They passed a sentence without hearing the parties interested, and they assumed judicial functions when they had no right by law to do so.

In giving a résumé of their views at the end of the "Informe" the Council of State deduce—"Fourthly: that consequently it is proper to declare that as every thing that was done administratively preserves its efficacy as far as folio 25 of the record, or say part 3rd, in which the establishment of the case was completed by the transmission of the proceeding to the Junta, whatever was done in an administrative sense after the said folio is of no effect, as was the case with the judicial proceeding by the Decree of the Tribunal of War and Marine.

1867

"Fifthly and lastly: that the case should be returned to the Junta of the Department in order, that making use of the proceedings up to the folio mentioned, which are the base of action, it may hear the interested parties and investigate them, holding a sitting in the manner which was used to decide the case of the Chilean barque 'Alice Ward' on the 22nd of June and 9th July, 1866, without the commander of engineers being present; and having heard the charges and counter-charges, and the proofs required by the general Ordinances being considered, it may pronounce the final resolution which it may consider just, it may acquaint the parties concerned of it, and afterwards remit the case to the Government to be decided on, this body having been heard, in which case the claims of Mr. Collier, which have not been settled, will be taken into consideration as well as those which can be made against the final resolution of the Junta as far as they are just."

We conjecture that the part of the proceedings referred to which "preserves its efficacy" is the Auditor's Report, which it is suggested may properly be made a basis for the further and rectified proceedings. The Junta is to hear the interested parties, holding a sitting and having heard the charges and counter-charges to pronounce their resolution, acquaint the parties of it and remit the case to the Government to be decided on.

Thus a hearing is secured to Isaac, Campbell and Co. and though it is unfortunate, perhaps, that this hearing will be before the same individuals, as we understand (with one exception), as those who affected to decide the case judicially, we do not think that this can be made ground of complaint by Her Majesty's Government.

It is not to be presumed that the Tribunal acting within the scope of its legal powers, and not as a Court of Appeal, will refuse to give due weight to the arguments and evidence of the claimants, or if they should do so that their resolutions will not be reconsidered and reversed when the case is remitted to the Spanish Government for ultimate decision.

We do not think it necessary to examine the reasons of the principles and rules laid down in the "Informe" as governing Prize Courts, such an examination would be a dissertation on prize law; but we would observe that, although perhaps, it is now not material to renew the question as to whether the owners of the vessel and Her Majesty's Government were right in objecting to and protesting against the now annulled sentence as invalid, we think that the strongest corroboration of the justice of the objection is to be found in the "Informe" itself. The Council of State admit that in form and substance a judicial sentence was pronounced, and they seem to us also to imply that a sentence pronounced without hearing the interested parties, would not be upheld or countenanced by Spanish law.

We assume that formal notice will be received by Her Majesty's Government in the event of the Minister of Marine determining to act on the advice of the Council of State.

If this advice be acted upon, we think, as we have before stated, that Her Majesty's Government will not have any objection to make to the course proposed being adopted.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
C. J. SELWYN.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 135.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received September 5.)

Temple, September 4, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 3rd instant, stating that, with reference to the Report of the Law Officers of the , respecting the case of the "Tornado," he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a further despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid; and to request that we would take the paper into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether any communication should be made to the parties thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That it is unnecessary that any communication should be made from the Foreign Office to the parties if the interests of the owners of the "Tornado" are represented by an agent at Cadiz, to whom the Consul-General will have made a communication; but if there is any doubt as to the presence of the agent at Cadiz, it would be advisable, in order to prevent the possible failure of communication between the Consul and the agent at Cadiz, to send a copy of the citation to the owners in England, with whom the Foreign Office has already been in communication.

The citation is in the usual form.

The parties are required to give an appearance within thirty days, and present their defence, or the cause will proceed regularly to judgment in their absence.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
C. J. SELWYN.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 136.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received September 28.)

Temple, September 27, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 16th instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 4th instant, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a further letter from the owners of the "Tornado," together with the letter to which it is an answer; and to request that we would take the same into our consideration.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, it would not be proper for Her Majesty's Government to interfere in the present state of the proceedings, or to express any opinion upon the question suggested by the letter of Messrs. Isaac, Campbell and Co., as to the inadmissibility of any particular evidence, and we think that Her Majesty's Government cannot reasonably be called upon to assume or to act upon the assumption that gross injustice is meditated by the Spanish authorities.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
C. J. SELWYN.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 137.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received October 8.)

Temple, October 7, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 28th September ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a correspondence which had taken place with Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid,* relative to the severity of a sentence passed on a British subject by a Spanish court-martial, in consequence of his participation in a drunken affray which took place near the Spanish Lines of Gibraltar; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take the papers into our consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion as to any further steps which can properly be taken on behalf of the individual in question.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers submitted to us into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That, in the official report of the Fiscal, it is stated that the Ordinance under which Bautista was tried was one which punishes a person "who shall attack any soldier doing sentry's duty;" and Señor Arrazola in his despatch 14th September, 1867, says, "Your Excellency is aware that soldiers of the Civil Guard in circumstances like those now before us are considered as sentries;" and if this be so (which would certainly appear to those who are not conversant with Spanish law a very wide construction of this Ordinance) a crime seems to have been proved to which Spanish law awards men a greater punishment than that inflicted on the accused.

---

* Sir J. Crampton No. 180; to Sir J. Crampton, No. 115; Sir J. Crampton, Nos. 185 and 188; to Sir J. Crampton, No. 118; Sir J. Crampton, No. 224.

Under all the circumstances the sentence appears to us to be severe, but we do not think your Lordship can take any further steps on behalf of Bautista, except in giving assistance to the presentation to the Queen of Spain of a petition for remission or mitigation of the sentence, if the friends of the prisoner should desire to present such a petition.

We advise, of course, upon the assumption that no exception can be taken to the construction put upon the Ordinance, and that there is no appeal according to Spanish law in this case, as there was in the Alicante case now also before us.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
C. J. SELWYN.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 138.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received October 8.)

Temple, October 7, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 1st instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying correspondence with Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid and with Her Majesty's Consul at Alicante,* upon the subject of the arrest and imprisonment at Alicante of some English sailors on a charge of being concerned in a brawl and in an attack upon the police at that port, and as to the legal proceedings to which this occurrence has given rise, which have resulted in the final sentence pronounced upon appeal by the Supreme Court at Madrid, of which a translation is contained in Sir John Crampton's despatch No. 52, Commercial, of the 23rd ultimo.

Mr. Hammond was to request that we would take these papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship, at our early convenience, with our opinion whether the proceedings of the Spanish authorities in this case afford any grounds for further interference on the part of Her Majesty's Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That the proceedings of the Spanish authorities in regard to the arrest and imprisonment of English sailors at Alicante afford no grounds for further interference on the part of Her Majesty's Government. The sentence may be severe, but it seems to be in accordance with the Criminal Code of Spain, and such mitigating circumstances as existed have not been overlooked by the Court.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
C. J. SELWYN.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 139.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received October 22.)

Temple, October 21, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 17th instant, stating that with reference to our Report of the 27th ultimo, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter which your Lordship had received from Captain Collier, the late master of the ship "Tornado;" and to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer which should be returned to Captain Collier's communication.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we think that an answer should be returned to Captain Collier to the effect that he would do well to take the advice of a Spanish lawyer as to his right to appear in the event of Messrs. Isaac, Campbell and Co., declining to enter an appearance at the trial of the "Tornado."

---

* To Consul Barrie, No. 1, January 22; Consul Barrie, No. 4, January 28, and No. 5, February 4; to Consul Barrie, No 2, April 23; to Sir J. Crampton, No. 7, Consular, February 27; Sir J. Crampton, No. 12, Consular, March 4; Consul Barrie, No. 9, April 27; to Sir J. Crampton, No. 17, Consular, May 3; Sir J. Crampton, No. 21, Consular, May 18; to Consul Barrie, No. 3, June 21; to Sir J. Crampton, No. 21, Consular, June 22; Consul Barrie, No. 4, June 27; Sir J. Crampton, No. 28, June 28; No. 31, July 2; No. 37, July 30; No. 38, August 3; and No. 52, September 23, 1867.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
C. J. SELWYN.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 140.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received November 19.)

Temple, November 18, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 30th of October last, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 27th of September, on the case of the "Tornado," he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a further despatch and its inclosures from Her Majesty's Consul at Cadiz on the same subject; and to request that we would take the same into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we think that, in acknowledging the receipt of Mr. Dunlop's letter inclosing the protest and letter of Mr. McPherson of the 24th October, your Lordship might add that Her Majesty's Government do not adopt Mr. McPherson's view that from the circumstances of his having been advised to present a protest, or from the statements or arguments contained in that document, a denial of justice is established; and that Her Majesty's Government do not concur in the opinion expressed by Mr. McPherson, that it is high time that Her Majesty's Government should demand the restoration of the ship, or compensation for alleged unwarrantable acts since her capture.

In answer to the latter part of Mr. Dunlop's letter we presume that your Lordship will think it right to approve of the course which he continues to adopt towards John McPherson in furnishing funds for his support.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
C. J. SELWYN.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 141.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received December 27.)

Temple, December 26, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 4th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying correspondence as marked in the margin,* together with two memoranda drawn up in your Lordship's office, respecting the claim of the charterers of the "Wyvern" against the Spanish Government, and to request that we would take the papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the paper into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That it appears to us that Señor Arrazola, in his letter of the 16th of November, satisfactorily answers the claim of Messrs. Barter and Co., and justifies the conduct of the Board of Health at Malaga.

We think, however, that the substance of this despatch should be communicated to Messrs. Barter and Co., who should be informed that the statements of the Spanish Minister seem to justify the course which was adopted towards the "Wyvern," and to answer the charge of injustice made against the Spanish authorities.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
C. J. SELWYN.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

* Messrs. Barter and Co., September 1865; to Mr. West, No. 28, September 10; to Messrs. Barter and Co., September 19, 1865; Sir J. Crampton, No. 4, January 19; to Messrs. Barter and Co., January 29; Messrs. Barter and Co., March 18; to Messrs. Barter and Co., March 10; to Sir J. Crampton, No. 43, March 13; Sir J. Crampton, No. 72, March 21, 1866; Mr. Walsham, No. 104, November 25, 1867.

1867

No. 142.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received December 30.)

Temple, December 30, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 16th ultimo, stating that with reference to that portion of our predecessors' Report of the 29th August, 1864, which relates to the case of the "Forward," which was seized by a Spanish cruizer for attempting to break the blockade of San Domingo in that year, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith a further letter and its inclosures from the Colonial Office, forwarding a complaint from Mr. Moxey, a passenger on board the "Forward;" and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take these papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion thereupon, more especially as regards the question of personal injury alleged to have been sustained.

The previous papers were inclosed for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the claim of Mr. Moxey now made, as a sequel to complaints made in 1864, divides itself into two parts: first, on account of his having been put in irons, imprisoned, and barbarously treated by the Spanish authorities in San Domingo, and on board two vessels of war; and next, on account of his having lost a sum of money which he delivered to the commander of a Spanish vessel of war, and which has never, according to his statement, been restored to him.

We do not find any reasons given why this claim has been allowed by Mr. Moxey to lie dormant for so long a period, and before advising as to the course which we think should be adopted, it appears to us necessary to advert to the main facts and principal documents brought to our attention in the two volumes sent us, and which bear materially on the bona fides of this long-deferred claim.

For the purposes of this Report we assume that, notwithstanding questions heretofore raised as to the validity of the capture of the "Forward," that vessel was legally captured, and condemned as lawful prize in 1864. The capture took place on the 18th April in that year, by the Spanish war vessel the "Africa," off San Domingo, as the "Forward" was making her passage to Turks' Island. A prize crew was put on board the "Forward," the crew and passengers were taken on board the "Africa," and, as Mr. Moxey states (and in this he is corroborated by others), all the crew and passengers (except one of the latter and two children) were placed in irons. On the 19th the "Africa" anchored off Puerto Plata, and on the same day left for San Domingo, where the Prize Court established by Spain was sitting, and where the vessel arrived on the 22nd April. Just before the "Africa" reached San Domingo the captain sent to the passengers and crew to ask if they had any money with them, for, if so, they had better deposit it with him, as he was a responsible person and the money would be safe in his hands, whereas on shore it might be taken from them. Money (chiefly Spanish paper money) was given up by several of those on board the "Forward," to the commander of the "Africa," and Mr. Moxey says that certain money was given by him to the commander, which he alleges has never been returned.

On the 23rd, Mr. Moxey and others were interrogated on board the "Africa," and it seems clear that Mr. Moxey then, and on the afternoon of that day, when he was again interrogated before the Commander of Marine, passed himself off as the captain of the "Forward."

On the evening of the 28th, Moxey and the rest were transferred from the "Africa" to the "Don Juan de Astimas," and detained as prisoners. On the 24th, the "Don Juan" went a cruize along the coast; and on the 25th, Mr. Moxey desired to be allowed to go on shore. This application was not granted, but he was allowed to go to the military hospital. There he remained for nine days and then returned to the ship "Don Juan de Astimas."

On the 13th of May, Moxey and the other prisoners from the "Forward" were put on shore and lodged in prison, as the "Don Juan" was ordered to cruize along the coast. On the 16th May, Moxey and the rest were liberated at the intercession of the British Consul. In the meantime, the vessel had been condemned, but by the terms of the sentence a contradictory trial was to be proceeded with and terminated in fifteen days from the insertion of the sentence in the Official Gazette (5th May 1864). After the capture and before Moxey's release, Governor Eyre in Jamaica appears to have received a despatch from the President of Turks Island; in consequence of which, Governor Eyre writes to the Captain-General of San Domingo (18th May, 1864, vol. i), speaking of Moxey as "an Officer of Volunteer Artillery and a Justice of the Peace of the Colony, who is said to have been making the voyage merely as a passenger for the benefit of his health." Having been released on the 16th May, Mr. Moxey appeared before the British Consul at San Domingo on the 18th, and then made a deposition on oath, and protest, in the character of the Master of the "Forward." William Evans, described as the mate, was a party to this deposition.

As regards the money deposited with the commander of the "Africa," this deposition deserves attention. Moxey does not say that he deposited any money, still less does he hint that he had left as much as from 315 to 350 dollars in the commander's hands.

That Moxey was considered to be the captain of the vessel, and treated as such, is shown by the Consul's, Mr. David Leon, letter, 9th June, 1864 (vol. i), and from a passage in that letter it certainly seems that the Consul did not understand that Moxey had deposited any money with the commander of the "Africa."

It is further stated that the passengers and crew were kept in irons and on deck while on the "Africa," with occasional intervals of release until the arrival at San Domingo. On the 27th May, 1864, Mr. Moxey and several others made depositions before Captain Lambert, on board Her Majesty's ship "Liverpool," and Moxey again speaks of himself as having been captain of the "Forward," and the other deponents seem to speak of him as the captain. William Evans calls himself mate.

In this deposition Moxey speaks of having deposited 315 to 330 dollars in Spanish paper with the commander of the "Africa." He says but little of his illness or of the badness of his food in prison. There is nothing to corroborate Moxey's statement of having deposited the money.

On the 27th June, 1864 (vol. ii), Moxey writes to President Moir, stating his grievances; and there is a marked difference between the tone of this letter and that of the previous declarations. He now represents that he took his passage in the "Forward" for the benefit of his health. He alleges that he was ironed and kept on deck of the "Africa" continuously and without any cessation or intervals, and represents that thereby he was "reduced almost to the point of death." He states that he represented himself to be the captain of the "Forward" at Captain Evans' request, "who was too much alarmed to act for himself," though why he continued this deception after his release he does not attempt to explain. No particular sum is mentioned either in this letter or the protest annexed as having been deposited.

We find that before the 9th July, 1864, the British Consul at San Domingo applied to the Captain-General and the Commander-in-chief of the Navy, that the "little" money deposited with the captain of the "Africa" might be given up; they both promised him that, on the return of the "Africa" from an expedition to Monte Christo on which she had been dispatched, the amount should be delivered to him; and, on the 9th July, the Consul, writing to Lord Russell, informs him, that on the arrival of the Spanish steamer "Africa" he addressed to the Captain-General a private note to remind him of his promise regarding the money which the passengers of the "Forward" deposited with the commander, and that orders were given to that effect; and after a few days had elapsed, the amount of 198 dollars 75 cents was delivered to him, and he inclosed a list of the several sums belonging to each individual, which amounts, he stated, he should hold until Lord Russell should instruct him how they were to be disposed of. The list contains the names of—

| | Dols. | c. |
|---|---|---|
| John C. Nugent .. .. .. .. .. .. | 54 | 25 |
| Edward Chevalier .. .. .. .. .. .. | 26 | 25 |
| A. G. Spencer .. .. .. .. .. .. | 118 | 25 |
| | 198 | 75 |

Whether these sums were sent to the persons named we know not, but it seems clear that the amount was paid by the captain of the "Africa" as being all that he had to account for, and was so received by Mr. Leon; and it seems highly improbable that Mr. Leon should have made no comment or representation on the subject, if he had had the least idea from his communications with Moxey that he claimed from 315 to 350 dollars for himself alone. Moxey in his letter to President Moir, 28th June, 1864, speaks of value in cash "taken from myself, 350 dollars."

We have been thus specific in our reference to the facts, as we have gleaned them from the two volumes sent to us, because the charges which Mr. Moxey—now described by Mr. Moir, in addition to his other titles, as "Acting Police Magistrate," and in his own statement to Captain Lambert (Governor Eyre's letter to Mr. Cardwell 7th July, 1864, vol. ii), as "a man of colour, born in Nassau, by trade a shipwright, chiefly employed as a master mariner"—makes against the commander of the "Africa," are little short of charges of purloining his money under most disgraceful and dishonourable circumstances.

In our opinion, Her Majesty's Government should not make a claim for this money, especially after all that has occurred, unless Mr. Moxey can bring corroborative evidence of his having placed the money in the commander's hands. If he knew that the commander had repaid all that he said he received, and yet omitted to press his claim, how can he account for his silence?

The case as to ill-treatment, alleged to have been sustained by Mr. Moxey, stands on a different footing; for though none of the other passengers or seamen appear to have made any actual claim through the Foreign Office, the evidence to show that they were ironed and otherwise treated as prisoners and with considerable severity is certainly cogent. We quite agree with the opinion of our predecessors expressed in their Report of the 22nd August, 1864 (vol. ii), that there is no justification according to modern usage for putting passengers and crews of vessels taken as prize for breach of blockade in irons, or treating them with severity or as prisoners of war. For the treatment to which British subjects taken in blockade-runners have been subjected by the Spaniards, we believe that strong remonstrance has already been addressed by Her Majesty's Government to Spain, and if so it seems unnecessary to repeat any such remonstrance in consequence of Mr. Moxey's renewed complaint. Nor do we think that any claim for pecuniary compensation to Mr. Moxey on account of his alleged ill-treatment should be made upon the Spanish Government, at all events until Mr. Moxey has given further explanation as to the alleged loss of his money, and has detailed more fully and specifically than he has done at present the character of the treatment to which he was subjected. To the commander of the "Africa," Moxey represented himself as captain of the prize, and it is probable that the confinement in irons on board the "Africa" was, having regard to the diminished number of that vessel's crew (some having been sent on board the "Forward" as prize crew), a justifiable precaution, and that the imprisonment on board the ships and at San Domingo was not, having regard to the necessity of keeping the crew and passengers of the "Forward" under surveillance, marked by undue harshness or severity. If, after Mr. Moxey's fuller version of the whole affair has been received, it should be deemed right to make a representation to the Spanish Government of his case, that Government should have ample opportunity of explanation, before a claim for compensation on account of harsh or barbarous treatment should be put forward.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
C. J. SELWYN.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

Tunis.

No. 143.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received March 19.)

Lincoln's Inn, March 18, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 26th of February ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Consul-General at Tunis (No. 9), inclosing a Minute of the proceedings of a Consular Court which had been held in the Island of Gerba, to inquire into the murder of a British subject named Caterina Tortora; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take the papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the instructions which should be sent to Her Majesty's Consul at Tunis in this case.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That Her Majesty's Consul-General at Tunis should be instructed to the following effect:—

That Vincenzo Azzopardi should be sent to Malta to be tried for wilful murder, and three of his companions (not including Camana, whom the evidence does not seem to implicate) as accessories, though it may not improbably happen that these three persons will be acquitted.

That my Lords of the Admiralty should be moved to give proper instructions for the conveyance of the prisoners and necessary witnesses to Malta.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 144.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received August 21.)

Temple, August 17, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Murray's letter of the 1st instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith a letter from the Colonial Office, inclosing copy of a letter from the Governor of Malta, forwarding a petition addressed to the Secretary of State for the Colonies by Giuseppe Curmi, a native of Malta, requesting to be furnished with a copy of a sentence pronounced against him about two years ago by Her Majesty's Consular Court at Tunis; and Mr. Murray was to request that we would take these papers into our consideration, and furnish your Lordship with our opinion whether Consular Courts established and acting in the Levant, under the Order in Council of the 30th of November, 1864, are bound to give, or should refuse, copies of sentences passed in such Courts.

In obedience to the commands of your Lordship we have perused and considered these papers, and have the honour to report—

That we gather from the answer of the Acting Chief Secretary at Malta, that there is no rule or practice which requires the delivery of copies of sentences of the Consular Courts in criminal cases to the criminals sentenced.

We think, therefore, that the Consular Courts are not bound to give copies of sentences passed in those Courts; and we do not think that on the vague statement made by Curmi, "that he wishes to have a copy of the sentence because of a civil suit which he wishes to move," the refusal to give a copy of the sentence to the petitioner should, as a matter of favour even, be reversed.

By the 13th part of the Order in Council of the 30th November, 1864, sec. 89, power is given to the Judge of the Consular Court to make rules for procedure, &c., in the Supreme Consular Court. We have no copy of the rules (if any) made under this section; but we assume, as we have before stated, that there is no rule extant which affects this question.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
C. J. SELWYN.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

Turkey.

No. 145.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received January 4.)

Doctors' Commons, January 3, 1867.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 27th ultimo, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying despatch and its inclosures from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Constantinople, relative to the claim of a Company entitled the "Ottoman Financial Association" against the Turkish Government, under the circumstances therein stated; and as it appears that some doubt has arisen as to the title of the Association to British protection in Turkey, Mr. Hammond was to request that I would take these papers into consideration, and report to your Lordship my opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the question involves considerations of some delicacy, but I think Mr. Logie's advice (Inclosure 11 in No. 111), on which Lord Lyons acted, was sound. That the distinction was properly taken between the claim of the English joint-stock company for British intervention and assistance in winding up the affairs of the company, and therefore in recovering debts due from the Ottoman Government to the branch company at Constantinople, and the claim per se of that branch (the Ottoman Financial Association), to which the Firman applied, for the like intervention and assistance.

The liquidators of the parent company, so to speak, appear to be the parties interested in the repayment of the debts of the branch company.

I have, &c.
(Signed) ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 146.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received January 12.)

Lincoln's Inn, January 12, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Murray's letter of the 28th ultimo, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 19th of September last, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the draft of a despatch which was addressed on the 19th of November to Mr. Logie, Her Majesty's legal Consul-General in Egypt, with regard to the Order in Council of the 10th ultimo, for extending the powers of the British Consular Court in Egypt. A despatch from Mr. Logie, inclosing a draft of deputation authorizing the British Legal Vice-Consul in Egypt to exercise the powers specified in the Order in Council, was also inclosed; and Mr. Murray was pleased to request that we would take the same into consideration and report to your Lordship whether there is any objection thereto. Mr. Murray was also pleased to point out for our consideration that, as now worded, the deputation would enable any Consular officer not having a legal education to exercise the powers conferred upon the Legal Vice-Consul while acting in the absence of the latter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we have considered the draft deputation proposed by Mr. Logie, and have made some alterations therein, and are of opinion that the draft, as so altered, is proper, and should receive the sanction of your Lordship.

We consider the draft deputation to be personal to Mr. Philip Francis, and to give power to him only, and that it does not extend to the Provincial Consular Court if held by any other person than himself.

To avoid the difficulty suggested by the postscript to Mr. Murray's letter, we think it right that the appointment should be thus personal merely, and that it should be revoked if necessary, and a new appointment or deputation made if and when occasion arises.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 147.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received February 15.)

Doctors' Commons, February 14, 1867.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 9th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying despatch, and its inclosures, from Lord Lyons (No. 57, January 29) relative to the suspension for one month, by the Turkish Government, of the "Levant Herald," an English newspaper published at Constantinople, and applying for instructions with respect to a demand for damages preferred against the Porte by Mr. Mc Coan, the editor and proprietor of that newspaper, and to request that I would take this matter into consideration and report to your Lordship my opinion thereupon. The correspondence referred to by Lord Lyons between the Foreign Office and Her Majesty's Embassy at Constantinople in 1865, respecting the Turkish Law on the Press, which formed the subject of the Law Officers' Report of the 14th February, 1865, was also inclosed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That the authority inherent in the Government of every State to refuse absolutely, or to permit under specified conditions, the publication of a public journal within its territories does not appear ever to have been denied to the Porte by any European Power. The trial of the English editor, with a view to his personal punishment by fine or imprisonment, must, according to the Capitulations, be conducted in a particular manner with the intervention of an English authority. But this is no such proceeding. I am at a loss to know why it would not be competent to the Ottoman Government to prohibit altogether the future publication of this journal; and, if so, the lesser exertion of authority by which it is suspended for a particular period must be competent to this Government.

I do not think the Ottoman Government is bound to put that construction or interpretation of their municipal law in this matter which the Representative of a foreign Power may be of opinion is the true construction or interpretation of that law.

It is not further necessary to enter into this consideration, for Lord Lyons in his letter to your Lordship states, "I do not doubt that the Ottoman authorities sincerely believe that, in the present critical state of affairs, the publication of a paper written [illegible] the spirit which has recently appeared to animate the 'Levant Herald' is dangerous to the peace of the Empire."

I have read the articles in the newspapers which accompany the papers, and I think these observations of Lord Lyons are well founded.

But whatever opinion may be formed upon this subject, I have humbly to advise your Lordship that Lord Lyons should be instructed to refuse the request of Mr. Mc Coan, that he will assist Mr. Mc Coan in obtaining compensation from the Ottoman Government for the losses incident to the suspension of the "Levant Herald."

I have, &c.
(Signed) ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 148.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received March 14.)

Doctors' Commons, March 14, 1867.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Murray's letter of the 11th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me a despatch and its inclosures from Her Majesty's Consul-General at Bucharest respecting an application which has been made to him and to his French colleague by the Managing Director of the Bank of Roumania, for their intervention to obtain the due fulfilment of the Convention, of which a copy is inclosed, under which the Bank was established; and Mr. Murray was pleased to request that I would take these papers into consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the instructions which should be sent to Mr. Green in this matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the letter of M. de Herz raises a very difficult question of the Moldo-Wallachian Constitutional Law, as to which, having scarcely any information in the papers before me, I cannot express an opinion.

Upon the true construction, however, of that law must depend the further question whether the Act by which the Bank of Roumania was established, without the previous consent of the Senate, was or was not ultra vires of the Prince and the Roumanian Government who made the concession. In this state of things, I think instructions should be given to Mr. Green to the effect that, acting in concert with his French colleague, he should afford such assistance to M. de Herz as, in the exercise of his discretion, he may think expedient, either by a written or verbal communication with the Roumanian Government; but that he must be careful, at present, and until your Lordship has received further information and given further directions upon the subject, not to present the claim of M. de Herz to the Roumanian Government as one of which Her Majesty's Government demand the satisfaction as a matter of legal right; and that he should apprise M. de Herz that the official intervention on his behalf is not of that character; and that, therefore, M. de Herz must rely principally upon his own exertions for securing the object which he has in view.

1867

I have, &c.
(Signed) ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 149.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received March 23.)

Doctors' Commons, March 23, 1867.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 14th instant, stating that, with reference to my Report of the 14th ultimo respecting the suspension by the Porte of the "Levant Herald," he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Constantinople, inclosing copies of a further correspondence with the editor on that subject; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take these papers into consideration, and report to your Lordship my opinion as to the instructions which should now be given to Lord Lyons in regard to this matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That an answer should be sent to Lord Lyons to the following effect: that with respect to the question put by Mr. McCoan, as to whether the Turkish Law on the Press "can be regarded as of any legal force at all in respect of newspapers published by British subjects in this country" (that is, Turkey), that his Lordship should be instructed to reply, that there is no reason to question the legal force of this law, because Her Majesty's Government have come, after duly considering your Lordship's representation on this subject, to the decision that it was not proper that Mr. McCoan's request for your intervention on his behalf with the Turkish Government should be granted. That it is clearly competent to every independent State (as has been stated) either to refuse entirely, or permit under specified conditions, the publication of a journal within its dominions. That the law as to the liberty of the Press is very different even in European countries; for instance, the French exercise a power much the same as that which has been exercised on this occasion by the Ottoman Government, while the English Government possess no such authority. That the law with respect to the Press in the Ottoman Empire forbids the publication of any journal without the previous "autorisation" of the Imperial Government (Articles 1 and 2).

That this "autorisation" is granted to a foreigner on the express condition that he be subjected, in all that concerns the enforcement of the law on this matter, to the same rules and regulations as an Ottoman subject (Article 3).

That the law specifies two modes by which offences committed against the authority of the Sultan, by an authorized journal, may be punished: namely, either by a prosecution before a legal Tribunal, which subjects the offender, on conviction, to the punishment of imprisonment for a period varying from six months to three years, or to a fine varying in amount from 25 to 150 livres (Article 15). The other mode is, not by proceeding before a legal Tribunal, but by what is called "voie administrative;" that is, by the action of the Executive Government alone, in which case the punishment is a suspension of the publication of the journal for a period of time not exceeding one month (Article 27).

That the Ottoman Government by this very law, therefore, reserves to itself a discretion as to which mode of procedure it may think fit to adopt. That the Ottoman Government has thought fit to adopt in the case of Mr. McCoan this last mode of procedure. That, without saying that there might not be cases in which it might be proper that Her Majesty's Representative should remonstrate with the Ottoman Government on behalf of a British subject, the editor of a journal in Turkey, on the ground that this discretion had been unjustly exercised, Her Majesty's Government is of opinion that the case of Mr. McCoan, all the circumstances duly considered, does not fall within this category; and that no demand for compensation on the ground that the publication of this journal had been unlawfully suspended, ought in this instance to be made by Her Majesty's Representative to the Ottoman Government.

I have, &c.
(Signed) ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 150.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received March 28.)

Lincoln's Inn, March 28, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Murray's letter of the 18th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Legal Vice-Consul at Alexandria reporting the trial and conviction before him of Carmelo and Angelo Polidano for the murder of one Paolo Allard, but requesting instructions as to the punishment to be actually inflicted on the culprits; and Mr. Murray was pleased to request that we would take this despatch into consideration, and furnish your Lordship with our opinion as to the course which it will be advisable to take in this matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That it would appear to us that the proper sentence in this case is that suggested by the Legal Vice-Consul, namely twenty years' imprisonment with hard labour. We fully enter into the view of the Vice-Consul to carry if possible the sentence into effect in Egypt; but as we are unable to appreciate the difficulties which appear to exist in keeping the criminals in custody in Egypt, we think the Consul should be at liberty to exercise his discretion, and that unless he be satisfied that the sentence will be fully executed, he should send them to Malta to undergo their punishment.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 151.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received April 4.)

Doctors' Commons, April 3, 1867.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 2nd instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the correspondence which has passed between the Foreign Office and Messrs. Cavan, Lubbock, and Co. and Colonel Stanton, respecting a claim preferred by the Société Agricole et Industrielle d'Egypte against the Viceroy; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take the inclosed papers into consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion as to the course which your Lordship should now take with regard to this matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I am of opinion that your Lordship should apprise Messrs. Cavan, Lubbock, and Co. that Her Majesty's Government cannot interfere further on their behalf than by directing Colonel Stanton to continue to use such good offices for the adjustment of their claims as in his discretion he may think expedient. That Her Majesty's Government cannot prefer any direct demand of positive right in this matter against His Highness the Viceroy of Egypt.

I have, &c.
(Signed) ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 152.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received May 7.)

Temple, May 7, 1867.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 4th instant, stating that, with reference to my Report of the 23rd March last, on the subject of the Turkish Law of the Press and the suspension of the "Levant Herald," he was directed by your Lordship to inclose for any observations I might have to offer thereupon, the accompanying copy of a notification which has been issued by the Porte on the subject.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I do not think this "Notification Officielle" calls for any formal complaint from Her Majesty's Government. The language which describes the offences of journalism is very vague; and certainly, by means of this procedure "par voie administrative," the Ottoman Government may suspend the publication of newspapers which have, according to English notions, not exceded the limit of fair discussion.

Nevertheless, the Government has a right to take this course; but I think that it would not be improper to instruct Lord Lyons to express, on the part of Her Majesty's Government, a hope that the Ottoman Government does not intend under cover of this general language practically to restrict a fair and temperate criticism upon public acts and events by any British newspaper in Turkey.

I have, &c.
(Signed) ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 153.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received June 15.)

Lincoln's Inn, June 15, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 22nd April, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch from Lord Lyons, respecting a concession which the Porte is about to make to foreigners to enable them to hold landed property in Turkey, and inclosing copies of a proposed Law on the subject, and of a Protocol to be signed by the Representatives of Powers desirous of obtaining for their subjects the benefits of that law. Copies of the Capitulations between this country and Turkey of the Firman and Hatti-sherif of 1856 (commonly called the "Hatti-humayoun") and of the Treaty of Paris of 1856, together with the draft of a despatch bearing on the question of the voluntary submission of foreigners to the local Turkish tribunals which, after consultation with the late Law Officers, your Lordship addressed to Mr. Stuart, Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Constantinople, in 1865, was also inclosed; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take these papers into consideration, and furnish your Lordship with our opinion with respect to Lord Lyon's despatch and the drafts of the proposed Law and Protocol.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That it appears to us that the "projet de loi," with the additional words added by the British and French Ambassadors, is satisfactory.

That we have the honour also to agree with Lord Lyons as to the inexpedience of sanctioning any of the provisions proposed in the Protocol which derogate from the Capitulations. Those Capitulations, interpreted by custom, have for a long period formed the basis of the privileges of Christian subjects in Turkey, and the modifications proposed by the Protocol of the existing rights of foreigners in reference to the exercise of jurisdiction over them by Turkish authorities, though apparently trifling, are likely, as Lord Lyons observes, to lead to embarrassment and inconvenience.

We think that the clauses specially objected to, even with the modifications proposed by Fuad Pasha, should not be sanctioned by Her Majesty's Representative at Constantinople. We adhere to the opinion expressed on the subject, of not permitting individual British subjects in Turkey to waive on their own behalf arrangements made with the Porte for the common benefit of Her Majesty's subjects, expressed in the despatch of Lord Russell.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 154.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received June 24.)

Lincoln's Inn, June 24, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 22nd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying papers respecting an expedition which, it is supposed, is being organized in this country for affording assistance to the insurgents in Crete; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take this matter into immediate consideration, and furnish your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we have perused these papers, and are of opinion that upon the statements therein contained there is no sufficient ground for seizing and detaining the vessel in question.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 155.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received June 29.)

Temple, June 28, 1867.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 27th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Acting Consul-General in Egypt, respecting the claims of certain English drivers against the Egyptian Railway Administration, together with a Report which has been received from Her Majesty's Agent and Consul-General in Egypt, who is now in this country, upon the subject.

For my information Mr. Hammond was also pleased to inclose a correspondence which has taken place in regard to a complaint, made by the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company, of the proceedings of the Egyptian Railway Administration in employing natives instead of European drivers in charge of the trains conveying the overland passengers through Egypt; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take these papers into consideration, and report to your Lordship my opinion as to the course it would be right and proper to take in this matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I am of opinion that the course which Colonel Stanton recommends is substantially right and proper to be pursued.

I think that, although there is good reason to hope that the Commission of Inquiry will make a Report which will furnish a satisfactory solution of the difficulty, it would, in the particular circumstances of this case, be right that Mr. Reade should be empowered, without waiting for such Report, to sequester so much of the quarterly subsidy paid by Her Majesty's Government as would suffice to pay these drivers the sums of money due to them at the time of their ceasing to work. For I agree with Colonel Stanton that the drivers may be considered to have been compelled to adopt this course by the neglect of the authorities to redress their well-founded complaints. These men, moreover, gave fair notice to the railway authorities that they would cease to work unless justice was done to them at the particular time when they actually did so.

I think that the question as to whether they are not entitled to an indemnity for breach of contract on the part of the Railway Administration, should be postponed until the judgment of the Commission of Inquiry be pronounced.

It would, however, be expedient, I think, that Mr. Reade should, previously to placing the sequester upon the funds in question, apprise the Railway Administration that he is ordered by Her Majesty's Government to pursue this course, unless the just claims of these drivers be satisfied within a very short period indeed, which period should be specified; and should also apprise them that there will then remain to be considered the further question, as to the title of these men to compensation for the breach of contract on the part of the Railway Administration.

I have, &c.
(Signed) ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

No. 156.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received June 29.)

Temple, June 29. 1867.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with Mr. Hammond's letter of the 28th instant, inclosing to me, with reference to his letter of the 27th instant on the subject of the claims of certain English drivers against the Egyptian Railway Administration, and upon which my Report had already been sent to your Lordship, a copy of a further telegram from Mr. Reade, announcing that certain offers of compromise had been offered on the part of the said railway authorities.

With reference to this telegram I have the honour to report—

That, assuming the accuracy of the statement made by Colonel Stanton, it can cause no surprise that these inadequate offers of compensation should have been rejected by the men; but I do not understand that the Commission has as yet made any Report, so that there is still hope of an equitable adjustment in this matter.

It does not occur to me to be necessary, in consequence of this telegram, to make any alteration in the Report which I had the honour to transmit to your Lordship yesterday.

I have, &c.
(Signed) ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 157.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received July 15.)

Temple, July 15, 1867.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 13th instant, stating that,—with reference to a question which is to be asked in the House of Commons on Monday next (to-day), namely, whether the lending of a British Naval Officer to the Porte, in the crisis of the Cretan insurrection, with a view to his being named head of the Naval Council appointed by the Turkish Government for the purpose of re-organizing the Turkish Navy, is consistent with the principle of non-intervention declared by Her Majesty's Government,—he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the accompanying correspondence with the Turkish Ambassador, Lord Lyons, and the Board of Admiralty on the subject, and was pleased to request that I would report to your Lordship whether there is anything in this arrangement inconsistent with the duties of this country, as a Power neutral in the contest between the Porte and the Cretan insurgents.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That, with respect to general principles, applicable to the status of non-intervention, I am of opinion that a State which professes to be neutral between two belligerents in a civil war, and the Government of which lends a skilled officer to one belligerent for the purpose of rendering his naval or military force more effective against his enemy, does depart from the strict position of a neutral, and does, pro tanto, intervene in the contest.

With respect to the application of the general principle to this case, I feel some difficulty arising out of my partial acquaintance with the facts. Her Majesty's Government has not, I think, either formally or de facto, recognized the insurgent Cretans as belligerents, but has declared, generally, a policy of non-intervention in the contest. If Her Majesty's Government has reason to believe that the assistance of this British officer is sought by the Ottoman Government with special reference to this particular civil war, then, I think, the assistance could not, consistently with a strict maintenance of the status of non-intervention, be granted at this moment. But if Her Majesty's Government are satisfied that the assistance is asked for the general purpose of improving the naval administration of a friendly State, irrespectively of this war, and in pursuance of a policy framed antecedently to it, then I think that a compliance with this request may be defended on the ground that it is not any intervention on the part of Her Majesty in the civil war now carried on between the Ottoman Government and the insurgents in Crete.

I have, &c.
(Signed) ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 158.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received July 18.)

My Lord, Lincoln's Inn, July 16, 1867.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 28th ultimo, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 15th ultimo, respecting the tenure of real property by foreigners in Turkey, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Constantinople, inclosing a translation of a Law granting to foreigners the right to hold real property in the Ottoman Empire, and the draft of a Protocol to be signed by those Governments who desire to obtain for their subjects the benefit of that law; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take these papers, together with Lord Lyons' former despatch, into consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we have taken these papers into our consideration and are of opinion that the alterations which have been made in the "projet de loi," now sent in print, are not such as to affect the opinion which we expressed as to its satisfactory character upon the manuscript copy laid before us in April.

As regards the Protocol, we have the honour of agreeing with Lord Lyons in the view entertained by his Lordship, as expressed in his letter of the 24th June, that the alterations and additions made to the Protocol do not diminish the force of the objections of Her Majesty's Government communicated to his Lordship in your Lordship's despatch of the 18th June.

The objectionable clauses remain unaltered, and, we think, should not be assented to.

The law respecting the succession to "vacoufs," and which seems to be a law extending the right of inheriting this description of property in certain cases, does not appear to us to call for any particular remark.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 159.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received July 22.)

Temple, July 22, 1862.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 18th instant, stating that, with reference to my Reports of the 28th and 29th of June, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me two despatches and a telegram since received from Her Majesty's Acting Consul-General in Egypt,* respecting the claims of the English engine-drivers, and reporting that he had sequestered a portion of the subsidy due to the Turkish Company for the conveyance of the British mails through Egypt; and Mr. Hammond was to request that I would take these papers into consideration, and report to your Lordship my opinion on the matter as it now stands.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That it would be desirable to compare the Report which the Commission of Inquiry has made with the reply of Cherif Pasha; as I understand, from Mr. Reade's last despatch, that the conclusions at which these two authorities have arrived are materially different, the former recognizing, the latter disavowing, the claims of the drivers to pay after they had ceased to work, and during the time that the Commission was examining into the grounds of their complaint.

There are probably other points of discrepancy which may be of importance when this Report has been examined.

I venture to suggest that the best course to pursue, in the present state of this controversy, would be to give directions to Colonel Stanton to repair to Alexandria for the purpose of again endeavouring to bring about an equitable arrangement, and of reporting fully to your Lordship upon the matter. In the meantime, Mr. Consul Reade should be directed not to make any further advance to the drivers out of the remaining sum of the quarterly subsidy. At present the drivers have only been paid the sum which the Commission itself has, I understand, found to be due to them.

---

* Mr. Reade, Nos 10 and 11, July 4; Telegram, July 13, 1867.

1867

I have, &c.
(Signed) ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 160.

The Attorney- and Solicitor-General to Lord Stanley.—(Received August 1.)

Temple, August 1, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of 31st July ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter, dated 30th ultimo, with its inclosures, from the Treasury relative to the suspicion entertained that the vessels therein referred to are intended to take part in the Cretan insurrection; and that he was to request that we would take these papers into our consideration, and report to your Lordship whether, in our opinion, they contain sufficient evidence to justify any, and what, proceedings on the part of Her Majesty's Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we are of opinion that though these vessels should be watched, there is not sufficient evidence to justify any proceedings on the part of Her Majesty's Government at the present time.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
C. J. SELWYN.

---

No. 161.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received August 15.)

Temple, August 14, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 5th instant, stating that the papers which, by the direction of your Lordship, he then inclosed,* and some of which had been recently under our consideration, go to show that measures are being actively taken by certain parties at Liverpool to equip cruizers to be employed against Turkey in aid of the Cretan insurrection; and looking to these objections with reference to the announcement of the so-called Provisional Government in Crete of their intention to issue letters of marque with the view of assailing Turkish commerce, which formed the subject of Mr. Hammond's further letter of the same day's date, Mr. Hammond was to request our opinion as to the propriety of a Proclamation being issued under the Foreign Enlistment Act, warning Her Majesty's subjects against taking any part in any such proceedings; and that if we should be of opinion that it would be proper to issue such a Proclamation, Mr. Hammond was to request that we would prepare the draft of one for your Lordship's consideration.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have considered these papers,† and have the honour to report—

That the question submitted to us as to the propriety of issuing a Proclamation of Neutrality by Her Majesty, in the matter of the Cretan insurrection, is one of great delicacy and grave importance.

When a civil war has broken out in the dominions of a friendly State, and armaments are brought into the field, or upon the sea, by the contending parties, it is undoubtedly competent to a neutral State, without any breach of international law, to recognize both parties as belligerents, and to declare herself neutral between them.

It is always a question of fact, to be determined by the Government of the neutral State, whether the insurrection has or has not assumed the dimensions of war, and whether the legitimate interests of the neutral State do, or do not, require that she should claim from both parties the performance towards her of the obligations incident to the status of a belligerent; according equally to both parties, in return, the recognition of that status.

This question of fact cannot, in our opinion, be established by the mere assertion of a certain number of persons styling themselves "Provisional Government." Many other circumstances must obviously be required before a neutral State can be justified in recognizing as belligerents persons in insurrection against the Government of a State with whom she is on terms of amity. Among these circumstances, the length of time during which the contest has existed; the number, order, and discipline of the rebel forces; their subordination to a de facto existing Government, capable of maintaining international relations with foreign States; the acts of the Government against which the rebels are in arms, both with respect to the rebels themselves and to foreign States,—must obviously find place.

We perceive that it is stated in these papers that the Ottoman Government has declared the ports of Crete to be in a state of blockade; if so, we presume it would have notified the fact of this declaration to foreign States.

We do not, however, know whether this be the case or not; but if the Ottoman Government does require from foreign States the recognition of what is, strictly speaking, a blockade, and not merely a right, incident to every independent State, of closing the ports of any part of its dominions against foreign vessels; if, in fact, the Ottoman Government has declared a formal blockade, it would have no reason to complain if foreign States simply recognized the rebels as belligerents; because a blockade implies the existence of war, and of two belligerents at least, bound to respect the rights of neutral States.

We have thought it proper to make these general remarks, in the hope that they may either assist Her Majesty's Government in forming a conclusion on the facts before them, or may induce Her Majesty's Government to lay before us the facts of which they are in possession, without which we are unable ourselves to arrive at a satisfactory conclusion on this subject.

With respect to the question whether it be expedient that Her Majesty's Government should issue a Proclamation of Neutrality, in order to restrain Her Majesty's subjects from taking any part in this civil war, we have to observe that even without the issue of any such Proclamation, Her Majesty's subjects cannot lawfully enlist themselves in the service of any foreign State without the express permission of the Crown.

It is true that such a Proclamation has been usual, and of late years been very generally issued, in order to admonish Her Majesty's subjects that if they take any part in a war as to which Her Majesty is neutral, they will thereby infringe the law, disobey Her Majesty's order, and will be entitled to no protection from Her Majesty's Government. And if Her Majesty's Government should be of opinion, upon the facts before them, that the insurgents have established what may be recognised as a Government, and that this insurrection has assumed the character of a war, we think it would be proper that such a Proclamation should issue, but not otherwise; for the issuing of such a Proclamation might operate as a public recognition of the existence of a state of war. We have, however, thought it right, subject to these observations, to prepare and append to our Report a Draft Proclamation drawn in conformity with the usual precedents; which Draft, however, may require some alterations in order to meet the state of circumstances actually existing.

There remains to be considered the important question relative to the declared intention of the so-called "Provisional Government" of Crete to issue letters of marque and send forth privateers. We are of opinion that if this "Provisional Government" is to be treated as a belligerent de facto, they have a right, according to the general principles of international law, to resort to this means of self-defence, and of aggression against their enemy; but if they are not entitled to the status of belligerents, and these privateers sail upon the high seas under no flag of any de jure or de facto Government, they would be liable to be treated generally as piratical vessels, and especially to be treated as such if they should attempt to interfere in any way with the vessels of any foreign State. This consideration still further increases the importance of the decision at which Her Majesty's Government may arrive, upon the facts before them, as to the issue of a Proclamation of Neutrality, which might, as we have said, be a public recognition of the insurgents as belligerents. The notice now received of the intention of the "Provisional Government" of Crete to arm privateers and

---

* Treasury, June 22; Mr. Negropouli, July 17 and July 24; Treasury, June 29 and July 30, 1867.

† Also letter of August 5, from Mr. Hammond, inclosing letter of Provisional Government of Crete, notifying their intention to issue letters of marque.

1867

issue letters of marque, renders it expedient to keep strict watch over the movements of the suspected vessels at Liverpool.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
C. J. SELWYN.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

Inclosure in No. 161.

BY THE QUEEN.

A Proclamation.

WHEREAS We are happily at peace with all Sovereigns, Powers, and States:

And whereas hostilities have unhappily commenced and exist between the Government of the Ottoman Porte and certain persons exercising or assuming to exercise powers of government in the Island of Candia or Crete:

And whereas We, being at peace with the said contending parties, have declared Our Royal determination to maintain a strict and impartial neutrality in the said contest and hostilities now existing and being carried on between them, as aforesaid:

We therefore have thought fit, by and with the advice of Our Privy Council, to issue this Our Royal Proclamation:

And We do hereby strictly charge and command all Our loving subjects to observe a strict neutrality in and during the aforesaid hostilities, and to abstain from violating or contravening either the laws and statutes of the realm in this behalf, or the law of nations in relation thereto, as they will answer to the contrary at their peril.

And whereas, in and by a certain statute made and passed in the fifty-ninth year of His Majesty King George III, intituled "An Act to prevent the enlisting or engagement of His Majesty's subjects to serve in a foreign service, and the fitting out or equipping, in His Majesty's dominions, vessels for warlike purposes, without His Majesty's license," it is, amongst other things, declared and enacted as follows:—

"That if any natural-born subject of His Majesty, his heirs and successors, without the leave or license of His Majesty, his heirs or successors, for that purpose first had and obtained, under the Sign-Manual of His Majesty, his heirs or successors, or signified by Order in Council, or by Proclamation of His Majesty, his heirs or successors, shall take or accept, or shall agree to take or accept, any military commission, or shall otherwise enter into the military service as a commissioned or non-commissioned officer, or shall enlist or enter himself to enlist, or shall agree to enlist or to enter himself to serve as a soldier, or to be employed, or shall serve in any warlike or military operation in the service of, or for, or under, or in aid of any foreign Prince, State, Potentate, Colony, Province, or part of any province or people, or of any person or persons exercising or assuming to exercise the powers of government in or over any foreign country, colony, province, or part of any province or people, either as an officer or soldier, or in any other military capacity; or if any natural-born subject of His Majesty shall, without such leave or license as aforesaid, accept, or agree to take or accept, any commission, warrant, or appointment as an officer, or shall enlist or enter himself, or shall agree to enlist or enter himself, to serve as a sailor or marine, or to be employed or engaged, or shall serve in and on board any ship or vessel of war, or in and on board any ship or vessel used, or fitted out or equipped, or intended to be used for any warlike purpose, in the service of, or for, or under, or in aid of any foreign Power, Prince, State, Potentate, colony, province, or part of any province or people, or of any person or persons exercising or assuming to exercise the powers of government in or over any foreign country, colony, province, or part of any province or people; or if any natural-born subject of His Majesty shall, without such leave and license as aforesaid, engage, contract, or agree to go, or shall go to any foreign State, country, colony, province, or part of any province, or to any place beyond the seas, with an intent or in order to enlist or enter himself to serve, or with intent to serve in any warlike or military operation whatever, whether by land or by sea, in the service of, or for, or under, or in aid of any foreign Prince, State, Potentate, colony, province, or part of any province or people, or in the service of, or for, or under, or in aid of any person or persons exercising or assuming to exercise the powers of government in or over any foreign country, colony, province, or part of any province or people, either as an officer or a soldier, or in any other military capacity, or as an officer or sailor, or marine in any such ship or vessel as aforesaid, although no enlisting money, or pay, or reward, shall have been or shall be in any or either of the cases aforesaid actually paid to or received by him, or by any person to or for his use or benefit or if any person whatever within the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, or in any part of His Majesty's dominions elsewhere, or in any country, colony, settlement, island, or place belonging to or subject to His Majesty, shall hire, retain, engage, or procure, or shall attempt or endeavour to hire, retain, engage, or procure, any person or persons whatever to enlist, or to enter, or engage to enlist, or to serve or to be employed in any such service or employment as aforesaid, as an officer, soldier, sailor, or marine, either in land or sea service, for, or under, or in aid of any foreign Prince, State, Potentate, colony, province, or part of any province or people, or for, or under, or in aid of any person or persons exercising or assuming to exercise any powers of government as aforesaid, or to go, or to agree to go, or embark from any port of His Majesty's dominions for the purpose or with the intent to be so enlisted, entered, engaged, or employed as aforesaid, whether any enlisting money, pay, or reward shall have been or shall be actually given or received or not, in any or either of such cases every person so offending shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon being convicted thereof upon any information or indictment shall be punishable by fine and imprisonment, or either of them, at the discretion of the Court before which such offender shall be convicted."

And it is in and by the said Act further enacted:—"That if any person within any part of the United Kingdom, or in any part of His Majesty's dominions beyond the seas, shall, without the leave and license of His Majesty for that purpose first had and obtained as aforesaid, equip, furnish, fit out, or arm, or attempt or endeavour to equip, furnish, fit out, or arm, or procure to be equipped, furnished, fitted out, or armed, or shall knowingly aid, assist, or be concerned in the equipping, furnishing, fitting out, or arming of any ship or vessel, with intent or in order that such ship or vessel shall be employed in the service of any foreign Prince, State, or Potentate, or of any foreign Colony, province, or part of any province, or people, or of any person or persons exercising or assuming to exercise any powers of government in or over any foreign State, Colony, province, or part of any province or people, as a transport or store-ship, or with intent to cruize or commit hostilities against any Prince, State, or Potentate, or against the subjects or citizens of any Prince, State, or Potentate, or against the persons exercising or assuming to exercise the powers of government in any Colony, province, or part of any province or country, or against the inhabitants of any foreign Colony, province, or part of any province or country with whom His Majesty shall not then be at war; or shall, within the United Kingdom, or any of His Majesty's dominions, or in any settlement, colony, territory, island, or place belonging or subject to His Majesty, issue or deliver any commission for any ship or vessel, to the intent that such ship or vessel shall be employed as aforesaid, every such person so offending shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanour, and shall, upon conviction thereof, upon any information or indictment, be punished by fine and imprisonment, or either of them, at the discretion of the Court in which such offender shall be convicted; and every such ship or vessel, with the tackle, apparel, and furniture, together with all the materials, arms, ammunition, and stores which may belong to or be on board of any such ship or vessel, shall be forfeited; and it shall be lawful for any officer of His Majesty's Customs or Excise, or any officer of His Majesty's Navy who is by law empowered to make seizures for any forfeiture incurred under any of the laws of Customs or Excise, or the laws of trade and navigation, to seize such ships and vessels aforesaid, and in such places and in such manner in which the officers of His Majesty's Customs or Excise and the officers of His Majesty's Navy are empowered respectively to make seizures under the laws of Customs and Excise, or under the laws of trade and navigation; and that every such ship and vessel, with the tackle, apparel, and furniture, together with all the materials, arms, ammunition, and stores which may belong to or be on board of such ship or vessel, may be prosecuted and condemned in the like manner and in such Courts as ships or vessels may be prosecuted and condemned for any breach of the laws made for the protection of the revenues of Customs and Excise, or of the laws of trade and navigation."

And it is in and by the said Act further enacted:—"That if any person in any part of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, or in any part of His Majesty's dominions beyond the seas, without the leave and license of His Majesty for that purpose first had and obtained as aforesaid, shall, by adding to the number of the guns of such vessel, or by changing those on board for other guns, or by the addition of any equipment for war, increase or augment, or procure to be increased or augmented, or shall be knowingly concerned in increasing or augmenting, the warlike force of any ship or vessel of war, or cruizer, or other armed vessel, which at the time of her arrival in any part of the United Kingdom, or any of His Majesty's dominions, was a ship of war, cruizer, or armed vessel in the service of any foreign Prince, State, or Potentate, or of any person or persons exercising or assuming to exercise any powers of government in or over any Colony, province, or part of any province, or people belonging to the subjects of any such Prince, State, or Potentate, or to the inhabitants of any Colony, province, or part of any province, or country, under the control of any person or persons exercising or assuming to exercise the powers of government, every such person so offending shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanour, and shall, upon being convicted thereof, upon any information or indictment, be punished by fine and imprisonment, or either of them, at the discretion of the Court before which such offender shall be convicted."

1867

Now, in order that none of Our subjects may unwarily render themselves liable to the penalties imposed by the said statute, We do hereby strictly command that no person or persons whatsoever do commit any act, matter, or thing whatsoever contrary to the provisions of the said statute, upon pain of the several penalties by the said statute imposed, and of Our high displeasure. And We do hereby further warn all Our loving subjects, and all persons whatsoever entitled to Our protection, that if any of them shall presume, in contempt of this Our Royal Proclamation and of Our high displeasure, to do any acts in derogation of their duty, as subjects of a neutral Sovereign, in the said contest, or in violation or contravention of the law of nations in that behalf, as, for example, and more especially, by entering into the military service of either of the said contending parties as commissioned or non-commissioned officers or soldiers; or by serving as officers, sailors, or marines on board any ship or vessel of war or transport of or in the service of either of the said contending parties, or by serving as officers, sailors, or marines on board any privateer bearing letters of marque of or from either of the said contending parties; or by engaging to go, or going to any place beyond the seas, with intent to enlist or engage in any such service; or by procuring or attempting to procure, within Her Majesty's dominions at home or abroad, others to do so; or by equipping, furnishing, fitting out, or arming, or knowingly aiding, assisting, or being concerned in the equipping, furnishing, fitting out or arming any ship or vessel to be employed as a ship of war, transport, or store-ship, by either of the said contending parties against the other of such parties; or by breaking, or endeavouring to break, any blockade lawfully and actually established by or on behalf of either of the said contending parties; or by carrying officers, soldiers, despatches, arms, military stores or materials, or any article or articles considered and deemed to be contraband of war, according to the law or modern usage of nations, for the use or service of either of the said contending parties; all such persons so offending will incur and be liable to the several penalties and penal consequences by the said statute, or by the law of nations, in that behalf imposed or denounced. And We do hereby declare that, all Our subjects and persons entitled to Our protection, who may misconduct themselves in the premises, or otherwise act against the law or the statutes in such cases made and provided, will do so at their peril and of their own wrong, and that they will in no wise obtain any protection from Us against any liabilities or penal consequences, but will, on the contrary, incur Our high displeasure by such misconduct.

Given at Our Court at this day of in the year of Our Lord 1867, and in the year of Our reign.

God save the Queen.

---

No. 162.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received August 24.)

Temple, August 17, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 30th July ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying correspondence* which had taken place on the subject of the differences which have arisen between the Turkish authorities and Mrs. Thompson in regard to certain schools which she had established, and others which she is desirous of establishing, in Mount Lebanon, and to request we would take the papers into our consideration and report to your Lordship our opinion thereupon, as well as upon the two special questions raised by Mrs. Thompson, in regard to the right of English Protestants to establish schools in that country, and the right of the Turkish Government to close the same.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That according to the general principles of public and international law, it is competent to the Government of every independent State to make such regulations with respect to the establishment within their dominion of places of instruction of foreigners.

There are obvious reasons why this power should be exercised by a Government in places where, as in the Lebanon district, a fanatical population exists. Both upon general principles therefore, and with reference to the application of these principles to the present case, there can be no doubt that the Ottoman Government possesses this power with respect to the institution of schools by foreigners, unless it has conceded by solemn Treaty a liberty to foreigners inconsistent with this right. The burden of proving this exception in his favour certainly lies upon the foreigner who claims it.

We do not find in the original Capitulations which regulate the status and right of British subjects in the Ottoman dominions, or in any subsequent Treaty, any provisions which confer any exceptional privilege as to the matter upon British subjects. It appears to us that it was competent to the Governor of the Lebanon district to order the school to be closed which was opened without any previous permission being asked for, or granted to Mrs. Thompson.

Lastly, we think that there is no sufficient ground for the official interference of Her Majesty's Government on behalf of Mrs. Thompson.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
C. J. SELWYN.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 163.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received September 5.)

My Lord, Temple, September 4, 1867.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Murray's letter of the 27th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me a correspondence having reference to the claims of Mr. Petherick, late Her Majesty's Consul at Khartoum, against the Egyptian Government. That these claims were put forward in the year 1864, when, in consequence of the proceedings of the Governor-General of the Soudan, Mr. Petherick abandoned his trading pursuits and all his trading materials, and claimed compensation for the losses which he thus incurred. That his claim was submitted to the Queen's Advocate, who at the time gave it as his opinion that it should not be supported.

That Mr. Petherick has, however, requested your Lordship to reconsider the case, and that your Lordship is desirous that it should again be looked into in order to see whether Mr. Petherick may not, to some extent at least, if not wholly, be held to have a fair claim against the Egyptian Government, and whether it may be right that it should receive the support of Her Majesty's Government. That Mr. Petherick's claim is founded on an alleged unjust decree of the Governor-General of the Soudan, by which his trade was stopped, and that he asserts that this measure was adopted in order to get rid of him and other traders, and thus to enable the Governor-General to monopolize the trade to himself, and put an end to the opposition raised by Mr. Petherick as Consul to proceedings which were nothing less than a direct encouragement of the Slave Trade, which Mr. Petherick, in accordance with his duty and inclinations, said he did his best to suppress. That it was alleged as against his claim that Mr. Petherick was more or less concerned in the Slave Trade, inasmuch as the persons whom he employed to procure his articles of commerce obtained them by means of slave razzias, and that his own boats were found with slaves on board,

---

* Mr. Eldridge, No. 31, May 12, 1866; Mrs. Rogers, No. 15, May 14; Major-General Clarke, June 29; to Lord Lyons, No. 193, July 4; Lord Lyons, No. 313, July 15, 1867.

1867

That Mr. Petherick denies the assertion that he was in any way connected with the Slave Trade, and that, as a proof of his hostility to it, he says he himself denounced his servants for wrong-doing and handed them over to the Egyptian authorities for punishment. That Her Majesty's Government accepted Mr. Petherick's statements and exonerated him from all charge of slave-trading; and that he holds, therefore, that his claim his entitled to support. That the particulars of this case are fully explained in the correspondence; and Mr. Murray was pleased to state that your Lordship requests my opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken these papers into consideration and have the honour to report—

That I am of opinion Mr. Petherick is, to some extent, deserving of the support of Her Majesty's Government. Her Majesty's Government has explicitly acquitted Mr. Petherick of all direct complicity with slave-dealing, and the Governor-General of the Soudan appears to have failed to elicit from Mr. Petherick's Egyptian servants any unfavourable evidence against their employer. It deserves also to be borne in mind that if it is probable that the trade in ivory, &c., on the White River fosters indirectly the Trade in Slaves in the interior of Africa, Mr. Petherick was a trader in ivory, &c., when he was appointed Consul at Khartoum, on a small salary, and was allowed to continue his trade.

The complaint of Mr. Petherick against the conduct of the Governor-General of the Soudan, in the month of December 1863, may be briefly stated. It appears that, at the commencement of that month, an expedition of boats, according to the custom of the traders with the White River, had been fitted out by Mr. Petherick, and that the preparations for its departure were completed when the Governor-General of the Soudan decreed a new impost, and, by putting it at once in force, compelled Mr. Petherick to abandon his expedition, and thereby not merely stopped his immediate means of communication with his establishments on the White River, but indirectly ruined his trading establishments on that river by cutting off his means of communication with them. Mr. Petherick claims accordingly compensation, not merely for the loss which he has incurred by the detention of the boats equipped for that expedition, but for the indirect ruin of his general trade which that detention occasioned. It is unnecessary, in my opinion, to determine what was the real motive of the Governor-General in imposing the new tax; whether his object was immediate, and the double poll-tax was bonâ fide intended to check the out-flow of the able population towards the White River, which Mr. Petherick represents to have undergone an enormous development since 1859, or whether the Governor-General had a more remote object in view, and the tax was intended to drive away Mr. Petherick and the other traders, according to Mr. Petherick's suggestion, with a view to enable the Governor-General himself to monopolize the ivory trade.

I do not think that Mr. Petherick's unfavourable conclusions against the Governor-General on this latter head, which might give a more serious aspect to the case, are necessary inferences from the facts to be gathered from the correspondence.

My opinion, therefore, does not proceed upon any such conclusions against the Governor-General, but upon the circumstances under which the tax was imposed.

It appears that the expeditions from Khartoum to the White River start at a fixed season of the year, and occupy about six months, and the custom of the trader is to pay the boatmen five months' wages in advance. Mr. Petherick had followed the usual practice of himself and other traders in preparing his annual expedition, and had paid his boatmen five months' wages in advance, when the Governor-General announced the new tax.

Mr. Petherick, in his letter of the 26th December, 1863, addressed to Consul-General Colquhoun, asserts that the Governor-General, at the time when he wrote his despatch to Mr. Petherick, was aware of the fact that Mr. Petherick, as well as every other trader, had paid the boatmen five months' wages in advance, the voyage being calculated to last six months.

The despatch itself is set-forth at length in the printed summary therein prepared by Mr. Petherick, as well as the protest against the impost, which Mr. Petherick thought it his duty to deliver to the Governor-General, and in which Mr. Petherick presses on his Excellency's attention the fact that his Excellency was aware that every trader from Khartoum to the White River had paid his men five months' wages in advance, and had otherwise completed his preparations at the time when the "werko" (or poll-tax) was imposed; and that it was an oppressive act to enforce such a tax upon the trader without a fair warning.

Two questions at once suggest themselves upon perusing the Governor-General's despatch announcing the nature of the impost, and further, that the British traders were to be held responsible for the collection and payment of it:—

(1.) Whether the levying of a "werko," or poll-tax, to be paid by every British trader on the number of men leaving and returning with the boats employed by him in the White River trade, of double the amount of the "werko" levied upon each daily labourer at home, was not an indirect form of exacting from British traders a payment for the permission to transport their merchandize, and so far contrary to the spirit of Article II of the Treaty of April 29, 1861, which forbids any local Governor to compel British subjects to receive a permit for the removal of any article when purchased from one place to another;

(2.) Whether the impost of a "werko," or poll-tax, to be levied upon the men remaining at the trading stations on the White River, of treble the amount levied upon each labourer at home, and for the collection and payment of which in respect of the number of men in their employment at their stations on the White River each British subject trading to the White River was to be held responsible, was not altogether ultra vires, as regards the right of the Governor-General to impose taxes, and a wrongful exercise of power on his part as regards his attempt to exact payment of it from British traders, seeing that their stations on the White River were beyond the Egyptian frontier, and that the men at those stations had left the Soudan before the tax was introduced.

It seems, however, not to have been the impost of the treble "werko" in respect of the men employed at his establishments on the White River which, as I understand Mr. Petherick's case, compelled him to consign his boats to the charge of the Pasha and to give up his expedition, but the impost of the double "werko" in respect of the men engaged by him to leave and return with the boats.

The question accordingly narrows itself to the double "werko"—whether Mr. Petherick was justified in refusing to pay it, and whether the Governor-General of the Soudan, upon Mr. Petherick declining to become personally responsible for the payment of the double werko, was justified in refusing to allow the men to depart with the boats, whereby they were constrained to break their contract with Mr. Petherick after they had received five-sixths of their wages. I think Mr. Petherick was justified in refusing to pay the double werko, or to become responsible for it. It deserves remark that he had engaged the men for six months only, and he was required to pay the double werko for a whole year: and as Mr. Petherick was justified in refusing to become responsible for the impost, it follows that the Governor-General was not, upon Mr. Petherick's refusal, justified in refusing to allow the men to fulfil the contract which they had entered into with Mr. Petherick before the impost was announced.

This breach of contract undoubtedly damnified Mr. Petherick, and I think he is entitled to some compensation for the immediate loss which resulted to him from the abandonment of this expedition, which abandonment the conduct of the Governor-General may be said to have caused contrary to natural justice.

I do not, however, think that Mr. Petherick's claim for compensation for the subsequent breaking up of his establishments on the White River can be supported with equal reason. It was out of his power to take any measures to obviate the immediate effect of the Governor-General's exercise of arbitrary power as regarded the expedition from Khartoum; but Mr. Petherick's establishments on the White River were beyond the Egyptian frontier, and consequently beyond the Governor-General's control, and the evidence is not conclusive that their breaking-up can be fairly attributed exclusively to the conduct of the Governor-General.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 164.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received September 30.)

Temple, September 28, 1867.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 10th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me a letter dated the 19th June ultimo, and its inclosures, from Mr. W. E. Robinson, respecting a claim preferred by him against the Egyptian Railway Administration, together with Reports on the subject which your Lordship has received from the

1867

Acting British Consul-General in Egypt (No. 18), and from Colonel Stanton (August 24), and to request I would take the same into consideration, and report my opinion as to the course which your Lordship should take with regard to this matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That it will not be proper for Her Majesty's Government to give any support to the claim of Mr. W. E. Robinson against the Egyptian Railway Administration.

Mr. Robinson rests his claim on alleged parole promises made to him by officers of the Railway Administration subsequently to his own written undertaking; but all the parties are reported to concur in denying that such alleged promises were ever made by them.

Mr. Robinson appears further to have taken a wrong view of his own written undertaking, and to have kept possession improperly of the house belonging to the Railway Administration after he had received a written notice to give up possession of it.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 165.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received October 5.)

Temple, October 4, 1867.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 20th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me a despatch from Mr. Barron (No. 37), reporting the steps taken by Her Majesty's Embassy at Constantinople to obtain a settlement of a claim preferred against the Porte by Colonel Churchill, a British subject resident in Syria, on account of the sequestration of a quantity of salt. The previous correspondence referred to by Mr. Barron, which however relates also to another and a distinct claim, was likewise inclosed; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take these papers into consideration, and report to your Lordship my opinion with regard to this matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That it appears that all the members of the Mixed Commission concur in the opinion that Colonel Churchill was not aggrieved by the sequestration placed upon his salt in February 1857, as that sequestration was justified as a measure of protection to Antoon Bey; and that no damages are due to Colonel Churchill on account of the sequestration.

Three of the Commissioners concur in the opinion that, under the contract of Antoon Bey, Colonel Churchill is entitled to remove his salt beyond the eyalet of Sidon.

The Commissioners are equally divided upon the question whether any damages are due to Colonel Churchill; the English Commissioners being of opinion that the local authorities ought to have replied to Colonel Churchill's protest, and informed him that he was entitled to remove his salt, and that the Turkish Government is responsible for any losses which may have accrued to Colonel Churchill in consequence of the long sequestration.

As the Commissioners hold the sequestration to have been justified to prevent any further sale of the salt within the eyalet of Sidon, I am of opinion that Colonel Churchill's protest against the sequestration was ill-founded, and that he is not entitled to any damages by reason of its having been disregarded by the local authorities. It does not appear from the Report of any of the Commissioners what were the precise terms of that protest; but it appears from the letter addressed by Mr. Stuart to Earl Russell on 9th February, 1864 (No. 64), that Colonel Churchill's complaint at that time, upon which the Mixed Commission was appointed to report, was against the local authorities of Beyrout, on account of his having been illegally prohibited by them from selling his salt. The Commissioners being unanimous in opinion that the prohibition from selling the salt was perfectly justified, I am of opinion that your Lordship will be warranted in declining to support any claim of Colonel Churchill for compensation, by reason of losses consequential on the sequestration; and that your intercession may reasonably be confined to procuring for Colonel Churchill permission to export his salt, and to sell it beyond the eyalet of Sidon. With regard to the objection raised in the Report of Mustafa Effendi to the sale of the salt beyond the eyalet of Sidon, I think, inasmuch as the local authorities do not appear, at the time when the sequestration was placed upon the salt, to have informed Colonel Churchill that he was at liberty to remove it out of the eyalet of Sidon, that Colonel Churchill ought not to be prejudiced by any subsequent order of the Turkish Government which may have made salt a monopoly of the "Miri." I may add that if any serious loss has resulted from Colonel Churchill's stores being broken into by the local authorities pending the sitting of the Commission, your Lordship may with justice, in my opinion, press upon the Turkish Government the propriety of compensation being made to Colonel Churchill on that account.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 166.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received October 8.)

Temple, October 5, 1867.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 11th ultimo, stating that, with reference to the Report of Her Majesty's late Advocate-General of the 6th October last, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the accompanying correspondence respecting a claim preferred against the Porte by M. de Mattos, on account of interest on the value of coals supplied by him to the Turkish Military Council in 1859, but which, contrary to the terms of the contract, were not paid for until 1862. And further stating that I should perceive, from Fuad Pasha's note, of which a copy was inclosed in Mr. Barron's last despatch, that the Porte declines to admit this claim; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take this matter into consideration, and report to your Lordship my opinion as to the course which Her Majesty's Government should take.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken this matter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That as it appears from the last letter of Fuad Pasha that the Ottoman Minister of War declares it to be impossible for the Artillery Department to comply with M. de Mattos' claim for interest in the absence of legal proofs proper to justify the claim, I am of opinion that the most advisable course for your Lordship to pursue with a view to give further aid to M. de Mattos' claim, will be to propose that the question of interest, the contract being silent on the subject, should be referred to a Mixed Commission to inquire and report whether, according to the practice of the Turkish Commercial Courts, interest would be allowed by them upon a contract of an analogous kind.

As the claim for interest depends upon the lex loci solutionis, which in this case is Turkish law, and Fuad Pasha's letter implies that the Minister of War denies all legal liability to pay interest, I think that your Lordship cannot well insist on the payment of M. de Mattos' claim for interest, until it has been established that such a claim has the sanction of Turkish law.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 167.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received October 11.)

Temple, October 10, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 30th of August last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatches from Mr. Reade, the Acting British Consul-General in Egypt, respecting the case of the English engine-drivers, together with despatches on the subject from Colonel Stanton, Her Majesty's Agent and Consul-General now on leave in this country, and drafts of instructions which, under the advice of Her Majesty's late Advocate-General, your Lordship had addressed to Mr. Reade;* and

---

* Mr. Reade, Nos. 1, 10, 12, 15, 19, and 21; Colonel Stanton, June 25, July 24, and August 24; to Mr. Reade, Nos. 24, 25, and 30.

1867

Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take these papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion on this matter, and as to the course which it would be proper for Her Majesty's Government to pursue. We were also honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's note of the 3rd September ultimo, in which he stated that, with reference to his letter of the 30th of last, he was directed by your Lordship to request that we would take into consideration and report our opinion upon the accompanying additional papers respecting the case of the engine-drivers on the Egyptian Railway.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers submitted to us into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That the claims of these engine-drivers arise mainly out of alleged breaches of contracts by the Egyptian Government, such contracts being in writing, and regulating, as is properly pointed out by Cherif Pasha in his despatch of the 2nd July last, the relations between the employers and employed.

Early in this year, the drivers, after making complaints with respect to different matters, which complaints it is alleged were not properly noticed, intimated that unless their demands were complied with, they should refuse to work under their contracts; and the Railway Administration deeming that their complaints were not well-founded, did not attend to them; and, accordingly, twenty-eight drivers, on a given day, "struck," or at all events refused to work, to the serious inconvenience of the Railway Administration.

Their grounds of complaint appear to have been :—

1. Erroneous calculation of "overtime" made, to their detriment.
2. Refusal to allow night tickets, that is, an allowance for nights passed away from home.
3. Repayment of fines illegally levied, as they contend, upon certain of the engine-drivers (see Mr. Reade's letter 7th June, 1867; Cherif Pasha, 2nd July).

Upon the strike taking place, correspondence ensued between Mr. Reade and the Egyptian Minister of Foreign Affairs, and His Highness the Viceroy appears to have appointed a Commission to investigate the circumstances connected with the strike; which Commission appears to have concluded its sittings in June, though their Report is not dated until 5th July, 1867, and was only obtained by Mr. Reade and forwarded to England in the middle of August last.

Meantime, however, Mr. Reade had pressed the claims of the engine-drivers upon the Egyptian Government, upon the assumption that the Commission, at whose sittings he had been present, would report favourably to the engine-drivers; and as the Egyptian Government declined to accede to Mr. Reade's demands, he, acting under the authority of Her Majesty's Government, in consequence of an opinion of the late Queen's Advocate upon the statements then before him, sequestered a portion of a subsidy or payment due from Her Majesty's Government to the Egyptian Government, in satisfaction of part of the claims of the engine-drivers, tendering the balance to that Government, which they refused to accept, and have returned.

The engine-drivers further claim wages or remuneration during the time they remained to give evidence before the Commission, and six months' wages and expenses, or damages, to which they allege they are entitled, because they were dismissed, or because, by reason of breach of contract by the Egyptian Government, they had a right to break the contract, stop work, and sue for damages.

The Report of the Commissioners is in some respects favourable to the drivers, in some respects adverse; on some points the members of the Committee differ, and they appear to take upon themselves to say what ought fairly to be done between the Egyptian Government and the drivers, rather than to consider what the legal rights of the parties are.

It certainly does not appear that the Commissioners were in any sense arbiters by whose opinion the parties were to be bound; but the drivers seem to have remained in Egypt, and attended before the Commissioners with their witnesses, in the expectation that the dispute would be terminated by the Report of the Commissioners.

On the most important question, two out of three members of the Commission, viz., the President and Sami Bey, "are of opinion that the men were most decidedly wrong in stopping work" (page ). From this view, Mr. Phillips, the third member, differs.

All the members think that the men were compelled to work unreasonably long hours, and that they were inadequately paid by the sum of 1*s.* 4*d.* per hour for such extra services.

Sami Bey and Mr. Phillips think that the men had cause of complaint, by reason of their not having places in which to sleep and eat comfortably while away from home. In this view the President differs, thinking that there was no breach of contract.

The Commissioners are unanimously of opinion that the claim for "night tickets" is not capable of being supported (page 6).

That repayment of the fines cannot properly be claimed, for reasons given at length (page 7).

A claim by one man, Lawson, in consequence of his only having received half-pay, is dismissed (page 15).

The Commissioners are unanimously of opinion "that the system on which the Divan has calculated the overtime of the men is illiberal and wrong" (page 16).

Lastly (page 22), the Commissioners say: "Whatever decision His Highness the Viceroy may condescend to take with reference to the drivers' strike, we respectfully beg your Excellency that the men may be paid up to the day on which such decision is communicated to them. As the men—whether in the right or in the wrong—were detained here to give evidence before this Commission, we consider this payment is only a matter of justice."

Cherif Pasha comments on the Report of the Commission in his despatch of the 11th of August, and thus the matter rests at present so far as the Egyptian Government is concerned.

In September, Mr. Bridgefield forwards the claims of some of the drivers, who send their contracts, and require wages from the 20th of April, 1867, till the 4th of July, 1867, being the period during which the Commissioners sat, at 22*l.* per month (53*l.*); six months' salary, in lieu of notice to terminate their engagements (132*l.*); and interest from the 4th of July until payment.

The actual facts of the case are not before us; but so far as we can judge of them from the reports and statements, the claims made by the men are not such as your Lordship can be advised to insist upon.

It is probable that they and their advisers here have not seen the Report of the Commissioners, which, as we have pointed out (by the opinion of two of the Commissioners), negatives entirely the right of the men to strike.

If this view be adopted, not only was their engagement not terminated by the Government, but they may be actually liable to the Government for improperly breaking their contracts.

It is not a question whether they had a right to sue for arrears of pay, or for being compelled to work for an unreasonable number of hours, or to refuse to obey orders because unlawful; the question is, whether, by reason of alleged breach of contract by the Egyptian Government, they had a right to determine the engagement, and treat such determination as a wrongful discharge by the Government. From what we can gather, we are of opinion that this cannot be done; that the men should have performed their part of the contract, and taken their remedy against the Government if they were not dealt with according to contract. By "striking," we think they placed themselves in a wrong position, and that their claims for damages cannot be supported in law.

We would suggest that the Report of the Commission should be furnished to Mr. Bridgefield if he has not seen it, and that he should be informed that, under the circumstances, Her Majesty's Government do not feel justified in making the claims put forward on the Egyptian Government.

It occurs to us that if, in addition to a fair settlement of the overtime account, the Egyptian Government could be induced to pay the men for their time while remaining in Egypt to attend before the Commission appointed by the Viceroy—which Commission has in some respects justified the men's complaints of breach of contract, and of hardships imposed not contemplated by the contract—a not unreasonable compromise of this affair, which has, from circumstances, assumed a somewhat important aspect, would be arrived at.

We have, &c.

(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
C. J. SELWYN.
TRAVERS TWISS.

1867

No. 168.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received October 24.)

Temple, October 23, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Murray's letter of the 14th August last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Mr. Francis, the Legal Vice-Consul in Her Majesty's Consular Court at Alexandria (No. 10), requesting instructions relative to two applications made to him for the grant of British protection; the first case being that of one Bagio, a Jew, whose parents were Ottoman subjects of Aleppo, but who is alleged to have been born in British India.

The second is that of a native of Scio, named Schilizzi, who was for some time a naturalized British subject, and lived at Manchester, where four children were born to him, for whom he claims British nationality, as well as for a fifth recently born in Egypt.

Mr. Murray was pleased to add that cases similar to those above referred to have at various times been referred for the decision of our predecessors in office; and that he was to call our attention more particularly to the Queen's Advocate's Report of the 13th of September, 1850, and to a Report from the Law Officers of the Crown of the 14th of August, 1860, upon which Reports were founded the instructions addressed on the subject to Colonel Sheil and Mr. Alison,* who successively held the post of Her Majesty's Minister in Persia, which were also transmitted; and Mr. Murray was pleased to request that we would take these papers into our consideration, and furnish your Lordship with our opinion as to the nature of the instructions which should be addressed to Mr. Francis.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That the instructions to be given to Mr. Francis, as regards the person named Bagio, must, we think, depend in a great measure on the question whether he was or was not born in British India. It seems to be admitted that his parents were Ottoman subjects who went to India, but returned to the Turkish dominions, though it is not stated where, nor at what period of Bagio's life, nor whether he came with them from India.

The Egyptian Government allege that Bagio was not born in India, and if so he appears to have no claim to British protection. Assuming that he was born in British India, we think that his claim for protection must depend on the usage and practice that have prevailed hitherto in Turkey.

In the Report of the Law Officers of the 14th of August, 1860, to which we are referred, we find it stated that they believe that children born in Her Majesty's dominions of Turkish parents, and afterwards going into Turkey, habitually enjoy British protection, unless they act in such a manner as to forfeit the right thereto, and to show that they have "elected" the (Turkish) nationality of their father.

Bagio, therefore, if born in British India, would, as we understand the practice that has hitherto prevailed, be entitled to claim British protection in Turkey, unless he has by his acts adopted his father's nationality. It is probable that, under the law of Turkey, Bagio (even though born abroad) is, by reason of his parentage, deemed to be a Turkish subject; and it might be a question of policy deserving of much consideration whether it is expedient to keep up, in the case of Turkey, the distinction which has been observed by this country between persons born in Her Majesty's dominions, of foreign parents, who are the subjects by parentage of another Christian country, and who, when in that country, do not enjoy British protection, and persons similarly circumstanced in a country professing the Mahomedan religion, who, according to practice, are allowed such protection.

With respect to Schilizzi, we understand that he was born in Turkish dominions, but that he resided for some time in England, and was naturalized here, and that he has now returned to Turkey.

We think that neither he nor his child born in Turkey can claim British protection there; and we think that the children born in England, while they form part of their father's family (unless some usage to the contrary has prevailed in Turkey), should not be taken under British protection.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
C. J. SELWYN.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

* To Colonel Sheil, No. 82, September 14, 1850; to Mr. Alison, No. 64, August 25, 1860.

No. 169.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received October 24.)

My Lord, Temple, October 23, 1867.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 18th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me a letter from a Mr. Isaac Pariente, who states himself to be the defendant in a case which was recently tried before Her Majesty's Consular Court in Egypt, and which was decided against him, but who points out the difficulty of appealing to the Supreme Court at Constantinople, inasmuch as Mr. Francis, the local Judge before whom the case was in the first instance tried, has since been promoted to the office of Supreme Judge.

Mr. Egerton was pleased to request that I would inform your Lordship what answer should be returned to Mr. Pariente.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs has no power of interfering with the regular order of proceeding in matters of appeal from the Provincial Consular Courts, which are directed by Her Majesty's Order in Council of 30th November, 1864, to be heard before the Supreme Consular Court.

Your Lordship may, however, enable Mr. Pariente to have a bonâ fide hearing of his appeal before the Supreme Court by exercising the power which your Lordship has, under the Order in Council, of approving on an emergency a fit person to act temporarily as Acting Judge, and I think it would be proper for your Lordship to give Mr. Pariente the option of having such a bonâ fide hearing.

But if there should be a difficulty in obtaining the services of a competent Acting Judge, there is an alternative course, if the amount at issue in the cause exceeds 500*l.*, so as to allow of a final appeal to Her Majesty in Council, which Mr. Pariente seems from his present application to have ultimately in view. Mr. Pariente, as appellant, may agree with the respondent to accept a formal judgment from the Supreme Court of the same tenor as the judgment of the Provincial Court, and thereupon appeal from that judgment in regular course to Her Majesty in Council. Such a proceeding by consent would not prejudice Mr. Pariente before the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, whilst it would be calculated to save all parties both expense and time. It will be for Mr. Pariente to consider which course he should adopt, and if he should, upon consulting with his legal advisers, prefer the latter course, it will not be necessary for your Lordship to appoint an Acting Judge.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 170.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received October 25.)

My Lord, Temple, October 24, 1867.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 18th instant, stating that with reference to my letter of the 4th ultimo, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me two letters from Mr. Petherick, dated the 8th and 9th instant, together with a Memorandum by Mr. Hammond relating to his claim against the Egyptian Government; and that one of these letters contains a statement of his account with the Egyptian Government, showing the amount of compensation to which he considers himself entitled.

And Mr. Egerton was pleased to request that I would take these papers into consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the course which should be pursued in dealing with this claim.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That Mr. Petherick should be informed that the statement of account which he has submitted to your Lordship is not a sufficient compliance with your Lordship's request that he should furnish a detailed statement setting forth the items of compensation to which he considers himself to be entitled, in regard to his claim for loss incurred by the detention of his boats fitted out for the expedition from Khartoum in 1863, and that he should be requested to supply fuller details in explanation of that portion of his account which refers to the merchandize, &c., stopped by order of the Egyptian Government, amounting to 486,299 Egyptian piastres 30 paras, and the set-off against it of receipts on account of sale, &c., of merchandize, &c., amounting to 171,394 Egyptian piastres, and that in preparing his further statement he should distinguish the items of expenditure for wages from the items of expenditure for merchandize, &c.

1867

With regard to the other portions of his account, they appear primâ facie to refer to the trade carried on by Mr. Petherick at his stations beyond the Egyptian frontier, from which it is apparent upon the face of the account that he continued to receive returns in ivory up to a very recent period. Whether such ivory was the produce of the hunting expedition on the White Nile, or was purchased with the merchandize, &c., in consignment at Mr. Petherick's stations on the White Nile, or was the result partly of the one and partly of the other, does not appear; but these returns, which are spread over four successive years, go to support the view which I expressed in my previous Report, that there was not that immediate connection between the stoppage of the expedition from Khartoum in 1863, and Mr. Petherick's abandonment of his trade at his stations on the White Nile, which would justify your Lordship in regarding the latter as a necessary consequence of the former, and so exclusively to be attributed to the arbitrary conduct of the Governor-General of the Soudan that any loss incurred by Mr. Petherick at his stations on the White Nile would be a just subject for indemnification at the hands of the Egyptian Government.

Unless, therefore, Mr. Petherick is prepared to make out that any portion of the loss incurred by him at his stations on the White Nile was the immediate consequence of the stoppage of his boats in 1863, it will not be necessary for your Lordship to request him to furnish you with fuller details of this portion of his accounts; at the same time, it may be proper to inform Mr. Petherick that he may exercise the option of submitting to your Lordship further details on this part of his account.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 171.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received December 3.)

Temple, December 2, 1867.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 29th of November, stating that with reference to my Report of the 24th of October last, relative to the claims of Mr. Petherick upon the Egyptian Government, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me a further letter and its inclosure from Mr. Petherick, dated the 28th November ultimo, upon the subject of his claims; and Mr. Egerton was pleased to request that I would take these papers into consideration, and report to your Lordship my opinion whether the further explanation and accounts now furnished are sufficient to justify Her Majesty's Government in pressing Mr. Petherick's claims upon the Egyptian Government, and, if so, to what extent of his demands.

The former papers relating to this case were annexed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That Mr. Petherick, in his amended account, has furnished your Lordship with sufficient materials for ascertaining the immediate loss which was caused to him by the stoppage of the expedition from Khartoum in 1863.

It appears that the value of the two boats, the merchandize embarked upon them, and the wages of the men hired to navigate them, amounted to 4,987*l*. 13*s*., from which the sum of 1,682*l*. 2*s*., the produce of the sale of the boats and merchandize, will have to be deducted. The clear loss accruing to Mr. Petherick on this part of the account will be about 3,305*l*. 11*s*.

Mr. Petherick has also furnished an item of account, being the seventh item, which may be regarded as a loss immediately consequent on the stoppage of the expedition, namely, the sum of 43,007 piastres for goods purchased of Omar Bitoni on the stoppage of the supplies from Khartoum.

This item, which will amount to 374*l*. or thereabouts, may fairly be added to the previous sum of 3,305*l*. 11*s*.

The other items of Mr. Petherick's account appear to be connected with his general trade at his stations on the White Nile beyond the Egyptian frontier. I have already reported to your Lordship that I consider the losses which Mr. Petherick may have incurred at those stations not to be a just subject for indemnification at the hands of the Egyptian Government. Mr. Petherick, from motives of prudence as a merchant, may have deemed it the less of two evils to abandon his general trade rather than to continue it with a prospect of increased expenses and increased difficulties of communication with his stations, but it was clearly competent for the Governor-General of the Soudan to impose a double poll-tax in future upon all Egyptian subjects leaving the Soudan far the White Nile, and, after reasonable notice, to prevent any subject leaving the Soudan in the service of a foreign merchant without having previously paid his quota of the tax. There is also a circumstance to which I may justly call your Lordship's attention as conclusive evidence that Mr. Petherick's abandonment of his general trade was not an inevitable step forced upon him by the arbitrary proceedings of the Governor-General like the abandonment of his expedition of boats in 1863, namely, that it appears that other European merchants continued their trade from Khartoum to the White Nile, notwithstanding the impost of the poll-tax upon the Egyptian boatmen in their employment.

Mr. Petherick will, I think, be further entitled to interest at 5 per cent. on the sum above named.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 172.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received December 7.)

My Lord, Temple, December 6, 1867.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 30th November ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatches from the Acting British Consul at Constantinople, upon the subject of an application made to him to solemnize a marriage between Mr. Jenner, Third Secretary in Her Majesty's Diplomatic Service, and a lady calling herself Stephanie Emilianoff.

Mr. Hammond was also pleased to say, that we would see from these despatches that a caveat had been entered against the marriage in question by the mother of Mr. Jenner, on the ground that the intended bride had been already married in Russia to a man named Papparagopolis, and that, although she subsequently obtained a divorce in the Greek Law Courts, such divorce does not render her free to contract a second marriage.

Mr. Hammond was pleased to inclose, for convenience of reference, a volume which contains the various Acts of Parliament relating to Consular marriages, and to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the instructions that should be given to Mr. Guarracino in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have perused the papers submitted to us, and have the honour to report—

That for the purpose of the proposed marriage at the British Consulate, Madame Stephanie Emilianoff, who is described in the notice of marriage as "divorced," is to be regarded as a foreigner, and that Her Majesty's Consul is entitled to require, and ought to receive, satisfactory proof that the previous marriage has been dissolved by the sentence of a competent Court in the country of her matrimonial domicile; and that by the law of that country she is free to contract a second matrimonial engagement. Under these circumstances Her Majesty's Consul may properly delay solemnization of the proposed marriage, against which a caveat has been entered, until proof by affidavit, declaration, or otherwise, has been furnished, that Madame Stephanie Emilianoff, a Russian subject, was duly married to Mr. Papparagopolis, a Greek subject in Russia; that their marriage was subsequently dissolved at Athens, both parties being there domiciled, by the sentence of the Metropolitan; and that by reason of such sentence, according to the laws of the Kingdom of Greece, Madame Stephanie Emilianoff is free to contract a second matrimonial engagement. As part of such proof, an authenticated copy of the sentence should be sent; and in order to satisfy Her Majesty's Consul of the legal effect of such sentence, a certificate from a competent authority on Greek law should be furnished, that Madame Stephanie Emilianoff is free under such sentence to contract a second matrimonial engagement, according to the laws of the Kingdom of Greece.

1867

Her Majesty's Acting Consul has not formally requested that his statement should be referred to the Registrar-General under sec. 7 of 12 & 13 Vict., cap. 68, though Mr. Jenner at the end of his letter of the 18th November requests that the question may be so referred. Perhaps your Lordship will, under the circumstances, think it right to refer the question to the Registrar-General for his decision in writing, as pointed out by the statute, in order that your Lordship may communicate such decision to the Consul.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
C. J. SELWYN.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

United States.

No. 173.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received January 15.)

Lincoln's Inn, January 12, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 31st day of December, 1866, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Washington (No. 380), inclosing a copy of a Report by the Special Claims Commission established in that city relative to a demand for compensation put forward by Mrs. Mary Cassin for destruction of her property during the war, and also a copy of a note from Mr. Seward respecting a claim of the same description put forward by Mr. Emmanuel Jones.

Mr. Hammond was also pleased to state that we should perceive that Sir Frederick Bruce contrasts the grounds advanced for the rejection of the one claim with those advanced in the other case; and to request that we would take these papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That the Special Claims Commission appears to be a Municipal Tribunal established by the authorities of the United States for the purpose of adjudicating upon claims of their own citizens, as well as on claims of foreigners domiciled there. The establishment of such a Commission was, we think, within the power of the United States, and when established, the United States' authorities were, we think, entitled to lay down rules for its guidance. The rules and regulations, in fact, laid down, and of which copies have been sent us, do not appear to have made any substantial distinction between United States' subjects who had given aid to the rebellion, and domiciled foreigners in the same position (see the 6th and 8th Rules), and there is nothing to be complained of on this ground.

The decision of the Commission on Cassin's claim is, as to part of the property claimed, that it was purchased after the State of Georgia was declared to be in insurrection; that is, that the purchase was an act giving aid to the rebellion, and that it was subject to legal capture or destruction alike by the rules of public and of municipal law. And as to other part of the property purchased by Cassin before the rebellion, the evidence in support of the claim was held insufficient; but it was said that the parties might be entitled to relief if they could establish the conditions of having been the bonâ fide neutral subjects of a foreign State or Power at peace and amity with the United States.

The claim of Mr. Jones does not appear to have been before the Commission at all; but Sir F. Bruce, in his diplomatic character, appears to have called the attention of the United States' Minister to it, who, in his reply, no doubt treats the claimant as having acquired a domicile as a trader in an enemy's country, but he refers at the same time to the Special Claims Commission, and intimates that if Mr. Jones presents his case there he has no doubt it will be patiently examined and justly decided.

Of course it does not follow that the Commission, if Mr. Jones should present his claim there, would adopt the views of Mr. Seward.

There is no doubt a discrepancy in the views expressed by the Commission and by Mr. Seward as to the position of parties making claims for compensation under circumstances substantially the same. But it does not occur to us that this discrepancy furnishes ground for any action by Her Majesty's Government in the matter, or for any representation to the United States' Government in reference thereto. We think no good grounds exist, from anything appearing upon the papers before us, to complain of, or seek to interfere with the acts or decisions of the Special Claims Commission; nor are we aware of any ground on which an application could be made to the United States' Government for the establishment of any other Tribunals than such as are already in existence in the United States.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 174.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received February 14.)

Doctors' Commons, February 13, 1867.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 9th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me a letter from Messrs. Jewell and Chamberlain, forwarding a Memorial from the holders of the Confederate Cotton Loan, together with a legal opinion which they have obtained on the subject of their claims; and to request that I would take these papers into consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken this case into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That the positions for which the petitioners contend appear to be these:—

1. That the late Confederate States have been recognized as de facto belligerent by Her Majesty's Government, and by the Tribunals of the United States, and are to be considered exactly in the same light as a foreign enemy whose territory has been conquered and passes cum onere to the conqueror, that is, with the obligation to discharge its debts contracted with the other foreign States binding upon him.

2. That the debts in this case were contracted on behalf of separate States which had, independently of their temporary union under a Confederacy, by their prior original political constitution, as acknowledged by the United States, power to contract such debts, and that the Confederate Government was only the agent of each, or all of these States separately, competent to contract per se the loan.

3. That these States have been prevented from discharging their debts by the conqueror, the United States, and have been forced to repudiate them.

4. That the United States has possessed itself as conqueror of all the resources of the States available for the discharge of the debt, and even of the cotton which was especially pledged for the payment of the foreign creditor.

Upon these grounds principally, if not exclusively, the Memorialists apply to Her Majesty's Government to intervene on their behalf with the Government of the United States, and obtain from them payment of the bonds issued by the late de facto Confederate Government.

The Memorial raises two distinct questions—

(1). Whether the United States are bound by the principles, rules, and precedents of international law to pay to the foreign creditor debts owing to him from the Confederate Government?

(2). Whether, whatever may be the true answer to this question, the case of the

1867

Memorialists is made out for the official intervention of Her Majesty's Government on their behalf with the Government of the United States.

The second question alone calls for any remarks from me. I am of opinion that Her Majesty's Government ought not to accede to the request of the Memorialists. It might be enough to say that Her Majesty's Government could not do so without, to a certain extent, pronouncing judgment upon the difficult question of foreign constitutional law with respect to the limits of the sovereignty of each State, and their relation to the Supreme Government of the United States which in great measure gave rise to this very war.

The Memorialists take their stand upon the language of the Confederate Constitution previous to the war of the United States (page 5 in fine, 6), with respect to the sovereignty of each State composing the Union, and protest "against the charge that the bonds which we hold were issued by insurgents or by a Government having its origin in insurrection."

Her Majesty's Government must, therefore, necessarily assume as the basis of their right to intervene, that the very proposition of American Constitutional Law, as to which this fierce controversy has arisen, and which has practically been solved by force and conquest after a bloody civil war, is, nevertheless, incontrovertible in the sense contended for by the Confederates and their creditors.

In other words, Her Majesty's Government must found their application to the United States' Government on the ground that the war which they have waged, and in which they have conquered, was unlawful, and contrary to the principles and laws of their own internal constitution.

It is obvious that it is not competent to Her Majesty's Government to take this course. The United States' Government would be entitled to treat it in the same spirit as Her Majesty's Government would have treated the intervention of the United States' Government on behalf of a subject who had lent money to a native Indian Prince during the late rebellion in India, to enable him to levy war against the Queen of England. The United States' Government might by a like process of reasoning contend that the original contract subsisting between the East India Company and the native Prince had been broken, that he being an independent Sovereign had a right to borrow money of a foreign creditor, and that the conqueror took his territory cum onere and was bound to discharge the debt.

The argument from the recognition of the Confederates as de facto belligerents fails altogether as an argument for the interference of Her Majesty's Government.

Her Majesty proclaimed a strict neutrality, and enjoined it upon her subjects, admonishing them that if they aided either belligerent, they would do so at their own peril, and without any claim upon her assistance, if evil consequences ensued to them therefrom.

To furnish a belligerent with money is to render him the most material aid, to supply him with the very sinews of war. Let me, moreover, suggest some tests by which both the duty of the neutral Government towards its subjects, and the jus victoris may be tried.

If the money, in specie, advanced by the Memorialists to the Southerners, had been captured on its way out to them;—if the United States' army had seized the money in specie in the Treasury of the Confederates;—if, instead of money, munitions of war, ships, cannons, and the like, had been furnished by the Memorialists, and the United States' army had seized these articles, for which cotton bonds had been given as a security, and afterwards the very cotton itself which was pledged for their payment:—in any or all of these instances the unfitness of any intervention on the part of Her Majesty's Government would be apparent; but it would not be easy to distinguish, in principle, the right of Her Majesty's Government to demand, on behalf of the Memorialists, from the United States repayment of the money which had actually reached the hands of the Confederate Government and been expended by them; from the right to do so, when the money had been captured on the high seas, or on land, or when the loan had been contracted by an exchange, immediate or promised, of commodities (e.g., so much munitions of war for so much cotton), and these commodities had been seized jure belli by the conqueror.

I do not think that Her Majesty's Government is bound to consider the remaining question, namely, as to the obligation of the United States towards the private British creditor of the late Confederacy, if my opinion be well founded, that this creditor has no claim to the official intervention of Her Majesty's Government on his behalf.

But I will offer upon this part of the case also a few observations. The United States' Government may not unfairly contend that the general obligation of the conquering State to discharge the debts previously contracted with foreign creditors by the conquered State does not extend to the case, where these debts have not been the subject of an engagement previous to the war, but have been contracted during, and for the express purpose of carrying on, the war, inasmuch as this doctrine would compel the conqueror to defray the costs not only of his own conquest, but of the resistance of his enemy.

But that at all events it cannot be said to apply to the case of a debt contracted by Provinces or States which, before the war, were subject to the authority of the Power from which they revolted, and by which they have been, after a short struggle by force of arms, recovered.

This war (the United States' Government may observe) was not closed by a Treaty which contained stipulations that the conqueror should, either altogether or in a specified proportion, pay the debts of the conquered, according to the usage which has long prevailed on the subject. No foreign State intervened in the war, or made any demand at the close of it, that a foreign debt should be recognized by the conqueror. The creditors, in this case, entered of their own free-will into a speculation which, if the Confederates had prospered, would have been lucrative, but which their failure has rendered the reverse.

Whether they have any right to complain that their debtors, the States of the late Confederacy, yielded without making terms, on their behalf, with the conqueror; or that they accepted the repudiation of the debt as a condition of their being restored to the Union; or that they do not now contrive some means of fulfilling their engagements with their creditors,—are questions which the Government of the United States may well refuse to entertain.

The importance of the subject has led me to report at greater length than I could have wished; but, for the reasons which I have stated, I am clearly of opinion that Her Majesty's Government ought not to comply with the prayer of the Memorial from the holders of the Confederate Cotton Loan.

I have, &c.
(Signed) ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 175.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received February 14.)

My Lord,
Lincoln's Inn, February 14, 1867.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 31st ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a note from Mr. Adams, forwarding a copy of a despatch from Mr. Seward, dated the 28th ultimo, replying to the proposals contained in your Lordship's despatch to Sir F. Bruce of the 30th of November last, with regard to the settlement of claims arising out of the civil war in the United States; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take this despatch into consideration, and furnish your Lordship with our opinion thereupon at our earliest convenience.

A printed copy of your Lordship's despatch of the 30th of November was also inclosed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That Mr. Seward's despatch shows, in our opinion, the great importance of the principle asserted in your Lordship's despatch of the 30th November last, that no reference to arbitration was possible in respect of the alleged premature recognition of the Confederate States as a belligerent Power.

The arguments of Mr. Seward all tend to show that his main ground of complaint is now, as it was before, the premature recognition of the Confederate States as a belligerent Power, and that the premature and unfriendly character of that recognition is, in his opinion, the main issue to be tried; and his conclusion that the United States would expect to refer the whole controversy, just as it is found in the correspondence which has taken place between the two Governments, with such further evidence and arguments as either party may desire, without restrictions upon the umpire, and without waiving any question upon the consideration that it involves a point of national honour, shows that he now proposes to include in any arbitration the question of the justice of the recognition at the time it was made, and, if found unjust by the arbitrator, to insist on the liability of Her Majesty's Government, as a consequence of such unjust recognition, to all the losses already claimed, and all such further claims as the United States may hereafter advance.

1867

We think that your Lordship's former conclusion that no reference is possible with regard to the alleged premature recognition of the Confederates as a belligerent Power, and the grounds on which that conclusion was founded, have not been in any way displaced or disproved by Mr. Seward's arguments; and we may add that it appears to be of the utmost importance that that conclusion should be steadfastly insisted on, and that no reference should be permitted which would leave to the arbitrator the power of attributing to Great Britain any liability to loss in respect of such alleged premature recognition of belligerency.

The claims of the United States under such a reference might extend to make Great Britain liable to the United States for the whole expenses of the war.

To these arguments of the United States it has been repeatedly replied, and we think rightly replied, that this recognition was in accordance with principle and practice; that it was within the scope of the undoubted privilege of the neutral State; and lastly, that the course pursued by the declaration of blockade on the part of the Government of the United States had rendered this recognition both necessary and inevitable.

The right of blockade which pressed so severely upon the interests of neutral States was a right incident, and incident only, to a state of war in which two or more belligerents were engaged, and never before, in the history of States, was the recognition of so extensive a blockade required by a neutral State; never was any blockade more loyally recognized than this of the United States by Great Britain, though it was to the great and especial detriment of her subjects; never, we believe, was the right to visitation and search, claimed by the United States as a belligerent, more frankly submitted to them by England, though her merchant-ships were thereby subjected to such visitation and search in every quarter of the globe.

In the despatches from the Foreign Office, and in Reports of the Law Officers, it has always throughout the controversy been contended, that for the United States to demand the exercise of these belligerent rights, and at the same time to refuse a belligerent status to the enemy, was plainly contradictory.

But the demand is now again put forward by Mr. Seward just as strongly as if it were now stated for the first time.

Closely connected with this controversy is that relating to the recognition by England of the "Sumter" and other vessels as ships duly commissioned by the belligerent.

It would, we believe, be impossible to find any adequate authority for the position that it is the duty of a neutral State to inquire into the places at which the captain of a belligerent ship received his commission. It is the duty of the neutral to be satisfied that the ship is commissioned by an authority which it has recognized as belligerent; but neither principle nor usage require or justify any further examination.

It is surprising that Mr. Seward should maintain that, unless the commission has been delivered in a belligerent port, the ship which bears it is undistinguishable from a pirate. The characteristic of a pirate is not that he has received his commission on the high seas, but that he has no commission at all from any Power or State existing de facto or de jure.

For belligerent purposes the Southerners were recognized as de facto existing States by England, and generally by European Powers. But if it were (as it surely is not) the duty of the neutral State to inquire into the place where the commission was received, why should it not be received upon the high seas? And if it were necessary that the commissioning Power should have ports, had not the Southern States ports? Did not the United States claim the right of closely blockading those very ports?

In truth, the position is as novel as unsound in international law, and clearly propounded for the first time, for the obvious purpose of giving the United States the advantage of being exclusively recognized by the neutral State as belligerent.

Some hint or suggestion appears also in Mr. Seward's despatch to the effect that the United States need not have claimed the status of a belligerent, nor resorted to a blockade, but might have closed their own ports by municipal authority; this may or not be a sound contention, but the answer is twofold:—

1. That the United States did proclaim a blockade.

2. That unless they had done so, and claimed a belligerent status for the purpose of enforcing the blockade, they could not have exercised the right of visitation and search as they freely did exercise it, upon neutral vessels navigating the high seas.

With regard to the details of Mr. Seward's despatch, we think that the passages in it relating specifically to the cases of the "Sumter," the "Alabama," the "Florida," the "Georgia," and the "Shenandoah," and such other passages as we have not specifically referred to, may be left without further answer than a reference to the statement contained in your Lordship's despatch of the 30th November last.

The reference to what may appear in the unpublished records, and the confidential archives of the two countries in a despatch intended for publication, is, we believe, without precedent, and certainly is open in principle to very grave objection.

It is for your Lordship to consider whether this statement that Her Majesty's Government required the United States' Government to relax, rather than increase, their vigilance, should or should not be noticed, and if so, in what manner.

The explanation attempted to be given of the statement in the judgments of the American Tribunals referred to by your Lordship is not such as the reference warrants, or as can be accepted by your Lordship. The statement of the Courts "that the proclamation of the blockade was of itself conclusive evidence that a state of war existed, the blockade itself being a belligerent right," was, in our opinion, a correct exposition of international law; and we do not think that the Court qualified, or intended to qualify, the proposition so laid down, by reference to other circumstances, which also evidenced the existence of a state of war.

The statement found at page 10 of the despatch* is one which, in our opinion, ought not to be passed by unnoticed and unrefuted. This is one of many statements to be found in the same despatch, having for their object to establish the position that the conduct of Great Britain gave to what would have otherwise been a mere insurrection, the importance and proportions of a civil war—statements in our opinion wholly destitute of foundation.

Mr. Seward meets the considerations presented by your Lordship in your despatch of 30th November, that Her Majesty's Government had to provide at a distance for the interests of British subjects in or near the seat of war, by asking the questions, Who required British subjects to be there? who obliged them to remain in a place of danger? and the like. It is new to us that the duty of a neutral Power to protect its subjects in a time of war can be abandoned or weakened by reference to such considerations.

We have, &c.
(Signed) ROBERT PHILLIMORE.
(And for Attorney- and Solicitor-General.)

---

No. 176.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received February 23.)

My Lord,
Lincoln's Inn, February 22, 1867.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 14th December last, stating that, with reference to our letter of the 7th of that month respecting the case of the "Meteor," in which we stated the advisability of obtaining a full report, and an authentic copy of Judge Bett's Judgment in the case of that vessel, he was then directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Acting Consul at New York (No. 111, November 30, 1866), together with a printed copy of the Decree of Condemnation; and Mr. Hammond was to request that we would take this paper into consideration and furnish your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

We are also honoured with Mr. Hammond's letter of the 17th December last, forwarding to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Washington (No. 361, December 3, 1866), inclosing a newspaper extract which contained Judge Bett's decision in the case of the "Meteor," for our consideration.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have considered these papers, and have the honour to report—

That we should have been glad to have possessed a more authentic copy, in a more convenient form for examination and reference, of this decision.

---

* "What the President thus wisely and humanely declined to do, the Queen of Great Britain too promptly performed. She baptised the slave insurrection within the United States a civil war; and thus, as far as the British nation and its influence could go, gave it a name to live and flourish and triumph over the American Union. By this proceeding the Queen of Great Britain intervened in the purely domestic and internal affairs of the United States, and derogated from the authority of their Government."

1867

That the result of the opinion which we have formed upon the newspaper report is, that the Judgment in question places a more stringent construction upon the Foreign Enlistment Act than any which is to be found in the previous decisions upon the subject in the Courts of Great Britain, or in the United States of North America.

The learned Judge is reported to have said: "The mischief against which the statute intended to guard, was not merely preventing the departure from the United States of an armed vessel, but the departure of any vessel intended to be employed in the service of any foreign Power, to cruize or commit hostilities against any other foreign Power with whom the United States are at peace. The neutrality of the Government of the United States in a war between two foreign Powers would be violated quite as much by allowing the departure from its ports of an unarmed vessel with the clear intent to cruize or commit hostilities against one of the belligerents, as it would be by permitting the departure from its ports of an armed vessel with such intent. If the intent to cruize or commit hostilities is one adapted to the purpose, the subsequent arming is a very easy matter. The facility with which this can be done was made manifest in the case of the 'Shenandoah,' and other vessels which, during the late rebellion, left England unarmed and with the full intent on the part of those who sent them forth that they should be used to cruize, and commit hostilities against the United States, and were subsequently armed in neutral waters.

"It would be a very forced interpretation of the statute to say that it was not an offence against it to knowingly fit out a vessel with everything necessary to make her an active cruizer, except her arms, and with the intent that she should become such cruizer, because it could not be shown that there was any intent that she should be armed within the United States.

"The evil consequences which would flow from interpreting the statute to mean that the crime must include the arming of the vessel within the United States, become especially apparent in reference to that part of the third section which forbids the issuing or delivering a commission within the territory or jurisdiction of the United States for any ship or vessel to the intent that she may be employed for the purpose named in the section. Under such an interpretation of the statute it would be no offence to issue or deliver a commission within the United States for any vessel, unless such vessel was actually armed at the time, or, perhaps, were intended to be armed prior to her departure from the United States; and it would be no offence to issue a commission within the United States for a vessel fitted and equipped to cruize or commit hostilities, and intended to cruize and commit hostilities so long as such vessel was not armed at the time, and was not intended to be armed within the United States, although it could be shown that a clear intent existed on the part of the persons issuing or delivering the commission, that the vessel should receive her armament the moment she should be beyond the jurisdiction of the United States."

If the learned Judge meant to lay down the proposition that if there was an intent that the vessel should be employed as a ship-of-war by the belligerent, then that, whatever her structure might be—with the condition perhaps that it was not such as to render her adaptation to warlike purposes impossible, she fell within the restrictions of the Foreign Enlistment Act,—he certainly gave a scope to those provisions which they have never hitherto received, and which, we think, they would not receive in a Court of Justice in this country.

It is to be observed that the words in the English Foreign Enlistment Act, "or in order that," are not in the American Act, which has the words "with intent alone;" and some stress was laid upon this circumstance, in the case of the "Alexandra," by one of the Judges, who held that the words "in order that" restricted and explained the word "with intent."

The previous cases decided in the American Courts certainly did not go the length of the decision in the "Meteor;" and it is impossible not to see that Judge Betts was embarrassed by the decision pronounced by Judge Story on behalf of the Supreme Court in the case of the "Santissima Trinidad;" who said:—"It is apparent that though equipped as a vessel of war she was sent to Buenos Ayres on a commercial adventure, contraband indeed, but in no shape violating our laws or our national neutrality. If captured by a Spanish ship-of-war during the voyage, she would have been justly condemnable as a good prize for being engaged in traffic prohibited by the law of nations. But there is nothing in our laws or in the law of nations that forbids our citizens from sending armed vessels, as well as munitions of war, to foreign ports for sale. It is a commercial adventure which no nation is bound to prohibit, and which only exposes the persons engaged in it to the penalty of confiscation. Supposing, therefore, the voyage to be have been for commercial purposes, and the sale at Buenos Ayres to have been a bonâ fide sale (and there is nothing in the evidence before us to contradict it), there is no pretence to say that the original outfit, or the voyage, was illegal, or that a capture made after the sale was, for that cause, invalid."

It is unfortunate that the "Alexandra," which is practically the only case in which the provisions of that statute have been subjected to judicial investigation, should have been left, from circumstances, in a very unsatisfactory condition. It was argued, first, before the Lord Chief Baron (Pollock) and a jury.* The Lord Chief Baron thought that the object of the statute was to prevent any hostile vessel being fitted out and equipped so as to make a port in this country (the port of discharge) the commencement of hostile operations. He thought that the equipment must have been complete, and not inchoate; and the jury found, under his directions, that the "Alexandra" ought not to have been seized. A rule for a new trial was granted and argued before four Judges of the Court of Exchequer, two of whom (including the Lord Chief Baron) were for sustaining the Judgment, two for reversing it, or, in technical terms, making the rule absolute; these two, it is to be observed, however, arriving at the same conclusion upon somewhat different reasons. The case was then appealed to a Court of Error and afterwards to the House of Lords, where it was unfortunately dismissed upon purely technical grounds.

We have thought it useful to refer your Lordship to the opinions expressed by the four Barons of the Court of Exchequer when the case was tried before them in banco; and if in this conflict of judicial opinions it be our duty to express an opinion, we are bound to say that the construction of the statute which renders unlawful even the partial and incomplete fitting out of a vessel adapted for war, with the intent that she be used as a vessel of war of a foreign State, is the construction which appears to us on the whole to be right: and if Judge Betts, in the case of the "Meteor," meant to make this interpretation of the statute the foundation of his judgment, we do not disagree with him.

The opinions of the Barons are as follows:—

The Lord Chief Baron (Pollock) said ("Alexandra" case, vol. iii, page 525): "The evidence for the Crown clearly established the warlike character of the vessel; it was not at all adapted for commerce, but was capable of being adapted for warlike purposes, and though it might have been used as a yacht, according to the evidence of Captain Inglefield, it was in all probability intended to be used by the so-called Confederate States as a vessel of war when adapted for that purpose by them (suitable equipment and fitting-up being furnished). And if the making in pursuance of an agreement or order for that purpose with intention to sell and deliver to one of the belligerents the hull of a vessel suitable for war, but unarmed, and not equipped, furnished, or fitted-out with anything which enabled her to cruize or to commit hostilities or to do any warlike act whatever, be a violation of the Foreign Enlistment Act, my direction to the jury was wrong in point of law."

Mr. Baron Bramwell said:—"Taking this view of the statute, I think that a right direction to the jury would be, If you are satisfied that the parties concerned were equipping or arming, or attempting to do so, the ship claimed, with intent that it should be employed in the service of a foreign Prince to cruize or commit hostilities against others as alleged, find for the Crown; but such equipment or attempted equipment must be of a warlike character, so that by means of it she is in a condition, more or less effective, to cruize or commit hostilities, otherwise find for the claimant. I have no doubt that the vessel was building and equipping for the Confederates, and in order that they might use her, when armed and equipped, for hostitities against the Federals. This was being attempted, but I see no evidence that it was intended to arm or equip her in the Queen's dominions so as to be capable of attack or defence. On the contrary, I believe it was intended to evade, not to infringe, the statute; not to commit a misdemeanor, nor to do, or attempt to do, what would cause a forfeiture of the ship. I believe, on the evidence, that it was intended to deal with this vessel as with the 'Alabama,' namely, to get her out of the country and give her warlike equipment and armament out of the Queen's dominions."

Mr. Baron Channell said:—"Suppose a jury to find, as a matter of fact, that a certain vessel is intended to be sent to the West Indies and then to have guns put on board; that when her guns are on board the mainsail with which she has been equipped in Liverpool may assist her in chasing an enemy's vessel; are they then justified in deducing from that that the mainsail is an equipment in order that she may be employed to cruize? I have, after giving the question my best consideration, come to the conclusion that the jury may so reason. I am supposing a case where an equipment is made which, though not in itself sufficient to make the vessel a war vessel, is still a necessary part of the equipment of a war vessel. It would, as it strikes me, be a question for the jury to consider whether the equipments are in fact equipments for war; and they may decide that question for themselves by the nature of the equipments, if they sufficiently show it (in which case they will have to look to the intent and purpose only so far as to see that the vessel is to be employed against a Power with whom we are at peace), or they may decide that certain equipments which are capable of being used for war are, as a matter of fact, equipments of war on the ground of evidence being laid before them showing an intent so to use them. But if a jury found specially these facts, that A.B. had equipped a vessel which was in its structure capable of being converted into a war vessel to the extent merely of enabling it to sail away from this country; that he knew that the purchaser intended to convert it into a war vessel: but if the jury also distinctly found that what A.B. did to it was done, not in order to convert it into a war vessel, or in order to be useful to it when so converted, but simply in order to enable it to reach a port where the purchaser might, if he pleased, convert it—in such a case I do not mean to say that A.B. ought to be convicted of a misdemeanor under this Act. That case would not, I think, be within the Act, because the jury would there, in effect, find that the intent with which the Act was done was a different one from that mentioned in this section. So far then as to what may be called the principal offence. The question finally left to the jury seems to me to be correct so far as it goes."

---

* Page 54, separate volume, "Alexandra" case.

1867

The Lord Chief Baron says: "Was there any intention that, in the port of Liverpool or any other port, she should be equipped, furnished, fitted out, or armed, with the intention of taking part in any contest? That, I think, so far as it went, was right; but, in my opinion, it ought to have been accompanied by some further explanation than was given of the words 'equip, &c., in order that.' Further, I think the jury ought to have been directed that they might form their opinion as to whether she was to be equipped with the intention of her taking part in any contest, either from the nature of the equipment, or from any evidence before them as to the intention of the parties with respect to such equipment, if they thought it ancipitis usus. I think, further, that though there may have been no equipment completed, the question whether there was an attempt at such an equipment as would, if completed, have been within the Act, should have been distinctly left to the jury. It is a satisfaction to me to find that my brother Pigott has arrived in the result at the same conclusion with myself, although his reasons for doing so may not be entirely the same as my own. It is also a satisfaction to me to know that although I differ from the Lord Chief Baron and my brother Bramwell in the result, there are many broad points of agreement between us. I agree with them in thinking that what this Statute forbids is an equipment for war. I agree with them in thinking that the main object of the Statute was to prevent our ports being made stations of hostilities. Our difference appears to be this, that they think that the equipment must be intended to be completed so that the vessel when it leaves our port shall be in a condition at once to commit hostilities; whilst it seems to me that in the fair and reasonable meaning of the words used, another case is included, namely, where the equipment not being complete to that extent, is yet capable of being used for war, and the intent is clear that it is to be used for war. I say that the fair and reasonable meaning of the words includes that case, and that we should judicially construe the Act to include it."

Mr. Baron Pigott said: "But I am of opinion that any act of equipping, furnishing, or fitting out, done to the hull or vessel, of whatever nature or character that act may be, if done with the prohibited intent, is expressly within the plain language, and also within the evident spirit of the Statute. The intent I take to mean, an intent of the principal (who has control of the ship), having directly for its object the employment of the vessel by a foreign State, and in the equipper a like intent, and with such intent a contributory equipment of some kind necessary to such employment; and it is evident that the intents need not be derived solely from the nature of the equipments, but may be proved aliunde. It may not be easy to define in all cases the exact point at which the building of the hull ends, and the act of equipping or fitting out begins, but that in each case would be for a jury to decide. In fine, I see no more reason for saying that the ship must, in order to violate the Statute, be so equipped in our ports with arms as to be ready to commit hostilities on leaving them, than for saying that she must be sufficiently manned also, without which she would certainly not be in such a condition. I cannot so restrict the Statute by construction without feeling that I should virtually repeal it."

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 177.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received March 7.)

My Lord, Lincoln's Inn, March 7, 1867.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 4th instant, stating that, with reference to our letter of the 14th ultimo giving our opinion on Mr. Seward's reply to the proposals of Her Majesty's Government for the settlement of the claims arising out of the civil war in America, he was directed to transmit to us, for our consideration, the draft of an instruction on the subject to Sir F. Bruce, and was pleased to request that we would inform your Lordship whether we concur in the terms of the instruction.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That with the alterations which we have ventured to suggest in the margin of the draft, we think that the letter is right and proper to be sent.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 178.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received May 17.)

My Lord, Lincoln's Inn, May 16, 1867.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 24th January last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a pamphlet on "American Neutrality" by an American gentleman named Bemis, together with a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Washington (No. 7, January 7, 1867), containing comments on the same. Mr. Hammond was also pleased to state that your Lordship would be glad to be favoured with any observations we might have to make on those papers.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have perused the pamphlet submitted to us, and have the honour to report—

That the object of this pamphlet is to prevent the adoption by the Senate and the President of the United States of a Report and Bill prepared by General Banks upon the subject of the American Foreign Enlistment Act, which Report and Bill have been already unanimously adopted by the House of Representatives in that country.

The object of General Banks appears to be to lessen the stringency of the provisions of the Statute of 1818, upon the model of which our own Foreign Enlistment Act is substantially framed.

General Banks says (page 7) that "in reviewing the Statute of 1818 we cannot escape the conclusion that it disregards the inalienable rights of the people of all nations; that it was imposed upon the country by considerations affecting exclusively the political interests of other nations; that it criminally restrains the rights of nations at peace for the benefit of those at war; that it was intended to perpetuate the supremacy of favoured nations on the sea. It properly belongs to another age, and is not of us nor for us."

Mr. Bemis enters his protest against the measure, and against the policy which dictates it upon five grounds (page 3):—

1. That it begins its work with an unjust and unjustifiable disparagement of the country's historic good name and fame.

2. That it untruly and unfairly characterizes British neutral legislation, which it professes to adopt for its standard of comparison and imitation.

1867

3. That it virtually amounts to protective legislation in favour of filibusterism and Fenianism.

4. That the present legislative embodiment of the scheme is so imperfect and defective a piece of law-making that it fails of any legal validity and effect, except to express the ultimate and objectionable designs of its originators.

5. That the whole movement is antagonistic to our truest and best future neutral policy.

And Mr. Bemis develops these propositions in five separate chapters or parts, into which his pamphlet is divided, and which are as follows:—

Part 1. Vindication of the national fame for past neutrality.

Part 2. The true estimate of British neutral laws and British neutrality.

Part 3. Unworthy promotion of Fenian belligerency.

Part 4. Defective execution of the attempt to deteriorate ("scale") the neutral laws of the United States.

Part 5. The expedient future of American neutrality.

Mr. Bemis maintains that enmity to England, and sympathy with Fenianism, are the real causes of this Bill.

(Page 91.) "Fenianism and antagonism to Great Britain then are the two great watchwords by which we are to interpret this revolutionary attempt to undermine and set aside the long cherished policy of the American Government."

In the existing American Neutrality Act there are thirteen sections; seven of these appear to be maintained with a slight modification in the new project.

The five sections which are left out are:—

Section 4, which forbids the fitting out by citizens of the United States of privateers to be employed in committing hostilities against citizens of the United States.

Section 6, and part of Section 8, which forbad the setting on foot of military expeditions within the territory of the United States to be carried on from thence against the territory of a foreign State, and which enabled the President to employ forces of the United States to stop them; and Sections 10 and 11, which are termed the bonding clauses, whereby citizens of the United States are compelled to enter into a bond not to employ armed ships belonging to them against foreign subjects, and whereby collectors of Customs are empowered to detain "any vessels manifestly built for warlike purposes," with a cargo principally of arms, and a suspicious number of men, until the owners have given bonds that the vessel will not be employed against a foreign State.

It is true, Mr. Bemis observes, that Sections 6 and 8 (page 98) are not to be found in the British Act, but for the reason that Great Britain being an island, the deficiency is supplied by the provisions of the Foreign Enlistment Act already referred to, forbidding any vessel (for, of course, the exit from England must be by vessel), or master of a vessel to carry away any recruits or enlisted soldiers from British territory.

The bonding sections it is well known are not to be found in the English Act.

Mr. Bemis observes also that the part of the 3rd Section of the existing American Act which provides that informers shall have one-half of the forfeiture is omitted (pages 109, 110); and that a high authority pronounced that in consequence of the omission there would probably never be a prosecution under the Act.

By the 10th Section of the English Act "one moiety of every penalty" goes to the informer.

The 10th Section (page 210) in the new Bill is very remarkable, "And be it further enacted that nothing in this Act shall be so construed as to prohibit citizens of the United States from selling vessels, ships, or steamers built within the limits thereof, or materials or munitions of war, the growth or product of the same, to inhabitants of other countries or Governments not at war with the United States: Provided that the operation of this section of this Act shall be suspended by the President of the United States in regard to all classes of purchases whenever the United States shall be engaged in war, or whenever the maintenance of friendly relations with any foreign nation may in his judgment require it."

Mr. Bemis (page 117) finds fault with this proposed new section on the grounds that its tendency would be contrary to the intentions of the authors of it to limit the free traffic in ships of war as articles of commerce which, subject to their liability to be captured as contraband, he maintains is permitted by existing international law.

The remarks of Mr. Bemis on the comparative merits of the English and American neutrality statutes are striking. He maintains that General Banks is altogether in error (page 65) in supposing that "the restrictions of the British statute are nominal compared with those of the American." And Mr. Bemis says, "So far is it from being true that we shall have to make a descent in our legislation on this head in order to come down upon a level with that of England, that I venture to affirm that in many, if not in most, respects the English statute is decidedly the more high-toned and comprehensive of the two."

Mr. Bemis proceeds to enunciate nine points (Chapters 6 and 7) as to which he conceives the English is superior to the American statute.

In his very interesting chapter on the "expedient future" of American neutrality, Mr. Bemis suggests first of all six defects in the existing American law, which he says (page 173) "have been drawn into discussion in connection with the superior completeness of the British code." And further urges the necessity (page 174) of what he calls "original or independent reforms which the lesson of English recent practice of neutrality inculates upon us."

The first of these reforms is to intervene at the points between equipping to order a ship of war for belligerent use (which we now hold to be plainly unlawful), and selling the same as an article of merchandise (which our jurisprudence and practice have pronounced legitimate) so as to denounce in an unmistakable terms that evasion of the law sanctioned by Baron Bramwell's opinion in the English Court of Exchequer in the "Alexandra" case, viz., the equipping of a ship of war in a neutral port so as to fit her all ready to receive her guns, and then sending out her guns by a separate vessel to join the war ship and complete the arming outside the line of neutral jurisdiction.

The second is (page 175) "to reform our practice in the matter of furnishing transports or store-ships to belligerent foreign Powers."

And the third is (page 177), "that we should reconsider our cherished tenet of the right of the neutral to furnish arms and munitions of war to belligerents, and either restrict it within narrow limits, or else altogether repudiate it, and put such material of war upon the same footing as armed ships."

The fourth is (page 181), "that we should make our binding clauses efficacious by taking away from them the reproach which Earl Russell has justly cast upon them of being useless to stop such sort of expeditions as the 'Alabama' and the 'Alexandra.'"

The fifth is (page 183), "that we should extend the powers of the executive and its subordinate functionaries towards enabling them to administer prompt preventive remedies for the preservation of neutrality."

Mr. Bemis adds, "at present, as my readers are well aware, the United States insist that they have proved their superior good faith in enforcing neutral duties more than in any other particular by not waiting to be armed with proof sufficient to convict before moving, but in setting the machinery of the law in motion on a primâ facie case of intended violation. This practice I fancy has grown up rather from the good disposition of the American authorities to compel neutral rectitude than from any intrinsic superiority of their legislation over that of the British in this particular."

The sixth is (page 184), "to adopt a provision giving the Government pecuniary redress against the citizen who renders the State liable to foreign Powers for infractions of neutrality."

The seventh is (page 185), "to take away from the forum of trial by jury all issues arising out of the enforcement of the neutrality laws, unless indictable offences or involving personal punishment, and commit them to the Admiralty jurisdiction."

Upon this point Mr. Bemis dwells with great energy, and we think his arguments are well founded. He refers to the "Alexandra" case in England, and the "Mc Leod" case in New York (1858), and asks, "Who can doubt that the function of a jury is sometimes misapplied when employed to administer a purely executive and political function?"

The remaining forms require less notice, but they will be found at page 186.

There is one very remarkable passage in this work, the citation of which is the last it will be necessary to make.

Mr. Bemis is arguing that it is for the advantage of the United States to expand rather than contract the existing neutral code. He refers to the ravages of the "Alabama," "Florida," and the "Shenandoah," and he says (page 138):—

"If, as is doubtless the case, we shall have to go largely outside of the Neutrality Law of either country, and invoke the aid of the law of nations to help us to make good our claim against England for co-operating in these neutral (or unneutral) enormities, is it not a startling caution to us that hereafter the argument shall not be thrown in our teeth, 'Well, your own laws would not have prevented American citizens from doing the same thing.'"

1867

These are the observations which occur to us to be useful to make upon these passages.

It is the work of a person who has brought considerable powers of argument, intimate acquaintance with his subject, and generally a spirit of candour and fairness through the discussion of this branch of international law, though various passages may be found which we could have wished omitted, and which we think open to reprobation.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 179.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received May 23.)

My Lord,
Lincoln's Inn, May 22, 1867.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 14th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us, together with a copy of the despatch on the subject of the "Alabama," and other claims forwarded to Her Majesty's Minister at Washington after the receipt of our Report of the 7th March, and a copy of a further despatch to the same Minister giving an account of the reply received through the American Minister in this country to that despatch, a draft of a further despatch which your Lordship now proposes to address to Sir Frederick Bruce on the subject of that reply; and Mr. Hammond was to request that we would take this draft into consideration, and furnish your Lordship, at our earliest convenience, with our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we think the proposed despatch proper to be sent, in order to prevent any misconception or misunderstanding. It seems to us, however, that Mr. Seward, in speaking of "Alabama" claims, means to refer to all claims in respect of the "Alabama" and other vessels, and means to decline arbitrament unless all claims of every description are adjusted by one and the same tribunal, and under the same terms of reference.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 180.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received June 1.)

My Lord,
Lincoln's Inn, May 31, 1867.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 1st of April ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch and its inclosures from Her Majesty's Consul at Charleston (No. 15, March 6, 1867), relative to the rejection by the United States' Court of Claims of Mr. Carmalt's claim for indemnity on account of the destruction of his property by the orders of General Sherman in February 1865, and requesting that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion respecting the case.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we presume that the claim of Mr. Carmalt has been dealt with by the Court of Claims, to which it was submitted in the manner prescribed by the law of the United States applicable to such a case.

In these circumstances we cannot advise (although the case presents features of hardship) any official intervention on the part of Her Majesty's Government.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 181.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received June 16.)

My Lord,
Lincoln's Inn, June 14, 1867.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 4th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch, with its inclosures, from Her Majesty's Consul at Charleston (No. 27), respecting the claim of Messrs. Wood and Heyworth, of Manchester, against the Government of the United States, on account of the seizure and destruction of some cotton belonging to them, during the late civil war; and to request that we would take these papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we think in this case, as in that of Messrs. Lemonius and Co., the course pursued by Mr. Walker has been right and proper, and we see no reason for the intervention of your Lordship with the United States' Government on behalf of these claimants.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 182.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received June 16.)

My Lord,
Lincoln's Inn, June 14, 1867.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 4th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch, with its inclosures, from Her Majesty's Consul at Charleston (No. 28), respecting the claim of Messrs. Lemonius and Co., of Liverpool, against the Government of the United States, on account of the seizure and destruction of cotton belonging to them during the late civil war; and to request that we would take these papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we are of opinion that the course pursued by Mr. Walker has been proper, both in allowing the claim to be placed on the file with the archives of the Consulate, and also in the reply which he sent to Messrs. Lemonius and Co., and that we see no reason for the intervention of your Lordship on behalf of these claimants.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 183.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received June 17.)

My Lord,
Temple, June 15, 1867.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 6th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the papers relative to a collision which occurred in the year 1864 between the British steamer "Kedar" and the American vessel "Czarina," in reference to which case the owners of the former vessel have been recently called upon by the United States' District Court at New York to give bond for an amount which the owners of the "Kedar" consider to be excessive; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take this case into consideration, with especial reference to the construction to be placed upon the terms of the United States' law regarding collisions at sea, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion thereupon.

1867

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the High Court of Admiralty decided, previously to the passing of the Merchant Shipping Amendment Act of 1862, that the law (Merchant Shipping Act, 1854, section 504) which limited the liability of owners of British ships to the value of the ship and freight, did not apply to foreign ships; and in the case of a collision between a British and foreign ship upon the high seas, it was decided that the foreigner was not entitled to any limitation of his liability. (The "Wild Ranger:" Lushington R., 553.)

After this decision the Merchant Shipping Act Amendment Act, 1862, was passed, in the 54th section of which were introduced for the first time the words "the owners of any ship, British or foreign." And it was decided by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, in the case of a collision between a British and foreign vessel on the high seas,* the limited liability applied equally to British and foreign vessels.

That the law of the United States at this time is substantially identical with the law of England as it existed previously to the last-mentioned statute; and it appears to me, at least, very probable that the Court of the United States, whether Federal or State, which exercised jurisdiction in this case of the collision of the "Kedar" and "Czarina," would adopt in favour of its own subject the construction of the law which the English Court, construing a statute substantially identical with the American statute, adopted in favour of the English subject, and would rule that the limitation of liability could not, under the American statute, be extended to the foreigner.

I perceive that is not the opinion of Mr. Carlisle; but then it does not appear that the case of the "Wild Ranger" was brought to his notice or present to his mind; and the same remark applies to the opinion of the Board of Trade.

If this should be the decision of the United States' Court, it is manifest that international comity requires that the law in both these maritime States, on this particular subject, should be identical, and that a proper application should be made in the proper quarter to induce the United States to alter their law so as to afford to the English owner that protection which the English law now extends to the American owner.

With respect to the circumstances of this particular case, I do not think they furnish any ground of complaint. The bail is demanded, I presume, upon the principle that there is no limitation of liability by American law in the case of a foreign owner. I cannot say whether any or what effect will be ascribed by the American Court to the judgment of the English Court of Admiralty upon the merits of the case; but I am not prepared to say that, in the converse case, the judgment of an American Court of Admiralty would be treated as an estoppel by the English Court of Admiralty.

I have, &c.
(Signed) ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 184.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received July 3.)

Lincoln's Inn, June 29, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 11th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to us a Memorial which has been submitted to your Lordship by Mr. James O'Keefe on the subject of his claim against the United States' Government for the destruction of cotton belonging to him in the Southern States. That the Memorial has been referred to Sir Frederick Bruce, who has reported on the case in the accompanying despatch; and Mr. Hammond was also pleased to state that your Lordship considers that the decision of the United States' Court on cotton claims must be awaited before any steps can be taken in the matter, but that your Lordship would be glad to be furnished with any observations that we might have to make upon Mr. O'Keefe's case.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the present case appears on the claimant's statement to be one of considerable hardship, for which the claimant may reasonably expect that the laws of the United States will afford him redress. It is to be hoped that the decision of the Court of Claims may enable him to arrive at this result, but we do not think that this case can be taken out of the category of cases upon which we have had the honour to report to your Lordship, to the effect that the claimants are entitled to whatever remedies and redress a subject of the United States might claim in similar circumstances, but not to the official intervention of Her Majesty's Government.

---

* The "Amalia," 1 Moore P. C. Reports, p. 471; Cail v. Papayanni.

Property situate in the enemy's country may be seized or destroyed, jure belli, by the military force of the other belligerent.

The innocent subject who is the owner (and the domiciled or resident neutral cannot claim a more advantageous status) ought to be allowed to claim compensation at the hands of the Government, for his private property thus sacrificed to the general exigencies of the State. But unless the neutral resident be invidiously denied a remedy open to native subjects, the Government of the neutral has no valid ground for official intervention on his behalf.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

P.S.—That we have perused the additional papers, and do not think they affect the opinion which we have already had the honour to express.

J. R.
J. B. K.
R. P.

---

No. 185.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received July 30.)

Temple, July 29, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 22nd July instant, stating that he was directed by you to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Washington (No. 188), relative to an application which had been made to him by the owners of the brig "Volant," to assist them in obtaining from the United States' Government the value of their ship and cargo which were condemed by a District Court of the United States during the American war, and sold as prize, the proceeds being invested in the First National Bank of New Orleans.

Mr. Hammond was also pleased to say that the bank had since failed, and the condemnation of the vessel having been reversed by the Supreme Court of the United States, the owners were anxious that Sir Frederick Bruce should prefer a claim against the United States' Government for the proceeds of their property; and that he was to request that we would take the papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the instructions that should be given to Sir Frederick Bruce in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That it has been according to the practice of the English and American Prize Courts (a practice referred to in former Reports of Law Officers) to order in certain cases the sale of vessels brought in for trial. The money which is the produce of the sale being either paid into the Registry of the Court, or invested in some Government security.

The Government of the captors is, we think, under an obligation to pay the money produced by the sale of the "Volant" to the owners, who have had no voice in the selection of the bank in which the money has been placed, but are entitled by the decree of the Court to receive that sum of money which represents their property sold under the order of the Court; and we think that it will be right for Sir Frederick Bruce to prefer a claim against the United States' Government for the proceeds of the property.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
C. J. SELWYN.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

1867

No. 186.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received July 31.)

Temple, July 29, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 15th of May, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Consul at New York, forwarding copy of the decision of the United States' Supreme Court in the case of the "Springbok." The previous correspondence was also inclosed for convenience of reference; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take the same into consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion thereupon.

We are also honoured with Mr. Hammond's letters of the 29th of May and the 25th ultimo, transmitting further papers respecting this case, and a letter from Messrs. Barter and Co., inquiring whether the owners' claim for full compensation would be prejudiced by his endeavouring to obtain what the United States' Government are prepared to pay.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That having regard to the cases decided by Lord Stowell in the English Prize Court (which are enumerated and commented upon in the Report of the Law Officers, May 16, 1864, upon this vessel), we think the Judgment of the Supreme Court in this case of the "Springbok" affords no ground of complaint.

That with reference to the letter of Messrs. Barter and Co. of the 25th of May, 1867, we concur in the opinion already expressed by the Law Officers of the Crown, that the sale of the ship by auction was in accordance with the rules of law and practice of the United States, and that the owners are entitled to the amount which the vessel realized upon the sale by auction, and in the absence of any special circumstances we think that the owners who have succeeded in the Prize Court are only entitled to this amount. It is said, however, by Messrs. Barter and Co., that this vessel had been, when sold, "much depreciated, through plunder and want of care being taken of her after capture." If such has been the case there might be ground for remonstrance and intervention in favour of the owners by Her Majesty's Government. But unless and until very clear evidence of this is furnished by the owners to Her Majesty's Government, it would not be right for Her Majesty's Government to interfere.

With reference, lastly, to Messrs. Barter and Co.'s letter of the 20th of June, we think that if the owners of the "Springbok" accepted the sum which the United States' Government are prepared to pay, under protest, and without prejudice to any claims they may have for further compensation. they would not prejudice such further claims, if any, as they may be hereafter in a position to make against the United States' Government.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
C. J. SELWYN.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 187.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received August 8.)

Temple, August 7, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 22nd ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from the Colonial Office, forwarding a despatch from the Governor of British Guiana reporting the steps taken by him with regard to the enlistment of a British subject on board the United States' steamer "Penobscot," and to request that we would take these papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion generally on the statements of the Governor, and specifically on the point raised by him with regard to the Foreign Enlistment Act.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we are of opinion that Charles Hubbard was guilty of an offence against the Foreign Enlistment Act, and that the persons who procured his enlistment were also guilty of an offence against the Act.

We think that the "Penobscot" having entered the port of Demerara in the circumstances stated must be deemed to have been exempt from the jurisdiction of the Sovereign within whose territory she was, and that in this view a warrant for the arrest of Hubbard ought not to have been served on board the vessel. Indeed, Acting Governor Mundey appears not to have intended to have the warrant served on board the vessel (paragraph 3 of his letter of 7th June, 1867), and in this we think he was right.

We think that the better course for the Acting Governor to have adopted would have been to apply direct to the captain of the steamer for the restoration of Hubbard, and in the event of refusal to have reported the case to the British Government, in order that a formal complaint and claim for the boy's restoration might be made to the United States' Government.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
C. J. SELWYN.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 188.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received August 8.)

My Lord, Temple, August 7, 1867.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 13th July ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from the Colonial Office, dated the 11th ultimo, forwarding a despatch and inclosures from the Governor of Hong Kong, on the subject of an application made to him by the United States' Consul for the detention of some mutinous sailors, and to request that we would take these papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the instructions which Her Majesty's Secretary of State for the Colonies should be advised to give to the Governor of Hong Kong for his guidance in such cases.

Mr. Hammond was pleased further to say that some papers relating to an application of a somewhat similar nature, made last year by the French Consul at Galle, and which were referred to the then Law Officers on the 3rd of August, were inclosed for our information.*

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have perused and considered the papers submitted to us, and have the honour to report—

That we think that in this case the American Consul had no right to claim that the sailors of the American vessel the "Parsee," who had been brought on shore at Hong Kong and detained at the request of the Consul by the police authorities of Hong Kong, should be delivered up to him to be sent to America for trial.

The exact offence of which the men were alleged to have been guilty does not clearly appear from the papers before us.

It may be that they were properly triable by the Courts at Hong Kong for piracy jure gentium; but if they were not triable for any offence cognizable by those Courts, we think that they ought not to have been detained by the police, and that the claim of the Consul "by the comity of nations" to have the men so detained in aid of his object and purpose of sending them back, proprio motu, to America, to be tried there for any offence against the law of that country which they might have committed, cannot be recognized and is not capable of being maintained.

Whether this was a case within the 6th and 7th Vict., cap. 76 (Extradition Treaty Act with America), we cannot determine, upon the information before us; but if it were, the Consul did not adopt the forms prescribed by that Act in order to have the alleged offenders delivered up, but rested his demand on a claim to have them placed at his disposal by reason of some supposed right, usage, or comity which, as we have said, does not, in our opinion, exist, in the absence of Treaty bearing upon the subject.

---

* Colonial Office, July 28; to Colonial Office, September 11, 1866.

1867

We think that directions similar to those contained in Sir G. C. Lewis' despatch of 30th July, 1860, as to the powers of foreign Consuls, and the extent of the power and jurisdiction of British authorities abroad to aid such Consuls, might properly be forwarded to Hong Kong for the guidance of the authorities there.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
C. J. SELWYN.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 189.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received September 17.)

Temple, September 16, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 22nd ultimo, stating that with reference to our Report of the 29th July, relative to the case of the "Volant," he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter and its inclosures, from Messrs. Cotterill and Son, urging the claim of the owners of the "Volant," for compensation for the seizure of the ship; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take these papers into consideration, and furnish your Lordship with our opinion as to whether such claim for compensation can properly be supported by Her Majesty's Government in the face of the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States that the capture was justifiable.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we think that the Supreme Court was not bound, on adjudging restitution of the vessel and cargo, to award damages to the owners, and that the claim of the owners of the "Volant" for compensation for the damages sustained by them in consequence of her unlawful seizure, cannot therefore properly be supported by Her Majesty's Government in the face of the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States, the proceedings of which, as well as of the District Court, from which the Appeal was presented to the Supreme Court, appear to have been regular.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
C. J. SELWYN.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 190.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received October 7.)

Temple, October 5, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 9th of September, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to inclose a letter from Mr. Maguire, dated the 4th ultimo, requesting the support of Her Majesty's Government to a claim which he alleges he has on the United States' Government for remuneration, for services in watching suspicious ships in British ports during the late war; and to request that we would take this matter into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That is does not appear clearly whether Mr. Maguire desires the assistance of Her Majesty's Government, because he assumes that some arrangement exists with the United States for settlement or investigation of claims of British subjects against the American Government, or whether his request is made independently of any such supposed arrangement.

We think that in answer to Mr. Maguire's letter he might be told that no arrangement has been come to with the United States' Government for the investigation or settlement of the claims of British subjects against the United States' Government arising out of the late civil war, and that in the absence of any arrangement which would embrace his claim, Her Majesty's Government cannot support the demand of Mr. Maguire against the United States' Government.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
C. J. SELWYN.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 191.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received October 14.)

Temple, October 11, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 13th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to inclose a copy of a despatch, dated the 12th August last, from Mr. Seward to the United States' Minister at this Court, on the subject of arbitration on the "Alabama" claims, and that this despatch is in answer to the despatch to Sir F. Bruce of the 24th of May, which is the last paper in the correspondence recently laid before Parliament and transmitted to us therewith for convenience of reference.

Mr. Hammond was also pleased to request that we would take Mr. Seward's despatch into our consideration, and furnish your Lordship with any remarks that may occur to us to make thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken Mr. Seward's despatch into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That, as we understand Mr. Seward's despatch, he seeks to put a construction upon your Lordship's letter of the 24th of May which is not warranted by the terms of that despatch, especially when coupled with the previous communications that have passed between the Governments. Your Lordship has distinctly stated more than once that Her Majesty's Government could not consent to refer to a foreign Power to determine whether the conduct or action of Her Majesty's Government in recognizing the Confederate States as a belligerent Power was or was not justified by the circumstances of the time when the recognition was made; yet we infer from the present somewhat vaguely worded communication of Mr. Seward, that if the limited arbitration proposed by your Lordship were agreed upon the United States' Government would deem itself at liberty, in discussing the question of the moral responsibility of the British Government to make good, either in whole or in part, the losses of American citizens, to insist upon the premature recognition of a state of belligerency as a ground of complaint affecting the responsibility of Her Majesty's Government.

We beg to suggest the expediency of at once repudiating the construction which Mr. Seward seeks to put upon your Lordship's communication.

We understand that your Lordship contemplated that the arbiter who was to determine the question of the moral responsibility of Her Majesty's Government was to proceed upon the assumption that an actual state of war existed between the American Government and the Confederate States, and that the question for his determination was to be, whether upon that assumption there had been any such failure on the part of this Government, as a neutral, in the observance, legally or morally, of any duties or relations towards the American Government, as could be deemed to involve a moral responsibility on the part of this Government to make good losses of American citizens caused by the "Alabama" and other vessels of the same class: and if we are right in this view of your Lordship's proposal, Mr. Seward's attention should be pointedly called to what we conceive to be the mistake under which he labours.

The other matters adverted to in Mr. Seward's despatch, viz., the number and character of the proposed Tribunals of Reference, do not appear to us to require any particular notice.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
C. J. SELWYN.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

1867

No. 192.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received October 15.)

Temple, October 12, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 14th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith, together with the previous papers,* a letter from the Colonial Office,† inclosing a transcript of an Act which has passed the Newfoundland Legislature, amending the Act relating to the constitution of a Marine Court of Inquiry in that Colony, which formed the subject of the Law Officers' Report of August 22, 1866; and to request that we would take this Act into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether it should be approved by Her Majesty.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this Act into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we are of opinion that the Act which has passed the Newfoundland Legislature amending an Act to make provision for the constitution of a Marine Court of Inquiry in that Colony, removes the objection which it was pointed out by former Law Officers would have existed to the first Act if it had become law.

We presume, however, that Her Majesty's approbation to the first Act was withheld altogether; and if so, it is certainly an inconvenient course to ask Her Majesty to assent to an Act which contains objectionable clauses, and at the same moment to assent to an Act amending the first Act by repealing those clauses. The preferable course, we think, would have been for the Newfoundland Legislature to submit for Her Majesty's assent a new Act omitting the objectionable clauses; and in this view we think that the Acts should not in their present form be submitted to Her Majesty for confirmation.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
C. J. SELWYN.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 193.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received October 24.)

Temple, October 23, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 21st of October instant, stating that, with reference to our letter of the 11th instant, giving our opinion on Mr. Seward's despatch of the 12th of August respecting the "Alabama" claims, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a draft of an instruction which your Lordship proposes to address to Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Washington, in answer to Mr. Seward's despatch; and Mr. Egerton was pleased to request that we would take the papers into our consideration, and inform your Lordship, with the least possible delay, whether we concur in its contents.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we think that the passage in page 13 (pencil) of the draft despatch states clearly the principle upon which alone Her Majesty's Government would agree to refer to the decision of an arbiter the question of the moral responsibility of that Government to claims of American citizens arising out of the depredations of the "Alabama" and other vessels of that class.

We would submit, however, that it would be well to modify some parts of the despatch. The passage at page 2, beginning, "Her Majesty's Government are glad to find," &c., quotes Mr. Seward's despatch in which he pointedly speaks of "the late rebellion;" and it occurs to us that in referring to this passage, and that which follows, in which Mr. Seward states what the United States' Government would, in this view, deem itself at liberty to insist upon before the arbiter, it would be better, instead of adopting the tone of comment to be found at pages 8 and 9 to the top of page 10, to write to the effect that the language used by Mr. Seward in his despatch appears to Her Majesty's Government to be open to the construction that the Arbiter and Mixed Commission might enter into the question whether the act or policy of Her Majesty's Government in recognizing the Confederate States as a belligerent Power was or was not suitable to the circumstances of the time when the recognition was made—a construction which, after the distinct and repeated avowal of Her Majesty's Government that they would not consent to a reference of such a question, and especially having regard to your Lordship's despatch of the 9th of March last, Her Majesty's Government can hardly suppose that it was intended for the passage to bear. The letter might then point out (as in page 10) that Her Majesty's Government do not recede from their refusal to refer that question, and to indicate, as in page 13, what the basis of the reference of the claims must be.

We would also submit that exception may be taken to the description given of the character of the claims which might come before the proposed Mixed Commission at pages 17 and 18 of the draft. Your Lordship, in the despatch (No. 11) of the 24th of May last to the late Sir F. Wright Bruce (page 44 of printed correspondence), says: "The number of claims in this class on either side may be great, the circumstances of each more or less different, and the points involved in them complicated in their nature and bearing;" and it is perhaps too much to say that some of these claims may not include questions of principle, which will have to be determined by the Tribunal to which they are referred.

We think that the refusal to refer all questions to one and the same Arbiter or Tribunal should be maintained.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
C. J. SELWYN.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

* Colonial Office, July 31; Law Officers, August 22, 1866.

† Colonial Office, September 11, 1867.

---

No. 194.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received November 13.)

My Lord, Temple, November 13, 1867.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 31st ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a draft to Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Washington on the "Alabama" claims, in which the alterations suggested in our Report of the 23rd ultimo have been embodied; and Mr. Egerton was pleased to request that we would take it again into consideration, and that if it does not meet our views to alter it accordingly, explaining, if we think it necessary, in our Report the grounds on which the alterations are proposed. A copy of Mr. Seward's last despatch was also inclosed for information.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we have suggested a few alterations, some of which speak for themselves; and we refer briefly to the reasons which have induced us to propose others:—

In page 4, we refer to the passages of former despatches refusing to refer the question whether the policy of the Government in recognizing the Confederates was suitable to the circumstances of the time, as it qualifies and explains the proposal to refer the question of "moral responsibility."

Page 6. This alteration is made because Mr. Seward urges that but one Tribunal shall be appointed, or if two be appointed, for the sake of convenience, that each shall be clothed with the same powers.

The omission (page 7) is proposed, as the general claims may be brought forward by American as well as British subjects.

Page 12. We would suggest the words "followed by" instead of "converted into."

Page 16. This alteration is suggested because Mr. Seward maintains that there should be but one Tribunal.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
C. J. SELWYN.
TRAVERS TWISS.

1867

No. 195.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received December 27.)

My Lord, Temple, December 26, 1867.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 14th December instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from the Colonial Office, dated the 10th instant, forwarding correspondence respecting the abduction from Canada of a British subject, named Allan Macdonald, by an officer of the State of Michigan; and to request that we would take the papers into our consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we think that Lord Monck has done right in the course that he has taken in requiring the restoration of Macdonald, and in claiming reparation from the United States' Government for his abduction and the violation of Her Majesty's territory, and for the personal injury done to her subjects—assuming, of course, that the statements contained in the affidavits cannot be substantially controverted.

We think that there is considerable doubt whether Lord Monck can press the claim for extradition. The Treaty applies to cases of murder, assault with intent to commit murder, piracy, arson, robbery, forgery, and the utterance of forged paper; and we think it very questionable whether the evidence is reasonably satisfactory to prove "an assault with intent to commit murder" within the terms of the Treaty.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
C. J. SELWYN.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 196.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received December 27.)

My Lord, Temple, December 26, 1867.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 9th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me a copy of a Treaty signed in March last between Russia and the United States, by which the Russian Possessions in North America were ceded to the United States; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would favour your Lordship with my opinion as to how far, under international law, the United States are now bound by the Treaty between Great Britain and Russia of 1825, of which a copy was annexed for my information.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken this matter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That the United States are bound by the recitals from the Convention of 1825 which are incorporated into the Treaty of Cession, as far as the geographical limits of the ceded territory are concerned. Those recitals, although they do not constitute any direct Treaty engagement between Great Britain and the United States, make Articles III and IV of the Convention of 1825 evidence against the United States, that Great Britain has an established title to the line of demarcation described in those Articles; but as regards the other Articles of that Convention, whereby certain points connected with the commerce, navigation, and fisheries, of British and Russian subjects were settled for their reciprocal convenience, none of the obligations contracted by Russia towards Great Britain, under those Articles, devolve upon the United States by virtue of the Treaty of Cession.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 197.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received December 30.)

My Lord, Temple, December 30, 1867.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 21st instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from Mr. Arthur B. Forwood, relative to the case of the "Adela," now pending before the Supreme Court of the United States, together with a draft of the answer which your Lordship proposes to return to it.

That the accompanying Memorandum gives an outline of the former correspondence on the subject.

And Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take these papers into consideration, and furnish your Lordship with our opinion whether we concur in the terms of the proposed draft.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have perused and considered these papers, and have the honour to report—

That we presume that hitherto Mr. Forwood has not been apprised of what appears to have amounted to an arrangement with Mr. Seward that no steps would be taken by Her Majesty's Government with reference to the "Adela," while proceedings were pending in the District Court or Court of Appeal. To accede to Mr. Forwood's application would be a departure from that arrangement, and we think that his letter will be best answered by stating that your Lordship cannot comply with his request in the present state of the proceedings. We have made a slight alteration in the draft letter accordingly.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
C. J. SELWYN.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

Venezuela.

No. 198.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received January 3.)

My Lord, Lincoln's Inn, January 3, 1867.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 19th December, 1866, stating that with reference to our Report of the 13th of December, relative to the seizure of the steam-vessel "Bolivar," belonging to the Government of Venezuela, by the British crew, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith a letter, with its inclosures, from the Colonial Office,* together with three Reports received from the Admiralty,† relative to the movements of the vessel in question; and he was to request that we would take these papers into our consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion as to any further instructions upon the subject which should be issued to Her Majesty's Naval or Colonial authorities in the West Indies.

Mr. Hammond was also pleased to inclose the previous papers in this case, together with the drafts of a despatch to Mr. Fagan and of a letter addressed to the Colonial Office by your Lordship's directions, upon the receipt of our Report of the 13th of December last.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That it does not appear to us that any other instructions in reference to the ship should be issued to Her Majesty's Naval or Colonial authorities in the West Indies than such as are in accordance with our Report of the 13th of December last.

---

* Colonial Office, December 19, 1866.

† Admiralty, December 15, 15, and 17, 1866.

1867

In reference to the officers and crew of the ship, it is evident they have been placed in a situation of great difficulty, and while we remain of opinion that Her Majesty's Government ought not at present to interfere in any way on their behalf with the Venezuelan Government, we also think that nothing should be done to prejudice any questions that may arise between that Government and the officers and crew, and that such of them as may desire it should, in case of need, be sent home as distressed British seamen.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 199.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received January 10.)

Lincoln's Inn, January 9, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 1st instant, stating that, with reference to his letter of the 20th ultimo, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a further letter from the Colonial Office relating to the Venezuelan steamer "Bolivar," and to request that we would take the same into consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this case into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we are of opinion that the conduct of Lieutenant-Governor Pine in delivering up the "Bolivar," and that of Mr. Baynes in delivering up her boat, to the Captain of the "Naparari," as stated, has been right and proper.

We do not think that Her Majesty's Government is called upon at present to interfere in the matter of the agreement between the Captain and crew of the "Bolivar" and the Venezuelan Government.

We think also that Governor Pine should be instructed to take no further steps on behalf of the Captain and crew, and if it should hereafter be advisable that any interference on their behalf should be made, Her Majesty's Government will forward such instructions as shall be deemed right to Mr. Fagan.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

P.S.—Our Report on Mr. Hammond's letter of the 20th ultimo had been sent to Foreign Office before the receipt of his letter of the 1st instant.

J. R.
J. B. K.
R. P.

---

No. 200.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received April 24.)

Temple, April 23, 1867.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 16th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me a despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires in Venezuela (No. 23), reporting that in a Message addressed to the Legislature of that Republic, it was recommended that a law should be passed obliging all foreigners to have their claims settled by the tribunals of the country, without admitting diplomatic interference; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would furnish your Lordship with my view of the legal bearing of the proposed arrangement.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken this case into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That it is not competent to the Venezuelan Legislature to compel foreign States to recognize the validity of a law which prevents them from interfering to protect the interests of their subjects commorant in Venezuela.

Mr. Fagan should be instructed to express this opinion on the part of Her Majesty's Government.

Probably the Representatives of other foreign States will take the same course; and if so it would be desirable that he should act in concert with them.

I have, &c.
(Signed) ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 201.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received July 2.)

Lincoln's Inn, June 29, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 7th June instant, stating that with reference to his letter of the 1st of April last he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying further letter from Mr. Smith, dated the 5th instant, informing your Lordship that the Captain of the "Bolivar" had arrived, and was ready to give evidence before us if we should think it necessary; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would inform your Lordship if we desired to see the Captain.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That it would not be expedient, or in the ordinary course of practice, for the Law Officers of the Crown to take the evidence of the Captain of the "Bolivar," as suggested.

But we think that a communication might properly be made to the Captain, to the effect that the memorial of the officers and crew of the "Bolivar" is now under the consideration of Her Majesty's Government, and inasmuch as there is considerable difficulty in ascertaining what the facts of the case are, the Captain may be invited to give a detailed statement, for the entire accuracy of which he can vouch, as to what actually did occur, more particularly with reference to the alleged conduct of the officers and crew of the "Bolivar," in turning adrift at night in an open boat the Venezuelan sailors who had come on board, and then carrying off the vessel by stratagem.

It may be also suggested that Her Majesty's Government have received information that it was proposed by the Venezuelan Government, when it was discovered that a contract had been entered into with officers and crew which that Government had not sanctioned, and could not ratify in its integrity, that the officers and crew should renounce their rights as foreigners, or, if they objected to take that course, that they should be paid three months' wages, or wages to the time of their departure, and a free passage home should be given them.

The Captain's comments on this statement, or his own version of the facts, may be invited.

At the same time the Captain should be informed that, in suggesting that he should furnish a full statement of facts, Her Majesty's Government must not be understood as giving any pledge as to the course which will be taken on the memorial.

We suspend our opinion on the memorial of the officers and crew of the "Bolivar," which is still before us, as the information which may be obtained from the Captain may affect it.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 202.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received July 18.)

Lincoln's Inn, July 16, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 23rd May last, stating that the continued evasion of the Government of Venezuela to do justice to British claimants renders it necessary for Her Majesty's Government seriously to consider whether the time has not arrived for having recourse to measures more stringent than remonstrances, which have hitherto proved ineffectual to obtain redress for the British sufferers.

1867

That the claims may be divided generally into two classes:—one arising out of loans made at different times to the Venezuelan Government; the other out of wrongful proceedings by which individual British subjects have been sufferers. That a memorandum briefly relating the nature of the respective claims was inclosed; but as we should doubtless desire fuller and more detailed information on the subject, Mr. Hammond was pleased to send the accompanying volumes, which contain the correspondence during several years on the two classes of claims. That as regards the individual claims, Mr. Hammond was specially to call our attention to a report made by the late Mr. Edwardes, when Her Majesty's Consul-General and Chargé d'Affaires, after a very close examination into the particulars of each case, the result of which the Venezuelan Government agreed to accept with a view to their liquidation of the amounts fixed by Mr. Edwardes. That we should observe, however, that there are various claims in the same class which have not been subjected to the like strict inquiry, and the merits of which remain to be ascertained. That as regards the bondholders' claims we should observe that in respect to the war of 1862, the Venezuelan Government have forcibly appropriated, after the money had actually been paid to the agents of the bondholders, a sum of 18,443 dollars, which sum, therefore, stands on a different footing from the general liabilities of the Government to the bondholders. That this class of claims, however, arises in the main out of the neglect of the Venezuelan Government to provide for the charges of the loans out of the revenues specially assigned for that object.

Mr. Hammond was also pleased to observe, however, with reference to an attempt which we should notice to have been made by some parties to fix Her Majesty's Government with an obligation to obtain redress for the bondholders on the ground of Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires being allowed at one time to act on their behalf, that this was allowed on the express and recorded understanding that Her Majesty's Government incurred no liability by deferring to the repeated request of the committee of the bondholders, and that Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires acted not by direction of the Foreign Office, but merely by the permission of it, as to a certain extent the agent of the bondholders. That with these preliminary remarks, Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take these matters into consideration, and report to your Lordship to what extent Her Majesty's Government are entitled or called upon to enforce, if remonstrance fails, the claims either of individual claimants or of the bondholders; and in what manner, and to what extent, if so entitled or called upon, they would be warranted in proceeding to obtain satisfaction for all or any of the claims.

We are also honoured with Mr. Hammond's letters of the 29th May and the 26th ultimo, transmitting further papers relating to this case.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That having regard to the continued evasion of the fulfilment of these obligations for which we find in these papers no adequate justification or excuse, and to the constant remonstrances made by Her Majesty's Government which have produced no effect, we are of opinion that it would be competent to Her Majesty's Government to use measures of force for the purpose of compelling the Venezuelan Government to fulfil their obligations to Her Majesty's subjects.

The expediency of pursuing such a course is a matter of policy which is perhaps beyond our province to advise upon.

No measures of force should be resorted to until another opportunity, upon a further remonstrance, be afforded to the Venezuelan Government of doing justice.

This remonstrance should indicate clearly that Her Majesty's Government will feel themselves fully justified in resorting to reprisals or other stringent measures, in the event of such remonstrance being disregarded.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 203.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received October 14.)

My Lord,

Temple, October 12, 1867.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letters of the 1st April last and of the 14th ultimo, stating that, with reference to the report of the Law Officers of June 29th last, respecting the case of the "Bolivar," in the last paragraph of which they state that they had suspended their opinion on the memorial of the officers and crew of the ship, as it might be affected by further information which might be obtained from the Captain, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith a further letter from Mr. Smith, inclosing a detailed statement of what occurred, together with other documents relating to the case; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take these papers into our consideration, and furnish your Lordship with our opinion thereupon at our earliest convenience.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That the statement of facts contained in the Minute and voluminous Report of Captain Fock de Robeck differs, as might naturally be expected, in many particulars from that maintained by the Venezuelan Minister, and it is of course impossible for us to determine where the truth really lies.

We think, however, that we may safely assume that the crew of the "Bolivar" entered into what they believed to be a contract binding on the Venezuelan Government with Mr. Hemming, the Venezuelan Consul in London, which they performed in part, and which they were ready to complete, but which the Venezuelan authorities declared was unauthorized and which they declined to fulfil, and which, in fact, the state of the treasury rendered it impossible for them to carry into effect.

Proposals were made on the part of the Venezuelan Government to effect what was contended to be a fair arrangement and compromise with the crew.

These proposals were not acceded to. The crew demanded between 3,500*l.* and 4,000*l.* as the price of their giving up their contract, which the Government authorities said it was impossible to raise; and finding that the Government had not kept, and would not keep, the agreement entered into by the Consul, or accede to the terms demanded, they resolved that no further negotiations with the Government should be carried on, that the officers and soldiers who had been put on board the ship by the Venezuelan Government should be landed, and that the ship should be carried off. It is said by the Captain that these soldiers were sent on shore in a lifeboat capable of carrying sixty men, that they had six oars and that they were not unwilling to go ashore. The Venezuelan Minister tells a very different tale. At all events, on getting rid of the Venezuelans, the ship was carried off by the Captain and crew, it remained in their possession for some time, and was ultimately given up to the Venezuelan Government by the Representative of the British Government.

The question is whether your Lordship shall comply with the request of the officers and crew, and make a demand on or request to the Venezuelan Government for compensation for breach of the engagement entered into by the Representative of that Government in England.

Under any circumstances we think that the conduct of the officers and crew was such that your Lordship could not have insisted upon satisfaction of their claims, for although they appear to have had much grounds for complaint against the Venezuelan Government, their act of carrying off the vessel cannot be justified.

But it appears to us from all the papers now laid before us by the Captain that there can be no doubt that the "Bolivar" was a ship of war in the service of the Republic; that the Captain, officers, and crew enlisted and agreed to serve on board that ship of war; and that the representation of the Captain that it was understood they were to be engaged in preventing smuggling cannot be trusted or acted upon. We think that officers and crew were guilty of an infringement of the Foreign Enlistment Act, sec. 2, and this notwithstanding the attempt made to give a lawful character to the engagement by sec. 2 of the articles of agreement entered into with the Consul.

The character of the vessel is made clearly to appear by the terms of the "War Patent," and we think that though the Republic was not actually at war, the case falls strictly within the prohibition of the Act.

It appears to us, therefore, that it would not be right for your Lordship to aid the officers and crew in obtaining compensation in respect of a breach of contract for service which was prohibited by statute, and that the applicants should be informed that on this account, independently of other considerations, your Lordship cannot properly lend the assistance of Her Majesty's Government for the purpose of obtaining compensation from the Venezuelan Government.

1867

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
C. J. SELWYN.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 204.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received December 30.)

Temple, December 30, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 16th ultimo, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 12th of October last, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter which had been received from Mr. Smith, respecting the claim which the officers and crew of the "Bolivar" consider they have against Her Majesty's Government; and to request that we would take the papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer which should be returned to that gentleman.

Mr. Hammond was also pleased to say that the former papers in the case were inclosed for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the claim now set up by Mr. Smith, on behalf of the Captain and crew of the "Bolivar," viz., that they have "in justice a claim against the British Government for depriving them of their security by compelling them to give up the vessel to the Venezuelan Government at Antigua, instead of bringing it back to London to the owners, where they could have obtained payment of their wages and claims," is one which, as far as we can see, after again perusing the papers sent to us (which, however, do not include the Captain's statement), has never been advanced before.

We think that there is not a pretence for such claim.

In point of law the Captain and crew had no right to detain the vessel under claim of lien, and nothing could justify them in carrying her away by force from La Guayra.

In point of fact the owners were the Venezuelan Government, as the Captain fully admitted; his statement in his letter, without date, written "off Granada" to the harbourmaster, that the Venezuelan Government "declared they did not want her," being glaringly untrue.

The Captain was willing to "deliver up the vessel to any one who claimed her on behalf of her rightful owners." This is proved by his letter to Governor Price, St. Johns, 25th November, 1866.

The vessel was not under a British flag, as stated by Mr. Smith; she carried the colours of the Republic of Venezuela, as shown by the letter from Mr. Eldridge to Sir F. Rogers, Antigua, 27th November, 1866.

We think that your Lordship should state, in reply to Mr. Smith's letter, that Her Majesty's Government do not consider that the Captain and crew of the "Bolivar" have any such claim as they assert against the British Government, nor can they admit the accuracy of the statements of fact or law upon which the claim is based.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
C. J. SELWYN.
TRAVERS TWISS.

Zanzibar.

No. 205.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received January 10.)

Lincoln's Inn, January 9, 1867.

My Lord,

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 29th of December ultimo, in which he stated that he was directed by your Lordship to inclose to us a letter from Colonel Playfair, Her Majesty's Consul and Political Agent at Zanzibar, in which he suggested that for the future, native dhows captured by British cruizers in the neighbourhood of Zanzibar should be taken for adjudication to that port, to be dealt with by Her Majesty's Consul in a Vice-Admiralty Court.

Mr. Egerton was pleased to inclose a copy of the Order in Council of August 9, 1866, by Article XXXIX of which the powers of a Vice-Admiralty Court Judge are conferred upon Her Majesty's Consul at Zanzibar; and to request that we would take these papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether there is any objection to the plan proposed by Colonel Playfair.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we see no objection to the plan proposed by Colonel Playfair in regard to vessels captured on suspicion of being engaged in the Slave Trade within the dominions of the Sultan of Zanzibar. (See 29th section of the Order in Council of the 9th of August, 1866.)

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN ROLT.
JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 206.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received June 3.)

Temple, May 31, 1867.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 30th instant, stating that with reference to the Law Officers' Report of the 30th of October last, upon the question whether the firm of Fraser and Co., established at Zanzibar, had violated the provisions of the British laws for the suppression of the Slave Trade by entering into contracts with the Sultan of Zanzibar, and with certain other Arab Chiefs for a supply of slaves to cultivate their sugar estates, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the accompanying despatches from the Acting British Consul at Zanzibar relating to this matter; that it would be seen from these papers that Messrs. Fraser and Co. would have it to be inferred that the contracts which have been pronounced illegal by the Law Officers of the Crown were framed on a contract previously drawn up and authenticated by Colonel Playfair, the British Consul and Political Agent at Zanzibar in 1864, and that some discussion has taken place between the present Acting British Consul and Messrs. Fraser upon this point. That as, however, the question of the employment of slaves by Messrs. Fraser under this contract has been brought to a satisfactory issue by the generous conduct of the Sultan of Zanzibar, who has emancipated the whole of the slaves (711 in number) who were in Messrs. Fraser's employ, your Lordship is of opinion that it would answer no practical purpose to enter into a discussion with that firm as to whether they were led into error or not by any previous arrangement or contract sanctioned by Colonel Playfair, and that your Lordship would propose, therefore, to rest satisfied with what has been attained, and to instruct Mr. Seward to inform Messrs. Fraser that any penalties which they have incurred by acts on their part in violation of the provisions of the British Laws for the prevention of the dealing in slaves will not be enforced, nor any proceedings adopted against them on their undertaking not to offend for the future. But before, however, writing to Mr. Seward in this case, your Lordship would be glad to be furnished with any observations I may have to offer upon this case, and upon the manner in which your Lordship proposes to deal with it.

1867

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I think the manner in which your Lordship proposes to deal with this case in the present position of it, is right and proper. It seems to me expedient that the language which your Lordship employs towards Messrs. Fraser should be such as to leave no doubt on their minds that, in your Lordship's opinion, they have had a very fortunate escape from the penal consequences of an illegal act; and that Mr. Seward should be apprized of your Lordship's satisfaction with the course which he has pursued throughout these proceedings.

The emancipation of 711 slaves by the Sultan of Zanzibar is certainly a great result, and appears to be mainly the consequence of the course adopted by Mr. Seward.

I have, &c.
(Signed) ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 207.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received October 24.)

Temple, October 22, 1867.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Murray's letter of the 27th August last, stating that with reference to the Report of the Law Officers of the 30th of October, 1866, upon the employment of slave-labour by Messrs. Fraser and Co. of Zanzibar, for the cultivation of their sugar plantations, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from Mr. Fraser, of that firm, requesting information upon certian points connected with the employment of slave-labour by British subjects, and also submitting, for the opinion of Her Majesty's Government, a contract drawn up in 1864, for the cultivation of their plantations, between his firm and the Sultan of Zanzibar, which contract has since been annulled; and Mr. Murray was pleased to request that we would take this letter and the two Memoranda which accompany it into our consideration, and report to your Lordship what answer should be returned to Mr. Fraser.

Mr. Murray was also pleased to remark that, in considering this question, your Lordship would be glad also to receive our opinion as to the circumstances or manner in which it would be legal for a British subject to make use of slave-labour; a question of vast importance when it is remembered that in many countries and ports in which Her Majesty's Consuls and British traders reside, the white population depend almost entirely upon the services of slaves as porters, domestic servants, and labourers of all kinds.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the contract between Messrs. Fraser and the Sultan of Zanzibar is not by the law of this country an illegal or invalid contract, and we think that British subjects entering into contracts with natives who may hold slaves in Zanzibar, similar in tenor to the contract of Messrs. Fraser, will not infringe the law of this country.

To give a satisfactory or exhaustive answer to the general question proposed by your Lordship, viz., as to the circumstance or manner in which it would be legal for a British subject to make use of slave-labour, is a matter of considerable difficulty, especially as it unfortunately happens that in the case of Santos v. Illidge, in which the construction of the Slave Trade Consolidation Act, 5 Geo. IV, cap. 113, and the subsequent statute, 6 and 7 Vict., cap. 98, was much canvassed in the Court of Common Pleas, and afterwards in the Court of Error Exchequer Chamber, the unanimous judgment of the first Court, consisting of three Judges, was overruled by four Judges against two in the Court of Error; Mr. Justice Blackburn and Mr. Baron Bramwell, who were in the majority, not agreeing with each other entirely in the grounds upon which they pronounced their judgments of reversal, and two Judges giving no reasons for their judgment.

In our opinion the statutes prohibiting dealing in slaves must clearly be construed as penal statutes, and in order to prevent a British subject from availing himself of the services of slaves out of Her Majesty's dominions, in countries where slave-holding is not forbidden by territorial law, an offence clearly within the words and meaning of the statutes must be made out.

We think that there is nothing to prevent a British subject out of Her Majesty's dominions employing a slave as his servant or labourer, so long as such employment does not involve a dealing or trading in purchase, sale, barter, or transfer, carrying away, removing, &c., of such slave. Such employment is not, we think, forbidden by the 5 Geo. IV, nor by any other statute.

The purchase of slaves by a British subject, within or without Her Majesty's dominions, even in a country where the sale is sanctioned by the territorial law, is, however, we apprehend, clearly forbidden by British law to any of Her Majesty's subjects. Mr. Baron Bramwell, indeed, expressed an opinion that the statute 5 Geo. IV, cap. 113, "did not prohibit the purchase of slaves in the Brazils by British subjects, the slaves being to be kept and used there" (Santos v. Illidge, 8 Com. Bench, new series, page 871). But this prohibition was certainly imposed by 6 and 7 Vict., cap. 98.

The purchase of a slave in a foreign country by a British subject being thus prohibited, an important question for consideration is, whether a transfer by a native to a British subject of slaves, e.g., for a term of years, or for the lives of the slaves, to be employed in the foreign country in which the slaves are, is such a "transfer" as is contemplated by the Acts. We are disposed to think that it would be such a transfer, and that contracts for supplying slave-labour, where particular slaves are made over to the British subject for particular terms or periods, to be under the control of the latter and in his possession, are forbidden by the statute.

Where the contract, as in the case of the Sultan of Zanzibar and Messrs. Fraser, provides that the former is to find a certain number of labourers to be employed for the benefit or partial benefit of the latter, there would, we think, be no "transfer" within the Acts, and such contract does not, we think, violate the Acts.

With regard to the answer to be returned to Mr. Fraser, we would venture to submit that your Lordship may properly decline to express any opinion as to whether a particular form of contract or particular modes of employment of slaves would, or would not, be illegal. It is obvious that the statutes against slave-dealing, even if their construction were clear, are peculiarly open and liable to evasion, and there are many contracts which might be entered into for the employment of slaves, which upon their face might not appear to violate British law, the carrying out of which, however, might involve the British subject in an infringement of the statutes.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
C. J. SELWYN.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

PRINTED AT THE FOREIGN OFFICE BY T. HARRISON.—JUNE 1869.

1867

Nicaragua.

---

No. 208.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received February 22.)

My Lord, Doctors' Commons, February 22, 1867.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 19th instant, stating that, with reference to my Report of the 19th July, on the subject of the proceedings of the Government of Nicaragua with regard to Messrs. Vaughan's grants, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me therewith a further despatch from Her Majesty's Acting Consul-General at San José, reporting the official approval by the Republic of a Contract made by their Commissioner with Mr. Vaughan, jun., as to the right of cutting and exporting timber from Great River on Mosquito shore; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take this paper into consideration in connection with the former correspondence, also inclosed, and inform your Lordship whether I consider that a protest should be entered against this proceeding of the Nicaraguan Government.

---

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken this case into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That I am of opinion that Mr. Wallis should be instructed to enter a protest against this grant of the Nicaraguan Commissioner to Mr. Vaughan, to the effect that Her Majesty will treat the same as null and void, and as an infringement of the rights of the Mosquito Indians secured to them under the Treaty of Monagua.

Mr. Wallis ought to give publicity to this protest.

I have, &c.

(Signed) ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

1868

Printed for the use of the Foreign Office. September 1870.

CONFIDENTIAL.

REPORTS

FROM

THE LAW OFFICERS

OF

THE CROWN.

---

1868.

ALPHABETICAL INDEX.

AFRICA.

Trans-Vaal Republic. Breach of Treaty with Great Britain, 1.
„ Slave Trade, 1.
„ Annexation of Territory, 1.

ARGENTINE REPUBLIC.

Army. Protection of British subjects in, 3.
Bankruptcy Court. Refusal to give effect to Decree, 4.
Claim. Illegal detention of goods, 7.
Gath, Mr., 4.
Great Britain. Subjects. Destruction of property during civil war, 2.
„ „ Protection of, in foreign military service, 3.
"Prince Albert," 2.
Rickard, F. T., 3.
Rivers. South American. Right of foreign vessels to navigate, 4.
Stewart, Mr., 7.
Treaty of 1853. Non-application to River Paraguay, 4.

BRAZIL.

Act of Parliament, 8 and 9 Vict., cap. 122. Repeal, 8.
Slave Trade. Repeal of Act 8 and 9 Vict., cap. 122, 8.

CENTRAL AMERICA.

Central American Transit Company. Seizure of property, 15.
Claim. British subject. Appointment of a Commission to settle, 10, 13.
Commission. Appointment of, to settle claims, 10, 13.
„ Appointment of Arbiter, 13.
Delvaille, Mr., 9, 10.
Great Britain. Subjects. Seizure of property for war purposes, 15.
„ „ Seizure of property of, 15.
Harris, Capt., 8, 10, 11, 12, 13.
Marriage of British subjects. Necessity of residence in district, 14.
San Geronimo estate. Claim of owners, 8, 10, 11, 12, 13.
Taxes. Commercial, 15.
Treaty with Great Britain. Violation, 15.

CHILE.

Chile. Requests permission to construct iron-clads in England, 20, 22.
Foreign Enlistment Act. Licenses for departure of vessels detained under, 17, 18, 19.
Isaac, Campbell, and Co., 16.
Peru. Complaint as to departure of Spanish and Chilian vessels of war, 19, 20.
Prize Court. Complaint against constitution of, 16.
"Tornado," 16, 17.
Vessels of war. Spanish and Chilian in England. Licenses for departure, 17, 18, 19.
„ Iron-clad. Permission to construct, 20, 22.
„ Foreign. Supply of armaments to, during war, 21.
"Victoria," 21.

CHINA.

Channels, mid-. Captures in, 24, 29.
Consular officer. Trial for embezzlement, 26.
Consulates. Officers in charge of. Judicial functions, 27.
Consuls. Acting. Marriages by, 26.
„ Temporary. Judicial functions, 29.
Extradition. Macao criminals, 33.
Fees. Charge in dollars, 26.
Great Britain. Subjects. Penalties for violation of Treaty stipulations, 24, 31.
„ „ Chinese origin. Distinguishing mark, 27.
Herring, Mr., 28
Hong Kong. British jurisdiction in neighbourhood of, 23.
„ Captures by Chinese in channel of, 24, 29.
„ Custom-houses, 34.
Joint Stock Companies Act. Not applicable to China, 34.
Jones, T., 26.
Judicial functions. Junior Consular officers, 27.
Jurisdiction. Hong Kong, 23.
Macao. Criminal. Extradition, 33.
Marriages by Acting Consuls, 26.
„ Necessity of statutory residence, 31.
„ Presence of Minister not necessary, 31.
Ordinance No. 9. Alteration in, 23.
Peking. Agreement with escort, 28.
Pilots. Chinese regulations, 25.
Piracy. Ordinance No. 9. Alteration in, 23.
„ Suppression. Co-operation with Chinese authorities, 28, 30.
Pirates. Captured. Rendition, 33, 35.
Shanghae. French Settlement, 36.
Treaty stipulations. Violation by British subjects. Penalties, 24, 31.
Vessels. British. Sailing letters, 32.
Yang-tsze River. Closing of the Straw Shoe channel to steamers, 30.

COLOMBIA.

Braudon, P., 38.
Claim on account of loan. Support, 37.
„ „ seizure of lead by Government, 37.
Fuihling and Co., 38.
Joy, R. A., 38.
Judge. State. Responsibility for illegal act, 38.
McKenna, Mr., 37.
"Patrono," 38.
Stiebel, Brothers, 37.
Vessel. Detention for war purposes, 38.

FRANCE.

Arnim, M., 44.
Bokeh. Destruction of British property, 44.
"Boulogne," 40.
Chancery. Court of. As to recognition of a legal inquiry in France, 43.
Confederate States. Trial in France. Construction of vessels of war for, 44.
Consuls. Not bound to serve law notices, 39.

Great Britain. Subjects. Destruction of property during war, 44.
Hayward, Mrs., 39, 41, 42, 43.
Ingledew and Juce, Messrs., 39.
Jurisdiction. Foreign vessels in British ports, 45.
Law notices. Consular officers not bound to serve, 39.
Lunatic. Escape from England. Legal proceedings in France, 39, 41, 42, 43.
Property. Destruction of British during war, 44.
"Tigre," 45.
Vessel. British. Attempt to conceal nationality, 40.
Vessels of war. Construction in France for Confederate States, 44.
Vessels. Foreign in British ports. Jurisdiction of British authorities, 45.

GREECE.

Albano, C., 45.
Catheras. Prio of, 46.
Criminal suits. Payment of expenses, 46.
Iona, M., 46.
Pension. Claim for services in Ionian Islands, 45.
Weale, Mr., 46.

HANS TOWNS.

Fawcuss, Mr., 48.
Nationality. Son of a British subject who has been naturalized abroad, 48.

ITALY.

Caltanisetta. Gas-works, 49.
Great Britain. Subjects married to foreigners. Non-exemption from forced loans, 49.
Laidlaw, Messrs., 49.
Loans. Forced. Non-exemption of British subjects married to foreigners, 49.
San Germano. Duchess of, 49.

JAPAN.

Claim. Submission to arbitration, 58.
Consular Courts. Vice-Admiralty jurisdiction, 58.
Foreign Enlistment Act. Non-application to Japan, 58, 59.
Great Britain. Subjects. Protection by force, 50.
„ „ Neutrality, 51, 52, 55, 57, 58.
Hiogo. Opening of port, 50.
Hoey, H. E., 56, 58.
Hornby. Sir E., 57, 58.
Japan. Definition of, in Order in Council of 9th March, 1865, 55.
Neutrality. British subjects. Regulations for enforcing, 51, 52, 57.
Order in Council. Neutrality of British subjects, 51, 52, 57.
„ 9th March, 1865. Definition of Japan, 55.
Osaka. British subjects. Regulations for Government, 50.
„ Opening of port, 50.
Vessels. British. Use of by belligerents in civil war, 55, 58.
Vessels of war. British. Detention of a foreigner illegal, 60.
„ Purchase of by belligerents, 55.
War. Civil. Neutrality of British subjects, 51, 52, 55, 57.
Yokohama. Protection of British subjects by force, 50.

MADAGASCAR.

Consular jurisdiction. Order in Council of 1867. Amendment, 62, 64.
„ Court. Rules and Regulations, 63.
Order in Council of 1867. Amendment, 62, 64.
„ As to giving effect to in Mauritius, 63, 64.
Mauritius. Trial of criminals, 62.
„ Order in Council. As to giving effect to in, 63, 64.

MEXICO.

Blockade. Consistent with amity, 66.
Bondholders. M. Castillo's letter, 65.
Bridges, Captain, 65, 66.
"Chanticleer," 65, 66.
Foreign Office. Application for copy of a letter in, 65.
Mazatlan. Blockade by British ship of war, 65, 66.
Westall, Mr., 65.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Doyle, Mr. P., 68, 69.
Pensions. Diplomatic, 68, 69.
„ Application of section 6 of 2 and 3 Wm. IV, cap. 116, 68, 69.

MONTE VIDEO.

Campbell family. Murder of. Trial of supposed murderer, 69.
Enrique, E., 71.
Great Britain. Subjects. Death from violence of police. Compensation, 71.
"Narcissus," 70.
Refugees. Political. Reception on board vessels of war, 70.
Seamen. British. Crimping, 70.
Vessels of war. British. Reception of refugees, 70.

NETHERLANDS.

"Maggie Leslie," 71, 72.
Vessels. Derelict. Claim of local authorities to a percentage, 71, 72.
Wreck. Loss by sale, by local authorities, 72.

PACIFIC ISLANDS.

Consular jurisdiction. Fiji Islands, 74, 75.
Fiji Islands. Consular jurisdiction, 74, 75.
Great Britain. Rights under Treaty of 1851, 73.
Treaty. Proposed Reciprocity, 73.
„ of 1851. Rights of Great Britain, 73.

PERU.

Foreigners. Indemnity for pillage of property during Revolution, 75.
Great Britain. Subjects. Forced loan levied by a Revolutionary Government, 75.
Loan. Forced. On British subjects, 75.
War. Civil. Pillage of property of foreigners during, 76.

PORTUGAL.

Andrews, F., 80.
Capper, Clark, and Co., 81.
Collision. Vessel of war, 81.
Contract. Government. Refusal of Cortes to sanction, 81.
Cortes. Refusal to sanction a Government contract, 81.
Duties. Differential. Interpretation of Treaty of 1842, 78.
"Estaphama," 81, 82.
Godson, Mr., 78.
Great Britain. Subjects. Payment of "decima industrial," or rent tax, 77.
„ „ „ of "imposto de viação" tax, 79.
"Meg Merrilies," 81, 82.
Tax. "Imposto de viação." Levy on British subjects, 79.
„ "Decima." On British subjects, 77.
Treaty of 1842. Differential duties. Interpretation, 78.
Vessels of war. Collision, 81.
War. Civil. Losses of British subjects, 80.

PRUSSIA.

Great Britain. Naturalized subjects. Protection abroad, 82.
Harper, Miss M., 83.
Herring, Mr., 82.
Illegitimate children. Detention, 83.
Naturalization. Protection of subjects abroad, 82.

RUSSIA.

Bank notes. Stolen. Attempt to circulate, 90.
Consular Commission. Right of Secretary of State to cancel, 94.
Compton, Mr. R., 88.
Commission. Right of Secretary of State to cancel, 94.
Demartino, Mr., 90.
Embassies. Jurisdiction over employés, 94, 95.
Foreign Office. Archives. Access to, 89.
Murray, Grenville-, Mr., 85, 86, 89, 91, 92, 94.
Law. Jurisdiction over Embassies, 94, 95.
Roebuck, Mr., 95.
Wilkins, Mr., 85.

SAXONY.

Great Britain. Subjects. Arrest, 95.
Warburton J., 95.

SIAM.

Colonies. Extradition. Non-application of Act 24 and 25 Vict., cap. 99, to, 96.
Extradition. Non-application of Act 24 and 25 Vict., cap. 99, to Colonies, 96.
„ Queddah, 97.
Great Britain. Subjects. Compensation for destruction of property, 98, 99.
Queddah. Proposed Convention with, 97, 99.
„ Extradition, 97, 99.
Treaty. Right of British subjects to compensation under Article I of, 98, 99.

SPAIN.

Africa. West Coast. British traders, 103.
„ „ Jurisdiction over British subjects, 103.
"Amalia," 100, 102.
Barter and Co., 108.
Benedetti, M., 115.
Brabo, A. B., 119.
Cadiz. Gulf of. Limits of, 105.
Calonge, General, 110.
Campbell, F., 114, 116.
Capture. Limits of, 102.
Castro, M. de, 110, 111.
"Catalina," 104.
Claims Commission, Access to Reports, 119.
Customs Ordinance, 102.
"Fanny," 109, 111, 118.
"Garibaldi," 105, 109, 125.
Gibraltar. Extradition, 119.
„ Nationality of the child of a Spanish subject born, 119.
„ Seizure of Spanish guarda-costa in British waters, 120.
„ Spanish Maritime limits, 105.
"Gibraltar Segundo," 120.
Grain, Mr., 119.
Great Britain. Protection of children of foreigners born in, 107.
Guarda-costa. Seizure of British vessels, 100, 104, 105, 109, 111, 120, 121.
Hocken, D., 108.
Kirby, Captain, 122, 125.
Livingstone, Consul, 103.
Maritime limits. Application of Acts 6 Geo. IV, cap. 18, and 16 and 17 Vict., cap. 107, 105.
„ Distinction between "British waters and the high seas," 118.
"Mermaid," 108, 115, 116, 117.
"Mountaineer," 108.
Nationality. Children of foreigners born in England, 107.
„ of a child born in Gibraltar of Spanish parents, 119.
Order in Council. Jurisdiction over British subjects on West Coast of Africa, 103.
Ordinance. Spanish Customs, 102.
"Queen Victoria," 107.
Prize Courts. Appeal, 112.
Retortillo, M., 101.
"San Pablo," 121.
Seas. High. Right of search, 118.
"Skylark," 120.
Tarifa. Fort of. Death of a British subject by a shot from, 108, 115.
"Tornado," 101. 110, 111, 112, 114, 122, 123, 124, 125.
„ Case of crew, 114, 116.
Vessels. British. Seizure by guarda-costa, 100, 104, 105, 109, 111, 120, 121.
Villalobos, M., 107.
Yranda, M. de, 119.

SWITZERLAND.

Domicil. Difference between municipal and international, 127.
Property. British. In Switzerland. Duty on inheritance to, 126, 127.
Townshend, Rev. C. H., 126, 127.

TURKEY.

Baxter, Rose, Norton, and Co., 141.
Calvert, Mr., 128, 138.
Cavan, Lubbock and Co., 135, 139, 144, 145, 147, 152.
Claims on Turkish Government. Payment on interest on settlement, 138, 140, 149.
Consuls. No part of duty to transmit summonses, &c., connected with civil suits, 129.
Danube. Cases of collision. Tribunal, 133, 145.
Egypt. Engine-drivers' claims, 132.
„ Consular jurisdiction. Reform, 141.
„ Société Agricole et Industrielle d'Egypte, 135, 139, 144, 145, 147, 152.
Foreigners. Real property, 130, 137, 143, 153.
Fleet. Turkish. Project for destruction, 143.
Greece. Letters of marque, 154.
Gunpowder. Import of, 129.
Hanson, Mrs., 134.
Holroyd, T., 132, 136.
Hughes, J., 139.
Interest. Payment by Turkish Government, 138, 140, 149.
Legal documents. Consuls not called upon to forward, 129.
Letters of marque. Greece, 154.
Loan. Breach of contract, 141.
Malta. Transmission of Levant prisoners to, 138.
Manasea and Co., 128.
Matto, M. de, 138, 140, 149.
"Mogue," 139.
"Mussr," 139.
Naval Court. Alexandria. Disputed decision, 139.
Palmar, Mr., 143.
Petherick, Mr., 130, 135.
Principalities. Civil and criminal jurisdiction. Capitulations, 146.
Property, real. Foreigners. Law and Protocol, 130, 137, 143, 153.
Reade, Consul, 132, 136.
Smyrna Quay Company, 134.
Suez Canal Company. Exemption from Customs duties, 149, 151.
Treaties with Great Britain. Effect of Law allowing foreigners to hold real property, 130.
Vessels. Collision. Mixed Tribunal, 139.

1868

UNITED STATES.

"Alabama." Protocol, 170.
Aliens. Rights of, having claims against British Government, 172.
Anderson, J., 175.
Blackie, Mrs., 154.
Callaghan, F., 163.
Campbell, F., 173.
Canada. Extradition for forgery, 160, 161.
Carlisle, Mr., 162.
Claims. "Alabama." Protocol for settlement of, 170.
  „ On the British Government. Right of aliens, 172.
  „ Convention, 176.
Confederate States. Recognition of state of belligerency by Supreme Court of the United States, 163.
  „ Termination of belligerent character of, 171.
Extradition. Forgery, 160, 161.
Great Britain. Subject. Abduction from New Brunswick, 154.
  „ Subjects. Losses of property during civil war, 154, 161.
  „ Arrest of naturalized United States' citizens. Right of interference, 163.
Machado, J. A., 174.
"Mary Verney," 174.
Nassau. Suspicious character of trade with, 163.
Naturalization. British subjects naturalized in the United States. Arrest in Great Britain, 163.
  „ Proposed Protocol, 169.
New Brunswick. Abduction of a British subject from, 154.
"Osborne," 155.
Parr, Messrs. J. and W., 161.
Passport. Naturalized subjects. Visa by British Minister at Washington, 156, 157.
"Pearl," 168.
Property of British subjects Destruction during civil war, 154, 161.
Purvis, Mr., 154.
Rahmuy, Mr., 167.
Seamen. Foreign. Jurisdiction of Central Criminal Court, 175.
Smith, F. B., 160, 161.
"Springbok," 163, 173.
"Thomas Watson," 174.
Treaty of Naturalization. Prussia and United States, 155.
  „ Negotiation, 155, 157, 160, 162, 169.
  „ Claims, 176.
Vessels. British. Foreign seamen. Jurisdiction of Central Criminal Court, 175,
Vicksburg. Destruction of British property at, during civil war, 154.
Westhead and Co., 174.
"Wren," 172.

VENEZUELA.

Bakewell, Dr. R., 183.
Bingham, Mr., 180.
Blockade. Nueva Barcelona, 181.
"Bolivar," 179.
Cage, A., Mrs, 180.
Claims. Mixed Commission, 179.
Contraband of war. Release of a captured vessel on delivery of, 181.
Great Britain. Subject. Murder by Venezuelan soldiers, 181.
  „ Subjects. Nationality of children of, born in Venezuela, 182.
Nationality of children of British subjects born in Venezuela, 182.
Noel, H., 182.
Nueva Barcelona. Blockade, 181.
O'Callaghan, M., 182.
Vessels. Captured. Release on delivery of contraband of war, 181.

---

LIST OF REPORTS.

Arranged according to Countries.

AFRICA.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 1 | Oct. 29, 1868 | Queen's Advocate | Trans-Vaal Republic. Proposed annexation of territory. Slave Trade. Breach of Treaty engagements with Great Britain | 1 |

ARGENTINE REPUBLIC.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 2 | Jan. 25, 1868 | Queen's Advocate | Case of the "Prince Albert." Her Majesty's Minister at Buenos Ayres should officially support claim of owners to compensation, &c., for destruction of above vessel by mutinous Argentine troops .. .. .. .. | 2 |
| 3 | June 12, | Queen's Advocate | Case of Mr. F. T. Rickard. Question as to right to British protection, Mr. Rickard having entered Argentine military service .. .. .. .. .. .. | 3 |
| 4 | Aug. 15, | Law Officers .. | Case of Mr. Gath, fraudulent bankrupt. Argentine tribunals refuse to give effect to Decree of English Court of Bankruptcy .. .. .. .. .. .. | 4 |
| 5 | 15, | Queen's Advocate | Report relative to the right of foreign ships of war and foreign merchant-vessels to navigate the South American rivers. Non-application of the Treaty of 1853 to the River Paraguay .. .. .. .. .. .. | 4 |
| 6 | Sept. 8, | Law Officers .. | Case of Mr. Stewart. Claim on Argentine Government for illegal detention of his goods .. .. .. | 7 |

BRAZIL.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 7 | Dec. 8, 1868 | Law Officers .. | Slave Trade. Approving Bill for repeal of Act 8 and 9 Vict., cap. 122 . .. .. .. .. .. | 8 |

CENTRAL AMERICA.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 8 | Feb. 28, 1868 | Law Officers .. | Case of Captain Harris. Claim on the Guatemalan Government on account of the destruction of his property at San Geromino .. .. .. .. .. | 8 |
| 9 | Mar. 15, | Queen's Advocate | Claim of Mr. Delvaille on the Government of Honduras. Approving answer to Mr. Forrest's letter .. .. | 9 |
| 10 | Apr. 3, | Queen's Advocate | Claim of Mr. Delvaille. Support to be given to claimant by Her Majesty's Government .. .. .. .. | 10 |
| 11 | May 4, | Queen's Advocate | Claim of Captain Harris. Approving conditions under which claimant proposes to submit his case to a Commission .. | 10 |
| 12 | 15, | Queen's Advocate | Claim of Captain Harris. Conditions under which attested evidence might be forwarded to Mr. Corbett by Her Majesty's Government .. .. .. .. .. | 11 |

| No. | Date. | | SUBJECT. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 13 | July 14, 1868 | Queen's Advocate | Claim of Captain Harris. Unsatisfactory explanation of Captain Harris with regard to the documentary evidence which he desires to be sent to Mr. Corbett | 11 |
| 14 | Aug. 8, | Queen's Advocate | Case of Captain Harris. Documentary evidence produced by Captain Harris may be forwarded to Mr. Corbett for use of Commission | 12 |
| 15 | 13, | Queen's Advocate | Case of Captain Harris. A referee should be appointed to Commission for settlement of Captain Harris's claim | 12 |
| 16 | Sept. 7, | Queen's Advocate | Case of Captain Harris. Opinion in favour of authenticity of document purporting to be evidence of the sacking of the San Geromino estate | 12 |
| 17 | Sept. | Queen's Advocate | Case of Captain Harris. Suggestions with regard to nature of Commission to be appointed for settlement of claim on account of the San Geromino estate. Mr. Corbett should not act as arbiter | 13 |
| 18 | Oct. 23, | Law Officers | Question of marriage of two British subjects, the one resident within the territory of Guatemala, and the other residing in Costa Rica. Mr. Corbett to be instructed that he cannot sanction or solemnize the marriage of the two persons referred to, after a month's residence of one in Guatemala and the other in Costa Rica, notwithstanding that they are within his Consular district | 14 |
| 19 | Dec. 28, | Queen's Advocate | Violation of Treaty engagement with Great Britain by attempt of New Granadian Government to double commercial taxes | 15 |
| 20 | 30, | Queen's Advocate | Seizure of boats belonging to British subjects for war purposes(Missing.) | 15 |
| 21 | 31, | Queen's Advocate | Seizure of property of Central American Transit Company by Nicaraguan authorities(Missing.) | 15 |

CHILE.

| No. | Date. | | SUBJECT. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 22 | Jan. 4, 1868 | Law Officers | "Tornado." Complaint of Messrs. Isaac, Campbell, and Co, against constitution of the Prize Court at Cadiz. Opinion in favour of its legality | 16 |
| 23 | 4, | Law Officers | "Tornado." Debate in Chilean Chamber of Deputies on the subject of the delay of the Chilean Government in procuring vessels of war. Reference to case of the "Tornado" | 17 |
| 24 | 27, | Law Officers | Detention of Spanish and Chilean vessels of war in England. Difference in value between Spanish and Chilean vessels. Condition on which licenses for their departure might be granted | 17 |
| 25 | Feb. 22, | Law Officers | Spanish and Chilean vessels of war detained under the provisions of the Foreign Enlistment Act. Licences for their completion and departure from British waters might be delivered over to the respective Ministers | 18 |
| 26 | Mar. 7, | Law Officers | Spanish and Chilean vessels of war detained in England. Observation on complaint made by the Peruvian Chargé d'Affaires at licences granted for their departure | 19 |
| 27 | 23, | Law Officers | Spanish and Chilean iron-clads. Her Majesty's Government not called upon to detain them at the request of the Peruvian Minister | 20 |
| 28 | July 21, | Law Officers | Application of Chilean Minister for permission to be allowed to construct an iron-clad vessel in England. Conditions under which such permission might be granted | 20 |

| No. | Date. | | SUBJECT. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 29 | July 29, 1868 | Law Officers | Application of Spanish Minister for permission to allow the Spanish frigate "Victoria" to take her armameats on board in Plymouth harbour. Spain being still at war with Chile such permission should be refused | 21 |
| 30 | Aug. 4, | Law Officers | Permission should not be granted for conditional construction of an iron-clad vessel for use of Chilean Government | 22 |

CHINA.

| No. | Date. | | SUBJECT. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 31 | Feb. 8, 1868 | Law Officers | No objection to proposed alteration in Ordinance No. 9 of 1866, on the subject of piracy | 23 |
| 32 | Mar. 16, | Law Officers | Opinion relative to the extent of British jurisdiction in the neighbourhood of Hong Kong | 23 |
| 33 | Apr. 8, | Queen's Advocate | Capture, by a Chinese cruizer, of a junk, outward bound from Hong Kong. Right of Chinese to capture a vessel, if beyond the middle of the channel which separates the mainland of China from the Colony of Hong Kong | 24 |
| 34 | 9, | Law Officers | Disapprove Notification issued by Her Majesty's Minister at Peking, respecting the penalties to be inflicted on British subjects for the violation of the existing Treaty stipulations between Great Britain and China | 24 |
| 35 | 13, | Law Officers | Opinion with regard to the pilotage regulations issued by the Chinese Government | 25 |
| 36 | 16, | Law Officers | Embezzlement committed by Mr. T. Jones, an officer of Her Majesty's Consulate at Shanghae. Opinion in favour of a new trial | 26 |
| 37 | May 18, | Law Officers | Charge of fees in dollars(Missing.) | 26 |
| 38 | June 8, | Law Officers | Marriages by Acting Consuls(Missing.) | 26 |
| 39 | 8, | Law Officers | Opinion as to the exercise of judicial functions by junior officers in charge of Consulates and Vice-Consulates in China | 27 |
| 40 | July 29, | Law Officers | Opinion with regard to proposed Regulation for a distinguishing mark to be adopted by British subjects of Chinese origin | 27 |
| 41 | 30, | Law Officers | Further information required, previous to giving opinion, as to the co-operation of British Colonial authorities with those of China, for the suppression of piracy | 28 |
| 42 | Aug. 7, | Law Officers | Approving proposed agreement with Mr. Herring, on his appointment to the escort of Her Majesty's Legation at Peking | 28 |
| 43 | 7, | Law Officers | Opinion that temporary authority to exercise judicial functions granted to certain Consuls in China, pending the arrival of their Commissions, is invalid | 29 |
| 44 | 18, | Law Officers | Violation of international law, by proceedings of Chinese Customs cruizers in the Hong Kong waters | 29 |
| 45 | 27, | Law Officers | Objections to Notification issued by Sir R. Alcock, on subject of the closing to steamers of the Straw Shoe channel of the Yang-tsze River | 30 |
| 46 | 28, | Law Officers | Approving Colonial Ordinance to facilitate co-operation with the Chinese authorities in the suppression of piracy | 30 |
| 47 | 28, | Law Officers | Marriages. The presence of Her Majesty's Minister is not required to give validity to a marriage solemnized by a Minister of the church in the chapel or house of an Ambassador or Minister. A marriage valid in temporary absence of Ambassador or Minister. Necessity of statutory residence under provisions of Consular Marriage Act | 31 |

| No. | Date. | | SUBJECT. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 48 | Aug. 31, 1868 | Law Officers .. | Penalties proposed to be inflicted on British subjects on account of breach of Treaty stipulations between Great Britain and China. Observations with regard to difficulties of making necessary regulations .. .. .. | 31 |
| 49 | Sept. 7, | Law Officers .. | Opinion with regard to the issue of sailing letters to British vessels .. .. .. .. .. .. | 32 |
| 50 | 7, | Law Officers .. | Observations on proposed extradition of criminals escaping from Macao to Hong Kong . .. .. .. | 33 |
| 51 | 12, | Law Officers .. | Approving proposed instruction to Sir R. Macdonell, relating to rendition to Chinese Government of pirates captured by Her Majesty's cruizers .. .. .. .. | 33 |
| 52 | Oct. 23, | Law Officers .. | Are of opinion that the Joint Stock Companies Acts could not be made applicable to Companies and Associations formed in China and Japan .. .. .. .. | 34 |
| 53 | 31, | Law Officers .. | Custom-houses near Hong Kong .. .. .. (Missing.) | 34 |
| 54 | 31, | Law Officers .. | Further Report relative to rendition of Chinese pirates captured by British cruizers . .. .. .. .. | 35 |
| 55 | Dec. 8, | Law Officers .. | Regulations proposed to be established for the government of the French Settlement at Shanghae .. .. .. | 36 |

COLOMBIA.

| No. | Date. | | SUBJECT. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 56 | Jan. 9, 1868 | Queen's Advocate | Claim of Mr. Mc Kenna on account of a loan for 20,000*l.* made to Colombian Government. Support to be granted to Mr. Mc Kenna's agent .. .. .. . .. | 37 |
| 57 | Apr. 4, | Queen's Advocate | Claim of Messrs. Stiebel, Brothers, on the Government of Colombia, on account of seizure of lead by the authorities of Antiogina. Support to be granted to Messrs. Stiebel, Brothers . .. .. .. .. .. | 37 |
| 58 | July 7, | Queen's Advocate | Claim of Mr. R. A. Joy upon the Colombian Government. Colombian Government responsible to a foreign Power for illegal act of a State Judge . .. .. .. | 8 |
| 59 | Dec. 28, | Queen's Advocate | Claim of Mr. P. Brandon, Agent of Messrs. Fuihling and Co., of London, on the Colombian Government, for detention of their vessel the "Patrono." Her Majesty's Government not called upon to support claim, the detention of the vessel being a necessity of war .. .. .. | 38 |

FRANCE.

| No. | Date. | | SUBJECT. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 60 | Jan. 11, 1868 | Law Officers .. | Refusal of Vice-Consul at Caen to serve a notice of action upon a person resident in that place, on the requisition of Messrs. Ingledew and Juce, of Cardiff. A Consular officer is not bound to serve such notice .. .. .. | 39 |
| 61 | July 4, | Law Officers .. | Mrs. Hayward's lunacy. Her escape from England, after having been adjudged a lunatic by Commissioners of Lunacy. Question as to a judicial inquiry in France as to her sanity . | 39 |
| 62 | 24, | Queen's Advocate | Case of the "Boulogne." Fraudulent attempt to conceal her nationality .. .. .. .. .. | 40 |
| 63 | 29, | Law Officers .. | Mrs. Hayward's lunacy. Opinion as to measures which might be adopted to obtain a "safe-conduct" for Mrs. Hayward to visit England, for the purpose of proving her sanity .. | 41 |
| 64 | Aug. 13, | Law Officers .. | Mrs. Hayward's lunacy. Lord Lyons should be directed not to interfere, except under the direction of Her Majesty's Government .. .. .. .. .. | 42 |

| No. | Date. | | SUBJECT. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 65 | Aug. 13, 1868 | Law Officers .. | Mrs. Hayward's lunacy. Previously to an official inquiry being made by the French authorities into the sanity of Mrs. Hayward, on the application of Lord Lyons, it would be expedient to ascertain whether such inquiry would be recognized by the Court of Chancery in England .. | 43 |
| 66 | Sept. 14, | Queen's Advocate | Destruction of property of British subjects by French bombardment of the town of Bokeh, on the African coast. Representation to be made to French Government .. .. | 44 |
| 67 | Dec 16, | Law Officers .. | No observations to make on Report of the proceedings in an action which was brought in the "Tribunal de Première Instance de la Seine," by the United States of America, against M. Arnim, on account of contracts entered into by the defendants to build ships of war for the so-called Confederate navy .. .. .. .. .. | 44 |
| 68 | 23, | Law Officers .. | Riot on board French Messageries steamer "Tigre," in harbour of Hong Kong. Right of British authorities to jurisdiction in cases of offences committed on board of foreign merchant-vessels at anchor in British waters. Exclusive jurisdiction claimed by French Consul .. .. .. .. | 45 |

GREECE.

| No. | Date. | | SUBJECT. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 69 | Apr. 24, 1868 | Queen's Advocate | Case of Constantine Albano. Claim on Greek Government for a pension, as having been Registrar of the Supreme Court at Corfu. Support to be granted to Mr. Albano by Her Majesty's Government under provisions of Treaty of 1865 .. .. .. .. .. .. | 45 |
| 70 | June 15, | Queen's Advocate | Prio of Catheras .. .. .. .. .. (Missing.) | 46 |
| 71 | Aug. 29, | Queen's Advocate | Claim of Mr. Weale on Greek Government. Consider that Her Majesty's Government should support Mr. Weale's claim for payment of his expenses in conducting a criminal suit against an Ionian named Ionà .. .. .. | 46 |

HANS TOWNS.

| No. | Date. | | SUBJECT. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 73 | Mar. 30, 1868 | Queen's Advocate | Nationality of son of Mr. Fawens. The son of a British subject who has been naturalized in a foreign country, and who has emigrated with his father as a minor, acquires the nationality of his father during his minority; and would be liable to service in the North-German army .. .. | 48 |

ITALY.

| No. | Date. | | SUBJECT. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 74 | Jan. 15, 1868 | Queen's Advocate | Claim of the Duchess of San Germano, as a British subject married to a foreigner, to exemption from forced loans. Not entitled to exemption, under Article XV of Treaty of 1863 .. .. .. .. .. .. | 49 |
| 75 | Sept. 14, | Queen's Advocate | Case of Messrs. Laidlaw. Claim on the municipality of Caltanisetta, on account of the destruction of their gas mains. The Messrs. Laidlaw should bring their case before a Court of law .. .. .. .. .. .. | 49 |

1868

JAPAN.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 76 | Feb. 29, 1868 | Law Officers | Approving Regulations for the peace and good government of British subjects in the Consular district of Osaka. Notification of the opening of the ports of Hiogo and Osaka | 50 |
| 77 | Apr. 9, | Attorney and Solicitor-General | Opinion as to how far the use of force would be justified for the protection of British subjects residing at Yokohama | 50 |
| 78 | 9 | Attorney and Solicitor-General | Draft of a Notification and Regulation which might be issued by Sir H. Parkes, for enforcing the neutrality of British subjects in contest prevailing in Japan | 51 |
| 79 | 24, | Law Officers | Draft of a proposed Order in Council for maintaining the neutrality of British subjects in contest between the Mikado and Tycoon in Japan | 52 |
| 80 | May 12, | Law Officers | Unsatisfactory state of things in Japan, from Order in Council of March 9, 1865, defining "Japan" as the "dominions of the Tycoon of Japan." Worthlessness of Treaties in consequence | 55 |
| 81 | 12, | Law Officers | Observance of neutrality by British subjects during civil war in Japan. Her Majesty's Consuls or naval officers could not legally prevent the delivery, in Japanese waters, of vessels of war purchased by contending parties. British authorities cannot prevent hostile clans embarking in British vessels, apparently for no hostile purpose | 55 |
| 82 | July 13, | Law Officers | Claim of Mr. H. E. Hoey. Cannot alter opinion expressed on October 11, 1867 | 56 |
| 83 | 30, | Law Officers | Neutrality of British subjects during hostilities in Japan. Report on opinion expressed by Sir E. Hornby with regard to such neutrality | 57 |
| 84 | Aug. 28, | Law Officers | Claim of Mr. H. E. Hoey. Mr. Hoey's threatened appeal to the House of Commons or a Court of Law. Her Majesty's Minister in Japan should again urge Mr. Hoey to submit his claim to arbitration | 58 |
| 85 | Sept. 12, | Law Officers | Want of Vice-Admiralty jurisdiction in the Consular Courts in Japan. Concur in opinion of Sir E. Hornby against granting such jurisdiction. Limited jurisdiction might be granted with regard to bottomry bonds and salvage claims | 58 |
| 86 | Oct. 31, | Law Officers | Enforcement of neutrality of British subjects in Japan. Non-application of Foreign Enlistment Act. Sir H. Parkes not empowered by the Foreign Enlistment Act to interfere with British vessels conveying munitions of war, or soldiers engaged by the Daimios. Measures to be adopted to prevent employment of British vessels in case of such employment endangering the lives of British subjects | 58 |
| 87 | 31, | Law Officers | The Foreign Enlistment Act does not extend to Japan | 59 |
| 88 | Dec. 8, | Law Officers | The Captain of a British ship of war could not legally detain the subject of a foreign Power as a prisoner on board his ship, at the request of an Agent of a foreign country | 60 |

MADAGASCAR.

| | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 89 | Feb. 3, 1868 | Law Officers | Consular jurisdiction. Suggested amendments in Order in Council of May 24, 1867. Trial of criminals in the Mauritius | 62 |
| 90 | 3, | Law Officers | Consular Court. Approving Rules and Regulations | 63 |
| 91 | 3, | Law Officers | Consular jurisdiction. Suggestions as to giving effect to Order in Council in the Mauritius | 63 |
| 92 | Aug. 11, | Law Officers | Consular jurisdiction(Missing.) | 64 |

MEXICO.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 93 | Mar. 28, 1868 | Attorney and Solicitor-General | Application of Mr. Westall to be provided with a copy of M. Castillo's letter of June 16, 1866, on subject of Mexican bondholders. Application should be granted, if not contrary to the rule of the Foreign Office | 65 |
| 94 | Aug. 20, | Queen's Advocate | Opinion in favour of conduct of Captain Bridges, of Her Majesty's ship "Chanticleer," in blockading the port of Mazatlan, in consequence of insults offered to himself and officers | 65 |
| 95 | Sept. 18, | Queen's Advocate | Opinion that measures adopted by Commander Bridges at Mazatlan were consistent with amity. Blockade of Mazatlan | 66 |

MISCELLANEOUS.

| | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 96 | Feb. 28, 1868 | Law Officers | Diplomatic pensions. Application of Mr. Doyle for an increase of pension. Opinion as to intended application of section 6 of 2 and 3 Will. IV, cap. 116. Opinion opposed to Mr. P. Doyle's claim | 68 |
| 97 | Mar. 26, | Law Officers | Cannot reverse previous opinion with regard to Mr. P. Doyle's claim to an increase of pension | 69 |

MONTE VIDEO.

| | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 98 | Jan. 13, 1868 | Law Officers | Murder of the Campbell family. Observations on sentence passed on supposed murderer. Fresh trial should be demanded | 69 |
| 99 | Mar. 7, | Queen's Advocate | Crimping of British sailors at Monte Video. Such proceeding would not justify the naval interference of Her Majesty's Government | 70 |
| 100 | Apr. 28, | Queen's Advocate | Political refugees. Reception on board Her Majesty's ship "Narcissus." Right of a ship of war to receive refugees when riding in an open roadstead | 70 |
| 101 | Dec. 21, | Queen's Advocate | Death of E. Enrique, a British subject, through the violence of a policeman at Monte Video. Question of compensation to widow | 71 |

NETHERLANDS.

| | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 102 | Mar. 25, 1868 | Queen's Advocate | Case of the "Maggie Leslie." Claim of local authorities in Batavia to a per-centage of 6 per cent. on derelict vessels brought into that colony. As to interpretation of Article IX of Convention of 1856, between Great Britain and Netherlands | 71 |
| 103 | Aug. 29, | Queen's Advocate | Case of the "Maggie Leslie." British Consul in Batavia should be instructed to draw attention of authorities to loss sustained by owners by sale of the wreck | 72 |

PACIFIC ISLANDS.

| | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 104 | Mar. 8, 1868 | Queen's Advocate | Proposal of Hawaiian Government to conclude a Reciprocity Treaty with Great Britain. Opinion as to rights of Great Britain under Treaty of July 10, 1851 | 73 |
| 105 | May 18, | Law Officers | Consular jurisdiction in the Fiji Islands(Missing.) | 74 |
| 106 | Aug. 18, | Law Officers | Consular jurisdiction in the Fiji Islands. Opinion as to expediency of passing an Act of Parliament to confer jurisdiction in those islands | 75 |

1868

PERU.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 107 | Feb. 28, 1868 | Queen's Advocate | Forced loan levied upon certain British subjects at Cerro de Pasco by a Revolutionary Government established in that city. Cannot, under the circumstances, claim the interference of the Peruvian Government under Article IX of the Treaty of 1850 | 75 |
| 108 | Dec. 15, | Queen's Advocate | Opinion as to the grant by a foreign Government of an indemnity to foreigners on account of the pillage of their property during a revolution | 76 |

PORTUGAL.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 109 | Jan. 13, 1868 | Queen's Advocate | Opinion relative to complaint of British merchants at levy upon them of a per-centage on the "decima industrial" or tax on rents | 77 |
| 110 | Feb. 14, | Queen's Advocate | Case of Mr. Godson. Opinion in favour of Mr. Godson being of unsound mind | 78 |
| 111 | 29, | Law Officers | Commercial negotiations with Portugal. Opinion as to interpretation of Article IV of the Treaty of 1842, with regard to differential duties | 78 |
| 112 | Mar. 10, | Queen's Advocate | Further opinion relative to tax "importo de viação" levied upon British subjects in Portugal | 79 |
| 113 | Aug. 31, | Queen's Advocate | Claim of Mr. F. Andrews on account of losses during civil war in 1833 and 1834. Her Majesty's Minister at Lisbon should propose arbitration | 80 |
| 114 | Oct. 13, | Queen's Advocate | Messrs. Capper, Clark, and Rose's contract for construction of a submarine telegraph between England and Portugal. Refusal of Cortes to sanction contract. Her Majesty's Government not called upon to interfere | 81 |
| 115 | Dec. 21, | Queen's Proctor | Case of the "Meg Merriles." Collision with Portuguese vessel of war "Estaphama." Proposed arbitration. Opinion of Judge of High Court of Admiralty | 81 |
| 116 | 28, | Queen's Advocate | Case of the "Meg Merriles. Opinion in favour of communicating to Count Lavradio the view of the Judge of the High Court of Admiralty | 82 |

PRUSSIA.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 117 | Aug. 6, 1868 | Queen's Advocate | Case of Mr. Herring, a naturalized British subject. Right to British protection whilst travelling abroad in any country excepting Prussia, which is the country of his birth | 82 |
| 118 | Oct. 30, | Law Officers | Case of Miss M. Harper, illegitimate daughter of Mr. Harper. Refusal of certain parties in Prussia, with whom the young lady resided, to deliver her up to her father's family | 83 |

RUSSIA.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 119 | Jan. 29, 1868 | Law Officers | Case of Mr. Grenville-Murray. Opinion with regard to Report of Mr. Wilkins | 85 |
| 120 | Feb. 26, | Law Officers | Case of Mr. Grenville-Murray. Opinion with regard to conduct of Mr. Murray on subject of registration of births, deaths, and marriages. Draft of a letter to be addressed to Mr. Murray on the subject | 86 |
| 121 | Mar. 5, | Queen's Advocate | Opinion respecting detention of Mr. R. Compton(Missing.) | 88 |

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 122 | Apr. 2, 1868 | Law Officers | Case of Mr. Grenville-Murray. Opinion with regard to allowing Mr. Grenville-Murray access to documents in the Foreign Office, concerning the charges made against him | 89 |
| 123 | 17, | Queen's Advocate | Mixed marriages(Missing.) | 90 |
| 124 | 29, | Queen's Advocate | Case of Mr. Demartino. His expulsion from Russia on account of his attempt to circulate stolen bank notes. Right of Russian authorities under the circumstances to deal administratively, instead of judicially, with the case | 90 |
| 125 | 30, | Law Officers | Case of Mr. Grenville-Murray. Opinion as to pressing Mr. Murray for a speedy answer to the charges made against him | 91 |
| 126 | May 26, | Law Officers | Case of Mr. Grenville-Murray. Opinion as to sufficiency of evidence to cause the dismissal of Mr. Grenville-Murray | 92 |
| 127 | June 1, | Law Officers | Case of Mr. Grenville-Murray. Answer to be sent to Mr. Grenville-Murray's letter denying the right of the Secretary of State to cancel Her Majesty's Commission | 94 |
| 128 | 2, | Law Officers | Report with regard to claim of Russian tribunals to exercise jurisdiction over persons in the employment of foreign Embassies and Legations at St. Petersburgh | 94 |
| 129 | July 31, | Attorney- and Solicitor-Geueral | Jurisdiction claimed by Russian tribunals over persons in the employment of Embassies, &c. Report of Mr. Roebuck upon Code and Oukase renders it unnecessary to object or remonstrate against the Law | 95 |

SAXONY.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 130 | Feb. 21, 1868 | Queen's Advocate | Case of Mr. J. Warburton. Arrest on a criminal charge. Refusal to accept bail. Her Majesty's Government not called upon to interfere | 95 |

SIAM.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 131 | July 8, 1868 | Law Officers | Correspondence between the Siamese Government and the Governor of Singapore, relative to the apprehension in that colony of a Chinaman accused of coining Siamese money. Non-application of 24 and 25 Vict., c. 99, to Colonies. Importance of Colonial legislation on the subject | 96 |
| 131* | 13, | Law Officers | Proposed Convention with Queddah. Observations on stipulations relating to extradition. Consider that Convention should not be ratified | 97 |
| 132 | Nov. 20, | Queen's Advocate | Destruction of British property by Siamese authorities, in an attempt to arrest certain opium smugglers. Right of British subjects to claim compensation, under Article I of Treaty between Great Britain and Siam | 98 |
| 133 | Dec. 10, | Law Officers | Proposed Convention with Queddah. Opinion in favour of Treaty being concluded between the Siamese Government and Her Majesty's Consul, with formal adhesion of Rajah. Suggests certain alterations with regard to extradition | 99 |
| 134 | 10, | Queen's Advocate | Destruction of British property in Siam. Compensation granted by Siamese subjects. Opinion as to right of British Consul to claim compensation under Article I of the Treaty with Great Britain | 99 |

SPAIN.

| No. | Date. | | SUBJECT. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 135 | Jan. 4, 1868 | Queen's Advocate | Case of the "Amalia." Seizure by Spanish guarda-costa off Spanish coast. Her Majesty's Government not called upon to make any representation in existing state of case | 100 |
| 136 | 4, | Law Officers | Case of the "Tornado." Her Majesty's Government not called upon to take any steps in consequence of statement of Señor Retortillo, the counsel of Messrs. Saul, Isaac, and Co. | 101 |
| 137 | 25, | Queen's Advocate | Case of the "Amalia." Question as to limits of capture. Consul to transmit an accurate version of Article 462 of Customs Ordinance, under which vessel was captured | 102 |
| 138 | Feb. 22, | Queen's Advocate | Complaints regarding the conduct of British traders on West Coast of Africa. Protest against conduct of Consul Livingstone in the matter. Suggests that Consul should be furnished with necessary power, by Order in Council, to control and punish British subjects | 103 |
| 139 | Mar. 9, | Queen's Advocate | Case of the "Catalina." Capture by a Spanish revenue cruizer. Damage to claim of shipowner, by absence of any evidence of destination of the "Catalina" | 104 |
| 140 | 17, | Queen's Advocate | Case of the "Garibaldi." Seizure by a Spanish guarda-costa, in Gulf of Cadiz, beyond the fiscal limits of two leagues, within which vessels with contraband goods are forbidden to enter by the Municipal Law of Spain Representation to be made by Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid. Limits of Spanish maritime jurisdiction at Gibraltar. As to limits of Gulf of Cadiz. Application of Acts 6 Geo. IV, c. 18, and 16 and 17 Vict., c. 107, to question of extent of maritime jurisdiction | 105 |
| 141 | 28, | Law Officers | Request made by M. Villabolos, a Spaniard, that his son, born in England, may be registered as a British subject. The son of M. Villabolos cannot be registered as a British subject if by the laws of Spain he is held to be a Spanish subject. Would be entitled to British protection elsewhere than in Spanish dominions | 107 |
| 142 | Apr. 21, | Law Officers | Case of the "Queen Victoria." Advises acceptance of sum offered by Spanish Government in settlement of all claims on account of this vessel | 107 |
| 143 | 28, | Queen's Advocate | Case of the "Mermaid." Appointment of a Mixed Commission to consider case. Evidence which should be produced by Messrs. Barter and Co. | 108 |
| 144 | 30, | Queen's Advocate | Opinion as to amount of indemnity which should be claimed for relations of D. Hocken, who was killed in 1864 on board the "Mountaineer," by a shot fired from the fort of Tarifa | 108 |
| 145 | July 14, | Queen's Advocate | Case of the "Fanny." Capture by Spanish guarda-costa. Doubtful evidence as to destination of the "Fanny" renders further representation inexpedient | 109 |
| 146 | 22, | Queen's Advocate | Case of the "Garibaldi." Observations on discrepancy in evidence. Documentary evidence to be requested of Spanish Government | 109 |
| 147 | 30, | Attorney-General | Case of the "Tornado." Wishes to obtain letter written by M. de Castro to Sir J. Crampton on December 11, 1865, promising that all claimants should be heard before the Council of State; also, a letter from General Calonge of November 21, 1867 | 110 |
| 148 | 31, | Attorney-General | Case of the "Tornado." Has not received letter of M. de Castro | 111 |
| 149 | Aug. 1, | Attorney-General | Case of the "Tornado." Requests copies of notes, &c., referred to in his letter of July 30 | 111 |
| 150 | 8, | Queen's Advocate | Case of the "Fanny." Unsatisfactory character of evidence with regard to the movements of the "Fanny" | 111 |

| No. | Date. | | SUBJECT. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 151 | Aug. 14, 1868 | Law Officers | Case of the "Tornado" Observations on protest of Messrs. Isaac, Campbell, and Co., against final decision of Prize Court at Cadiz. Necessity of Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid ascertaining whether an appeal would be allowed | 112 |
| 152 | 18, | Law Officers | Case of the "Tornado." Letter from Mr. F. Campbell making a representation in favour of crew of that vessel. Must await final decision in case of vessel, before the case of the crew can be considered | 114 |
| 153 | 20, | Queen's Advocate | Case of the "Mermaid. Consider M. Benedetti's decision that the shot from the battery struck the "Mermaid" as conclusive. Observations as to power of a new umpire in place of M. Benedetti | 115 |
| 154 | Sept. 7, | Law Officers | Case of the "Tornado." Answer to be returned to further letter from Mr. F. Campbell in favour of crew of the "Tornado" | 116 |
| 155 | 16, | Queen's Advocate | Case of the "Mermaid." Opinion with regard to the appointment of a new arbitrator to replace M. Benedetti | 116 |
| 156 | 17, | Queen's Advocate | Case of the "Mermaid." Objections to proposed method of appointing an umpire | 117 |
| 157 | Oct. 23, | Queen's Advocate | Case of the "Mermaid." Approving drafts of arguments prepared by British Commissioners for presentation to the Arbitrator | 117 |
| 158 | 27, | Queen's Advocate | Case of the "Fanny." Report of Captain of Her Majesty's ship "Skylark" with regard to the navigation of the "Fanny." Distinction between "British waters" and the "high seas." Right of a Spanish guarda-costa to examine a foreign vessel on the high seas, if within six miles of the Spanish coast | 118 |
| 159 | Nov. 11, | Queen's Advocate | Case of Antonio Baey Brabo. Claim to British protection on account of his having been born in Gibraltar during a temporary visit of his mother. Duty of Governor of Gibraltar to surrender him to Spanish authorities, under Agreement of April 21, 1838 | 119 |
| 160 | 13, | Queen's Advocate | Application of Mr. W. Grain for permission to have access to the Reports of the Commission of Claims appointed under Act 10 Geo. IV, c. 20. Mr. Grain should be allowed to read correspondence relative to the claims of the Marquis de Yranda | 119 |
| 161 | 17, | Queen's Advocate | Seizure of the British vessel "Gibraltar Segundo," by the Spanish ship of war "Favorite." Her Majesty's Minister to refrain from interfering further in the matter | 120 |
| 162 | 17, | Queen's Advocate | Opinion with regard to seizure in British waters by Her Majesty's ship "Skylark," of a Spanish guarda-costa, whilst engaged in overhauling a Spanish trading-vessel | 120 |
| 163 | Dec. 5, | Queen's Advocate | Case of the "San Pablo." Capture by a Spanish revenue cruizer while on a voyage from Gibraltar to Laraiche | 121 |
| 164 | 10, | Law Officers | Case of the "Tornado." Answer to be returned to Captain Kirby's letter respecting capture of the "Tornado" | 122 |
| 165 | 10, | Law Officers | Case of the "Tornado." Suggests that Spanish Government should be urged not to sell the "Tornado," pending the decision of case of new trial | 123 |
| 166 | 10, | Law Officers | Case of the "Tornado." Opinion with regard to reason given by claimants for postponing their defence. Her Majesty's Minister might, under the circumstances, ask for a special tribunal to decide whether the "Tornado" was or was not good prize | 123 |
| 167 | 10, | Law Officers | Case of the "Tornado." Case not affected by the abolition of the Chamber of Appeal—the "Seccion Contenciosa" | 124 |
| 168 | 14, | Law Officers | Case of the "Tornado." Answer to be returned to Mr. Kirby's further letter on subject of the "Tornado" | 125 |

1868

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 169 | Dec. 30, 1868 | Queen's Advocate | Case of the "Garibaldi." In consequence of the suspicious circumstances of this case Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid should be instructed not to further interfere | 125 |

SWITZERLAND.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 170 | Apr. 25, 1868 | Queen's Advocate | Case of the Rev. C. H. Townshend. Is of opinion that sum of 2,650*l.*, claimed by authorities at Lausanne, as duty upon the estate of the late Rev. C. H. Townshend, is in direct violation of the Treaty of 1855, between Great Britain and Switzerland. Consider that note should be addressed to Federal Directory by Her Majesty's Minister | 126 |
| 171 | May 6, | Queen's Advocate | Case of the Rev. C. H. Townshend. The question of duty on the estate of the late Mr. Townshend depends upon whether he took out a permis de domicile. Difference between municipal and international domicil. Assistance to be rendered to executors in the event of question being dealt with administratively | 127 |

TURKEY.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 172 | Jan. 3, 1868 | Law Officers | Case of Mr. Calvert. Opinion on objections raised by Mr. Francis to his presiding at trial of Mr. Calvert | 128 |
| 173 | 4, | Queen's Advocate | Application of Messrs. J. L. Manasee and Sons, for support of Her Majesty's Consul at Alexandria, in obtaining payment of certain bills accepted by his Highness Mustapha Fazil Pasha. Her Majesty's Government should not interfere | 128 |
| 174 | 7, | Queen's Advocate | Opinion in favour of right of Turkish Government under Article XV of the Treaty of Commerce of 1861, to prohibit the import of gunpowder into the Ottoman dominions | 129 |
| 175 | 11, | Law Officers | Opinion on subject of transmission of summonses, notices, and other papers connected with civil suits, through Consular officers in Principalities. No part of duty of Consular officers to forward such documents to England through Foreign Office | 129 |
| 176 | 28, | Queen's Advocate | Case of Mr. Petherick. Claim on Egyptian Government. Observations on Mr. Petherick's complaint of the rejection of certain items of his claim | 130 |
| 177 | 31, | Law Officers | Opinion with regard to Law and Protocol recently promulgated in Turkey to enable foreigners to hold real property. Observations on effect of Law on the existing capitulations between Turkey and Great Britain. Suggests that opinions of British Consuls and subjects in Turkey should be taken on the subject | 130 |
| 178 | Feb. 7, | Law Officers | Claims of engine-drivers in Egypt. Returning papers relative to settlement of claim | 132 |
| 179 | 7, | Law Officers | Case of T. Holroyd. Complaint at imprisonment by order of Consul Reade. Agent of complainant should be informed that Consul Reade has been called upon to explain | 132 |
| 180 | 29, | Law Officers | Opinion with regard to the establishment of a tribunal to try cases of collision, &c., on the Danube. Colonel Stokes should be informed that proposed tribunal could not be established, as the réglements for the establishment of such tribunal are considered to be unauthorized. Objectional character of some of the réglements | 133 |
| 181 | Mar. 21, | Queen's Advocate | Smyrna Quay Company. Mrs. Hanson has no claim against Turkish Government on account of injury done to her property by the contract for the construction of the Quay | 134 |

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 182 | Apr. 3, 1868 | Queen's Advocate | Case of the "Société Agricole et Industrielle d'Egypte." Messrs. Cavan, Lubbock, and Co. should be informed that Her Majesty's Government cannot interfere further in their claim on the Viceroy of Egypt than by instructing Colonel Stanton to continue to use his good offices | 135 |
| 183 | 6, | Queen's Advocate | Case of Mr. Petherick. Observations on statement of Mr. Petherick that he had been induced to form his trading establishments at the suggestion of Consul-General Murray | 135 |
| 184 | 13, | Law Officers | Case of T. Holroyd. Opinion with regard to charges made against Consul Reade | 136 |
| 185 | 27, | Law Officers | Question of allowing foreigners to hold land in Turkey. Amendment in draft of proposed instructions to be sent to Lord Lyons | 137 |
| 186 | 30, | Law Officers | Case of Mr. Calvert. Convicted of swindling by Supreme Court at Constantinople. Power of Court to send prisoner to Malta to have sentence carried out | 138 |
| 187 | May 8, | Queen's Advocate | Case of M. de Matto. Claim on Ottoman Government on account of a coal contract. Refusal of Ottoman Government to pay interest on settlement of claim | 138 |
| 188 | 20, | Queen's Advocate | Case of Mr. J. Hughes. "Société Agricole et Industrielle d'Egypte." Complains of breach of agreement | 139 |
| 189 | June 3, | Queen's Advocate | Collision between the English vessel "Mogue" and Egyptian steamer "Mussr." Disputed decision of Egyptian Naval Court at Alexandria. Proposal of Viceroy that case should be referred to a Mixed Tribunal should be accepted | 139 |
| 190 | 5, | Queen's Advocate | Case of M. de Matto. Necessity of ascertaining the state of Turkish law with regard to the payment of interest on Government debts | 140 |
| 191 | 20, | Queen's Advocate | Claim of Messrs. Baxter, Rose, Norton, and Co., on Egyptian Government, on account of alleged breach of contract on its part for raising a loan. Her Majesty's Government not called upon to interfere | 141 |
| 192 | 25, | Law Officers | Report on proposed judicial reforms in Egypt, in cases where natives and foreigners are concerned. Consider the usurped Consular jurisdiction in Egypt a cause of well-founded complaint on part of the Viceroy | 141 |
| 193 | 27, | Law Officers | Alleged project of a British subject named Palmer, to destroy Turkish fleet at Candia. Movements of Mr. Palmer should be watched by Her Majesty's Consul | 143 |
| 194 | 29, | Law Officers | Opinion with regard to proposed Act to allow foreigners to hold real property in Turkey | 143 |
| 195 | 30, | Queen's Advocate | Claim of Messrs. Cavan, Lubbock, and Co., against the Viceroy of Egypt, in connection with the "Société Agricole et Industrielle d'Egypte." Proposal of Viceroy to submit the claims of the Company to the decision of a special tribunal at Constantinople, should be supported by Her Majesty's Government | 144 |
| 196 | July 8, | Queen's Advocate | Claim of Messrs. Cavan, Lubbock, and Co. Colonel Stanton to be instructed to support reference of claim to Tribunal of Arbitration to be constituted at Constantinople | 145 |
| 197 | 29, | Law Officers | Further Report on tribunal proposed to be established on the Danube to take cognizance of cases arising out of the navigation of that river. Her Majesty's Government may assent to modified Regulations | 145 |
| 198 | Aug. 20, | Law Officers | Opinion with regard to desire of Principalities to be released from the operation of the Turkish capitulations in matters of civil and criminal jurisdiction. Russian Memorandum might usefully form the basis of a fresh arrangement with the Porte and the Principalities. "System of reciprocity" could not be carried into effect in this country | 146 |

1868

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 199 | Aug. 28, 1868 | Queen's Advocate | Case of Messrs. Cavan, Lubbock, and Co. Société Agricole of Egypt. Further opinion with regard to the liability of the Viceroy of Egypt | 147 |
| 200 | 29, | Queen's Advocate | Case of M. de Matto. The statement of Consul-General Francis that M. de Matto's claim would have been favourably considered had he been able to sue the Chief of the War Department before the Tidjaret Court, is sufficient to justify Her Majesty's Ambassador being instructed to renew application in favour of claimant | 149 |
| 201 | Sept. 7, | Queen's Advocate | Opinion with regard to the claim of the Suez Canal Company to exemption from payment of Customs dues. Opinion in favour of exemption from Customs duties of goods passing through a canal from sea to sea | 149 |
| 202 | Oct. 16, | Queen's Advocate | Suez Canal Company. Is of opinion that Article XVIII of the Act of Concession of January 5, 1868, was intended to establish a corporate exemption in favour of the Canal Company, with regard to payment of Customs duties, and not to apply to all persons inhabiting the isthmus | 151 |
| 203 | Nov. 16, | Queen's Advocate | Case of the "Société Agricole et Industrielle d'Egypte." Further Report on claim of shareholders on Viceroy of Egypt | 152 |
| 204 | Dec. 9, | Law Officers | Opinion with regard to interpretation of Protocol allowing foreigners in Turkey to hold real property. Consider that certain of the stipulations in the Protocol apply to all the subjects of a Power which has signed such Protocol | 153 |
| 205 | Dec, 9, | Law Officers | Tenure of land in Turkey by foreigners. Opinion in favour of formalities enjoined by the Turkish Government | 153 |
| 206 | 23, | Law Officers | Greek letters of marque(Missing.) | 154 |

UNITED STATES.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 207 | Jan. 11, 1868 | Law Officers | Abduction of two British subjects from New Brunswick. Approve representation to United States' Government | 154 |
| 208 | Feb. 14, | Queen's Advocate | Claim of Mrs. Blackie. Claim as heiress of late Mr. Purvis, against the United States' Government, on account of destruction of property at Vicksburg during the civil war. No grounds for further interference on part of Her Majesty's Government. Act of Congress which prohibits compensation | 154 |
| 209 | 21, | Law Officers | Osborne, deserter(Missing.) | 155 |
| 210 | Mar. 11, | Law Officers | Treaty of Naturalization between Prussia and the United States. Inexpediency of negotiating a Treaty with the United States on similar terms | 155 |
| 211 | 11, | Law Officers | Inexpediency of visa of Her Majesty's Legation at Washington being affixed to passports granted to naturalized subjects of the United States | 156 |
| 212 | 14, | Law Officers | Proposed Treaty of Naturalization with the United States. Approving despatch to Mr. Thornton on subject of Mr. Seward's overtures | 157 |
| 213 | 14, | Law Officers | Further opinion respecting visa of Her Majesty's Legation at Washington being affixed to passports granted to naturalized subjects of the United States. Suggest that certificate should not be added to passport as proposed | 157 |
| 214 | 20, | Law Officers | Proposed Naturalization Treaty with the United States. Draft of a Treaty founded upon that between the United States and Prussia. Observations | 157 |

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 215 | Apr. 4, 1868 | Law Officers | Proposed Naturalization Treaty with the United States. Observations on draft of Treaty which Mr. Seward states that he is prepared to sign. Inexpediency of signing a Convention until the extent of the changes in the laws of the United Kingdom, &c., which would be required, have been well considered | 160 |
| 216 | 7, | Law Officers | Case of F. B. Smith. Demand for extradition on a charge of forgery. Approve decision of the Governor-General of Canada, that the offence committed by F. B. Smith was not forgery within the meaning of the Act | 160 |
| 217 | 8, | Law Officers | Case of F. B. Smith. Demand of extradition on charge of forgery. Judgment delivered by Canadian Court as to character of offence was in accordance with law | 161 |
| 218 | 20, | Law Officers | Claims of Messrs. I. and W. Parr against the Government of the United States, on account of losses during civil war. Her Majesty's Government not called upon to interfere | 161 |
| 219 | June 1, | Law Officers | Proposed Naturalization Treaty with the United States. Observations on Mr. Carlisle's Report. Urge necessity of laws of the United Kingdom being reconsidered before entering into even a provisional Treaty with the United States | 162 |
| 220 | July 2, | Law Officers | Case of Felix Callaghan. The right of the United States' Government to interfere in favour of a naturalized United States' subject, arrested on British territory, should not be admitted | 163 |
| 221 | 8, | Attorney- and Solicitor-General | Decision of Supreme Court of the United States in the case of a claim against underwriters, on account of the capture of a vessel by a Confederate cruizer, in May 1861. Recognition by judgment of a state of belligerency between the United States and the so-called Confederate States | 163 |
| 222 | 21, | Law Officers | Case of the "Springbok." Application of owners for Her Majesty's Government to demand compensation of United States' Government on account of capture of vessels in 1863. Report on evidence. Suspicious character of trade with Nassau during the civil war. Claimants to be informed that evidence is not sufficient to justify a demand for compensation on the part of Her Majesty's Government | 163 |
| 223 | Aug. 31, | Law Officers | Claim of Mr. Rahmuy(Missing.) | 167 |
| 224 | 31, | Law Officers | Case of the "Pearl." Consider that condemnation of the "Pearl" was justified by the evidence, and that Her Majesty's Government should not interfere in the matter | 168 |
| 225 | Oct. 3, | Attorney-General | Naturalization. Opinion with regard to the Protocol proposed to be signed with Mr. R. Johnson | 169 |
| 226 | Nov. 7, | Law Officers | "Alabama" claims. Approving, with certain alterations, the protocol proposed to be signed with Mr. R. Johnson, for settlement of this class of claims | 170 |
| 227 | 24, | Law Officers | Opinion as to period when the belligerent character of the so-called Confederate States ceased. Consider that notification in the "London Gazette" of June 6, 1865, and the publication of Earl Russell's letter to the public Departments of June 2, fixed the period when Her Majesty's Government considered that the civil war had terminated | 171 |
| 228 | 25, | Law Officers | Case of the "Wren," seized and condemned as a blockade-runner in 1865. Decision of Supreme Court of the United States in favour of claimants. Justice of such decision | 172 |
| 229 | 28, | Law Officers | Rights of aliens having claims against the British Government. Right of petition enjoyed under the "Petitions of Rights Act, 1860" (23 and 24 Vic., c. 34). Position of an alien friend as regards his power of maintaining suits against the Crown | 172 |

1868

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 230 | Dec. 7, 1868 | Law Officers .. | Case of the "Springbok." Grounds for considering that Mr. F. Campbell is not successful in showing that judgment of Supreme Court of the United States is contrary to justice. Consider that the case of the "Springbok" would properly come within the terms of the proposed Claims Convention .. | 173 |
| 231 | 10, | Law Officers .. | Claims of Messrs. Westhead and Co. on Her Majesty's Government, on account of the capture by British cruizers in 1854 and 1857, of the "Mary Varney" and "Thomas Watson," on suspicion of being engaged in the Slave Trade. Her Majesty's Government should not recognize right of Messrs. Westhead and Co. to make claim, if it should be proved that the original claimant, Mr. J. A. Machado, a United States' citizen, had already made a representation through his Government .. | 174 |
| 232 | 17, | Law Officers .. | Case of James Anderson, American seaman undergoing sentence of imprisonment for manslaughter. Jurisdiction of Central Criminal Court, the crime having been committed on board a British ship employed in "tidal waters" .. | 175 |
| 233 | 22, | Law Officers .. | Claims Convention. Approving draft of amended Convention .. | 176 |

VENEZUELA.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 234 | Jan. 7, 1868 | Law Officers .. | Case of the "Bolivar." No reason to alter opinion expressed in their Report of December 30, 1867 .. | 179 |
| 235 | 28, | Queen's Advocate | Claims Commission. Approving proposed Agreement for settlement of British claims by means of a Mixed Commission .. | 179 |
| 236 | Apr. 7, | Queen's Advocate | Claim of Mrs. Ackers Cage. Her Majesty's Government would be right in deducting from Mr. Bingham's pension the sum charged for commission on the management of the Ackers' estate .. | 180 |
| 237 | 23, | Queen's Advocate | Blockade of State of Nueva Barcelona. Copy of Notification for insertion in "London Gazette." Irregularity of Article 5 of Decree of Blockade, providing that the captor may release a captured vessel carrying articles contraband of war, upon master of such vessel delivering up such articles to the captor .. | 181 |
| 238 | May 11, | Law Officers .. | Case of H. Noel. Murder by soldiers in the service of Venezuela. Strong remonstrance should be addressed to Venezuelan Government in the event of any remissness in bringing offenders to justice .. | 182 |
| 239 | June 30, | Queen's Advocate | Case of Mr. M. O'Callaghan. His arrest and imprisonment by Venezuelan authorities. Right of Venezuelan Government to treat the children of British subjects born in Venezuela as natural-born citizens of the Republic. Instructions to be sent to Mr. Fagan to exercise his good offices on their behalf .. | 182 |
| 240 | Nov. 24, | Queen's Advocate | Case of Dr. R. Bakewell. Claim on account of detention during a civil war. Opinion that Dr. Bakewell makes out no case for the interference of Her Majesty's Government . | 183 |

---

Printed for the use of the Foreign Office. September 1870.

CONFIDENTIAL.

LAW OFFICERS' REPORTS: 1868.

Africa (South).

No. 1.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received October 29.)

Temple, October 29, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 15th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me a letter from the Colonial Office inclosing copies of a despatch from the Governor of the Cape of Good Hope, and a Proclamation by the President of the Trans-Vaal Republic, together with a copy of the Convention of 1852, under which the Boers who settled beyond the River Vaal were recognized as a separate Government. Three confidential despatches from Her Majesty's Commissioner at the Cape dated the 2nd July and the 3rd and 18th August last, illustrative of the present state of the Slave question in the Trans-Vaal Republic, were also inclosed; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the legality of the proposed annexation, and as to the attitude which Her Majesty's Government would be at liberty to assume with regard to it.

I am also honoured with Mr. Hammond's letter of the 21st October, transmitting a further letter from the Colonial Office dated the 17th October inclosing a copy of a despatch from the Lieutenant-Governor of Natal relating to this case.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the Proclamation alleged to have been recently issued by the President of the Trans-Vaal Republic cannot, of itself, according to the acknowledged law and usage of nations, be regarded as founding a title on the part of that Republic to the territories described in that Proclamation, which were not proclaimed to be the Republic in 1858. What was the nature of the Proclamation in 1858 I am not informed, but I assume that no question is raised at the present time in regard to that Proclamation.

With regard to the recent Proclamation, it can only be regarded as a notification on the part of the Trans-Vaal Republic of its intention to appropriate to its own purposes the territory described in it. It is not, however, competent for that Republic to appropriate territory by mere Proclamation. Its title to any further territory than was proclaimed the Republic in 1858, assuming the Republic at that time to have been rightfully proclaimed, must depend upon the fact whether the Republic is in rightful possession of such territory either by settlement in the case of unocupied land, or by cession or conquest in the case of territory already inhabited. I consider that the terms of the Convention of 1852 would preclude Her Majesty's Government from disputing any title which the Trans-Vaal Republic may have acquired to land on the north side of the River Vaal, either by Treaty with the Native Chiefs or by conquest, and that it leaves the Republic free to extend itself indefinitely by settlement in the interior country to the north of the River Vaal, where no nation has previously established itself. But I do not consider that the Republic can set up in the year 1868 a title by discovery alone to any part of the interior country, which would entitle it, according to international usage, to exclude by mere proclamation any other nation from making settlements in it.

1868

I presume that at the time when the Convention of 1852 was signed, the sources of the Vaal River had been explored, so that the territory described in the Convention as "the country to the north of the Vaal River" had known geographical limits to the eastward (for instance, the "Mont aux Sources" in about 30° east longitude,) and that Her Majesty's Government did not intend to recognize any title on the part of that Republic to territory on the eastern side of the Drakenberg or Quathlamba range of mountains beyond the sources of the Vaal,—such, for instance, as seems to be now set up by the Volksraad of the Republic in respect of the territory in which the River Umzuti takes its rise. What may be the precise grounds upon which the Republic lays claim to the territory "in which that river has its origin" does not appear; but if it rests upon settlement alone, made before October 1867, such settlement would be an encroachment on British right, as it is admitted by the Volksraad that the mouth of the Umzuti River was under British sovereignty prior to October 1867, and it is an acknowledged rule of public law that the possession of a line of sea-coast, and of the mouths of the rivers on such line of coast, gives to the nation in possession of them a right to exclude all other nations from the interior country watered by such rivers. In fact it would appear that, as the abandonment of the mouth of the River Umzuti by the British Government would have left the mouth of the river and the interior country free for the citizens of the Republic to settle in, the non-abandonment of that river by the British is an insuperable obstacle to the Republic acquiring rightful possession either of the mouth of the river, or of the interior country through which it flows.

I think that Her Majesty's Government may properly notify to the Republic that if the proceedings of the Volksraad have been correctly reported in the "Staats-Courant" of the Trans-Vaal, they are founded on a misapprehension as to the British Government having declared the mouth of the River Umzuti in Delagoa Bay to be free, and that Her Majesty's Government is also at liberty to declare that it will not recognize any part of the territory watered by that river to be a possession of the Republic. The question of slavery as regards the Convention is rather more difficult, as the Republic would probably deny the fact that slavery is either permitted or practised by the emigrant farmers in violation of the Convention. At the same time, if your Lordship is satisfied that the Republic does in fact permit its citizens to capture or to purchase native Africans and to hold them in bondage in the manner reported to the Colonial authorities, there can be no doubt that a fundamental Article of the Convention has been violated by the Republic.

Under these circumstances I am of opinion that Great Britain will be at liberty to hold herself discharged from all further observance of her engagements towards the Republic under the Convention, as each Article of the Convention has the force of a condition, and the Republic will have failed to fulfil a most important condition on its part, the non-observance of which strikes at the root of the compact between the two Governments.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

Argentine Republic.

No. 2.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received January 27.)

Temple, January 25, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 21st instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me a despatch and its inclosures from Her Majesty's Minister at Buenos Ayres on the subject of claims preferred by the owners, master, and other parties concerned, arising out of the destruction by fire of the British vessel "Prince Albert," when aground and abandoned while on her voyage up the Paraná, in tow of a Buenos Ayres war-steamer; and

Mr. Egerton was pleased to request that I would take these papers into consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the instructions which should be addressed to Her Majesty's Minister in this matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That Her Majesty's Minister at Buenos Ayres may be properly instructed to support officially the claim of the master, passengers, and crew of the barque "Prince Albert," for compensation at the hands of the Argentine Government, for the pillage of their property by the troops of the Argentine Government, and also the claim of the owners of the vessel and her cargo, for their subsequent destruction, which was clearly consequent upon the misconduct of the troops.

Admitting that there may be circumstances under which, in accordance with the opinion of the Procureur Fiscal, a Government may not be responsible for injuries caused by troops in mutiny, or in a state of desertion, or defeat, I am clearly of opinion that the circumstances of the present case are not such as to relieve the Argentine Government from responsibility. The "Prince Albert" was navigating Argentine waters under an express contract with the Argentine Government, that she should be towed by steam wherever that Government should require. In pursuance of that contract she was being towed by the Argentine war-steamer "Chacabuca," when the troops on board that vessel seized and sacked the "Prince Albert," and killed or wounded certain of her passengers and crew.

I am of opinion that no plea of incapacity on the part of the Commander to restrain his troops can relieve the Argentine Government from their imperative duty to give efficient protection to the "Prince Albert" whilst she was performing her contract within their jurisdiction.

With regard to the subsequent loss of the vessel and her cargo, the Procureur Fiscal admits that it was the legitimate consequence of the violence of the troops; and I agree with him that all the subsequent damage which resulted to the barque and her cargo may be fairly attributed to the original misconduct of the troops; but, under any circumstances, as she was towed upon the bank by the "Chacabuca," and left there, after which her cargo caught fire, and she was scuttled, her loss, if not attributable exclusively to the misconduct of the troops, would be attributable partly to that misconduct, and partly to the default or neglect of the "Chacabuca," and in either case the Argentine Government may be justly required to indemnify the owners for a total loss.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 3.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received June 12.)

Temple, June 12, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 26th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the accompanying despatch with its inclosures from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Buenos Ayres, relative to a correspondence which has passed between Her Majesty's Legation at that place, and Mr. F. T. Rickard, the Manager of the Hilario Silver Mines and Smelting Works, relative to his alleged illegal arrest for debt, and to the outrage committed by the authorities of the Province of San Juan in December 1866; and Mr. Egerton was pleased to request that I would take these papers into my consideration, and favour your Lordship with my opinion as to what instruction should be sent to Mr. Gould with regard to the course which he should pursue in this case.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That I am of opinion that it will be necessary for your Lordship to determine whether Mr. F. T. Rickard has or has not disentitled himself to receive British protection by accepting a Military Commission from the President of the Argentine Republic, as I consider the view which Mr. Gould has taken of the questions at issue between Mr. Rickards and the Government of San Juan, to be a sound view, and that there are no justifiable grounds for your Lordship's intervention in his affairs. Mr. Rickard appears to have suffered from a harsh application of the Bankruptcy Law of the country to his particular case. That law may have been enforced against him vindictively on the part of his creditors, and he may have been exposed to great and undue suffering during his imprisonment at San Juan, in consequence of the crowded state of the public prison, owing to the disturbed state of the country at the time; but I do not think that he has been unfairly treated by the Tribunals of the country, so as to be entitled to claim your Lordship's intervention with the Argentine Government, with a view to procure either that substantial justice should be done to him, or compensation made to him for a wrongful administration of the law.

1868

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 4.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received August 17.)

My Lord, Temple, August 15, 1868.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Murray's letter of the 5th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith a despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Buenos Ayres, reporting the circumstances under which a fraudulent bankrupt, who had absconded from England with a large sum of money, was protected by the Argentine Tribunals against the claims upon his property preferred by the representatives of the interested parties in England, on the ground that the decision of the English Court cannot be accepted in that country as primâ facie evidence of bankruptcy, since the procedure of those Courts differs from that of the Argentine Republic.

Mr. Murray was pleased to request that we would take this subject into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion whether Her Majesty's Government can properly take any, and what, steps in this matter.

In obedience to the commands of your Lordship we have taken this subject into consideration and have the honour to report—

That it appears from the despatch of Mr. Gould, that the claim of Mr. Gath's creditors to be put into possession of the money deposited by him in a Bank at Buenos Ayres, is founded upon a Decree of an English Court adjudging Mr. Gath to be a bankrupt, and that the Argentine Tribunals have declined to give any legal effect in Buenos Ayres to that Decree. We consider that it is within the competence of a foreign Court to refuse to give weight to a Decree of an English Court of bankruptcy, and as Mr. Gath's creditors have been heard before the Argentine Tribunals, and the rejection of their demand is not alleged by them to be in violation of any Argentine Law, we do not see upon the facts disclosed, how your Lordship can interfere diplomatically in this case.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 5.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received August 17.)

My Lord, Temple, August 15, 1868.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 11th ultimo, stating that with reference to a Report of Her Majesty's Advocate-General of October 19, 1865, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Buenos Ayres, communicating the views of Senhor Amaral, the late Under-Secretary of State at Rio de Janeiro, and now the Brazilian Special Envoy to the Argentine and Uruguayan Republics, with regard to the right of foreign ships-of-war and of foreign merchant-ships to frequent at all times the River Plate and its confluents; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take the same into my consideration, and favour your Lordship with such observations as I may have to make thereupon.

A copy of the Treaty of 1853, between Her Majesty and the Argentine Confederation, and of the Marquis de Moustier's Memorandum, with your Lordship's reply to the Prince de la Tour d'Auvergne on this subject, which are alluded to in Mr. Gould's despatch, were also forwarded therewith for my information.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken these papers into consideration and have the honour to report—

That the principles of Public Law which are applicable to the navigation of the great rivers of the American Continent, would appear to be as well settled as those which apply to the great rivers of Europe, nor are there any peculiar circumstances, as far as I am aware, which distinguish the River Plate and its confluents from the Mississippi and its confluents, or the Amazon from the St. Lawrence, so as to render the principles of territorial right, which the United States of North America have recognized at different times in concert with Spain and France and Great Britain, with reference to the great rivers of North America inapplicable to those of South America. There may exist as to parts of the channel of certain rivers, anomalous claims, as for instance the claim, if it is still asserted by Paraguay, to exclude all nations from the use of the channel of the River Paraguay, where that river separates the Republic of Paraguay from El Gran Chaco, but such claims as regards frontier rivers, rest on a right of possession, and are plainly distinguishable from claims founded on the right of empire over rivers, as appurtenant to the territories through which they flow. It is in virtue of this latter right, I apprehend, that the Argentine Confederation has entered into the Treaty engagements of 1853, under which the navigation of the Rivers Paraná and Uraguay, whenever those rivers may belong to the Confederation, have been declared to be free to the merchant-vessels of all nations. This freedom of navigation however is, under Article VI of the Treaty, expressly limited, on occasion of war between the Riverain States, to merchant-vessels not laden with munitions of war, but subject to that exception the Confederation has declared that, "if it should happen that war should break out between any of the States, Republics, or Provinces of the River Plate or its confluents, the navigation of the Rivers Paraná and Uruguay shall remain free to the merchant flag of all nations." This Article of the Treaty, would seem to preclude the Confederation, if it should be itself engaged in war with any of the Riverain States from closing the navigation of the Paraná and Uruguay Rivers against neutral trade with the exception of contraband of war; on the other hand, if a war should break out between any of the Riverain States in which the Confederation itself should not be a party, the Argentine waters would be neutral territory and as such would not be subject to the exercise of any right of war on the part of the belligerents.

That Brazil and Paraguay are amongst the States of the River Plate and its confluents contemplated in the Treaty may, I think, be conclusively inferred from the provisions of Article VII of the Treaty, under which special provision has been made for those States to become parties to the Treaty, "in case they should be disposed to apply its principles to the ports of the Rivers Paraná, Paraguay, and Uruguay over which they may respectively possess fluvial rights."

Brazil, however, has not acceded to the Treaty of 1853, and it appears from Mr. Gould's despatch that the Special Envoy of Brazil at Buenos Ayres is disposed to maintain that the Argentine Confederation in entering into Treaty engagements which negative the right of the Riverain States, if war should break out between them, to blockade the River Paraná, and Uruguay has made concessions to foreign States which are beyond its power, "No single State," he is represented to assert, "can by Treaty or otherwise alienate rights it only holds in common with all the other Riverain States."

This position of public law, if Senhor Amaral means to assert that the Confederation could not by the Treaty of 1853 renounce a belligerent right, because it held it in common with all the other Riverain States is, I apprehend, not tenable, inasmuch as the practice of nations does not forbid a State to renounce by Treaty its exercise of any belligerent right, and the Powers assembled at the Congress of Paris in 1856 did not hesitate to alienate belligerent rights which they held in common with all other maritime Powers, although several of such latter Powers were not Parties to the Declaration of the Congress. But, as regards the Treaty of 1853, the fact would appear to be different from what the Brazilian Envoy has supposed, as the provisions of that Treaty apply only to rivers which are under the exclusive jurisdiction of the Argentine Confederation, and upon which, unlike the high seas, the other Riverain States, unless they should be carrying on war against the Confederation itself, in which case the inland waters of the Confederation would be enemy's territory, would have no title to enforce any right of war against neutral commerce.

It would have been competent for the Argentine Confederation, if it had been engaged in war single-handed with Paraguay, to have closed the navigation of its rivers against the merchant flag of all nations by right of its sovereignty, if it had not bound itself by Treaty to allow the navigation of those rivers to remain free in case of such a contingency. Brazil, on the other hand, if she had been engaged single-handed in war with Paraguay, would have had no title to interfere with the commerce of neutrals in Argentine waters under colour of belligerent right; and as the ally of the Confederation of the present occasion, Brazil can only exercise such rights against neutral commerce within the territory of the Confederation, which the Confederation is itself entitled to exercise.

1868

Senhor Amaral, however, seems to entertain a notion that certain principles of maritime right may properly be applied to the conduct of fluvial warfare on great rivers, whilst others should be excluded, and suggests that the free exercise of the right of blockade without the restraints which the practice of nations has imposed upon it when exercised on the high seas cannot be denied to any of the Riverain States, if it is carrying on war in the River Plate and its confluents.

"International law," he observes, "having been principally based on the practice of the nations of Europe, the internal waters of which are only of limited extent, and have consequently but rarely, if ever, been the scene of naval operations of any magnitude, does not lay down rules for the guidance of belligerents engaged in fluvial warfare, such as may at any moment break out between the different States bordering on the rivers which intersect this part of the American Continent.

"He, therefore, concludes that as the existing maritime rights are not adapted to the conditions in which fluvial warfare has to be carried on in the River Plate and its affluents, and the free exercise of belligerents cannot be withheld from any nation, the Riverain States can hardly be expected to adhere to them, and that, therefore, on the first favourable occasion these rights should be modified so as to meet the peculiar local circumstances, but not without the full and previous concurrence and consent of those States, which are naturally the most interested in the matter,"

Mr. Gould, in discussing these and other remarks of his Excellency the Brazilian Envoy, observes that "the right of blockade would seem to be virtually admitted by the Riverain States among themselves, inasmuch as the arrangement at present existing among the Riverain States is (if he correctly understands it) to the effect that merchant-vessels are freely allowed to proceed as far as they can, and ships of war only so far as each State permits them to proceed." But I apprehend that such an arrangement involves only the admission of the sovereignty of each State over its territorial waters, not the exercise of any right arising from a state of war. It is competent, for instance, for any Riverain State, in right of its sovereignty over its territorial waters, to exclude foreign vessels of war from them at all times, whilst it freely admits the merchant-vessels of all nations, just as it is competent for a maritime State to exclude from its ports and harbours foreign ships of war, whilst it freely admits vessels of commerce. The conclusion, therefore, which Mr. Gould is disposed to draw from the existing arrangements does not appear to me to be well founded. Her Majesty's Government has, I think, wisely held that the admission of Her Majesty's ships of war to the rivers which are the subject of the Treaty engagements of 1853 has been a matter of comity on the part of the Argentine Confederation, and although in time of peace foreign vessels of war may have been allowed without objection to ascend the Plate and its affluents to give occasional protection to foreign settlers, the admission of such vessels to those rivers cannot, in my opinion, be claimed as a matter of right in case of war breaking out between the Riverain States as being within the spirit of the Treaty.

With regard to the River Paraguay there does not appear to be any grounds for doubt, as regards the wording of the Treaty of 1853, that the Treaty does not apply to that river. The Treaty provides only for the free navigation of the Rivers Paraná and Uruguay wherever they belong to the Confederation. The concessions, therefore, which the Confederation has made by the Treaty of 1853 cannot fairly be construed to apply to any portions of the River Paraguay. It is competent, however, for the Confederation to allow the merchant-ships of all nations as well as their vessels of war, to navigate any portion of the River Paraguay over which it may possess rights of sovereignty.

The belligerent rights, I apprehend, which the various Riverain States are entitled to exercise against neutrals upon any part of the affluents of the River Plate depend altogether upon the fact whether such port belongs to an enemy or to a neutral Power.

The circumstance that the warfare is naval does not import any principle of maritime right into the question; for, as regards the high seas, all nations have a right to use them as an open battle-field, whereas no belligerent State can exercise any right of war in a river which belongs to a neutral Power.

The question of warfare on great rivers is thus essentially a territorial question. If both banks of a river belong to a neutral Power the entire channel is neutral territory; if one bank only belongs to a neutral Power, a belligerent is entitled to exercise rights of war within that portion of the river over which his enemy possesses territorial rights. The belligerent may, in such a case, besiege or blockade the ports of his enemy and forbid neutrals to navigate those parts of the river which belong to the enemy, and which he has occupied, but he cannot exercise any right of war against a neutral beyond those parts of the river which belong to his enemy. When Senhor Amaral, therefore, contends that the free exercise of belligerent right cannot be withheld from any nation, it must not be lost sight of that the locality to which he would apply the exercise of that right is an inland river, and that if the free exercise of belligerent right against neutrals throughout the waters of such a river is to be conceded by a General Treaty to every Riverain State it will be reasonable for the European Powers to expect reciprocity, and such reciprocity would entitle France or Great Britain, if either of those Powers should be at war with Brazil, to ascend the affluents of the Plate and to wage a naval warfare against Brazil in the interior of the South American Continent. It is probable that Senhor Amaral may not have maturely considered all the bearings of the question which he has raised in his conversation with Mr. Gould.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 6.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received September 9.)

Temple, September 8, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 6th June last, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 18th of January, 1867, on the subject of the claim of Mr. Stewart, on the Argentine Government, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Buenos Ayres, inclosing copy of a note addressed by Mr. Buckley Mathew to the Minister for Foreign Affairs, protesting against the demand made on Mr. Stewart for the payment of duties on his "yerba," together with the reply of the Argentine Government, and to request that we would take the same into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with any observations we might have to offer thereupon.

The previous correspondence was likewise inclosed for convenience of reference.

We are also in receipt of your Lordship's further commands, contained in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 17th June, inclosing Memorandum and its inclosures, relative to the same matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands, we have the honour to report—

That it appears to us that the proceedings taken by the Argentine Government against Mr. Stewart, by laying an embargo on his "yerba," in 1865, on the ground that the Paraguayan Government was really interested in it, cannot be considered as having been taken malâ fide, or without reasonable suspicion justifying the course adopted.

However, the Appeal Court has held that Mr. Stewart has sufficiently made out that he was the true owner, and has ordered the "yerba" to be given up to him. The immediate complaint now made by Mr. Stewart is, that upon application for the "yerba," the Custom-house refuses to allow it to be given up without payment of the duties now in force, Mr. Stewart claiming that it should be delivered upon payment of the duties which, if the "yerba" had been dispatched in 1865, would then have been payable. The duty claimed is at a higher per-centage on a higher fiscal valuation of the "yerba" than those in force in 1865, and the difference in favour of the Custom-house very considerable; but, on the other hand, the increase in the value of "yerba" in the market is, as we understand, very large, and probably Mr. Stewart will realize, after payment of duties, a far larger profit on the "yerba" than if he had sold it in 1865, paying the lower duty.

Strictly speaking, we think the question to be considered is, whether, after paying the charges demanded, Mr. Stewart has or has not been a loser by the detention of the "yerba" under the embargo; and, though we think that your Lordship might instruct Her Majesty's Representative again strongly to urge upon the Argentine Authorities the injustice of their enriching their exchequer by what turns out to have been the wrongful detainer of the "yerba"; still, if they continue to maintain the right of the Custom-house authorities to demand the higher rate, it should be paid under protest to obtain the despatch of the "yerba," notice being given to the Argentine Government that Her Majesty's Government will reserve to themselves the right to claim compensation hereafter for all damages sustained by Mr. Stewart, by reason of the detention of his goods.

1868

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

Brazil.

No. 7.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received December 10.)

My Lord,
Temple, December 8, 1868.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 27th ultimo, stating that Her Majesty's Government having determined to propose to Parliament to repeal the Act 8 and 9 Vict., cap. 122, which was framed in 1845, for the suppression of the Brazilian Slave Trade, he was directed to transmit to us the accompanying draft of a Bill which has been prepared for giving effect to the determination of Her Majesty's Government in this matter; and Mr. Egerton was to request that we would take the same into consideration, and furnish your Lordship with our opinion whether the draft Bill is right and proper.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we have considered the provisions of the draft Bill, and, subject to a slight alteration, are of opinion that it is proper for giving effect to the determination of Her Majesty's Government.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
RICHARD BAGGALLAY.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

Central America.

No. 8.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley..—(Received February 29.)

My Lord,
Temple, February 28, 1868.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 15th instant, stating that with reference to my Report of the 19th of November last, and to previous Reports on the subject of the claim of Captain Harris against the Government of Guatemala, for damage done to his property at San Geromino, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me a letter from Captain Harris, relative to the question of the restrictions to be placed upon the production of evidence by the Guatemalan Government againt the accuracy of the items forming his claim, and submitting his views as to the conditions under which he considers that Government should be bound, and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take Captain Harris' letter into my consideration, and favour your Lordship with my opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken Captain Harris' letter into my consideration, and have the honour to report—

That it appears from the correspondence of the Guatemalan Minister of Foreign Affairs with Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires, that the Guatemalan Government dispute both the alleged value of the stores in the estate of San Geromino at the time when the estate was pillaged, as well as the alleged amount of the damage inflicted by the troops; and that, whilst they dispute the former on the ground of its being out of all proportion to the extent of the estate, they dispute the latter upon the information of Mr. William Knoth, who, according to the Foreign Minister's despatch of July 13, 1865, inclosed in Mr. Fraser's despatch of 5th August, 1865, "resided in San Geromino at the time when the entry of the troops into the estate occurred, his father having been manager of the estate." The Minister goes on to say, "Mr. Knoth's information is in confirmation of the view that the claims are exaggerated, and he has also supplied some original documents, which show that the losses were not what the declarations affirm them to have been, and that the plantation was not left in a ruined state, as has been supposed, by claiming on account of this circumstance the excessive sum of 36,000 dollars." It is the evidence of this person which Captain Harris has been anxious to exclude, but as it is perhaps the most important part of the evidence upon which the Guatemalan Government will rely, as showing grounds for reducing the amount of compensation claimed, I do not think that the Guatemalan Government would accede to any condition calculated to exclude it, nor do I think that Captain Harris has made out a case to warrant your Lordship in insisting upon the acceptance of any such condition. The proposed alteration of the seventh condition would accordingly be objectionable, if the latter part would exclude Mr. Knoth's evidence, but I see no objection to its being adopted without the last paragraph; it would run thus—"That no evidence be received against any of the items of the claim, except it can be proved to be that of a person or persons actually acquainted with the condition of the estate before it was pillaged by the troops." The concluding paragraph would for other reasons not be admissible, as it might prevent the Guatemalan Government producing evidence from parties who visited the estate before, and not after it was pillaged, to show that the stores alleged to have been destroyed were not on the estate before it was pillaged.

With regard to the ninth condition, I am unable to understand what Captain Harris means by the term "bonâ fide evidence." I observe in Mr. Matthews' letter of April 26th, 1863, that he states that "the original papers lodged in the Consulate are not to be found," but that "there are legally certified copies;" and I also observe that the Minister of Foreign Affairs, in his despatch above alluded to, remarks that the "declarations are for the most part legally liable to objection." If Captain Harris means that one of the conditions proper to be insisted upon should be that no legal objection should be taken to the declarations on the ground of their not being original documents, I think such a condition may be properly approved by your Lordship.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 9.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received March 16.)

My Lord,
Temple, March 15, 1868.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 9th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the accompanying correspondence with Mr. Forrest, on the subject of the claim of his client, Mr. Delvaille, on the Government of Honduras, on account of the non-payment of a debt due to him from a subject of that Republic in 1844.

Mr. Hammond was also pleased to inclose a draft of the answer which your Lordship proposes should be returned to Mr. Forrest's letter of the 28th ultimo, and to request that I would take the same into my consideration, and favour your Lordship at my early convenience with my opinion thereupon.

The previous papers referred to in the correspondence were likewise forwarded therewith for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken the draft of the answer which your Lordship proposes should be returned to Mr. Forrest's letter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

1869

That the proposed answer, with the slight alteration which I have made in the draft, may be properly returned to Mr. Forrest's letter of the 28th February last.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 10.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received April 3.)

Temple, April 3, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 25th ultimo, stating that, with reference to my letter of the 16th March last, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the accompanying letter which had been received from Mr. Samuel Forrest in reply to the one addressed to him on the 17th ultimo, on the subject of the claim of his client, Mr. Delvaille, on the Government of Honduras; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take this paper into my consideration, and favour your Lordship with my opinion as to the answer which should be returned to that gentleman.

The former papers relating to this case were likewise forwarded therewith for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken this paper into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That I think your Lordship may properly give some assistance to Mr. Delvaille. It appears from the Memorandum of the Foreign Office, February 18, 1868, respecting the origin of the debt due from the Republic of Honduras to Mr. Delvaille, that the Honduras Government had, prior to the Convention of November 28, 1859, agreed to pay it off by annual instalments, and had taken some steps towards fulfilling this agreement before the Convention was signed. Mr. Delvaille's claim would thus appear to come within the scope of the latter part of Article V of that Convention, under which "the Republic of Honduras agrees to carry into effect any agreements for the satisfaction of British claims already made, but not yet carried into effect." I consider therefore that your Lordship may properly direct Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Honduras to call the attention of the Government of that Republic to its omission to give effect to the provisions of Article V of the Convention, as respects its agreement made prior to that Convention, for the satisfaction of Mr. Delvaille's claim.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 11.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received May 4.)

Temple, May 4, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 29th ultimo, stating that, with reference to my Report of October 3, 1867, on the subject of the claim of Captain Harris against the Government of Guatemala for alleged damage done to the San Geromino Estate, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me therewith, together with the previous correspondence, a further letter from Captain Harris, stating the conditions under which the claimants are now prepared to submit their case to a Commission; and that, in requesting me to favour your Lordship with my opinion thereupon, Mr. Hammond was to state to me that, if Captain Harris' terms are considered by me satisfactory, your Lordship proposes to forward all the correspondence to Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires in Central America, with instructions to proceed in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I consider the conditions under which the claimants are now prepared to submit their case to a Commission are satisfactory, and that your Lordship may properly forward the correspondence to Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires in Central America, with instructions to proceed forthwith in the matter.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 12.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received May 15.)

Temple, May 15, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 14th instant, stating that, with reference to my Report of the 4th instant on the subject of the claim of Captain Harris against the Government of Guatemala for damage done to his property at San Geronimo, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the accompanying letter which had been received from that gentleman requesting to be informed whether Her Majesty's Government are willing to receive and forward to Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires in Central America a legally certified copy of the attestations of several witnesses with respect to that case; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take Captain Harris' letter into my consideration and inform your Lordship whether his request should be complied with.

The former papers were forwarded therewith for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken Captain Harris' letter into consideration, and have the honour to Report—

That I see no objection to Her Majesty's Government taking charge of the documents which Captain Harris is desirous to have forwarded to Mr. Corbett, if the object is to secure their safe deposit in the British Consulate; but if Captain Harris means, in requesting to be allowed to hand them over to Her Majesty's Government for the purpose of being forwarded officially to Mr. Corbett, that Her Majesty's Government, by receiving them for that purpose, will have accepted them officially as evidence, which Mr. Corbett will be authorized to require the referees to admit under the conditions of reference, I cannot safely advise your Lordship to assent to Captain Harris' request without further information as to the circumstances under which the original documents are not forthcoming, and the copies came to be made.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 13.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received July 15.)

Temple, July 14, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 6th instant, stating that, in accordance with the opinion contained in my Report of the 15th May last, Captain Harris has been called upon to furnish explanations with regard to the document relating to his claim upon the Government of Guatemala on account of his property at San Geranimo, which he requested might be forwarded to Mr. Corbett; and that Mr. Hammond was directed to transmit to me the accompanying letter which has been received from that gentleman in reply; and he was pleased to request that I would take the same into consideration and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to whether Captain Harris' request may now be acceded to.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to Report—

That the explanation at present offered is not satisfactory, if it is intended that Her Majesty's Minister should be authorized to require the referees to admit the copies, inasmuch, as from the letter of Captain Harris, it would appear that the copies were made some time after the original documents were carried of from Her Majesty's Consulate, at Guatemala, and he does not explain how copies could be made under such circumstances. It is possible that the papers are duplicate copies of some original papers in the custody of the Guatemalan authorities, as Captain Harris states that they are duly stamped and certified by the proper authorities.

I think it would be desirable to require this difficulty to be cleared up, and at the same time that your Lordship should be informed what is the precise nature of the document which Captain Harris stipulates is "to be restored to the claimants when the purpose for which it is put forward has been carried out."

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

1868

No. 14.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received August 8.)

My Lord,

Temple, August 8, 1867.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 6th instant, stating that, with reference to my Report of the 14th ultimo, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me, with the previous papers, a letter from Captain Harris, containing further explanations with regard to the document relating to his claim on Guatemala, which he is anxious should be officially forwarded to Mr. Corbett; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take the same into my consideration, and favour your Lordship with my opinion as to the propriety of acceding to Captain Harris' request.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That your Lordship may, I think, with propriety, accede to Captain Harris' request that the Foreign Office should take charge of the document in question, with a view to its being forwarded to Mr. Corbett for the purposes of the Commission.

As the document purports to be an official copy under the seal of the Guatemalan Government of the depositions of eye-witnesses of the sacking of the San Geronimo Estate, made immediately after that, went before the Guatemalan authorities, Captain Harris will fairly be entitled to claim, that it should be received in evidence by the Commissioners, if the original depositions, which he presumes to have been retained by the Guatemalan Government, should not be forthcoming.

I venture to suggest that it may be prudent for Captain Harris to have a notarial copy made of the document, to be retained in this country, in case the document, which may prove to be the only existing record of the depositions, should be lost or be abstracted after its arrival in Venezuela.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 15.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received August 14.)

My Lord,

Temple, August 13, 1868.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 12th instant, stating that, with reference to my Report of the 4th of May last, relative to the conditions under which the claim of Captain Harris against the Government of Guatemala for alleged damage to the San Geronimo Estate, might be submitted to a Commission, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the accompanying despatch and its inclosures, from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires in Central America, on the subject of the advisability of appointing a referee by whom disputed questions could be decided; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take the same into my consideration, and favour your Lordship with my opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken these papers into my consideration, and have the honour to report—

That under the circumstances stated in the despatch of Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires, it would be highly advisable that a referee should be appointed, to whose decision all questions upon which the Commissioners may not be able to agree, may be referred.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 16.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received September 8.)

My Lord,

Temple, September 7, 1868.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 3rd instant, stating that with reference to my Report of the 8th ultimo, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the accompanying letter from Captain

Harris, inclosing the certified copy of the attestations of the several witnesses, of the sacking and destruction of the estate of San Geromino in Guatemala; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would read the document in question, and favour your Lordship with any remarks I may have to offer thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have read the document in question, and have the honour to report—

That it does not appear to me to answer precisely the description given of it by Captain Harris, which, as I gather from my report to your Lordship, was to the effect that it was an official copy, under the seal of the Guatemalan Government, of the depositions of eye-witnesses of the sacking of the San Geromino Estate, made immediately after that event before the Guatemalan authorities.

The document, if I mistake not, purports to be a faithful copy made in 1852, by Francisco Quivos, of a book, in which were recorded copies of certain documents, including the depositions of witnesses present at the sacking of the San Geromino Estate, or who visited the estate shortly before or after that event, which copies had been collated with the original documents on 8th October, 1838, by Ramon Vasconcellos, in the presence of two witnesses whose names were subscribed to it, as well as his own. The document is not properly described as being under the seal of the Guatemalan Government, unless thereby is meant that it is copied on official paper stamped with the arms of that Government, and that the signature of Francisco Quiros is certified by the Guatemalan Secretary of Foreign Affairs to be authentic, and entitled to full credit both within and without the Republic.

Ramon Vasconcellos is described in the course of the earlier proceedings as "Escribano National," as well as Francisco Quivos, and one or other of them seems to have attested the original proceedings before the Guatemalan authorities.

Under these circumstances I consider the authenticity of the document to be unimpeachable; and that if the original depositions are lost or are not forthcoming after an option has been given to the Guatemalan Government to produce them, the document ought to be received by the arbitrators as of equal authority with the original depositions.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 17.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received September 8.)

Temple, September , 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 3rd instant, stating that, with reference to my Reports of the 13th May and 13th August, he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying despatches from Mr. Corbett, inclosing correspondence with the Guatemalan Government respecting the constitution of a Commission to examine the San Geronimo claim, and a letter from Captain Harris commenting on the Guatemalan Minister's answer, and adverting also to an objection raised by him in a previous letter to the appointment of any other person but Mr. Corbett himself as umpire; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take these papers into consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the course which should be pursued under the circumstances therein set forth.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the present proposal of the Guatemalan Government, as I gather from the despatch of Don Pedro de Aycinena is essentially different from the first proposal, which led to your Lordship entertaining the question of referring Captain Harris' claim to arbitration.

The first proposal, as appears from the note of Don Pedro of 6th July, 1868, addressed to Mr. Corbett, was that a Commission of the Guatemalan Government should be appointed to investigate the matter in conjunction with a representative of the claimants, who should be able to resolve upon a compensation to which the claimants could have a fair right. Your Lordship very properly considered that this proposal meant that the Commissioner of the Guatemalan Government and the representative of the claimant should decide, after the examination of documents, upon the amount of compensation to be paid to Captain Harris, and your Lordship assented to the proposal under certain specified conditions. It was, I think, a very reasonable suggestion on the part of Don Pedro de Aycinena upon those conditions being communicated to him, as he considered that there might be irreconcilable difference of opinion between the Guatemalan Commissioner and Mr. Hague, who had been nominated to act for Captain Harris, to propose that an umpire or referee should be nominated, to whose decision all differences between the Commissioners should be referred.

1868

Is appears, however, now, from Don Pedro's last note to Mr. Corbett, that the Guatemalan Government prefers that two impartial arbitrators should be appointed to decide the question "in the shortest time possible," "a third person also being appointed to decide in case the Commissioners should not agree," and that it has no objection to any of the foreign Representatives at Guatemala being appointed to act as arbitrators, whilst Mr. Hague "should be at liberty to make before the Commissioners all the suggestions which, in his opinion, bear on the subject."

Probably after the intimation which has been given to Mr. Corbett, that the Guatemalan Government consider that the nomination of Mr. Hague to act for Captain Harris will be fatal to any chance of agreement between the Commissioners, it would not be desirable for your Lordship to press the appointment of a Representative Commission with a referee, and that an impartial Commission with an umpire in case of differences would be likely to lead to as fair, and perhaps a more expeditious settlement of the question than the original scheme. Such a Commission as is now proposed by the Guatemalan Government would probably better meet Captain Harris' view "of the impossibility of impartiality in any Central American."

I should not consider it advisable for Mr. Corbett to act in any way as arbiter, as your Lordship will probably have occasion for his services as Her Majesty's Representative during or after the arbitration.

With regard to Captain Harris' suggestion, that the original scheme should be carried out "without the appointment of an umpire on the decision of the Commissioners," it would simply be impracticable, and can lead to no satisfactory result after the view which the Guatemalan Government has expressed of the improbability of their Commissioner coming to any agreement with Mr. Hague.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 18.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received October 23.)

Temple, October 23, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 16th October instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires in Central America, requesting instructions as to the course which he should pursue with reference to a proposed marriage between two British subjects, the one resident within the territory of Guatemala, and the other residing in Costa Rica.

Mr. Hammond was also pleased to inclose copy of the Commission issued to Mr. Corbett and the draft of an instruction in which your Lordship has explained the limits of the district within which it is competent for him to celebrate marriages; and to request that we would take these papers into our consideration and favour your Lordship with an opinion, at our early convenience, as to the instructions which should be addressed to Mr. Corbett in this matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we think that residence of one of the parties to an intended marriage in Guatemala, and of the other in Costa Rica, would not be a sufficient residence of both the parties in the district of the Consul within the meaning of the Act 12 and 13 Vict., cap. 68.

The different Commissions issued to Mr. Corbett are silent as to the solemnization of marriages. The Warrant referred to in the letter from the Foreign Office to Mr. Corbett of the 31st July is not before us.

The draft instruction sent to us is, we gather, construed by Mr. Corbett as meaning that the several different countries to which he has been appointed Consul-General are to be considered as one district for the purpose of the solemnization of marriages under the Act, so that one person residing in one of the countries and the other residing

---

CENTRAL AMERICA.

No. 21.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received December 31.)

Temple, December 31, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 24th instant, on which I have had the honour of addressing to your Lordship a Report of this day's date in regard to the protest of certain inhabitants of Grey Town against the illegal seizure and sale by the Nicaraguan authorities of certain property belonging to the Central American Transit Company.* I have now the honour of addressing to your Lordship, on the subject of the Memorial of a numerous body of inhabitants of the same town, complaining of the frequent violation of the Treaty of Managua, a further Report—

That the Memorial which has been submitted on the part of certain inhabitants of Grey Town to the consideration of Her Majesty's Government would appear to proceed upon an erroneous view that the British Government is still entitled to exercise a kind of Protectorate over Grey Town, and in consideration of the immunities enjoyed by its inhabitants before it passed under the sovereignty of the Republic to insist upon a Municipal Constitution being granted to the town, more especially in order to secure to it the condition "of a really free port."

That Her Majesty's Government would have a right to insist that the stipulations of Article VII of the Treaty of 1860 shall be religiously observed by the Nicaraguan Government is beyond all doubt; but I am of opinion that it cannot of right interfere with the internal government of the town in the manner suggested in the eight first Articles of the Memorial. With regard to the 9th, 10th, and 11th Articles, which concern the payment of the Mosquito subsidy, the Nicaraguan Government would appear to have been guilty of a breach of Article IV of the Treaty of 1860 in not levying the duty indicated in that Article for the payment of the subsidy, and it would seem that the payment of the subsidy has been improperly thrown upon the Municipal Treasury of the town, and so far Her Majesty's Government would be entitled of right to bring the complaint of the memorialists to the attention of the Nicaraguan Government. With regard to the other Articles of the Memorial, they are open to the same observations as the earlier Articles, that it is beyond the province of Her Majesty's Government to interfere in the manner suggested.

In addressing the above observations to your Lordship, upon "the conditions" which the memorialists are desirous that Her Majesty's Government should impose upon the Nicaraguan Government, as necessary, in their view, to secure the object of making Grey Town "really a free port," I may add that the Memorial discloses a system of administrative abuses in Grey Town, which is not reconcilable with the obligations of the Republic towards Her Majesty's Government, and which, if properly brought under the consideration of Her Majesty's Government, may entitle it to make a diplomatic representation on the subject to the Nicaraguan Government.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

* Mr. Green, No. 6, November 10, 1868.

1868

No. 21*.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received December 31.)

Temple, December 31, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 24th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the accompanying despatches from Her Majesty's Consul at Grey Town,* the first of which incloses a protest of the inhabitants of that place against the illegal seizure and sale by the Nicaraguan authorities of certain property belonging to the Central American Transit Company; and the second a Memorial of the same persons to Her Majesty's Government, complaining of the frequent violations of the Treaty of Managua, of which a copy was also sent; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take these papers into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands, I have the honour to report—

That, before I can advise your Lordship as to the view which Her Majesty's Government may properly take of the protest of the inhabitants of Grey Town inclosed in the first despatch of Her Majesty's Consul, it will be necessary that Her Majesty's Consul should procure further and fuller information as to the nature of the proceedings before the Court of Commerce of Grenada. It would appear from the protest of the agent of the Company, that such information can be readily procured by him on applying to the Judge of the Court of Commerce, and the inquiries of Her Majesty's Consul may be properly directed to ascertain in the first place the nature of the suit, and whether the Commercial Court of Grenada had jurisdiction to entertain it; whether the Company had notice of the suit, so that they might either appear under protest to the jurisdiction of the Court, or have an opportunity to defend themselves if the Court was competent to entertain the suit; and what was the nature of the Judgment under which the property of the Company was seized and sold at Grey Town. The proceedings in execution of the Judgment would certainly appear to have been conducted with undue harshness and some degree of oppression, and it may prove that they were in substance illegal, although the jurisdiction of the Commercial Court was well founded, and that the Company may be entitled to damages on that account. But the more important question is that which regards the jurisdiction of the Commercial Court upon which the subsequent proceedings at Grey Town were founded, whether the exercise of its jurisdiction can be sustained with due regard to the provisions of the Treaty of 1860.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

* Mr. Green, Nos. 5 and 6, November 2 and 6, 1868.

in another of them, for one calendar month before marriage may, for the purposes of marriage, be considered as having "had their usual places of abode within the district of such Consul." But we think that the union of several Consulates into one district is not contemplated or authorized by the Act (the 19th section of which we may remark is extremely ill-drawn and difficult to construe); and we think that Mr. Corbett should be instructed that it is not competent for him to solemnize or sanction the marriage of the two persons referred to after a month's residence by the one in Guatemala and the other in Costa Rica.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
RICHARD BAGGALLAY.
TRAVERS TWISS.

No. 19.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received December 29.)

Temple, December 28, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 24th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying despatch and its inclosures from Her Majesty's Consul at Panamá relative to an attempt which appears to have been made by the Executive authority at that place to double the commercial taxes for the month of October; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take these papers into consideration and furnish your Lordship with my opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to roport—

That, assuming that British subjects at Panamá are by Treaty* exempted from contributing to forced loans and war taxes, I am of opinion the imposition of the additional tax in the manner proposed would be an evasion of the Treaty and a violation of its spirit. The provision in the Decree of the 20th October, 1868, exempting from the operations of the additional tax, those who contributed to the loan of 6,000 dollars on the 8th of that month, as also those who, on having knowledge of the Decree, may voluntarily lend a similar amount, make it evident that the additional tax is an extraordinary tax and will be equivalent in its operation to a forced loan.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

No. 20.

Queen's Advocate's Report, December 30, 1868.

No. 21.

Queen's Advocate's Report, December 31, 1868.

---

* See Article XVI.

Chile.

---

No. 22.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received January 4.)

Temple, January 4, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 6th of December, 1867, stating that with reference to our Report of the 27th of September last on the case of the "Tornado," he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith a further letter from Messrs. Isaac, Campbell, and Co., dated the 3rd December ultimo, on the subject, and to request that we would take this paper into our consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this paper into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That in their letter of the 3rd December Messrs. Isaac, Campbell, and Co., complain generally "that they have been fifteen months and still are the victims of delays and procrastinations which would alone constitute a denial of justice, warranting, if ever such denial did warrant, the prompt and decisive intervention of Her Majesty's Government."

Their specific complaints appear to be that the Junta is composed of the very same persons who tried and condemned the "Tornado" and her crew, that the officer who presides is not qualified by sufficient experience and ability, and that he and his colleagues are not disinterested.

The writer quotes your Lordship's despatch of the 8th February, 1867, to Sir J. Crampton (No. 123, Blue Book), in support of his argument that a "trial" before the persons who condemned the vessel as a prize is a mockery.

Your Lordship's despatch to Sir J. Crampton, 12th August, 1867, meets this objection, and it is obvious that the submission of the case to the Junta, composed (with one exception) of the individuals who affected to act judicially on a former occasion, though, as your Lordship says, unfortunate, cannot now be made ground for complaint.

The other specific objection of Messrs. Isaac, Campbell, and Co., is founded, as we understand, upon the admission before the Junta of the original Auditors' report. The use of this document is expressly decreed by the 4th and last article of the "Informe," and this is also noticed in your Lordship's despatch of the 12th August. Messrs. Isaac, Campbell, and Co., have the right to be heard against the truth of the statements contained in this document, and against the propriety of admitting many of the statements contained in it, if true, as ground upon which to base a decision.

The use, therefore, of this document does not, we think, form any ground of complaint.

We think that Messrs. Isaac, Campbell, and Co's. letter may be answered by saying that your Lordship cannot, upon the statements contained in it, come to the conclusion that the constitution of the existing Prize Court at Cadiz is at variance with the ordinary requisites of International Law, or that, tested by those of Spanish Law, it is illegal.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
C. J. SELWYN.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 23.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received January 4.)

Temple January 4, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 20th of December last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship, to transmit to us a despatch and its inclosures from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Santiago (No. 93), respecting a debate that had taken place in the Chilean Chamber of Deputies, on a charge made against the Government of remissness in not obtaining from foreign markets the ships-of-war requisite for a successful prosecution of the war with Spain.

Mr. Hammond was also pleased to state that Mr. Thomson observes that in such a discussion, allusion would not fail to be made to every vessel which the Chilean Government had endeavoured to procure, and he considers that one of the ships thus refered to was the "Tornado."

Mr. Hammond was therefore to request, with reference to our Report of the 18th of November, and to the previous correspondence which had taken place respecting the case of the "Tornado," that we would take the inclosed papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to any steps which should be taken thereon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we agree with Mr. Thomson in thinking that there is the strongest probability that the "Tornado" is one of the ships referred to in the documents before us.

We do not, however, consider it necessary that any steps should be taken in consequence of the receipt of this intelligence.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
C. J. SELWYN.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 24.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received January 27.)

Temple, January 27, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 24th instant, stating that with reference to our Report of the 31st ultimo, on the application of the Spanish and Chilean Ministers for licenses to withdraw from this country certain Spanish and Chilean ships-of-war now held in deposit under the provisions of the "Foreign Enlistment Act," he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith two further notes and translations of them received from those Ministers, specifying the conditions under which they respectively agree to accept and act upon such licences.

That we should notice that it forms part of these conditions that the value of the Spanish vessels being far greatar than that of the Chilean vessels, the Chilean Government are to be allowed to provide further vessels equivalent in value to the difference, and to remove them from this country, without obstacle.

And Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take these papers into our consideration, and at our earliest convenience report to your Lordship our opinion as to whether the proposals of the two Ministers are admissible, and if so, in what form, so far as Her Majesty's Government are concerned, they should be accepted and carried out.

That in the meanwhile the licences prayed for are in course of preparation, but, when signed by the Queen, they would be forwarded to the Foreign Office, to be held over until the other arrangements suggested by the two Ministers are accepted by Her Majesty's Government, whereupon the licenses will be made over to them to be delivered to the parties engaged in completing the vessels for sea.

That it would not escape our notice that eventually further licences may be required to enable the Chilean Government to purchase and despatch other vessels to the value of the balance in favour of Spain in the transaction as regards the four vessels for which licences are now in preparation.

1868

The former papers were also forwarded therewith for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into consideration and have the honour to report—

That we see no reason why the licences to the builders to complete the armed vessels of the Spanish and Chilean Governments respectively should not be signed by Her Majesty, and held over until the exact terms of arrangement between those Governments and Her Majesty's Government are completely arranged.

We think, however, that it is inexpedient that Her Majesty's Government should come under terms with the Spanish and Chilean Ministers, that Chile shall hereafter be allowed to build vessels-of-war, or to obtain arms, &c., in this country, so as to give them an equal advantage to that which the Spanish Government is about to obtain by taking away their armed vessels, which are vastly superior in value to the Chilean ships.

The consent of the Spanish Minister, given as part of the consideration for the present arrangement, might well justify Her Majesty hereafter in allowing vessels-of-war to be equipped for the Chilean service, even during the existence of the present or of future hostilities between Spain and Chile, without being open to any charge of breach of neutrality; but we think nothing should be done which could have the effect of fettering, at any future time, the discretion of the Crown as to the propriety of permitting vessels to be hereafter built or equipped in this country for the Chilean Government, and that Her Majesty's Government should not come under any engagement with the Spanish Government, as to giving notice (according to Article 5 of Count de Vistahermosa's despatch) to the Minister of the Queen of Spain, as to what the Chilean Government may do hereafter in fitting out vessels in pursuance of the arrangement.

It is obvious that if such an engagement were undertaken, and disputes arose as to the value of the equipments which the Chileans desired to obtain in this country, Her Majesty's Government might be placed in an embarrassing position with regard to the two disputants; possibly also, future legislation might interfere with any such engagement.

We submit that your Lordship should state to both Ministers that Her Majesty's Government can come under no engagement or promise as to what the Chilean Government may be allowed to do hereafter. That so far as Her Majesty's Government are concerned, the licences to remove the ships must not be clogged with any conditions; but that upon a statement by the Spanish Minister that it is the desire of his Government that in consideration of the far greater value of the Spanish ships, and the assent on the part of the Chilean Government to their removal, that the latter Governuent should be hereafter empowered to build other ships, &c., in this country, so as to obtain a full equivalent in value, to the extent to which the Spanish vessels exceed the Chilean, Her Majesty's Government will consider it open to them hereafter to determine whether Her Majesty shall be advised to permit the building of other vessels for Chile; but that no promise or engagement on the part of Her Majesty's Government that this will be done can be given, or relied upon in any way as implied from the granting of the licences by virtue of which the vessels now lying in the Thames will be allowed to depart.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
C. J. SELWYN.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 25.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received February 22.)

Temple, February 22, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 21st instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith a copy of the letter which, in consequence of the observations contained in the Law Officers' Report of the 27th ultimo, your Lordship addressed to the Spanish and Chilean Ministers respecting the release of certain vessels detained under the provisions of the Foreign Enlistment Act, together with translations of the answers received from those Ministers; and to request that we would report to your Lordship at our earliest convenience our opinion whether, on the statements made on those letters, the licences for the completion and departure of the two Spanish and two Chilean vessels may now be forwarded to the respective Ministers, accompanied by a letter stating that, on the faith of the assurances given by them, Her Majesty has been pleased to grant the licences.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we are of opinion that, upon the statements made by the Spanish and Chilean Ministers in their answers to your Lordship's letter, the licences for the completion of the two Spanish and two Chilean vessels, and for their departure from British waters, may properly be delivered over to the Ministers respectively, to be placed in the hands of the builders of the several vessels, accompanied by such letters as suggested, or the licences might be delivered direct to the builders themselves, after letters written to the Ministers stating that this course will be adopted on the faith of the assurances contained in their letters. This latter will, we think, be the preferable course.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 26.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received March 7.)

Temple, March 7, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 6th instant, stating that with reference to our Report of the 22nd ultimo he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith a note which had been addressed to your Lordship by the Peruvian Chargé d'Affaires at this Court, protesting in the name of Peru, as the ally of Chile in the war with Spain, against the withdrawal from the waters of the United Kingdom of the two corvettes belonging to Chile, and the two armour-plated frigates belonging to Spain.

Mr. Egerton was also to forward to us the draft of answer which your Lordship proposes to return to Colonel Almonte's communication, and was pleased to request that we would take the same into our consideration, and favour your Lordsnip at our earliest convenience with our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the draft answer into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we have made some alterations which appear to us to be desirable in the 3rd and 4th pages of the draft. From our recollection of the terms of the licences, they were such as to prevent proceedings against the builders, in the event of their having infringed the Foreign Enlistment Act by furnishing or equipping the vessels in question. Probably if it had occurred to Her Majesty's Government that Peru was, as is alleged, in alliance with Chile in her war with Spain, the consent of the Peruvian Government would have been required before the arrangement was made; but under the circumstances it appears to us that Peru really cannot properly complain of what has been done in good faith, and at the request of her ally.

Unless some special reason, of which we are not aware, renders it expedient to insert in the letter to Lieutenant-Colonel Almonte the last paragraph of the draft, which we have placed within brackets, we would suggest that it had better be omitted.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 27.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received March 23.)

My Lord, Temple, March 23, 1868.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 18th instant, stating that with reference to our Report of the 7th of this month, on the objection raised by Colonel Almonte, the Peruvian Chargé d'Affaires, to the departure of the Spanish and Chilean iron-clads, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith a letter, dated the 16th instant, which had been received from the Peruvian Minister repeating those objections, and requesting that the operation of the licences may be suspended for such time as may be required to enable him to receive instructions from his Government on the subject.

Mr. Hammond was at the same time to inclose to us all the correspondence respecting the release of those vessels.

Mr. Hammond was also pleased to state that your Lordship directed him to request that we would report to you at our earliest convenience our opinion whether, assuming that these vessels are still all or any of them within British waters, it would be proper to comply with the request of the Peruvian Minister, and suspend for a time the operation of the licences, considering that Peru is, with Chile a co-belligerent in war with Spain, and that her assent to the arrangement between the Spanish and Chilean Governments, under which the licences were granted, was not formally notified to Her Majesty's Government, though naturally assumed to exist from the application having been made by Chile, her ally, with the knowledge as it seems, to a certain extent, of the Peruvian Chargé d'Affaires, who appears to have deferred raising any objection to the grant of the licences till they were actually issued.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That the communications made by Spain and Chile to your Lordship would clearly lead to the inference that the arrangements made by Chile were so made on behalf of herself and her allies, and were so understood by the Representative of Spain (letter from Señor Errazuriz, 6th January, 1868, and Count de Vistahermosa of the same date), and Chile and Spain both agreed that their respective vessels should neither attack nor be attacked during the voyage to their respective ports, and that the parties interested should respectively be bound to give the necessary safe-conducts; an agreement by which, if entered into by Chile and Spain, we think that Peru as the ally of Chile would be bound.

We think that under the circumstances, even if these vessels, or any of them, are still within British waters, your Lordship should not comply with the request of the Peruvian Minister, or recede from the arrangement which, upon the representations made to your Lordship, has been sanctioned and acted upon by Her Majesty's Government.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 28.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received July 21.)

My Lord, Temple, July 21, 1868.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 20th of June, 1868, stating that with reference to our Report of the 22nd February, and to our previous Reports on the subject of the conditions under which the Spanish and Chilean iron-clads detained in this country should be allowed to depart, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us, together with the previous correspondence, a letter from the Chilean Minister at this Court, requesting the authority of Her Majesty's Government to enable the Chilean Government to order the construction in some dockyard of the United Kingdom of an iron-clad vessel for the service of Chile; and to request that we would take the same into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer which should be returned to the Chilean Minister.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we think that the Chilean Minister should be informed that Her Majesty's Government will raise no objection to the construction in this country of an iron-clad vessel for the service of Chile in strict accordance with the arrangement made with Spain on the occasion of the other armed vessels being allowed to depart.

We think, however, that the Chilean Minister should be informed that it must be distinctly understood that Her Majesty's Government must reserve absolutely the power of determining hereafter whether the vessel, when built and equipped, shall be allowed to depart from this country. This is, we think, essential; as until the period arrives at which the request for permission to remove the vessel is made, it is uncertain whether Chile may not be at war, and if at war, with what country she may be engaged in hostilities, or whether any unforeseen or unexpected state of circumstances may have arisen which will render it improper that the permission should be conceded. No formal licence to build is required, and no such licence should be granted; and under no circumstances should any licence be granted which will preclude Her Majesty's Government from preventing the vessel at any time from leaving this country, and from seizing her, if the attempt is made to remove her without express permission given for that purpose.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 29.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received July 29.)

Temple, July 29, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 27th of July instant, stating that with reference to our Report of the 22nd of February last, on the subject of the release of the Spanish and Chilean vessels which were detained in this country under the provisions of the Foreign Enlistment Act, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying correspondence as marked in the margin,* with the Spanish Minister at this Court, and between the Foreign Office and the Admiralty, relative to a request which has been made by that Minister that the Spanish frigate "Victoria" may be allowed to anchor at Plymouth for the purpose of embarking guns and ammunition; and to request that we would take the same into our consideration, and favour your Lordship at our earliest convenience with our opinion as to whether this request may be complied with.

The previous correspondence was sent therewith for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That it appears that the permission asked for by the Count Vistahermosa on the 1st July was for permission for the "Victoria" to lie in Plymouth harbour for the purpose of completing her armament and getting ready for her voyage. The letter of your Lordship to the Admiralty of the 14th July, and the letter from the Admiralty of the 15th July, 1868, treats this as a request merely to be allowed to anchor at Plymouth until she is ready to put to sea. The letter from Señor Tomas Achaf to the Secretary of the Admiralty of the 25th July states, "I have asked for and obtained the permission for the frigate 'Victoria' to come in harbour at Plymouth, and for facilities to be given for embarkation of guns, carriages, and ammunition constructed for said frigate by Sir William Armstrong and Co.;" and he further states that "as the authorities of the dockyard have not received yet any instructions on this subject I beg leave to solicit your Lordship may be pleased in giving the necessary orders, so that the said frigate 'Victoria' lying at present at Plymouth may proceed with the said embarkation." We do not apprehend that Señor Tomas Achaf rightly construes the permission that has

---

* Count Vistahermosa, July 1; to Admiralty, July 14; Admiralty, July 15; to Count Vistahermosa, July 16; Admiralty, July 25, 1868.

1868

been accorded to the Spanish Government, and we have thought it right to call your Lordship's attention to this.

If it be a fact that Spain is still at war, we submit that no such permission as that which is asked for should be conceded. Any person, who, without Her Majesty's permission, were to add to the guns of the vessel or to her equipment for war would render himself liable to punishment under 59 Geo. III, cap. 69, sec. 8 (Foreign Enlistment Act).

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 30.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received August 4.)

Temple, August 4, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 31st July ultimo, stating that with reference to our Report of the 21st ultimo, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us, together with the previous papers,* the accompanying letter from the Chilean Minister at this Court,† in reply to one which, in accordance with our opinion, was addressed to him on the subject of the construction in this country of an iron-clad vessel for the Chilean Government; and to request that we would take Señor Blest Gana's letter into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer which should be returned to it.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we still think that Her Majesty's Government should make no such promise, nor come under any such obligation, as that under which the Chilean Minister desires to place it. We believe that it was expressly pointed out that while Spain agreed to raise no objection to the increase of the Chilean navy by war vessels being built and equipped in this country (within the limitation expressed in the memorandum signed by the Spanish and Chilean Ministers), your Lordship declined on the part of Her Majesty's Government to give any pledge that such vessels should be allowed to be equipped here, or to leave these shores, or to be bound in any way as party to the arrangement between Spain and Chile. And we think that Her Majesty's Government should still keep itself entirely free to act in reference to this matter as it may seem to it right if vessels should be built here for Chile, and if a request should be made hereafter that such vessels may be armed or allowed to depart.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

* Señor Blest Gana, June 17; to Señor Blest Gana, June 30 and July 24; Circular of January 22, 1866.

† Señor Blest Gana, July 28, 1868.

China.

No. 31.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received February 11.)

Temple, February 8, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 17th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from the Colonial Office, forwarding an Ordinance of the Hong Kong Government respecting piracy, and to request that we would take this paper into consideration and furnish your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

A former letter from the Colonial Office on the same subject in which Ordinance No. 9 of 1866 was inclosed, was also transmitted for our information.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this case into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we see no objection to the alterations proposed to be made in the Ordinance of 1866, by the new Ordinance now submitted to us.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
C. J. SELWYN.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 32.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received March 16.)

Temple, March 16, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 10th of February, 1868, stating that, with reference to the Law Officers' Report of the 15th of January, 1867, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter which your Lordship had received from the Colonial Office, inclosing a despatch which the Duke of Buckingham and Chandos had received from the Governor of Hong Kong, in regard to the question of the extent of British jurisdiction in the waters adjacent to that Colony.

Mr. Hammond was also pleased to say that we should perceive that the Duke of Buckingham considers that after the opinion expressed in the above-mentioned Report of the Law Officers it is not necessary to discuss this question any further.

That the question, however, still remains as to the jurisdiction over Lamma Island, and considering the vicinity of that island to Hong Kong, and its comparative size, which renders it an easy and secure asylum for thieves and persons of lawless character, his Grace thinks it desirable that some step should be taken to give to the Government of Hong Kong all the legal jurisdiction over the island which Her Majesty is competent to give.

Mr. Hammond was further pleased to state that we should perceive that the Duke of Buckingham has accordingly caused a Draft Order in Council to be prepared for the above purpose, and which, if approved by your Lordship, his Grace proposes to have passed.

Mr. Hammond was therefore to request that we would take these papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer which your Lordship should return to the Colonial Office in regard to the proposed Order in Council.

For our convenience Mr. Hammond was pleased to transmit to us the previous correspondence which has passed on the question of British jurisdiction in Hong Kong waters.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That it appears to us that, with the slight alterations we have made, the Draft

1868

Order in Council, settled by us, and to which we have attached our initials, will effect what we understand to be the desired object.

The first alteration is only to make the recital of the Order of 9th March, 1865, more correct. The other alteration in the Order is made for the purpose of avoiding any reference to ships or vessels, over offences committed on which, when within territorial waters, there may be now jurisdiction in the Hong Kong Court, which might be interfered with. We have used the word "Colony" in lieu of "Island" in this part of the Order so as to make it consistent with the recital, in which the term Colony is used. We do not understand that it is desired to give jurisdiction over offenders in extra-territorial waters within the six miles, and therefore the words "place or land not being mainland" seem to be most appropriate.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 33.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received April 8.)

My Lord, Temple, April 8, 1868.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 24th February last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me two letters which your Lordship has received from the Secretary of State for the Colonies, inclosing copies of a correspondence which has passed between the Governor of Hong and Her Majesty's Consul at Canton, in regard to the seizure by a Chinese cruizer of a junk outward bound from Hong Kong; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take these papers into consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion thereupon.

I am also honoured with Mr. Hammond's letter of the 31st ultimo, transmitting a copy of a letter from the Board of Trade, giving the views of that Department on the proceedings of the Chinese authorities in capturing a junk outward bound from Hong Kong, for an alleged breach of Customs law.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That it does not exactly appear in what particular waters the Chinese junk was seized by the Chinese Customs cruizer. Sir R. Macdonnell, in his despatch of the 14th November, 1867, states that it was considerably within three miles from the shore of Hong Kong, and in another part of the same despatch he says that the junk was anchored nearer to the Chinese than the English shore. It would appear, therefore, from the comparison of these statements, that the junk must have been anchored somewhere in the narrow sea which separates the Island of Hong Kong from the Chinese mainland, in respect of which the Law Officers have reported to your Lordship, on a previous occasion, that the medium filum aquæ must be taken to be the divisional line between British and Chinese territorial jurisdiction. I consider that any Chinese junk anchored on the Chinese side of the mid-channel would be amenable to Chinese jurisdiction in all matters of Chinese Customs regulations, and that the Governor of Hong Kong could not properly demand that any such junk, seized at such anchorage by the Chinese authorities, should be given up to him on the ground that her seizure was unlawful.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 34.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received April 9.)

My Lord, Temple, April 9, 1868.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 3rd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a Notification which has been received from Her Majesty's Minister in China, and which was issued by him in the course of last year, respecting the penalties to which British subjects would expose themselves by a violation of any of the existing Treaty stipulations between Great Britain and China; and to request that we would take this notification into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That it appears to us that this is not a Regulation which should continue in force, and that Her Majesty should be advised to disapprove of it.

We think that if Regulations are made under Article 85 of the China and Japan Order for the observance of the stipulations of Treaties, they should be framed in such a manner as to indicate clearly what is to be done or avoided, and that the specific penalty to be enforced for the breach of each Regulation should be considered when the Regulations themselves are framed, and should be prescribed by the Regulations. When an offence may be continuing, the Regulation itself should prescribe whether daily fines during the continuance of the offence are or are not to be inflicted. It is not right, we think, that British subjects infringing stipulations, however minute, of numerous Treaties, of the very terms of which they may be ignorant, should be subjected to the extreme penalties mentioned in Article 85, at the discretion of the Consular officers, under a Regulation framed in such general terms as those which are to be found in this Regulation.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 35.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received April 15.)

My Lord, Temple, April 13, 1868.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 13th January, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 6th October, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from the Board of Trade, together with a despatch and its inclosures from Her Majesty's Minister at Peking, relative to the Pilotage Regulations which have recently been issued by the Chinese Government, with the concurrence of the foreign Representatives at Peking; and to request that we would take these papers into consideration, and furnish your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the circumstances under which these Pilotage Regulations were issued are stated by Sir R. Alcock in his despatch of the 6th September, 1867, confirming his statements contained in previous despatches.

They emanated in the first instance from the Chinese Government, were accepted by the Diplomatic authorities of the different nationalities, and were declared binding by the different Governments on their subjects. Sir R. Alcock himself accepted the Regulations, and published them as being urgent, and this publication was approved of by your Lordship in the despatch (of which the draft is sent to us) of the 18th October last. It appears to us that these are Regulations which it was within the scope of Sir R. Alcock's power to publish, and make binding upon British subjects. Upon the Regulations themselves the Law Officers expressed their opinion in October last, pointing out some objections to them, to which upon their face they seemed open. Since then the objection raised by the Shanghae Chamber of Commerce, and the letter of the Insurance Companies, refusing to co-operate with the proposed Board, have been sent home, and the Board of Trade has written an elaborate Report upon the policy of maintaining a system of compulsory pilotage, which, in general, that Board condemns. We need hardly say that opinions differ widely upon the expediency of keeping up compulsory pilotage in this country, but it seems to us beyond our province to discuss this question now.

Sir R. Alcock thinks that Regulations providing for compulsory pilotage, to some extent at all events, are necessary in China; and probably his views upon this subject, in the conflict of opinions, are most worthy of consideration. We would remark that the 15th Rule makes it in terms obligatory on all ships and steamers arriving at or departing from ports at which there are pilots, to employ pilots coming in or going out. This is a Regulation which seems to be strongly objected to, for it is considered that, even if compulsory pilotage be enforced as a general rule, there ought to be numerous exceptions and exemptions in favour of particular classes of vessels and otherwise; and it seems to be contemplated that exemptions shall be made by bye-laws and general rules to supplement the "Chinese Pilotage Regulations," and which may provide for peculiar cases at different ports. No complete Code of bye-laws or rules has, however, been adopted, and it certainly appears to us very doubtful how far bye-laws limiting the express Regulations can properly be made. The 9th of the Regulations, which gives power to make bye-laws and rules necessary for the better ordering of pilotage matters at the different ports, to be drawn up by the harbour-masters, does not, we think, warrant a bye-law wholly inconsistent with the provisions of the 15th Rule.

It does appear to us that, having regard to the objections of the Chambers of Commerce and Insurance Companies, some of which objections appear reasonable, and to the remarks of the Board of Trade on the details of the Rules, it would be advisable, if possible, to make alterations and concessions with a view to meet objections, and to make the Regulations work smoothly, and to the satisfaction of persons engaged in or connected with commerce in China, and when a satisfactory solution of the difficulty has been arrived at, to publish a new Code of Regulations in an improved form. At present the refusal of the Agents of the Insurance Companies to co-operate in any way seems fatal to the due establishment of the Board under Rule III. The policy of allowing the Chinese Government to act as they have done in framing these Regulations, under the circumstances detailed by Sir R. Alcock, a matter which is adverted to and commented upon by the Board of Trade, is a question upon which we think it beyond our province to express an opinion.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 36.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received April 18.)

Temple, April 16, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 17th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the papers as per list inclosed, which relate to the embezzlement of certain funds by Mr. Treasure Jones, an officer of Her Majesty's Consulate at Shanghae. That the legal proceedings which were taken against Mr. Jones did not result in his conviction, and that the Treasury recommend that he should be again put upon his trial.

Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take the papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the course which should be pursued in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we are of opinion, that having regard to all the circumstances disclosed in these papers, Mr. Jones should be again put upon his trial for the offences with which he was charged, and upon the trial for which the jury came to no verdict, on the ground, as there is reason to believe, that one of their number did not think the evidence satisfactory that there was an intention to defraud.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 37.

Law Officers' Report, May 18, 1868.

---

No. 38.

Law Officers' Report, June 8, 1868.

---

No. 39.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received June 8.)

Temple, June 8, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 12th May ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Sir R. Alcock (No. 27), relative to the exercise of judicial functions by junior officers in charge of Consulates or Vice-Consulates in China, during the absence of the Consul or Vice-Consul; and to request that we would inform your Lordship whether, under the Order in Council, a copy of which Mr. Hammond was pleased to annex for our convenience, the locum tenens of a Consulate or Vice-Consulate, whatever his official rank, can exercise judicial functions.

Mr. Hammond was pleased to add, that Her Majesty's Sign Manual would be forthwith sent out to the four Vice-Consuls mentioned in the despatch, who are acting at places where there is no resident Consul.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we are of opinion that the solution of this question depends on the 25th section of the Order in Council, and that the only persons who can exercise the judicial functions therein mentioned are Consuls-General, Consuls, or Vice-Consuls holding a Commission as such from Her Majesty (other than those excepted), or any person acting temporarily as and for a Consul-General, Consul, or Vice-Consul holding Her Majesty's Commission as such, and so acting temporarily with the approval of a Secretary of State, or of Her Majesty's Minister in China or Japan respectively, and that such judicial functions can only be exercised by him in the Court called a Provincial Court held in his district. We are of opinion that a person acting temporarily for a duly commissioned Consul or Vice-Consul in the performance of the duties of his office during his absence could not, without the approval of a Secretary of State or of Her Majesty's Minister in China or Japan, exercise judicial functions, and it would be expedient that such person should be specially authorized to exercise such functions.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 40.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received July 30.)

Temple, July 29, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 9th June ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Sir R. Alcock (No. 69), suggesting certain modifications in the Regulations to be issued with regard to the distinguishing mark to be adopted by British subjects of Chinese origin, and to request that we would take that paper into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion on Sir R. Alcock's suggestions.

The former papers relating to the subject were inclosed for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the matter into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That the despatch of Sir R. Alcock gives reasons which seem to us to be practically conclusive against a regulation enjoining the cropping of the queue, or allowing the hair to grow long in front, as a distinguishing mark of British subjects of Chinese origin.

But the words proposed to be used in the notification and which are inserted in red ink in the draft sent to us, viz., "some form or adaptation of European costume, that shall suffice to distinguish them readily from the native population," appear to us to be somewhat vague; and we would suggest that if the Notification were to prescribe that the persons in question "shall discard the Chinese costume, and adopt some other dress or costume whereby they may readily be distinguished from the native population," it would probably better meet the cases to be provided for.

1868

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 41.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received August 1.)

Temple, July 30, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 25th ultimo, stating that with reference to our Report of the 8th February last, he was directed to transmit to us a letter from the Colonial Office, forwarding a despatch from the Governor of Hong Kong, in which he states his intention to introduce an Ordinance empowering the Colonial authorities to co-operate in the measures which the Chinese Government have recently adopted for the suppression of piracy; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take this paper into consideration, and furnish your Lordship with our opinion of the course which the Governor proposes to pursue.

The previous papers were inclosed for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we can only remark generally upon the despatch of the Governor of Hong Kong, that it is probably within his power to introduce an Ordinance having for its purpose to enforce by penalties laws which will, to use the Governor's words, "enable the Government to keep abreast of the Chinese authorities in the movement which they are about to initiate;" but, without knowing more specifically the nature of the proposed Ordinance, we can make no further remark at present on the Governor's communication.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 42.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received August 8.)

Temple, August 7, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 31st July ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to inclose a draft of an agreement which it is proposed to make with a member of the Metropolitan Police Force, who has been selected to proceed to Peking, to form part of the escort to Her Majesty's Legation; and to request that we would take this draft of agreement into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether it is right and proper to be executed.

Copies of the agreements concluded with the men of the Peking and Japan Legation escorts, which formed the subject of the Law Officers' Reports of the 25th January, 1864, and the 31st of January, 1867, were also inclosed, as well as the Order in Council of March 1865.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we see no objection to the proposed agreement with Mr. Herring.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 43.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received August 8.)

Temple, August 7, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 8th July ultimo, stating that with reference to our Report of the 8th June he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister in China (No. 82), inclosing a Notification, which, after reference to Sir Edmund Hornby, he had forwarded to certain Consular Officers in China, authorizing them to exercise judicial functions pending the arrival of the Commissions for which application had been made; and he was to request that we would take these papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion thereupon; and he was to add that the Commissions applied for by Sir Rutherford Alcock for the Consular Officers named in his despatch have already been forwarded to him.

For our convenience the previous correspondence on this subject was therewith transmitted.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we understand the facts of this case to be, that there was no Consul-General, Consul, or Vice-Consul, holding a commission as such from Her Majesty, who in his Consular district held a Court styled Her Britannic Majesty's Court at (for instance), Whampoa or Taku. If this be so, we do not think that a person acting temporarily for a Consul, &c., so commissioned, could hold any other Court than that held by such Consul; and that such person could not, therefore, hold or form a Court styled Her Britannic Majesty's Court at, for instance, Whampoa, except under a commission from Her Majesty.

In this view the temporary appointments made with the approval of Her Majesty's Minister in China, to hold a new Provincial Court, or, as Sir E. Hornby expresses it, creating a Vice-Consular Court, are in our opinion invalid.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 44.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received August 18.)

Temple, August 18, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 25th June last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Consul at Canton, dated the 4th April last, and a letter from the Colonial Office, dated the 22nd June, relative to the proceedings of two Chinese Customs cruizers in the Hong Kong waters; and to request that we would take these papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the course that should be pursued with reference to that affair.

We are also favoured with a further letter from Mr. Hammond of the 14th August instant, stating that with reference to his letter of the 25th June, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit a despatch on the subject from Sir Rutherford Alcock (No. 111), and a letter from the Colonial Office dated the 13th instant.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That so far as any legal question is involved in this case, we have no difficulty in stating that a breach of international law was committed by the armed Chinese Customs cruizers. For this we think that Her Majesty's Government are entitled to ask for reparation, as well as for a full recognition of and expression of regret for the wrong that has been done.

Whether as a question of expediency and policy your Lordship will rest contented with what has been done by the Viceroy, or whether further steps shall be taken as suggested by the Governor of Hong Kong and Sir R. Alcock, with whose views his Grace the Secretary of State for the Colonies to a considerable extent concurs, it is, we conceive, entirely beyond our province to advise.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.
TRAVERS TWISS.

1868

No. 45.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received August 28.)

My Lord, Temple, August 27, 1867.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 18th August instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Sir Rutherford Alcock (No. 138), forwarding a copy of a Notification issued by him of the closing of the Straw Shoe Channel of the Yang-tze River to steamers; and to request that we would take this paper into our consideration, and furnish your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the Regulation appears to be made under the power conferred by the 85th section of the Order in Council relating to China, dated the 9th March, 1866, and so far as it imposes a penalty for the infraction of the prohibition not exceeding 500 dollars (section 86), it appears to us to be properly made.

But the latter part of the regulation, or second regulation, is, as we think, not warranted by the terms of the Order; for, in addition to the fine of 100 taels, "payment of full compensation for all injury done to native shipping" is to be made.

This, it is to be observed, is a penalty imposed, even in cases where the collision may be caused wholly by the fault of the native vessel (except so far as the British steamer may be in fault for being in the channel at all), and it is obvious that the "full compensation" may amount to considerably more than 500 dollars.

If, then, we are right in assuming that this is a Regulation professedly made under the section referred to of the Order in Council, we think that Her Majesty's disapproval of this last Regulation should be notified to Her Majesty's Minister in China.

There appear to us to be other objections to this Regulation, as it does not state who is to pay the compensation, whether captain, owner, or charterer of the vessel, nor to whom it is to be paid. These, however, are objections which could be remedied, and are, therefore, not so important as that which we have before pointed out.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 46.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received September 5.)

My Lord, Temple, August 28, 1868.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 25th instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 30th July, he was directed to transmit to us a letter from the Colonial Office forwarding an Ordinance issued by the Governor of Hong Kong to facilitate co-operation with the Chinese authorities in the suppression of piracy; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take these papers into consideration, and furnish your Lordship with a Report thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, though the Ordinance is, as the Governor states, based on a policy entirely exceptional and experimental, it seems probable that it is justified by the circumstances which have induced the Legislative Council to pass it as a temporary measure. The power vested in the Governor of framing his Orders in Council will, of course, be exercised with great care; and we would suggest that the operation of the Orders, as far as Chinese vessels are concerned, should be confined to such vessels as may come within British waters, carrying munitions of war or stinkpots, in contravention of Chinese laws and regulations, and that Orders framed by the Governor should not come into operation until a certain time to be named in such Order, so that masters of vessels coming within British waters may have the opportunity of knowing what Orders affecting them are in force, and what penalties they incur if they infringe such orders.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 47.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received September 5.)

My Lord, Temple, August 28, 1868.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 12th August instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Sir Edward Hornby, Chief Judge of the Supreme Court of China and Japan (No. 20), forwarding a correspondence with the Chaplain of Her Majesty's Legation at Yokohama relative to the solemnization of marriages under the Consular Marriage Act; and to request that we would take the papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we think that, under the provisions of the 4th Geo. IV, cap. 91, the presence of Her Majesty's Minister is not required to give validity to a marriage solemnized by a Minister of the Church in the chapel or house of the Ambassador or Minister; and that such marriage would be valid even though the Ambassador or Minister were temporarily absent.

With regard to the provisions of the Consular Marriage Act, we think that a person coming from England is required to complete the statutory residence before a marriage under the provisions of that Act ought to be solemnized. It is true that, under section 13, the absence of proper residence could not be proved in order to invalidate such a marriage, but the provisions as to residence ought nevertheless to be observed.

We think that a Minister of the Church of England would not be justified in marrying any British subject except according to the provisions of the above statutes.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 48.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received September 8.)

My Lord, Temple, August 31, 1868.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 18th instant, stating that with reference to our Report of the 9th April, recommending that a Notification issued by Sir R. Alcock respecting the penalties to which British subjects would be liable for breaches of the Treaty stipulations between Great Britain and China should be rescinded, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Sir Edmund Hornby, Chief Judge of the Supreme Court for China and Japan, on the subject; and Mr. Hammond was to request that we would take this paper into consideration and furnish your Lordship with a Report thereupon. A copy of the Notification issued by Sir R. Alcock was also inclosed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That it appears from Sir E. Hornby's letter that he doubted whether the Regulation as to penalties, which has been disapproved by Her Majesty, would receive her approval. That Regulation has now been rescinded, and Sir E. Hornby points out difficulties which he thinks will attend the making of regulations and attaching specific penalties for the infringement of them, and the making of regulations providing for enforcement of penalties for breaches of regulations which have already been passed, but for the breach of which no penalties have been provided. The objection to a general regulation as to penalties has already been pointed out by us in our former Report, and we cannot suggest any general regulation which it would be just and proper to enact. Numerous regulations are, as we understand, in force relating to pilotage and other matters, the breach of which, or of some of which, it is thought desirable to punish by penalty; but we think it is not right that the whole discretion as to the extent or amount of penalty should be vested in the Consular Officer, to whom would be left also the power to determine whether an additional penalty of 25 dollars a-day is, or is not, to be imposed. When Treaties themselves prescribe penalties for their violation, the cases fall within the 84th section, and no further regulation is required. In other cases it appears to us that if penalties are to be imposed, Her Majesty's Minister in China should exercise a judgment as to the proper penalty, within limits, and should not leave it to the discretion of a Consular Officer to punish a trivial breach of Regulations or Treaty by the maximum penalty allowed by Article 86. Probably, on further consideration, Her Majesty's Minister and Sir E. Hornby may find the difficulty of making the necessary regulations less than the latter anticipates.

1868

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 49.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received September 8.)

My Lord, Temple, September 7, 1868.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 28th February last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister in China (No. 176), forwarding copies of a correspondence which he had held with the Chief Judge of the Supreme Court at Shanghae, and with the Consul at Ningpo, on the subject of the issue by the Chief Superintendent of Trade of sailing letters to unregistered vessels owned by British subjects.

That the accompanying Memoranda, which had been prepared in the Foreign Office, would show us under what circumstances the practice of issuing such letters was adopted; and the correspondence which is summarized in those Memoranda was annexed for our consideration.

Mr. Hammond was also pleased to request that we would take the whole subject into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the instructions that should be given to Sir Rutherford Alcock in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the subject into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That the difficulties which have suggested themselves to Sir Rutherford Alcock and Sir Edmund Hornby with reference to sailing letters appear to be twofold: first, as to whether sailing letters can be legally issued, and next whether, if they can be issued, the Superintendent of Trade, not being the Governor, can issue them.

With regard to the first point, we do not feel pressed by the difficulty raised by Sir Edmund Hornby. It appears to us that a "sailing letter" issued in the form sent to us (whatever may be its legal operation) does not in any way represent that the vessel is a British vessel within the "Merchant Shipping Act," or entitled to any privileges which municipal law accords to a British vessel registered according to that Act. In fact, the terms of the sailing letter are at variance with the idea that the vessel has any such privileges, and in effect it amounts only to a certificate; that the vessel named in it is the property of a British subject, and should be treated as British-owned, and be entitled to British protection to the extent pointed out by the sailing letter.

We think also that the Superintendent of Trade may, if he has the authority of the Home Government to do so as part of his duty, issue these sailing letters. In practice they seem to have been very useful, and we think that under the circumstances there is no sufficient reason for discontinuing their issue, care being taken that they are only given to British owners.

If your Lordship should think right to act upon the view above expressed by us, your Lordship will probably think it inexpedient to give any orders, at all events at present, as to the registry of vessels by the Consuls, as suggested by Sir R. Alcock.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 50.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received September 8.)

My Lord, Temple, September 7, 1868.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 13th August ultimo, stating that with reference to our Report of the 29th November last on the question of the rendition to the Governor of Macao of Portuguese deserters escaping to Hong Kong, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from the Colonial Office, forwarding a despatch from the Governor of Hong Kong on the subject; and to request that we would take these papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

The former correspondence was inclosed for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we observe that his Grace the Duke of Buckingham agrees with Sir R. Macdonnell that an Ordinance should be passed enabling the Governor of Hong Kong to arrest and deliver over to the Portuguese Government persons charged with heinous crimes, not of a political character (such persons not being deserters), to come into operation on the passing of an Ordinance of reciprocal intent by the Government of Macao.

It may be deserving of consideration whether it would not be right that Her Majesty's Government should be assured that it is within the competency of the Macao Government to pass such an Ordinance, or whether the Portuguese Government should pass it, in order that it may have binding effect.

It will be necessary, at all events, that the details of each Ordinance should be settled before the Hong Kong Legislature passes the proposed Ordinance, for the scheme for the rendition of criminals by the Macao authorities should be substantially co-extensive with that which is to be made by the Hong Kong authorities, and the crimes for which extradition is to be provided should be settled beforehand.

It will, we think, be very expedient that the draft of the proposed Ordinance should be submitted to the Home Government for consideration before it is passed.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 51.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received September 14.)

My Lord, Temple, September 12, 1868.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 8th instant, stating that with reference to our Report of the 28th ultimo, he was directed to transmit to us the papers noted in the margin,* relating to the rendition to the Chinese Government of pirates captured by Her Majesty's cruizers; and Mr. Egerton was to request that we would take these papers into consideration, and furnish your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That it appears to us, that under the circumstances brought to our attention, your Lordship may properly express concurrence in the instructions which his Grace the Duke of Buckingham and Chandos proposes to give to Sir R. Macdonnell, as stated in Mr. Elliot's letter of the 20th ultimo.

I have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

* Sir R. Alcock, No. 122; Colonial Office, August 28; Admiralty, September 3, 1868.

1868

No. 52.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received October 23.)

Temple, October 23, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 29th July, stating that he was directed to transmit to us a despatch from Sir Edmund Hornby (No. 18), inclosing a correspondence between himself and Her Majesty's Consul at Shanghae, in regard to the means to be adopted for legalizing the formation of Joint Stock Companies in China and Japan; and Mr. Egerton was pleased to request that we would take these papers into consideration, and furnish your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That in our opinion the Joint Stock Companies Acts cannot be effectually made applicable to Companies and Associations formed in China, Japan, or elsewhere, where Her Majesty has jurisdiction by Treaty or sufferance only, and not territorial dominion.

It is true that by an Order in Council, carefully embodying such parts of the Companies Acts as might be thought expedient, a law might probably be framed which would be binding on British subjects in countries where Her Majesty had jurisdiction by Treaty, &c., only; but, as it appears to us, such a law would not be binding on foreigners dealing with a Company formed under such a law, whether such foreigners were natives of the country in which jurisdiction is conferred upon Her Majesty, or subjects of other foreign countries.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
RICHARD BAGGALLAY.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 53.

Law Officers' Report, October 31, 1868.

---

No. 54.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received November 4.)

Temple, October 31, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Murray's letter of the 15th of September last, stating that our Report of the 12th instant, on the question of the rendition of Chinese pirates captured by British cruizers had been received, but that he was directed by your Lordship to refer the matter again to us, and to point out to us that we had not stated our opinion as to the Admiralty letter of the 3rd instant, which was inclosed in his letter of the 8th instant to us. That your Lordship would wish to have our Report upon it, and especially on the suggestion of the Lords of the Admiralty that all prisoners taken by British cruizers, wherever captured, should be taken to Hong Kong,—a suggestion which should be considered in connection with the proposed instructions to the Governor of Hong Kong for trying in that Colony, and by English law, all Chinese pirates captured by British cruizers, and brought to Hong Kong.

The papers inclosed in Mr. Murray's letter of the 8th September were therewith returned.

We were also honoured with a further letter from Mr. Murray of the 17th of September last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a copy of a Supplementary Treaty between Her Majesty and the Emperor of China, signed 8th October, 1843.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we are unable to find any Article of the General Regulations annexed to the Treaty of 1843, relating in terms to the surrender or rendition of Chinese subjects captured by Her Majesty's cruizers within Chinese jurisdiction. Possibly the general words to be found in Article 13 of "Regulations," as explained by "Correspondence which took place at Nanking after the concluding of the Peace," are referred to; and we learn, from the letter from the Secretary of the Admiralty of the 18th January, 1867, that the Law Officers in 1855 reported, that by an Article of the General Regulations annexed to the Treaty of 1843, "it was necessary that Chinese subjects committing piracy within Chinese jurisdiction should be handed over to the Chinese Tribunals; but Chinese or other persons committing piracy on the high seas, or within British jurisdiction, should be tried by a competent British Court." But it must be remembered that since 1855 the Supplemental Treaty of Hoonum Chae, of 8th October, 1843, (6 Hertslet, 262), and the General Regulations before referred to, were repealed and abrogated by the Treaty of Tien-tsin of 26th June, 1858 (11 Hertslet, 86), ratified in October 1860.

It certainly appears to us that whatever may have been the construction of the earlier Treaty and Regulations as to the proper place for trial of Chinese pirates captured in Chinese waters, the language of the new Treaty does not require that Chinese subjects captured as pirates in Chinese waters by British cruizers shall be surrendered up, in order that they may be tried by the Chinese Courts. These offenders would, primâ facie, be justiciable as pirates in any competent Court, and might therefore be tried at Hong Kong in the competent Court there; and we think we were right in advising your Lordship, under these circumstances, that the draft despatch of his Grace the Secretary of State for the Colonies might properly be approved.

With regard to the suggestion of the Lords of the Admiralty as to the assistance which the Chinese ought to afford in the trial and production of evidence, and in taking charge of prisoners before trial, we think that Her Majesty's Minister at Peking might be instructed to ascertain if there would be any disposition on the part of the Chinese Government so far to co-operate with Her Majesty's Government, thus giving effect to the terms of Article LIII of the Tien-tsin Treaty. With regard to the further suggestion as to the Chinese authorities carrying out sentences of imprisonment, or death, awarded by the Colonial Tribunals, we consider that the execution of any such sentences ought not to be delegated to Chinese authorities, even if they were disposed to undertake such office.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
RICHARD BAGGALLAY.
TRAVERS TWISS.

No. 55.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received December 9.)

My Lord, Temple, December 8, 1868.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 10th day of July last, stating that with reference to the Reports of the Law Officers of the 16th April and 12th June, 1867, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch with its inclosures from Her Majesty's Minister in China, in regard to the question of the Regulations proposed to be established for the government of the French Settlement at Shanghae; and Mr. Hammond was also pleased to transmit to us the former correspondence upon the same subject, as marked in the margin,* and to request that we would take these papers into our consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the course which should be pursued in the matter as it stands.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the amended Regulation for the administration of the French Concession at Shanghae, which is approved of by Her Majesty's Minister at Peking, may in our opinion be properly assented to; but inasmuch as the approval of it by the Prussian Consul-General has been made subject to the acceptance of it by his Government at home, and the proposed Land Regulations for the Settlement on the northern bank of the Yang-King-Pau River do not appear to have been as yet approved by the respective Governments of Prussia and the United States, it will be proper for Her Majesty's Minister at Peking to refrain from taking any step to give the amended Regulation the obligatory force of Regulations under Her Majesty's Order in Council for China and Japan, until the Prussian Government has accepted it, and the proposed Land Regulations for the Settlement on the northern bank of the Yang-King-Pau have been approved by the respective Governments of Prussia and the United States, and also accepted on the part of the Government of France, so as to allow of reciprocity as regards the two Settlements.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
RICHARD BAGGALLAY.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

* Two volumes; Mr. Adams, April 15; to Earl Cowley, No. 156, April 22; to Sir R. Alcock, No. 67, April 22; to Sir F. Bruce, No. 92, April 2; Earl Cowley, No. 336, May 24; to Sir R. Alcock, No. 103, June 14; to Earl Cowley, No. 333, June 14; Earl Cowley, No. 391, June 12; Sir F. Bruce, No. 154, June 11, 1867; Mr. Fane, No. 394, July 29; Sir R. Alcock, No. 37, March 7; to Sir R. Alcock, No. 75, May 15, 1868.

Colombia, United States of.

No. 56.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received January 9.)

Temple, January 9, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 7th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me a letter and its inclosures from Mr. McKenna, stating the circumstances under which he has been induced to make a loan of 20,000*l.* to the United States of Columbia, and the manner in which the Government of that country appear to have failed to fulfil their engagements towards Mr. McKenna; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take these papers into consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion thereupon.

Two despatches from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Bogotá, on the subject of Mr. McKenna's negotiations with the Columbian Government, were also inclosed for my information.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That it appears from the letter of Mr. Consul Stacey, addressed to Mr. McKenna, and forwarded to your Lordship in Mr. McKenna's letter, that the question of the payment of the bills drawn by Mr. McKenna depend upon a decision requested from the Supreme Court at Bogotá, to which it has been referred. Your Lordship cannot properly entertain the request of Mr. McKenna that you would be pleased to instruct Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Bogotá to support Mr. McKenna's agent in obtaining a settlement of his claim, until the result of the decision of the Supreme Court has been communicated to your Lordship. There can, however, be no objection to your Lordship instructing Mr. Bunch to extend, meanwhile, to Mr. McKenna's agent the same good offices and protection which he afforded to Mr. McKenna during his residence at Bogotá.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 57.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received April 6.)

Temple, April 4, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 31st ultimo, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Bogotá, on the subject of a claim put forward by Messrs. Stiebel Brothers, of London, against the Government of Columbia, on account of the appropriation by the authorities of the State of Antiogina, of a quantity of lead which Messrs. Stiebel had sent there for mining purposes; and to request that I would take the case into consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion whether the circumstances of it are such as to call for the intervention of Her Majesty's Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the circumstances of this case will justify your Lordship in directing Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Bogotá to press upon the attention of the Government of Colombia the propriety of making compensation to Messrs. Stiebel Brothers for the loss of their property by its seizure for the public service of the State of Antiogina.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

1868

No. 58.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received July 7.)

My Lord, Temple, July 7, 1868.

I AM honcured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 2nd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me therewith, a despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Bogotá, submitting the claim of Mr. Robert A. Joy upon the Colombian Government, on account of the seizure by one of their authorities of a quantity of salt belonging to him; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take this case into my consideration, and favour your Lordship with my opinion thereupon, and as to any steps which Her Majesty's Government should take with regard to it.

In obedience to your Lordships commands I have taken this case into my consideration, and have the honour to report—

That I consider the Government of the Union is responsible to foreign Powers for any illegal acts of the Judge of a State Court, which have been pronounced criminal and fraudulent by a Superior Court of the same State, and that the circumstance of the Judge having been set at liberty under the terms of a general amnesty in 1860, does not affect in any way the claim of Mr. Joy for indemnification from the Federal Government for the illegal act of the Judge.

I infer from Mr. Bunch's despatch that there was no appeal open to Mr. Joy to the Supreme Court of the Union from the decision of the Judge of the State Court of Carthagena, but the absence of such right of appeal will not relieve the Federal Government from responsibility towards a foreign Power, whose subject has been wronged by an iniquitous sentence of that Court.

Assuming, therefore, that Mr. Bunch has formed a correct judgment, from the voluminous papers which he says he has carefully examined, that the behaviour of Mr. Judge Salazar is entirely without defence, I think your Lordship may authorize him to bring before the Federal Government the claim of Mr. Joy for indemnification.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 59.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received December 29.)

My Lord, Temple, December 28, 1868.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 30th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the accompanying despatch and its inclosures from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Bogotá, relative to a claim put forward by Mr. Percy Brandon, the agent in that city of Messrs. Fuihling and Geschen of London, against the Colombian Government, on account of the detention, in September 1860, of a trading-steamer belonging to those gentlemen by the authorities at Conejo; and to request that I would take the same into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That under the circumstances of this case, as explained in the despatch of Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires, your Lordship will not be justified in claiming from the Government of Colombia any compensation for the owners of the steamer "Patrono" on account of its detention by the authorities at Conejo, which appears to have been a necessity of war.

The statement in Mr. E. Brandon's letter of 12th October, 1868, to Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires, that the original detention of the steamer was "by order of the State Government, and not by the general one of the country," is in direct contradiction to the declaration of the master of the steamer made before the British Vice-Consul at Barranquilla the day after his arrival at that port, on which day (22nd December, 1860), he noted his protest, and explicitly declared therein that the steamer had been detained "by order of the General Government of New Granada."

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

France.

No. 60.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received January 13.)

Temple, January 11, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Murray's letter of the 4th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying correspondence with Messrs. Ingledew and Juce, attorneys, of Cardiff,* who complain that the British Vice-Consul at Caen had declined to comply with their request to serve a notice of action upon a person resident in that place. The notice in question was also inclosed; and Mr. Murray was pleased to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion whether it is optional or whether it is the proper duty of a Consular officer to comply with such a request.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we are of opinion that it is not the proper duty of a Consular officer to comply with such a request as that contained in Messrs. Ingledew and Juce's letter. The gentleman who acts as Vice-Consul might, if he thought proper, undertake the duty of finding a person to serve such a notice as that which was sent to the Vice-Consul at Caen. The complaint, however, of Messrs. Ingledew and Juce seems the more unfounded, as Mr. Inglis expressly states "that he knows of no one who would undertake to serve the writ in question;" and we presume that Messrs. Ingledew and Juce hardly contemplated that the Vice-Consul would take upon himself the duty of process-server.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
C. J. SELWYN.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 61.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received July 4.)

Temple, July 4, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 24th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying Memorial from Madame Offermann representing the circumstances under which her niece, Mrs. Hayward, was found a lunatic by a judgment of the Commissioners of Lunacy, consequent upon proceedings instituted by her husband.

That Mrs. Hayward, it apears, has effected her escape from the private asylum in which she had been placed in this country, and is now under the protection of Madame Offermann, in Paris, who requests the intervention of the Secretary of State of the Foreign Department, in order to obtain for Mrs. Hayward's solicitors in Paris, facilities for getting the lunacy superseded by means of a medical examination in Paris as to the real state of Mrs. Hayward's mind.

Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take this case into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer which should be returned to Madame Offermann's application.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this case into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That an application is made to your Lordship in this case that you would intervene with the French authorities in order that they may direct a judicial inquiry to be instituted before a French tribunal, upon a question which has been properly raised in this country before the Lords Justices of Appeal for their decision, that question being whether a Commission of Lunacy which was issued by the Court of Chancery in 1863 against Mrs. Hayward, the niece of Madame Offermann, shall be superseded.

---

* Messrs. Ingledew and Juce, December 27; to Messrs. Ingledew and Juce, December 31, 1867; Messrs. Ingledew and Juce, January 2, 1868.

1868

Your Lordship's attention has been invited by Madame Offermann to the case of Mr. Dyce Sombre as a somewhat similar case, but no real analogy exists between the two cases. In the case of Mr. Dyce Sombre, the British Ambassador had applied to the French authorities for the extradition of Mr. Dyce Sombre, as a British subject who had been found lunatic by an English Court, and had escaped to France; and as that demand was not within the provisions of any Treaty, and compliance with it was purely a matter of comity, the French authorities thought it right to direct a medical examination to be made into the mental condition of Mr. Dyce Sombre before the Prefect of Police in Paris, and as the medical men made a report in favour of his sanity, declined to surrender him. It appears from Madame Offermann's statement, that her niece has undergone a medical examination in Paris, which establishes her sanity, and that the affidavits of her medical men have been brought before the Court of Chancery with a view to obtain a supersedeas of the lunacy; but by the practice of that Court a person in contempt (as Mrs. Hayward is) cannot be heard on the petition for a supersedeas until she has come within the jurisdiction and purged the contempt.

It appears that Mrs. Hayward's Counsel has now suggested that some means should be taken to bring about a judicial inquiry in France into the state of mind of Mrs. Hayward, and to obtain a Judicial Decree as to her sanity, so that an application may be made to the Court of Chancery to give effect to the French judgment by way of exequatur, and pronounce her sane without requiring her personal attendance in England. But it is not shown that any judicial inquiry could be taken in France upon which a decree of sanity could be pronounced, or that such decree, if pronounced, would induced the Court of Chancery to supersede the lunacy without requiring Mrs. Hayward's personal attendance in England, and we think that Madame Offermann should be informed that, unless your Lordship can be satisfied that such a proceeding can be had in France, and that such a decree would have the supposed effect in the Court of Chancery, it would be useless to ask the French Government to interfere.

This judicial proceeding is what Madame Offermann seems to desire, though the prayer of her Memorial only asks that your Lordship will move the French authorities, in order to obtain from them the proper instructions, to have Mrs. Hayward medically examined so that her mental state may be clearly ascertained. This, it is said, has already been done, and no instructions for such a purpose are needed.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 62.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received July 24.)

Temple, July 24, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Murray's letter of the 22nd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the accompanying correspondence respecting the case of a steamer named the "Boulogne," registered as a British ship by her owner M. Sauceau, a naturalized British subject, and subsequently registered by him as a French ship.

That I should perceive from the inclosed papers the circumstances under which the British mortgagees upon the ship sought to establish in France her nationality as a British vessel, and the prompt steps taken by the French authorities to give effect to their wishes, which were frustrated by the accident of the "Boulogne" breaking down on her voyage from Rouen to Bordeaux, and being compelled to put into Falmouth, where she was handed over to the British Admiralty Court by Mr. Bewley, the representative of the mortgagees, who was on board. That the French authorities on receiving this information have expressed their desire for the return of the French certificate and the permit of the French Custom-house at Bordeaux; and Mr. Murray was pleased to request that I would favour your Lordship, at my earliest convenience. with my opinion whether the wishes of the French Government should be complied with, and, if so, how this is to be done.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That, on inquiry at the Registry of the High Court of Admiralty, it appears that the steamer "Boulogne" has been arrested in a cause of mortgage at the suit of Messrs. Walpole, Webb, and Bewley, of Dublin, shipbuilders. The mortgage is in the form prescribed by the "Merchant Shipping Act," and describes the vessel as having been built at Dublin in 1867, Dublin being also her port of registry. The mortgage was registered at the Custom-house, Dublin, on the 3rd February, 1868, and the vessel has been arrested as a British ship.

The suit was instituted on the 16th instant, and no appearance on the part of M. Sauceau, or any one else, has at present been entered in the registry, but the owner is within time to appear.

The interests of the mortgagees, as the case at present stands, are thus perfectly safe in the hands of the Court, and they will require no further assistance from your Lordship.

With regard to the request of the French authorities that the French certificate and the permit of the French Custom-house should be at once returned to them, I do not think that your Lordship has the power at present to comply with that request. It does not appear from the letter of the Director of Customs at Bordeaux (No. 13 in Lord Lyons' No. 230, Commercial) under what formalities, and upon the production of what papers the steamer was registered as a French vessel. It is not improbable that M. Sauceau may have entertained the idea of sailing his vessel under either an English or French character, according as he might charter her for English or French purposes, notwithstanding the provisions of 17 and 18 Vict., cap. 104, sec. 102, which enacts that, if the master or owner of a British ship carries, or permits to be carried any papers or documents with intent to conceal her British character from any person entitled by British law to inquire into the same, or to assume a foreign character, such ship shall be forfeited to the Crown, and the master, if privy to the commission of the offence, shall be guilty of a misdemeanour.

Under the circumstances of the case, which is clearly tainted with fraud, and would be a highly mischievous precedent if not followed by summary punishment, I think it will be proper for your Lordship to communicate with the officers of Her Majesty's Customs, and to request them to institute the necessary inquiries under 17 and 18 Vict., cap. 104, sec. 102, with a view to ascertain whether there has not been an attempt to conceal the British character of the steamer contrary to the statute.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS SWISS.

---

No. 63.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received July 30.)

Temple, July 29, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 18th instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 4th instant, on the subject of Madame Offermann's application in the matter of Mrs. Hayward's lunacy, the purport of which has been communicated to Madame Offermann, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter from M. Mourilyan, who appears to be acting for Madame Offermann in this case, stating that, whilst he cannot pretend to assert that any judicial inquiry could be taken in France, upon which a judgment of sanity would be pronounced, that would induce the Court of Chancery to supersede the lunacy, without requiring Mrs. Hayward's personal attendance in England, if such attendance was insisted on by the adverse party, his client is still desirous of your Lordship's assistance with a view to obtain such an inquiry by competent French authorities into the state of Mrs. Hayward's mind as might afford sufficient ground (according to the applicant's view of the case) for an appeal to the Court of Chancery for a safe-conduct to this country (such as was granted, though under different circumstances, in Mr. Dyce Sombre's case) in order to enable Mrs. Hayward to establish her sanity; Mr. Egerton was pleased to request that we would take this case again into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to what assistance, if any, should be afforded by Her Majesty's Government to Madame Offermann in this matter. The previous papers were therewith annexed for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers again into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That M. Mourilyan's letter puts this case before your Lordship in an entirely new light. It appears, or may be gathered from his statement, that the Lords Justices on the hearing of Mrs. Hayward's case, although the certificates or opinions of the medical men in France were before the Court testifying to the sanity of Mrs. Hayward, refused to give any direction that the lady might come within the jurisdiction without being interfered with by her husband or the Committee,—a direction which the Court had, of course, adequate jurisdiction to give. Mrs. Hayward, therefore, having had "safe-conduct" refused by the Court, declined to come to England and assert her sanity, dreading, as it is said, the malice of her husband, and "having too vivid a recollection of the horrors of the asylum from which she escaped," to return to England without the protection of a "safe-conduct," which would enable her, if found to be insane by the English Tribunal, to escape from the country, and live out of the jurisdiction. Mrs. Hayward's case, M. Mourilyan admits, is not in all points analogous to that of Mr. Dyce Sombre. In point of fact, the cases are widely dissimilar. We believe that we are right in stating that in that case Her Majesty's Minister at Paris, at the instance of one of the Committees of the lunatic, requested the surrender of Mr. Dyce Sombre's person into custody; and it was not upon the request of Her Majesty's Government, but mero motu suo, that the French authorities instituted a medical inquiry, the result of which being favourable to the alleged lunatic, the Lord Chancellor permitted him to come within the jurisdiction of the Court, under an order that if he did so, he should not be molested by the Committee, even though the Court held that his sanity was not established.

1868

The marked difference between the case of Mrs. Hayward and that of Mr. Dyce Sombre is therefore obvious. It appears to us that this is a case in which your Lordship cannot interfere as prayed, unless at least it can be shown by Mrs. Hayward's legal advisers that a favourable certificate of medical men in France given in some proceedings taken at the instance of the French Government would, in her case, probably induce the Lord Justices to give her a "safe-conduct," and that the French Government would, under such circumstances, direct an inquiry of a quasi-judicial character by such medical men.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 64.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received August 14.)

Temple, August 13, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of this day's date, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch and its inclosures from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris, relating to the matter of Mrs. Hayward's lunacy; and to request that we would take the papers into consideration, together with those which were referred to us in his letter of the 8th instant.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we had already written our report on the papers forwarded to us yesterday in this case before we had the honour of receiving Mr. Hammond's letter forwarding Lord Lyon's letter and its inclosures.

We would suggest that Lord Lyons should be informed of the correspondence that has already taken place with your Lordship in this matter, and of the opinion expressed by the Law Officers thereon; and that Lord Lyons should be instructed not to interfere in any way except under the direction of Her Majesty's Government.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
W. BALIOL BRETT.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 65.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received August 14.)

Temple, August 13, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 8th instant, stating that upon the receipt of our report of the 29th ultimo, as to the course which should be pursued by Her Majesty's Government in the matter of Mrs. Hayward's lunacy, a communication in accordance therewith was addressed to M. Mourilyan, and that he (Mr. Hammond) was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying reply which had been received from that gentleman, stating the circumstances under which he again asks for your Lordship's assistance, with a view of obtaining an inquiry by competent French authorities into the present state of Mrs. Hayward's mind.

Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would again take this case into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer which should be returned to M. Mourilyan.

The previous papers were annexed therewith for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have again taken this case into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we think that an answer may properly be returned to M. Mourilyan, stating that your Lordship is not averse from making an application to the French Government for the purpose of forwarding Mrs. Hayward's objects, but that before any such application can be properly made, your Lordship must be furnished with some legal opinion entitled to weight, that an official medical inquiry, if instituted in consequence of your Lordship's application, would probably be recognized by the Court of Chancery in England, and acted upon by that Court as a ground for giving Mrs. Hayward the privileges or relief which she is desirous of obtaining. Unless some such opinion is laid before your Lordship, it would, we think, hardly be right to ask to have proceedings instituted in France which would serve no useful purpose whatever in this country.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 66.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received September 15.)

Temple, September 14, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 29th July last, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying papers having reference to the claim of certain British subjects upon the French Government arising out of the recent occupation by the French of certain rivers and districts on the West Coast of Africa.

That the claims in question, which amount to 1,849*l.* 11*s.* 11*d.* are for losses alleged to have been sustained in the Nunez River Territory in consequence of the bombardment by the French of a town in which they were residing for trading purposes; and Mr. Egerton was pleased to request that I would take these claims, the particulars of which will be found in the inclosures accompanying the Colonial Office letters of the 27th of July, 1867, into consideration, and report to your Lordship my opinion whether Her Majesty's Government will be justified in urging their payment by the French Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That it appears from the "information" made by the claimants before the Governor of Sierra Leone on 25th June, 1867, that, on the 16th May, 1867, "Lieutenant Cousien, the French Commandant residing in the town of Bokeh, on the Rio Nunez, without giving previous notice to the claimants, who were engaged in trade there, caused fire to be opened upon the town, whereby they were forced to quit the town in order to the preservation of their lives, leaving all their goods and property in the town; and in attempting to return during the night they were prevented from doing so upon pain of being shot; and that on returning to the town on the following morning they found that their stores had been broken into and various goods as enumerated found missing." It does not, however, appear upon the face of this information that the stores of the claimants had been injured by the fire of the French, or their goods plundered by the French, although I should have been of opinion that if they had been driven out without previous warning by the fire of the French and prevented by them—which I presume is the meaning of this part of the information—from returning to protect their property "on pain of being shot," they would have had a reasonable claim for compensation from the French Government.

But there are notable variations in the second and more extended declaration made by the claimants on 26th June, 1868, before the Acting Police Magistrate of Sierra Leone, which may be worthy of your Lordship's attention. Having stated that the French Commandant, "who was then residing at Bokeh Factory for the protection of French interests, without a word of warning to any of them, and without their having the slightest intimation or means of knowledge that anything unusual was about to take place, about 4 o'clock in the afternoon opened fire with cannon from the French Fort upon the houses contained in the factory," the claimants proceed to say, that "being so alarmed they ran down to the river side and got into their boats and went down the river about half a mile out of sight of the Bokeh Factory, where they passed the night." There is a total silence in this part of their declaration as to their having made any attempt to return during the night, and having been prevented from doing so "on pain of being shot." On the other hand, they go on to enlarge their losses and their danger, saying that "in the morning early they returned to Bokeh Factory to look after their property, and upon their arrival they found that all their stores had been broken into and every article of value had been taken therefrom. That, being dreadfully alarmed and fearful of losing their lives if they continued longer, they left the said Bokeh Factory and returned immediately to Free Town in the settlement of Sierra Leone;" and they claim indemnification not only for the loss of their property, but the value to them of the trade which some of them had enjoyed for a long time.

They have not, however, sent in any money claim on account of the loss of their trade.

Under these circumstances I think it would be advisable, before any demand is made upon the French Government for payment of any money claim, that Lord Lyons should be instructed to lay before the French Minister of Foreign Affairs the substance of the statements made by the claimants. It appears from the correspondence that Lord Lyons has hitherto only communicated in very general terms to the Marquis de Moustier that claims had been advanced by British subjects for losses alleged to have been sustained by them in consequence of the bombardment of a town on the Rio Nunez by the French naval forces, whereas the destruction of the houses at Bokeh seems to have been the work of the guns of a fort on shore. The bombardment may be susceptible of some explanation, but upon the statement of the claimants it would appear to have been an unprovoked act of violence on the part of the naval officer in command of the fort, who may, however, have not been aware that any British interests were imperilled by his fire.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 67.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received December 16.)

Temple, December 16, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 19th of August last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us for our perusal the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris, inclosing a Report of the proceedings in an action which was brought in the "Tribunal de Première Instance de la Seine" by the United States of America against M. Arman and others on account of contracts entered into by the defendants to build ships-of-war for the so-called Confederate Navy.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we have perused the above-mentioned Report, upon which it does not appear to us that any special observations are called for.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
RICHARD BAGGALLAY.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 68.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received December 26.)

Temple, December 23, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 12th December instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith a letter from the Colonial Office inclosing copies of a correspondence received from the Governor of Hong Kong respecting a question which had arisen between him and the French Consul at that port with reference to a riot which had occurred on board the French Messageries steamer "Tigre," as to the right of the Consul to exclusive jurisdiction in dealing with the parties implicated in the disturbance on this, and to the general question whether British authorities can or cannot claim jurisdiction in cases of offences committed on board merchant-vessels at anchor in British waters; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take the correspondence into our consideration, and that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion upon the question at issue.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That upon the general question submitted to us by your Lordship, whether British authorities can or cannot claim jurisdiction in cases of offences committed on board of foreign merchant-vessels at anchor in British waters, we apprehend that there can be no doubt, and that of strict right British authorities may claim such jurisdiction. We think, however, that it may deserve your Lordship's attention that France is not the only maritime Power which, either on independent views of convenience or under Treaty arrangements with other Powers, waives its jurisdiction over foreign merchant-vessels within its ports, in matters which concern the internal order of such vessels, in favour of the respective Consuls, except in cases where persons who do not form part of the officers and crew of such a vessel, take part in creating disorder, or where such disorder tends to disturb the peace of the port.

It is plain that this jurisdiction, if carried to the limits of extreme right and unrestrained in its exercise by considerations of comity or convenience, might become vexatious and irritating to foreign Powers. The appeal of the French Consul for "reciprocity" suggests, as not altogether unworthy of your Lordship's consideration, whether or not it might be desirable to regulate the exercise of this jurisdiction by Conventions such as have been entered into by the United States with most of the maritime Powers?

We have, &c.
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
J. D. COLERIDGE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

Greece.

No. 69.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received April 25.)

Temple, April 24. 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 4th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the accompanying correspondence with Mr. Erskine* respecting the case of an Ionian named Constantine Albano, who has applied to the Greek Government, under the circumstances therein set forth, for the grant of a pension.

That I should perceive from M. Delyanni's note of the 24th ultimo, inclosed in Mr. Erskine's last despatch, that he denies the right of Her Majesty's Government to interfere in such cases on behalf of Ionians who may have recourse to their good offices in seeking to obtain the benefit of the stipulations of the Treaty of the 29th of March, 1864.

* Mr. Erskine, No. 15; to Mr. Erskine, No. 14; Mr. Erskine, No. 44, 1868.

1868

A copy of this Treaty was therewith inclosed; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take these papers into consideration and report to your Lordship my opinion with regard to this matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That the claim of Constantine Albano against the Hellenic Government does not appear to me to rest on grounds which would found a right of intervention on the part of Her Majesty's Government in his behalf, under the provisions of the Treaty of 1865, unless an engagement on the part of the Ionian Government, antecedent to the Treaty, to grant him a pension upon the termination of his official services was constituted by the Ionian Act No. 3 of 1857, to which he refers in his Memorial as one of the Acts in virtue of which his pension has become due to him.

If the Ionian Act above-mentioned has not created any engagement on the part of the Ionian Government to allow Mr. Albano a pension upon the termination of his services, then I think his claim is not within the letter of the Treaty of 1865.

But as the Hellenic Minister for Foreign Affairs, in his letter of $\frac{12}{24}$th March, 1868, states that Mr. Albano's office as Registrar of the Supreme Court of Corfu has been suppressed in consequence of the assimilation of the judicial system of the two countries, I consider that it was within the spirit of the Treaty for Her Majesty's Minister to use his good offices in favour of Mr. Albano, inasmuch as the allowances which ought to be granted to individuals actually in the service of the Ionian Government at the time when the Treaty was concluded, and who would lose their respective employments in consequence of the union of the Ionian Islands to Greece, were thought to be a proper subject for diplomatic negotiation and Treaty settlement between the two Powers.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 70.

Queen's Advocate's Report, June 15, 1868.

---

No. 71.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received August 31.)

Temple, August 29, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 8th instant, stating that, with reference to my predecessor's Report of the 14th of May last year, respecting the case of Mr. Weale, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me, together with the previous papers, a further despatch from Mr. Erskine, from which it appears that Mr. Weale wishes to prefer a claim for compensation against the Greek Government; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take this case into consideration and report my opinion as to the instructions which it would be proper to address to Mr. Erskine on the subject.

In obedience to the commands of your Lordship I have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That I consider that the grounds upon which Mr. Weale claims that Her Majesty's Government should hold the Hellenic Government responsible to him for damages are untenable. Mr. Weale is represented by Her Majesty's Minister to consider that he is entitled to compensation from the Hellenic Government on account of their having released from prison, before trial, the party who was charged with being Mr. Weale's principal aggressor. But it appears from the Report of the Advocate Fiscal, that, according to the Hellenic Law, which had come into operation in the Ionian Islands subsequent to the committal of Ionà to prison, the authorities would not have been justified in detaining him any longer in prison, and that when he subsequently failed to present himself for trial, he was condemned to ten years' exile. So far, then, as the criminal preceedings are concerned, I consider that Mr. Weale has had the same measure of justice dealt out to him which would have been dealt out to a subject of His Hellenic Majesty, and I see no reasonable ground for complaining of the tardiness shown in bringing the accused parties to trial after the explanation given by the Advocate Fiscal of the necessary delay, incidental to the change of law and legal procedure, and more especially the introduction of trial by jury, consequent on the annexation of the Ionian Islands to the Kingdom of Greece.

It appears further that, by Hellenic Law, Mr. Weale would have been entitled to bring a civil action for damages against Ionà in addition to any penalties to which Ionà might have been condemned in the course of the criminal proceedings against him, and that, although Ionà may have died since his condemnation, a civil action will lie against his heirs or representatives. I think that Mr. Weale is entitled to the good offices of Her Majesty's Minister, so far as he may require aid in procuring from the Greek Government official proof of the death of Ionà as suggested by Dr. Luigi, in order that he may address his demand for compensation to the proper quarter; but I think that the Hellenic Government cannot be expected to do more than to give every facility to Mr. Weale, so as to enable him to have the full benefit of the Hellenic Law.

With regard to Mr. Weale's expenses in carrying on the criminal proceedings, I think your Lordship may properly direct some inquiry to be made into the nature of his alleged expenses with a view to ascertain whether the duty of prosecuting the accused parties for the criminal offence was thrown upon Mr. Weale, or was borne by the Greek authorities. Although Mr. Weale would not, in my opinion, be entitled to the aid of Her Majesty's Government in bringing a civil suit for damages, the expenses of conducting a criminal proceeding, if there was no public prosecutor at Corfu, may perhaps entitle him to more favourable consideration; but care should be taken, I venture to suggest, if your Lordship should think it right to direct any inquiry to be made on the subject of expenses, that it should be confined to the expenses of the criminal proceedings, strictly speaking, and not include any other expenses which should be properly the subject of a suit for damages against the heirs or representatives of Ionà.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

1868

Hans Towns.

No. 73.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received March 30.)

Temple, March 30, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 18th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me a letter from a naturalized citizen of Hamburgh, Mr. Fawcus, in which he requests to be informed whether his son can claim exemption from service in the North German army, and whether, under the circumstances detailed in his letter, his son is entitled to British protection; and Mr. Egerton was pleased to request that I would take this document into my consideration, and favour your Lordship with my opinion as to the answer which should be given to Mr. Fawcus' application.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken this document into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That the son of Mr. Fawcus, although born in England, having emigrated as a minor with his father when the latter took up his residence and became naturalized at Hamburgh, must be taken to be entitled to the acquired nationality of his father during his minority, and whilst resident at Hamburgh, and accordingly to be subject to all the public duties attaching to a naturalized citizen of Hamburgh, and amongst others to the liability to serve in common with other citizens of Hamburgh in the North German army.

Under these circumstances it would not be proper for your Lordship to claim for the son of Mr. Fawcus, whilst resident at Hamburgh, any exemption from the military conscription to which citizens of Hamburgh may be liable under the law of the North German Confederation.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

Italy.

No. 74.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received January 16.)

Temple, January 15, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 11th instant, stating that, by direction of your Lordship, he transmitted to me the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Florence, inclosing a copy of a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Florence, inclosing a copy of a despatch from Mr. Consul-General Bonham, stating the circumstances under which the Duchess of San Germano had applied to him for a certificate declaring her to be a British subject, in order to avoid payment of the forced loan to which Italians are liable but from which British subjects are by Treaty exempt.

Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take this despatch into my consideration, and favour your Lordship with my opinion as to the answer which should be returned to Sir Augustus Paget.

A copy of the Treaty between this country and Italy, containing the stipulation under which British subjects claim the exemption in question, was inclosed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken this despatch into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That Sir Augustus Paget may be properly instructed to decline the application of the Duchess of San Germano that she should be furnished with a certificate that she is a British subject and entitled to the privileges attached to that character under the Treaty of 1863.

However desirous the Duchess may be to renounce the character of an Italian subject which she acquired upon her marriage with the Duke, her status in that respect within the dominions of the Kingdom of Italy will not be affected by the desertion of her husband, even if his absence should be prolonged indefinitely; and I am clearly of opinion that the exemption from forced loans which is secured by Article XV of the Treaty of 1863, to the subjects of each of the Contracting Parties in the dominions and possessions of the other, is confined to persons who are not subjects of the country within which the loan is to be enforced.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 75.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received September 15.)

Temple, September 14, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 10th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me a despatch, and its inclosures, which your Lordship has received from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Florence, respecting complaints made by and on behalf of Messrs. Laidlaw and Sons, of Glasgow, against the Municipality of Caltanisetta in Sicily, in consequence of the forcible removal of certain gas-pipes by order of the Syndic of that place, on the ground that the water supply of the public fountains had been rendered unfit for drinking by the infiltration of deleterious matter from the gas-pipes laid down by Messrs. Laidlaw, who had obtained a concession for the lighting of the town. That a claim for compensation having been raised by Messrs. Laidlaw on account of the proceedings of the Syndic, the firm, as it would appear, decline to institute proceedings for the prosecution of their claim before the local Tribunals, maintaining their right to seek redress through the direct intervention of Her Majesty's Legation.

That Her Majesty's Minister at Florence being at issue, as I should perceive, with Messrs. Laidlaw on their view of the case, Mr. Egerton was to request that I would furnish your Lordship with any observation I might have to make upon the subject, and especially with reference to Sir A. Paget's view of the case.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That it appears that the Municipality of Caltanisetta, under a view which it took, improperly as Messrs. Laidlaw assert, of its duty of providing for the preservation of the public health, has destroyed certain gas-mains in that town, the property of Messrs. Laidlaw, having previously given to the engineer of the gas-works notice to remove them.

I am of opinion that the course which Messrs. Laidlaw must pursue to obtain indemnification for any loss which they may have sustained by the act of the Municipality has been properly pointed out to them by Sir Augustus Paget, and that their claims for compensation must be brought before a Court of Law. If unwarrantable delay should be interposed by the local Tribunals which Messrs. Laidlaw seem to anticipate, such delay may be a proper subject for representation to the Italian Government; but the probability of any such delay will not warrant Messrs. Laidlaw in declining to have recourse to the ordinary Tribunals.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

1868

Japan.

No. 76.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received Febrary 29.)

My Lord, Temple, February 29, 1868.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 27th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch which your Lordship had received from Her Majesty's Minister in Japan, submitting, for the approval of Her Majesty's Government, a set of Regulations which, on the opening of the port of Hiogo and city of Osaka to foreign trade, he deemed it necessary to draw up for the peace, order, and good government of British subjects in that Consular district; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take these papers into our consideration and favour your Lordship, at our earliest convenience with our opinion in regard to the set of Regulations.

Mr. Hammond was also to transmit to us a printed copy of a Notification published by Sir H. Parkes, announcing the opening of Hiogo and Osaka.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into consideration and have the honour to report—

That we think that there is no objection to the set of Regulations framed by Her Majesty's Minister in Japan under the 85th (and 90th) clauses of the Order in Council of the 9th March, 1865.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 77.

The Attorney- and Solicitor-General to Lord Stanley.—(Received April 9.)

My Lord, Temple, April 9, 1868.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 7th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith a copy of a letter from Mr Locock, Secretary of Her Majesty's Legation in Japan, stating the advice which he had given to the Commander of Her Majesty's military forces at Yokohama with reference to the protection of that town from the effects of the civil strife now prevailing in Japan, if the operations of the contending forces of the Mikado and Tycoon should be extended to the neighbourhood of that place, which is the chief Settlement under Treaty of the British community in Japan; and to request that we would take the matter into our consideration and report to your Lordship, if possible, before Friday next, our opinion as to the extent to which Colonel Sankey would be justified in acting on Mr. Locock's advice, and, if not, to what extent Her Majesty's forces would be warranted in proceeding for the protection of the lives and properties of British subjects.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That the actual position of the British in Japan appears to be that they have a Settlement at Yokohama recognized by Treaty, for the protection of which naval and military forces are maintained, and if this Settlement were threatened by either or both of the belligerent parties, we think that use of force might be justified for protection of lives and property, and for the maintenance of British rights within the Settlement.

It would, however, we think, be difficult, strictly speaking, to justify the occupation of the native town of Yokohama, and holding it against the Tycoon's troops in case they want to occupy it for strategic purposes, simply because disaster may occur in the British Settlement by permitting the native town to be occupied by armed forces.

Possibly, however, expediency, rather than strict law, should in such events as those that are anticipated regulate the action of the British authorities in Japan, and in this view your Lordship may think it right to leave something to the discretion of the authorities; at the same time pointing out that the steps that are taken in defence of the British Settlement should be those only which the exigencies of the case manifestly render necessary, and that it should be notified to both belligerents that these are taken only for preservation of life and property, and not for the purpose of aiding either side in the existing contention.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.

---

No. 78.

The Attorney- and Solicitor-General to Lord Stanley.—(Received April 9.)

Temple, April 9, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 7th of April instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith a despatch from Sir Harry Parkes, respecting the enforcement of neutrality on the part of British subjects in the civil contest now prevailing in Japan.

Mr. Hammond was also pleased to state that your Lordship apprehended that the Order in Council confers upon Sir Harry Parkes full power in this respect, and that he will probably have published an Order under it; but that your Lordship would be glad if we could furnish you for transmission to Sir H. Parkes, by the mail of Friday next, with the draft of such an Order as we may deem sufficient for the purpose, and within his powers to issue.

Mr. Hammond was further pleased to state that it may assist us in framing such a draft to have before us a copy of an Ordinance to the same effect promulgated in China in the year 1855, when the Taeping rebellion was in progress.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we have prepared, and send herewith, a draft Notification and Regulation, which we think Sir Harry Parkes may properly issue.

It seems desirable not to admit in terms that war exists between two recognized belligerents, and we have framed the first part of this draft as a Notification of the terms of the 81st section of the Order in Council of March 1865, which renders any British subject levying war, or taking part in any operation of war against the Tycoon of Japan, or aiding in war, insurrection, or rebellion, guilty of misdemeanour.

The second part of the draft is framed under section 85 of the same Order, as a regulation for the peace, order, and good government of British subjects; and it nearly follows the terms of section 82 of the Order, by which any one taking part in any operation of war in the service of the Emperor of China, is guilty of a misdemeanour. The regulation, however, can only properly make an infringement of its terms an offence punishable under section 86 of the same Order.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.

---

Inclosure in No. 78.

Draft Notification and Regulation.

WHEREAS contentions are existing, and are being carried on, by armed forces in Japan. Now, I, Sir Harry S. Parkes, Her Majesty's Minister in Japan, do hereby notify to all British subjects in Japan, that by the 81st section of the Order of Her Majesty the Queen in Council, for the government of Her Majesty's subjects in China and Japan, dated the 9th day of March, 1865, it is provided and declared, that if any British subject in Japan, while Her Majesty is at peace with the Tycoon in Japan, levies war, or takes part in any operation of war against the Tycoon of Japan, or aids or abets any person in carrying on war, insurrection, or rebellion against the Tycoon of Japan, every person so offending shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanour; and on conviction thereof, shall be liable (in the discretion of the Court before which he is convicted), to be punished by imprisonment for any term not exceeding two years with or without hard labour, and with or without a fine, not exceeding 5,000 dollars, or by a fine not exceeding 5,000 dollars without imprisonment; and in addition to such punishment every such conviction shall of itself, and without further proceedings, make the person convicted liable to deportation. And the Court before which he is convicted, may order that he be deported from Japan to such place as the Court may direct. And I, Her Majesty's said Minister in Japan, by virtue of the 85th and 90th sections of the said Order, and of every other power, enabling me in that behalf, do hereby make the following Regulation for the peace, order, and good government of British subjects in Japan.

If any British subject, without the license of Her Majesty (proof whereof shall be on the party accused), shall take part in, or aid, or assist, in any hostile operation in the service, or on behalf of the Tycoon of Japan against any persons engaged in carrying on hostile operations against the Tycoon of Japan, he shall be deemed guilty of an offence against this Regulation, and on conviction thereof shall be liable (in the discretion of the Court before which he is convicted), to be punished for each offence with imprisonment for any term not exceeding three months, with or without hard labour, and with or without a fine not exceeding 500 dollars.

Given, &c.

J. B. K.
W. B. B.

---

No. 79.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received April 24.)

Temple, April 24, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 21st instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to acquaint us that, on considering the terms of the draft of Neutrality Regulation to be issued by Her Majesty's Minister in Japan, inclosed in our letter of the 9th instant, your Lordship thought it advisable to defer sending it to Japan, and rather to await further intelligence from Sir Harry Parkes.

That the grounds of this conclusion were that the draft, being based on the Order in Council of 1865, would have been inapplicable to the present state of things in Japan, which was inadvertently omitted to be explained to us in his letter of the 7th instant.

That when the Order in Council was issued, the Tycoon, with whom the Treaties had been made, was considered to be the de facto ruler of Japan; but a better acquaintance with the institutions of the country showed that the real sovereignty rested in the Mikado, although the administration was delegated by long habit to the Tycoon. This state of things was forcibly illustrated by the reluctance felt on the part of some of the influential nobles of Japan to acknowledge the validity of Treaty engagements with foreign Powers concluded with the Tycoon alone; and that it was only after the exertion of considerable moral pressure that the Mikado was induced to accept the Treaties as binding on himself.

That since that occurred a great change has taken place in Japan; the Mikado has asserted his authority, and the Tycoon has acknowledged his own subordinate position. But this, as was to be expected, could not assume a permanent character in such a state of society as prevails in Japan, where a large body of wealthy and influential nobles, jealous of the Tycoon's supremacy, have sought to depress him and to elevate the Mikado, who is unquestionably the lawful Sovereign of the whole country.

That both parties are now engaged in upholding by force of arms their respective pretensions, and that a civil war has commenced, or what may be more strictly designated warlike operations on the part of the Sovereign Mikado to subdue the rebel Tycoon.

That it was with the view of preventing British subjects taking part in such a contest, that Sir Harry Parkes contemplated the issue of a Proclamation of neutrality, and that the object of his letter of the 7th of April was to obtain our assistance for Sir Harry Parkes' guidance in framing such a Proclamation.

That it is clear, however, that the Order in Council contemplates the Tycoon as the Sovereign, in whose interest alone British neutrality was to be enforced; but, as Mr. Hammond had shown, the order is no longer applicable to the present state of things.

That eventually it is probable that the Mikado, who has adopted the Treaties as his own, will desire to supersede them by a more formal instrument, in which his name alone shall appear to the exclusion of that of the Tycoon; indeed, that he has already requested that the name of the Tycoon should be erased, and his own inserted in its stead.

But, in the meanwhile, that it is obvious that Her Majesty's Government cannot adopt the cause of the Tycoon as against the Mikado, while the Order in Council is a bar to rejecting that of the Tycoon in favour of that of the Mikado.

That, on the other hand, it would be premature, until the course of events is more clearly developed, to cancel the clauses of the Order which favour the cause of the Tycoon.

That the immediate object is to prevent British subjects from engaging in civil strife in Japan; and that it may be deserving of consideration whether it might not be expedient to pass a special Order in Council, enacting that, "If any British subject in Japan, without license of Her Majesty, proof whereof shall lie on the party accused, shall take part in any naval or military operations, save and except any such operations in which Her Majesty's naval or military forces shall be engaged, arising out of questions connected with the internal policy of Japan, or shall aid or abet any persons engaged in any such operations, he shall be deemed, &c." (as in section 82 of Order in Council of 1865).

That if we should be of opinion that it would be expedient to pass an Order to this effect, your Lordship would be obliged to us to frame the draft of one.

But Mr. Hammond was to transmit to us a despatch and its inclosures, received on the 20th instant from Sir Harry Parkes, in which we should find copies of Proclamations of Neutrality issued by the foreign Representatives, and supplemented, in the case of the British Proclamation, by an instruction to Her Majesty's Consuls in Japan.

That this instruction and the British Proclamation are based, as we should perceive, by Sir Harry Parkes on the Foreign Enlistment Act; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to state that your Lordship would be glad to receive, if possible by Friday next, our opinion whether they are proper in terms and sufficient for the purpose in view, or whether they should be amended in any particulars or supported by such an Order in Council as that of which a sketch has been given.

Mr. Hammond also stated that your Lordship is anxious to send an answer to Sir Harry Parkes by the mail of Friday the 24th instant.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we entirely concur in the propriety of withholding the draft prepared by us in pursuance of former instructions in the absence of the information now afforded as to the position of the Tycoon at the time that the Treaty engagements were entered into, and as to the state of things now existing in Japan.

The Treaty already entered into with the Tycoon, and the Order in Council founded on such Treaty, give rise to some difficulties which we should have been anxious to consider more carefully than we have been able to do since the papers have been before us.

We think that it would be expedient to pass an Order in Council to provide for present emergencies, and we have prepared a draft Order accordingly. As Courts have existed for some time in Japan, and jurisdiction has been exercised there by Her Majesty, we think that Her Majesty may be considered as having jurisdiction by usage or sufferance within Japanese dominions; but it will be best to issue the new Order in Council, not referring specifically to the Tycoon or the Treaty with him.

We think that the jurisdiction exercised against British subjects should be confined to that given by the draft Order, viz., of punishing such subjects for offences within the terms of the draft Order.

We think it would be inexpedient to confer power to seize vessels destined for the belligerents in Japan, as such a power, if conferred, might give rise to difficulty. One belligerent will have the ordinary power of seizing an armed vessel destined for another belligerent; but we think that it will not be expedient to authorize seizure by British ships-of-war of such vessels.

We think that the instructions to Consuls should be modified by apprizing them of the terms of the new (proposed) Order in Council; and that by the Proclamation it should simply be notified that British subjects delivering armed ships, ammunition, or contraband of war to either of the belligerents will do so at their peril, and will not, if they act against law, be entitled to any protection from Her Majesty. All reference to existing Treaties should, we think, be omitted in any such Notification.

1868

We think that if instructions are to be sent by this post it will be better to revoke the Circular already issued by Sir Harry Parkes to the Consuls, and that he should inform them that they are to act upon the proposed Order in Council (if sent out), or to await further instructions if it be thought proper to delay the sending out of any new Order until the next mail.

We think that the present official Notification is founded on a misconception as to the force of the Foreign Enlistment Act, so far as it affects British subjects in Japanese Dominions, and that it should, therefore, be suppressed.

We think that, in order to create an offence punishable by the British Courts in Japan, the offence should be created by Order in Council; and that the Consuls should not treat Acts, made criminal or punishable by Statutes of the Imperial Legislature, as offences with which they have power to deal.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

Inclosure in No. 79.

Order in Council.

VICTORIA R.

WHEREAS an Act of Parliament was passed in the session of the 6th and 7th years of Her Majesty's reign, cap. 94, "To remove doubts as to the exercise of power and jurisdiction by Her Majesty within divers countries and places out of Her Majesty's dominions, and to render the same more effectual."

And whereas by the said Act it was enacted amongst other things that it was, and should be, lawful for Her Majesty to hold, exercise, and enjoy any power or jurisdiction which Her Majesty then had, or might at any time thereafter have, within any country or place out of Her Majesty's dominions in the same and as ample a manner as if Her Majesty had acquired such power or jurisdiction by the cession or conquest of territory.

And whereas Her Majesty has had and now has by Treaty, usage, sufferance, and other lawful means, power, and jurisdiction within the Japanese dominions: And whereas Her Majesty has been pleased from time to time, and by and with the advice of Her Privy Council, by Orders in Council, to make provisions for the exercise of Her Majesty's said power and jurisdiction, and to ordain laws and ordinances for the peace, order, and good government of Her Majesty's subjects within the Japanese Dominions, and for the constitution of certain Courts for enforcing obedience to such laws and ordinances.

And whereas hostilities have unhappily commenced and are being carried on between the Mikado and other belligerents within the Japanese Dominions, and whereas Her Majesty is at peace with the Government of Japan, and whereas it has seemed to Her Majesty, by and with the advice of her Privy Council, to be expedient for the peace, order, and good government of Her Majesty's subjects being within the Japanese Dominions, and for maintaining a strict neutrality in such dominions during such hostilities as aforesaid, to make and ordain such rules and orders as hereinafter mentioned.

Now, therefore, Her Majesty's is pleased, by and with the advice of her Privy Council, to order, and it is hereby ordered as follows:—If any British subject shall, during such hostilities as aforesaid, without the license of Her Majesty (proof whereof shall lie on the party accused), take part in any operation of war in the service of the Mikado or of any power or person engaged in carrying on such hostilities as aforesaid, or shall aid or abet any or either of the Contending Parties in carrying on such hostilities as aforesaid by delivering or cause to be delivered to them or either of them any ship or vessel equipped, furnished, fitted out, or armed, with intent or in order that such ship or vessel should be employed in the military or naval service of either of the said Contending Parties, against the other of such Contending Parties, every person so offending shall be guilty of a misdemeanour, and on conviction thereof shall be liable (in the discretion of the Court before which he is convicted) to be punished by imprisonment for any term not exceeding two years with or without hard labour, and with or without a fine not exceeding 5,000 dollars, or by a fine not exceeding 5,000 dollars without imprisonment.

J. B. K.
W. B. B.
T. T.

---

No. 80.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received May 13.)

Temple, May 12, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 24th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to acquaint us, with reference to our Report of that day, that, as it had not been possible, before the departure of the mail, to obtain Her Majesty's sanction to the proposod Order in Council for the observance of neutrality by British subjects in Japan, your Lordship had only addressed to Sir Harry Parkes the instruction therewith sent for our information.

That the draft Order would be sent to the Council Office to be submitted to Her Majesty at the first Council.

Mr. Hammond was pleased to state that, with reference to the passage in our Report in which we state that we should have been anxious to give further consideration to the Treaty already entered into with the Tycoon, and the Order in Council founded on such Treaty, your Lordship directed him to say that your Lordship would be glad to receive any further observations on those matters which we may desire to lay before your Lordship.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we have reconsidered the draft Order in Council which we submitted with our former Report, and are of opinion that, in existing circumstances, it will be expedient to pass such Order in the terms in which it is framed.

The state of things in Japan is certainly rendered very unsatisfactory and peculiar, in consequence of the error into which Her Majesty's Government were led by the claim of the Tycoon to the reigning power in Japan. The Order in Council of the 9th March, 1865, defines "Japan" as "the Dominions of the Tycoon of Japan," and the Consular officers are authorized to act, and we presume received their power to act, in Japan, upon the assumption that Her Majesty had jurisdiction in Japan by virtue of the Treaties with the Tycoon.

These Treaties now appear to be worthless, except so far as they may he adopted by the Mikado, who now turns out to be the true Sovereign of Japan. At this moment it will not be expedient to throw any doubt on the due appointment of Consular officers, or upon their rights and jurisdiction; but at the same time it will be well to use caution in conferring fresh jurisdiction upon them. We retain the opinion expressed by us before, that it was right for Sir H. Parkes to revoke his Proclamation, and modify the instructions to Consuls—as suggested in our former Report.

We would add that, if the belligerents do capture British vessels as prize or seize contraband of war, during the war, we think it quite right that the Consuls should insist that the ordinary rules of Prize Courts should, as far as possible be adopted, and that the cases should be watched by the Consuls on behalf of British owners.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 81.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received May 13.)

Temple, May 12, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 4th instant, stating that, with reference to his letter of the 23rd ultimo, he was directed to transmit to us a further despatch from Sir H. Parkes, with copies of papers respecting the observance by British subjects of neutrality in the contest now prevailing in Japan; and to request that we would take these papers into consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion as to whether any further instructions should be sent to Sir H. Parkes in answer to the present despatch, in addition to those of which a copy was inclosed in Mr. Hammond's letter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the position of the British and of the other Europeans in Japan appears to be now so peculiar, and even critical, that it is difficult to give instructions to Sir H. Parkes, upon which he could safely act in the many emergencies that may arise, so as to be justified by law, and at the same time act most efficiently for the interests of Her Majesty's subjects in Japan. We think that it would be difficult to justify the suggested action of the Consuls or the officers of Her Majesty's Navy in co-operating, for the purpose of preventing delivery in Japanese waters of vessels of war purchased by the Mikado, the Tycoon, or the Daimios, from British subjects.

But as it appears from Sir H. Parkes' despatch, and the Memorandum of the Representatives of Treaty Powers, that the very safety of the British and other Europeans resident in Japan, and the protection which they can hope for from the men-of-war of their own countries, depend in a great measure upon the exercise of a power of preventing armed vessels from joining the navies of the belligerents, which might otherwise become so strong as to overawe the British and other European naval forces, it will probably be thought right by your Lordship to give a wide discretion to to Sir H. Parkes to act for the best in concert with the Representatives of other countries, even at the risk of doing acts which, in point of law, cannot be justified—even to the extent of seizing and detaining vessels of war, ordnance, &c., destined for either of the Contending Parties.

With regard to the request of the Governor of Kanagawa, that no persons of the tribes or clans of Sasshiu or Choshiu shall be allowed to have passages in British ships to Yokohama, we think that the Governor should be informed that the British Authorities in Japan will, as far as possible, insure neutrality on the part of British subjects, but that it will be beyond the power of the Authorities to prevent members of those clans from passing apparently for no hostile purpose from one port to another.

A Notification might be issued warning British subjects against transporting members of the clans referred to, to Yokohama; but we do not think it would be expedient to make an infringement of the Notification penal, especially as the Representatives of the other Powers are not disposed to prohibit the conveyance of Japanese in passenger ships of their countries.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 82.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received July 13.)

My Lord,
Temple, July 13, 1868.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 31st of March last, stating that, with reference to our report of the 11th October, 1867, on the claim of Mr. H. E. Hoey against Her Majesty's Legation in Japan, arising out of the occupation of premises belonging to him at Yokohama, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from Mr. Hoey, re-stating his claim, on which he had obtained a legal opinion; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take the paper into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer that should be returned to it.

Mr. Hammond was also pleased, at the same time, to inclose for our information the papers submitted to us on a former occasion, together with two letters received from Mr. Hoey in the interval, with his answer to them.*

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we do not agree with the view of the legal authority consulted by Mr. Hoey in his construction of the lease. The document is no doubt very informal, but we think that the interpretation put upon it in the former opinion of the Law Officers is the correct one.

---

* Mr. Hoey, April 16 and 20; Sir H. Parkes No. 111; to Mr. Hoey, October 17, 1867; Mr. Hoey, January 15 and 17; to Mr. Hoey, March 24, 1868.

Mr. Hoey should, we think, be informed that his letter has been referred to the Law Officers, who do not see any reason for coming to a different opinion from that which they previously expressed; and that Mr. Hoey's refusal to submit the claim for damages to arbitration appears to be unreasonable, inasmuch as that seems to be the proper and usual method of adjusting a dispute as to the reasonableness of the damages claimed for breach of the stipulation in the lease.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 83.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received July 31.)

Temple, July 30, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 7th instant, stating that, with reference to our Reports of the 24th April and 12th of May, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister in Japan inclosing a copy of a letter which he has received from Sir Edmund Hornby, giving his opinion in regard to the question of the neutrality of British Subjects during hostilities in Japan; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take these papers into consideration and furnish your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

We are also honoured with Mr. Hammond's letter of the 30th instant, transmitting further papers connected with this case.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That it seems to us to be unnecessary to make any lengthened comments on Sir E. Hornby's letter to Sir Harry Parkes, inasmuch as our former Reports of the 24th April and 12th May last, dealt with the matters referred to in Sir E. Hornby's letter and pointed out the objections to which we considered the instructions to the Consuls were open.

Your Lordship has, we find, acted on the latter Report in the despatch addressed to Sir H. Parkes on the 19th May, and we submit to your Lordship, that the best course will be for Sir H. Parkes to continue to act in concert with the Representatives of other Powers upon the instructions contained in that despatch, and which in our opinion, are the best that can be issued under existing circumstances. Sir H. Parkes' despatch of the 1st May, gives good reason to hope that the civil contest is almost terminated. The additional papers sent to us to-day, consist of a duplicate of Sir E. Hornby's letter to Sir H. Parkes.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 84.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received September 5.)

Temple, August 28, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 3rd instant, stating that with reference to our Report of the 13th July, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch with its inclosures from Her Majesty's Minister in Japan, in regard to Mr. Hoey's claim; and to request that we would take these papers into consideration and furnish your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

The previous papers were also inclosed for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we think that as Mr. Hoey peremptorily declines the offer made to him of submitting his claim to arbitration, he must be left to carry out his threat of appealing to the House of Commons or to a Court of Law in support of his demand.

But in order to put Mr. Hoey in the wrong as far as possible, we think that Her Majesty's Minister in Japan should, if the opportunity occur, direct a communication to be made to Mr. Hoey, again pointing out the propriety of submitting the matter in dispute to a competent and impartial arbitrator, by whom the questions upon which such a wide difference of opinion at present exists between Her Majesty's Minister and Mr. Hoey, may be speedily and satisfactorily adjusted, Her Majesty's Government having no desire to evade or postpone any just and fair claim which Mr. Hoey may advance, but being wholly unable to concur with him as to the principle upon which compensation claimed by him should be awarded, or as to the amount which he claims to be due.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 85.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received September 14.)

My Lord, Temple, September 12, 1868.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 8th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us despatches from Her Majesty's Minister in Japan, and from the Judge of the Supreme Court of Shanghae relative to the want of Vice-Admiralty jurisdiction in the Consular Courts in Japan; and Mr. Egerton was pleased to request that we would take these papers into consideration and furnish your Lordship with a report thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That in our judgment the opinion given by Sir E. Hornby against conferring generally Admiralty jurisdiction on the Consular Courts in Japan, and the reasons given by him for that opinion are well worthy of your Lordship's consideration, and lead us to think that it would not be expedient to confer that jurisdiction upon the Consular Courts. We think however that it may be worth while for Her Majesty's Minister in Japan, in consultation with Sir E. Hornby to consider whether a limited Admiralty jurisdiction may not be confided to some Court in Japan, to act in matters of immediate pressure, such as bottomry bonds and salvage claims.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 86.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received November 4.)

My Lord, Temple, October 31, 1868.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 21st September last, stating that, with reference to his letter of the 9th of September, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Sir Harry Parkes, relative to the enforcement of neutrality of British subjects in Japan; and to request that we would take it into our consideratiou and favour your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

Mr. Egerton further stated that he was especially to call our attention to the question of the transport of men and munitions belonging to belligerents by British vessels; and to inclose, for our information, a despatch bearing on the point which had been communicated to him by the United States' Minister at this Court.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That with reference to that part of Sir Harry Parkes' despatch which relates to the proclamation of neutrality, which we advised to be withdrawn because it was issued upon the assumption that the Foreign Enlistment Act applied to acts committed in Japan and made those acts punishable there, a construction which we thought untenable, we have in our Report of this date, in answer to Mr. Egerton's letter of the 9th September, inclosing Sir E. Hornby's letter, expressed our views upon this subject.

As to that part of Sir H. Parkes' letter which relates to the transport of men and munitions belonging to belligerents in British vessels, and the despatch communicated to your Lordship by the United States' Minister at this Court, we think that Sir Harry Parkes came to a right conclusion, viz., that there was nothing in the Foreign Enlistment Act that empowered him to interfere with the masters of vessels, who had chartered such vessels, for the purpose of carrying from one port to another, munitions of war, or soldiers engaged by the Daimios to take part in the war.

We are not surprised to find that, notwithstanding the action of the United States' Minister at Yokohama in insisting upon the Mikado's troops being relanded from an American vessel which had been engaged for their transport, other American vessels have accepted similar engagements. Employment of neutral vessels for such purposes is not, we think, prohibited by international law, in the sense that, by not interfering to prevent such employment of its mercantile marine, a neutral Power would justly expose itself to be charged with a breach of neutrality, although such vessels while engaged in carrying troops or other contraband of war, on account of one belligerent, are liable to seizure and condemnation as prize by the other belligerent.

Where the employment of the neutral vessel is such as not to bring her owners or crew within the recent Order in Council, or the 92nd section of the Order of the 9th March, 1865, we do not think that she can be interfered with by British authorities in Japan, and we can only suggest that a further Order in Council to prohibit such employment of vessels under penalties, and with power to seize and detain the vessel, should be passed (if it be thought politic to restrict the employment of British vessels), or that Her Majesty's Minister in Japan should make such regulations under Section 85 of the Order in Council of the 9th March, 1865, as may meet the cases likely to occur, if he should consider that under the peculiar circumstances of the case such regulations are necessary for the "peace, order, and good government," of British subjects resident in, or resorting to, Japan, a view which it will probably be thought he may reasonably adopt, if the employment of British vessels in carrying troops or munitions of war, is likely to bring the British residents into collision with the Japanese and endanger their lives, or affect the security of their property in Japan.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
RICHARD BAGGALLAY.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 87.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received November 4.)

Temple, October 31, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 9th of September last, stating that, with reference to the Law Officers' Report of the 30th July, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Sir Edmund Hornby relative to the Notification respecting the civil war in Japan issued by Her Majesty's Minister in that country which, in accordance with the Law Officers' recommendation he was instructed to rescind; and to request that we would take this paper into our consideration, and furnish your Lordship with a Report thereupon.

The former correspondence relating to the subject was annexed for our information.*

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That the construction which the Chief Justice of Shanghae suggests may be given to the words "Her Majesty's dominions beyond the seas," in the Foreign Enlistment Act, namely, that they may be held to mean places where Her Majesty has either by Treaty or otherwise a power to exercise exclusive jurisdiction over British subjects is not, in our opinion, admissible. Such a construction would be at variance with the entire scheme of the Foreign Jurisdiction Act (6 and 7 Vict., cap. 94), under which Her Majesty's Courts in China and Japan have been empowered by Order in Council to exercise their jurisdiction, namely, as being in countries or places out of Her Majesty's dominions in which Her Majesty has indeed certain jurisdiction over her subjects, but in which she has no territorial dominion.

---

* Sir H. Parkes, Nos. 29 and 40; to Sir H. Parkes, No. 61; Sir H. Parkes, No. 45; to Sir H. Parkes, Nos. 71, 72, and 73; Sir H. Parkes, No. 90; to Sir H. Parkes, No. 111, 1868.

With regard to the question of the Chief Justice, "whether or not Her Majesty's Law Officers consider the Foreign Enlistment Act to be binding on British subjects in China and Japan, that is, whether, supposing British subjects to infringe it in those countries, they would be liable and could be punished in accordance with its provisions;" we are of opinion that those provisions of the statute which have reference to acts committed by British subjects in foreign countries, E. 9, the provisions of section 2 apply to such acts if committed in China or Japan, but the mode of dealing with offenders is pointed out by sections 4 and 9, under the provisions of which alone could such offenders be tried. We think it clear that a British subject infringing the provisions of section 2 could not be tried by one of the Courts in China or Japan. To prevent misapprehension as to the scope and object of the Foreign Enlistment Act, we would further remark that that Act creates offences punishable in a particular manner and in particular Courts. Some of these offences may be committed out of Her Majesty's dominions by a British subject, and if so committed must be punished, if at all, strictly in the manner pointed out by the Act. Some acts become offensive under the statute only when committed within Her Majesty's dominions, e.g., those mentioned in the 7th section, and, as regards these offences, the Act cannot, in our opinion, be read as applicable to countries where Her Majesty has jurisdiction only by Treaty, sufferance, or otherwise, over her own subjects, but which are in no sense part of Her Majesty's dominions.

With regard to the observation of the Chief Justice as to the practice of the Courts in China and Japan. that "they are daily acting upon British statutes, which are similarly confined in their wording to the Foreign Enlistment Act," we cannot offer any opinion whether such practice is correct or not without having the particular statutes before us, but if the practice in the Courts in those countries proceeds upon the interpretation which the Chief Justice conceives should be put upon the Foreign Enlistment Act, namely, that "it must be read, quoad British subjects, as having force wherever Her Majesty has exclusive jurisdiction over her subjects, whether she has the actual possession of the soil on which the act is done, or not, dominions being held to mean places where she held dominion"—we cannot concur in his view.

In our opinion, Imperial statutes confined expressly in their operation to England, Scotland, or Ireland, or to particular parts or localities in either of those countries, or to a particular class of persons,—for instance, factory owners,—in either of those countries, cannot properly be read in Japan as applicable to that country, or to a particular class in that country. We cannot consider that the 5th section of the Order in Council would, upon a proper interpretation of it, justify a Court in Japan in taking a British statute and modifying, altering, and moulding it according to its own views of what is convenient or right in Japan, and deciding a case on that basis. But where statutes of the United Kingdom declare what is the true definition of larceny, burglary, &c., or lay down what the general law applicable to a particular branch of evidence is to be, e.g., that a wife may give evidence in her husband's favour, in such and similar cases, "circumstances admit" of jurisdiction being exercised in Japan in conformity with such laws or statutes.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
RICHARD BAGGALLAY.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 88.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received December 11.)

My Lord,
Temple, December 8, 1868.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands as signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 19th November ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister in Japan, relative to the conveyance as a prisoner on board Her Majesty's ship "Rattler" of an Italian subject, arrested under the authority of the Italian Minister in Japan; and he was to request that we would furnish your Lordship with our opinion as to the legality of the proceedings reported in that despatch.

We are also honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Murray's letter of the 2nd instant, stating that, with reference to Mr. Hammond's letter of the 19th ultimo, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister in Japan, forwarding copies of further correspondence he has had with his Italian colleague, in regard to the conveyance as a prisoner on board Her Majesty's ship "Rattler" of an Italian subject named Dell' Oro, who had been arrested under the authority of the Italian Minister.

Mr. Murray was pleased to state that he was to request that we would take that despatch into our consideration, together with the previous papers then before us, and favour your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That it would appear from the letter from Sir Harry Parkes to your Lordship under date the 13th October, 1868, that the conveyance of M. Dell' Oro from Hakodate to Yokohama on board Her Majesty's ship "Rattler," which was contemplated when Sir Harry Parkes addressed his former letter dated the 18th September last, to your Lordship, did not take place, but that the brothers Dell' Oro arrived at Yokohama as passengers by a merchant-vessel, and were thereupon arrested upon a warrant of the Italian Consul and confined in the British Consular prison.

In our opinion, the contemplated conveyance of M. Dell' Oro in custody on board Her Majesty's ship could not have been legally justified.

If by virtue of Treaties with the Government of Japan, the Italian Government have powers over its own subjects in that country, the arrest of M. Dell' Oro by virtue of the warrant of the Italian Consul, and his imprisonment in the building used as the British Consular prison were probably legal; but the Italian Consul's warrant could not, we think, be of any validity on board a British man-of-war on the high seas, and could not therefore have justified the Captain of the man-of-war in detaining M. Dell' Oro, who had been guilty of no offence against English law.

We think that the answer returned by Sir Harry Parkes on the 11th October last, to the Italian Minister's question, may properly be approved of by your Lordship.

That answer appears to be well justified by the decision in the case of Regina v. Lesley, 29 Law Journal (Magistrates' Cases), page 97. In that case the master of an English merchant-ship lying in the Port of Valparaiso contracted with the Chilean Government to carry from Valparaiso to Liverpool certain prisoners sentenced according to Chilean law to transportation. The prisoners were brought on board by Chilean officers, and were conveyed to Liverpool; immediately on their landing they preferred an indictment against the Captain for assault and false imprisonment, and a question was reserved for the opinion of the Court of Criminal Appeal which held that, though the defendant might have justified the imprisonment, so long as the ship remained within the local jurisdiction of Chile, (for within that jurisdiction he might be deemed the agent of the Chilean Government), yet that as soon as the ship had passed out of Chilean waters, every person on board, whether foreign or English, was answerable to English law alone, against which no offence had been committed by the prosecutors, and the conviction was consequently affirmed.

We may add that the principle involved in the decision above referred to, appears to us to be as applicable to the case of a captain of a Queen's ship on the high seas, as to the master of a merchant-vessel. It is true that Mr. Justice Heath, in a case of Muro v. Kaye (4 Taunton's Reports, page 43), seems to have intimated that one nation may by comity, assist another nation in bringing its criminals to justice; but though this may be true in some cases, we do not think that the captain of Her Majesty's ship would have been legally justified by the comity of nations, in imprisoning Dell' Oro on board his ship and conveying him from one port of Japan to another.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
RICHARD BAGGALLAY.
TRAVERS TWISS.

Madagascar.

---

No. 89.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received February 4.)

Temple, February 3, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Murray's letter of the 2nd September, 1867, stating that he was directed to transmit to us the accompanying letter from the Colonial Office, dated the 28th August last, inclosing a despatch from the Governor of the Mauritius, and a report from the Procureur-Général of the Colony, in which the latter officer suggests certain amendments in the Order in Council respecting Consular jurisdiction in Madagascar. That this Order, which was drawn up under the advice of the Law Officers of the Crown, received Her Majesty's assent on the 24th of May last; and to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion upon the suggestions of the Procureur-Général, and as to the course which your Lordship should pursue therein. The previous papers were annexed for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we have considered the observations of the Procureur-Général of the Mauritius on the Order of Her Majesty in Council for the regulation of Consular jurisdiction in Madagascar.

Although it appears to us that the difficulties suggested by the Procureur in the event of a criminal from Madagascar being sent to Mauritius for trial for an offence not punishable in Mauritius, as it would be in Madagascar, are solved by the proviso to section 4 of the 6 and 7 Vict., cap. 94, still, having regard to the statement of the Procureur, that the Criminal Law of Mauritius differs from that of England, it would probably facilitate the administration of justice, if such an alteration as he suggests were made in the 22nd section of the Order in Council, so that no one should be liable to be committed or tried in Madagascar for anything that is not an offence according to the Law of Mauritius.

Before this alteration is made, however, the Consul should be asked whether any inconvenience would arise from its adoption, and it will be necessary to ascertain that all the crimes mentioned in section 16 of the Order, are crimes by the Law of Mauritius.

It seems probable that natives of the Mauritius would be the offenders most likely to be brought to trial in Madagascar, and this appears to be a good reason for adopting Laws with which they ought to be familiar. In consequence of the observation of the Procureur-Général we would remark that, in our opinion, the Zanzibar Rules are not ultra vires, but it will be as well, as the present Order in Council will require alteration, to state in the Order itself, by what Code of Laws criminals are to be judged.

The second suggestion of the Procureur-Général, may also we think, be conveniently adopted in substance, and an alteration made in Article 6 of the Order for the purpose of giving effect to it. The right of appeal to the Supreme Court might be limited to an appeal on a question of law only, and not of practice, the Supreme Court administering law, as we presume, according to the Civil and Commercial Codes of Mauritius, but by rules of procedure and practice of its own. There seems to be the more reason for adopting this alteration, as by Article 8 of the Order, decisions of the Consul are to be enforced, in like manner as a decision of the Supreme Court of Mauritius in a Civil Suit is enforced within the same, but it would be right we think, to ascertain the Consul's views on this alteration.

With regard to the third suggestion of the Procureur, namely, the introduction of a jurisdiction enabling the Consul to take proceedings in the case of lunatics, and to wind up the estate on the footing of an intestate estate, we think that there are many objections to this proposal, and that it should not be adopted.

The clerical and other alterations made by the Procureur should, we think, be adopted. Some of them are important, as it appears that the Court of the Mauritius is in the order, erroneously styled the "High," instead of the "Supreme," Court, and the style of the Magistrate to whom the warrant is to be addressed, and the description of the prison to which commitments are to take place, should be amended as suggested by the Procureur.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
C. J. SELWYN.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 90.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received February 4.)

Temple, February 3, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Murray's letter of the 15th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Mr. Pakenham, (No. 21, August 24,) submitting a draft of the rules and regulations which he had framed for the use of the Consular Court in Madagascar, and which, as we should see by the accompanying letter, have been approved by the Secretary of State for the Colonies.

And Mr. Murray was pleased to request that we would take these rules into our consideration (together with the papers also annexed), and favour your Lordship with our opinion whether they are right and proper.

Mr. Murray at the same time, inclosed a further letter from the Colonial Office, asking what steps should be taken to enable the Supreme Court of the Mauritius to deal with any matters brought before them under the provisions of the Order in Council of May last, regulating Consular jurisdiction in Madagascar; and Mr. Murray was, therefore, to request that we would be good enough to favour your Lordship at our earliest convenience with our opinion upon the reference which was made to us on the 2nd September last, upon the question of certain amendments in the Order in Council in question, which had been suggested by the Procureur-Général of the Mauritius.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these rules into consideration (together with the papers thereto annexed), and have the honour to report—

That the rules, generally, appear to us to be framed in accordance with the provisions of the Order in Council, but no doubt it will be found necessary from time to time, to frame further rules to meet cases as they occur.

We would refer to our Report relating to the amendments which it may be expedient to make in the Order in Council, which alterations, if made, may materially affect the rules by which the practice of the Consular Court should be regulated.

With reference to the letter referred to from the Colonial Office, we have the honour to include our Report on that letter, in a Report of this day's date on further papers on the same subject, referred to us on the 22nd of January, 1868.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
C. J. SELWYN.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 91.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received February 4.)

Temple, February 3, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Murray's letter of the 25th ultimo, stating that, with reference to his letter of the 2nd September, 1867, and the 15th ultimo, relative to carrying into effect at the Mauritius the Order of Her Majesty in Council of 17th May, 1867, relative to Consular jurisdiction in Madagascar, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a further letter from the Colonial Office dated the 22nd ultimo, on the same subject; and to request that we would consider its contents in connection with the papers now before us, upon which your Lordship desired our opinion.

In obedience to the directions of your Lordship we have the honour to report—

That it appears to us, that in order to give effect to the Order in Council in the Mauritius, an authenticated copy of such Order which, as passed, had, we presume, the blanks in clauses 35 and 36 filled up, should be formally communicated to the

1868

Governor of the Mauritius, with instructions that such Order shall in due form, and according to law and custom, be promulgated and published, so that it may become operative there.

Probably, until it has been determined whether any alteration shall be made in the Order in Council, it will be deemed better not to promulgate the existing Order, in which some informalities exist in the description of the Supreme Court and otherwise, and in which alterations are suggested, and that the Consul in Madagascar should not further act under the Order by sending criminals to Mauritius, or in entertaining causes in which an appeal would lie to the Mauritius, until he receives further instructions from Her Majesty's Government. Whether the Governor acted properly in deporting the criminal referred to in his Excellency's despatch of the 4th December, 1867, we cannot judge, without knowing the terms of the local ordinance under which he acted.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
C. J. SELWYN.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 92.

Law Officers' Report, August 11, 1868.

---

Mexico.

No. 93.

The Attorney- and Solicitor-General to Lord Stanley.—(Received March 28.)

My Lord, Temple, March 28, 1868.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 25th of March instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter from Mr. Westall, dated the 20th instant, requesting to be furnished, for the reasons therein stated, with a copy of a letter from Señor Castillo, to the then Minister in Mexico, Mr. Scarlett, dated the 16th of June, 1866, on the subject of the Mexican bondholders; and to request that we would take Mr. Westall's application into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether there would be any objection in complying with that gentleman's request.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That the application for a copy of the letter of Señor Castillo appears to be made bonâ fide, and on sufficient grounds; and, in the absence of any rule of the Foreign Office not to produce letters in aid of private suitors, we see no objection in complying with Mr. Westall's request.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.

---

No. 94.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received August 12.)

My Lord, Temple, August 20, 1868.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 6th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the accompanying correspondence relative to the blockade of the port of Mazatlan by Commander Bridges, of Her Majesty's ship "Chanticleer," in consequence of insults offered to him and the officers of his ship by the Mexican authorities; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take the same into my consideration, and favour your Lordship with my opinion as to Captain Bridges' proceedings.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken this matter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That under the circumstances of this case I think that Commander Bridges was not bound to have recourse to the Tribunals of the National Government, as suggested by General Corona in his despatch of 19th June, 1868. The doubloons seized on 16th June were the property of Her Majesty, and they were taken out of the charge of an officer of Her Majesty by officers of the Mexican Government, in contempt of the official permit which was produced to them, whilst the indignities to which Commander Bridges and Sub-Lieutenant Tacey were exposed on the following day, were inflicted on them when they had landed in Her Majesty's uniform, for the purpose of communicating officially with General Corona an the subject of the seizure of the doubloons. The affairs was, I think, clearly beyond the sphere of the ordinary tribunals of the country from the commencement, and could only be settled between the Representatives of the respective Governments.

Commander Bridges appears to have exhausted all available means to procure redress before having recourse to force. Mr. Woodrich, the British Vice-Consul, with whom he placed himself in communication, according to official directions, represents General Corona to have been the highest authority in the place; and that if he would not acknowledge his position and power to give redress, there was no one else for Commander Bridges to apply to except the Mexican Government, with which Government Her Majesty's Government had no political relations. Mr. Vice-Consul

1868

Woodrich appears also to have stated his opinion that Commander Bridges could not do less than vindicate the honour of his flag, and exact the highest satisfaction for the insult offered him, and to have suggested that the most advisable course for him to pursue, would be to blockade the port, and make seizures of Mexican vessels, until he could communicate with the Admiral.

Commander Bridges very properly abstained from any overt act of hostility, and confined himself to closing the port of Mazatlan against Mexican commerce, taking care meanwhile not to interfere with vessels under the flag of any third Power.

There is no doubt, I think, that before Commander Bridges closed the port, there had been a denial of justice to him after flagrant wrong, such as would have justified Her Majesty's Government in giving orders to Commander Bridges to make reprisals upon Mexican vessels, with a view to obtain the restitution of the doubloons, and satisfaction for the indignities offered to Her Majesty's officers.

Under ordinary circumstances, if there had been an accredited Envoy of Her Majesty at the Court of Mexico, it would, I presume, have been indispensable, according to the rules of Her Majesty's service, for Commander Bridges to have communicated through his superior officer with Her Majesty's Government, before taking any steps to obtain redress by force, for the indignities offered to himself and his officers; but the very peculiar circumstances in which Commander Bridges found himself on this occasion may probably be considered by your Lordship to have called for some immediate display of force on his part. There seem, as far as I may venture to form an opinion, to have been reasonable grounds for apprehending that the violence of the lawless population in Mazatlan, if Her Majesty's ship "Chanticleer" had sailed away without resenting the insult in any way, would have been directed against the unprotected subjects of Her Majesty on shore, in revenge for the hospitality which had been shown to certain political refugees on board Her Majesty's ship "Chanticleer," after the defeat of General Martinez, and in regard to which the conduct of Commander Bridges appears to have received the approval of his superior officer.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 95.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received September 19.)

Temple, September 18, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 14th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me, with reference to my Report of the 20th ultimo, the accompanying letter from the Admiralty, dated the 11th instant, inclosing extracts of a letter from Rear-Admiral Hastings, stating that he had received a report from Commander Bridges, of Her Majesty's ship "Chanticleer," who is still blockading the port of Mazatlan. That he (Mr. Egerton) was to call my attention to a former letter from the Admiralty, dated the 2nd instant, also sent, containing remarks on my above-mentioned Report; and to request that I would take these papers into consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That in my previous Report to your Lordship I had in view the international question, which I considered to be referred to me, whether the closing of the port of Mazatlan, against Mexican commerce was justifiable on the part of the Commander of Her Majesty's ship "Chanticleer," as an act of reprisal, upon redress being refused for the insult to himself and his flag, that insult having been admitted by the General commanding the Mexican forces at Mazatlan, to whom the Captain of Her Majesty's ship had made more than one application for redress, to be very gross. As I understood from the correspondence that the Commander of Her Majesty's ship had taken care not to interfere with the ingress and egress of other vessels than those under the Mexican flag, I did not consider the closing of the port to be more than an act of reprisal on his part, not constituting war. I am now favoured with an extract from a letter addressed by Rear-Admiral Hastings to the Secretary of the Admiralty, dated 21st July, 1868, from which it appears that the Commander of Her Majesty's ship had, previously to the occurrences at Mazatlan, been informed of certain instructions of the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, conveyed in their letter to Rear-Admiral Hastings, dated 30th May, 1867, which, to use the words of Rear-Admiral Hastings, directed that "no actually coercive measures were to be adopted against the Mexican Government without authority from home," and that Rear-Admiral Hastings has conveyed to the Commander of Her Majesty's ship "Chanticleer" "his disapproval of the coercive measures adopted by him in pursuit of the redress sought for." I consider that, under the general terms in which those instructions appear to have been given to the Commander of Her Majesty's ship, he ought to have abstained from closing the port of Mazatlan; and that Rear-Admiral Hastings has properly informed him that it was his duty under those instructions "on the refusal of redress, to protest, and refer the matter for his consideration."

At the same time, I may observe that the orders given by the Lords of the Admiralty to Vice-Admiral Sir Rodney Mundy and Rear-Admiral Hastings, in consequence of the Foreign Office Letter of the 27th May, 1867, as appears from their Lordships' letter to the Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, dated 2nd September, 1868, referring to their letter of the 29th May, 1867, were, that they should "instruct the Captains of any of Her Majesty's ships employed on the coast of Mexico not to do more than to represent any acts of injustice towards British subjects, which might come to such Captains' knowledge either through Her Majesty's Consuls or otherwise, to the Governors or highest Mexican civil or military authorities at places where any such injustice might take place, as well as to Her Majesty's Minister in Mexico, and to their respective Commanders-in-chief, but not to adopt any actual coercive measures without authority from home."

Their Lordships have observed "that Commander Bridges makes no direct allusion to the order in question in his correspondence, and it must either have escaped his memory, or else he considered that the wrong and insult offered to him in the absence of responsible Mexican officers, and of all regular diplomatic relations, formed the case not provided for in the order founded on the Foreign Office Letter of the 27th May." I think that it would not have been unreasonable for the Commander of Her Majesty's ship "Chanticleer" to have interpreted the order in question as having reference only to acts of injustice towards British subjects, which might be brought to the knowledge of the Commanders of Her Majesty's ships through third parties, and not as covering wrong or insult offered directly to Her Majesty's uniform and flag. Your Lordship may, I think, concur with the Lords of the Admiralty in their proposal to inform Rear-Admiral Hastings further, that Commander Bridges was wrong in threatening to destroy some of the public buildings in Mazatlan by the fire of the ship's guns, and that the Admiral was right in referring the whole case to Her Majesty's Government.

It appears from the letter of Rear-Admiral Hastings of the 10th August last, that the Commander of Her Majesty's ship "Chanticleer" informed him, by a report dated the 11th July, 1868, that the port of Mazatlan was still kept by him closed against Mexican commerce, and that he understood the Custom-house officials concerned in the insults had been discharged or permitted to leave the country. The port has no doubt been opened before now in accordance with the telegrams transmitted to Commander Bridges. I do not consider that the measures taken by him, as distinguished from those which he threatened to take, "established a state of hostility," as suggested in the Report of the Mexican Minister of War and Marine. Although the measures were exceptional, your Lordship, I think, will be justified in maintaining that they were consistent with amity; and it appears from the Report above mentioned that there is no disposition on the part of the Mexican Ministry to give countenance to the wrongful acts of the Custom-house officials at Mazatlan.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

1868

Miscellaneous.

No. 96.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received March 2.)

My Lord, Temple, February 28, 1868.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 8th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from Mr. Percy Doyle, dated the 24th ultimo, setting forth his claim to receive a diplomatic pension of the third class, that is to say, a pension of 900*l.* a-year, in consideration of his diplomatic services; that Mr. Doyle, as we would gather from his letter and from a memorandum on his case which had been drawn up in your office, retired from the service in 1858 on a diplomatic pension of the 4th class, that is to say, a pension of 700*l.* a-year, and we would observe that Mr. Doyle grounds his claim to the higher pension chiefly on the fact that a pension of the third class was assigned early in last year to Sir C. Wyke, in conformity with the opinion of the Law Officers of the Crown of the 29th of May, 1865, "that a Consul-General who also holds the diplomatic rank of a Chargé d'Affaires, and who, under that title, is accredited to a foreign Court at which there is no other resident British Minister, is, in substance and in effect (if the duties which he discharges are in all respects the same), a Minister Resident at the Court, and that such a diplomatic servant of the Crown may therefore receive a pension under the third class of pensions provided for by the Act of the 2nd and 3rd Will. IV, cap. 116."

Mr. Hammond was pleased further to state that Mr. Doyle contends that, inasmuch as it has been ruled that the service of a Chargé d'Affaires in the position of Sir C. Wyke might be regarded as the service of a Minister Resident, and as such might be reckoned as service qualifying him for a pension of the third class, his own service as temporary Chargé d'Affaires in Mexico in the absence of the Minister, and amounting collectively to a period of four years, six months, and sixteen days, should also be taken into acount in reckoning his qualifications for a diplomatic pension of the third class; and, as your Lordship does not consider the point to be entirely free doubt, Mr. Hammond stated that he was to request that we would take Mr. Doyle's representation into our consideration and report to your Lordship our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers referred to us into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That, as we understand the facts of Mr. Percy Doyle's case, it is not governed by that of Sir Charles Wyke, or any of the other cases mentioned in the memorandum sent to us.

It may be open to question whether the Ministers contemplated by section 6 of 2 and 3 Will. IV, cap. 116, are not those public Ministers specially referred to in the Recez of the Congress of Vienna of 1815, and the Protocol of the Congress of Aix-la-Chapelle of the 21st November, 1818; but this interpretation does not appear to have been expressly put upon the Acts by our predecessors in office.

At all events, we think that if, during the different periods at which Mr. Doyle was resident as Chargé d'Affaires in Mexico (before he became Minister), he was merely accredited to the Minister of Foreign Affairs as Chargé d'Affaires per interim, and was not accredited to the foreign Court as Chargé d'Affaires ad hoc, he cannot be considered as being during those periods, a Minister Resident within the meaning of the Act. If we are right in supposing that Mr. Doyle was thus only Chargé d'Affaires per interim, his case differs materially in this respect from that of Sir C. Wyke, who, as we understand, was certainly Chargé d'Affaires ad hoc, accredited to the foreign Court, and so, possibly, a Minister Resident within the true and fair meaning of the statute.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 97.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received March 26.)

My Lord, Temple, March 26, 1868.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 12th instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 28th ultimo, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us, together with the previous papers, a letter from Mr. Percy Doyle, dated the 18th instant, again urging his claim to a diplomatic pension equal to that assigned to Sir C. Wyke; and Mr. Egerton was pleased to request that we would again take Mr. Doyle's case into our consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion thereupon, so far as regards the points now adverted to by Mr. Doyle.

In obedience to the commands of your Lordship we have again taken Mr. Doyle's case into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we see no reason to alter the opinion lately given by us as to Mr. Percy Doyle's pension.

From a perusal of Mr. Doyle's last letter, it appears to us that he misapprehends the view which we took of the case.

Sir Charles Wyke, whose case Mr. Doyle considers to form a precedent in his favour, was accredited to a foreign Court at which there was no other superior Minister. He was, therefore, head of the Mission, and it was on this ground that his claim to be a Minister Resident within the Act was supported.

Mr. Percy Doyle's case differed from Sir C. Wyke's in this essential particular, namely, that he acted as Chargé d'Affaires per interim only, and was liable to be superseded at any moment by the Minister superior in grade, during whose absence only he acted as head of the Mission.

It appears to us that, under these circumstances, though the claim of Sir C. Wyke may be supported, that of Mr. Doyle fails.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

Monte Video.

No. 98.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received Janaary 14.)

My Lord, Temple, January 13, 1868.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 24th of December, 1867, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith a despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Monte Video (No. 48, November 13), relative to the judicial proceedings which have taken place in the Courts of the Uruguayan Republic with regard to the trial of the person accused of the murder of an English family named Campbell, in the district of Colonia; and to request that we would take this paper into our consideration, together with the previous correspondence therewith annexed, and that we would inform your Lordship what course we consider it right for Her Majesty's Government to pursue in this matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That by the public verdict it appears, that the jury determined that Damaso Escobar was not proved to be guilty of the murder with which he was charged.

Inferentially, it appears that the jury considered that the accused was guilty of the robbery committed at the time the Campbells were murdered, and that the bloody knife found at the house of the Campbell family, and which was supposed to be the "corpus delicti," was the instrument used by Damaso Escobar up to a few days before the murder of the Campbell family.

It is difficult to understand what further evidence the jury required to enabled them to give a verdict of guilty, but we cannot say, not having the depositions before us, that the verdict of not proven was perverse, or that the trial was conducted unfairly.

The accused seems to have been sentenced to the arbitrary punishment of imprisonment for ten years under some law, which, as we presume, confers power on the Judge to award punishment for offences proved in the course of the trial, though they are not those for which the accused is actually tried.

It will, we think, be proper to ascertain whether, as the verdict is, that the charge was "not proved," Damaso Escobar can again be put on his trial for the murder. If this could be done, we think that in such a case another trial should be demanded. The strong comments made by Mr. Lettsom as to the insecurity of life, and the immunity and protection enjoyed by assassins in the Uraguayan Republic, may induce your Lordship to consider hereafter whether a joint remonstrance may not properly be addressed by Great Britain and other aggrieved European Governments against evils so generally asserted and complained of.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
C. J. SELWYN.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 99.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received March 9.)

Temple, March 7, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 21st ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit the correspondence as noted in the margin,* which had passed between the Foreign Office and Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Monte Video, relative to the prevalence at that port of the practice of crimping sailors from British vessels; and Mr. Egerton was pleased to request that I would take these papers into my consideration and favour your Lordship with my opinion, as to whether the failure of the local Government to protect British merchant shipping against such proceedings as those reported in the inclosed papers, will justify any naval interference on the part of Her Majesty's Government within the jurisdiction of the Oriental Republic.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That I do not think that Her Majesty's Government can properly authorize any naval interference within the jurisdiction of the Oriental Republic. The practice complained of touches the public peace of the port, and is properly a subject of local jurisdiction.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 100.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received April 28.)

Temple, April 28, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 24th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the accompanying letter from the Admiralty, dated the 21st instant, inclosing a letter from Rear-Admiral Ramsay, reporting the circumstances under which he has received on board his flag-ship "Narcissus," from the British steamer "Tycho Brahe," two political refugees, Colonel Flores and Captain Clarke, formerly officers in the Monte Videan army; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take the same into my consideration and favour your Lordship with my opinion thereupon.

---

* Mr. Lettsom, No. 73, Commercial; to Mr. Lettsom, No. 9, Commercial; Mr. Lettsom, No. 77, Commercial, 1867; Mr. Lettsom, No. 5, Commercial, 1868.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That Her Majesty's ship "Narcissus," being in an open roadstead, was entitled of strict right to receive on board any passenger from a British merchant-ship also riding in the roadstead, and I do not think that there was any abuse of that right on the present occasion. I assume that there was perfect good faith in the representation made by the parties received on board Her Majesty's ship, and that they had no intention of violating the laws of Monte Video, when they took passage on board the British steamer "Tycho Brahe," and that they had not committed any violation of those laws by entering any port or harbour of Monte Video before the "Tycho Brahe" was brought up in the roadstead.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 101.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received December 22.)

Temple, December 21, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 8th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the accompanying correspondence,* which has taken place with Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Monte Video, relative to the death in that city of Estevan Enrique, a British subject, which was occasioned by the violence of a policeman; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take the same into my consideration, and favour your Lordship with my opinion as to the instructions which should be addressed to Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires with regard to this matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That the question of compensation to the widow of Estevan Enrique may properly be allowed by your Lordship, to rest on different grounds from those on which the trial and punishment of the policeman may be insisted upon, and that Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires may be instructed to take advantage of the offer of his Excellency Dr. Herrera y Obes, to recommend the case of the widow to the generous sympathy of the Government of the Republic without waiting for the result of the trial.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

Netherlands.

No. 102.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received March 26.)

Temple, March 25, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Murray's letter of the 11th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me a despatch from the Acting British Consul at Batavia, reporting his proceedings in regard to the derelict British vessel "Maggie Leslie," and calling attention to the interpretation which the local authorities have put on the terms of the IXth Article of the Convention between Great Britain and the Netherlands of 1856, in so far as derelict vessels are concerned.

Mr. Murray was also to inclose a letter from the Board of Trade containing the observations and suggestions of that Department with regard to the case, and also a further despatch from Acting Consul McLean, not yet communicated to the Board of Trade, from which I should learn that an arrest has been laid by the Receiver of Wrecks on both ship and cargo, as a security for the payment to him of a per-centage which he alleges is due to him.

---

* Major Munro, Nos. 18, 25, 32, and 38; to Major Munro, September 8, 1868.

Mr. Murray was pleased to request that I would take these papers into my consideration, and report to your Lordship my opinion as to the steps which should be taken in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That the present case does not seem to me, upon either of the statements of Acting Consul McLean, to come within the IXth section of the Convention of 1856 (Hertslet, x, p. 478), which applies to vessels cast upon the coast of a colony or foreign possession of either of the Contracting Parties, where there is no person on the spot to represent the owners. Mr. McLean states in his letter of the 14th December, 1867, that the British vessel "Maggie Leslie" had been abandoned at sea, and was subsequently picked up by the English barque "Frisi Yama," the mate and four seamen of which vessel were put on board the "Maggie Leslie," and brought her as salvors into the port of Batavia. Under such circumstances it would depend upon the law of Batavia who should have the custody of the derelict until the owner appeared (the "Aquila," 1 Chr. Robinson, p. 42), and what remuneration should be paid to the salvors. I do not think that the circumstance to which Mr. McLean alludes in a subsequent part of his letter, that he could prove by a letter from the President of Banca that the barque had been stranded in Netherlands Indian waters, and not abandoned on the high seas, would affect the case, if the barque was subsequently found by the salvors afloat, and derelict at sea.

On the other hand, I find it stated in the correspondence from the Board of Trade, that as the vessel was stranded, and was abandoned by her crew, whilst she remained on the rocks a stranded ship, she ought to have been given up to the Acting Consul at once.

Before advising your Lordship upon the question whether the local authorities have put a correct interpretation on the IXth Article of the Convention of 1856, I should wish for some fuller information as to the circumstances under which the salvors found and took possession of the derelict, and also whether there is any colonial law under which the Receiver of Wrecks at Batavia is entitled to 6 per cent. upon derelicts picked up at sea brought by the salvors into that port.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 103.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received August 31.)

Temple, August 29, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 10th instant, stating that, with reference to my Report of the 25th March last, upon the subject of the proceedings of the Netherlands authorities at Batavia with respect to the derelict ship "Maggie Leslie," he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me, together with the previous papers which were therewith returned, two further despatches upon this subject from the Acting British Consul at Batavia; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would favour your Lordship with my opinion thereupon.

In obedience to the commands of your Lordship I have the honour to report—

That I am of opinion that it would be advisable for Her Majesty's Government to come to an agreement with the Government of the Netherlands for the amendment of Article IX of the Convention of 1856, so that its provisions should be made applicable to the vessels of either of the Contracting Parties found derelict on the high seas, and brought into a port of a Colony or foreign possession of the other. In the case of the "Maggie Leslie" there has been less difficulty, owing to the circumstance of the salvors being of the same nationality as the ship; but a very inconvenient dispute might have arisen if Dutch salvors had fallen in with the "Maggie Leslie" and brought her into Batavia, and given her up to the Dutch Receiver of Wrecks, who would appear to be authorized by the law of Batavia to take possession of derelicts, and the British Consul had intervened under Article IX of the Treaty and claimed to take possession of the vessel and cargo for the benefit of the owner.

In the present case, as the Batavian authorities have admitted that the case of the "Maggie Leslie," as she had been on the Alcestis Reef, was within the Convention, I am of opinion that Mr. Acting Consul McLean may be properly instructed to bring to the attention of the Batavian authorities the loss which has been occasioned to the owners of the cargo by the sale of it at a low rate, for which, as at present informed, I do not see that there was any justification, the hull of the ship being reported by Mr. McLean to have been perfectly uninjured, and Mr. McLean being apparently prepared to make the necessary advances for the payment of the salvage and other expenses.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

Pacific Islands.

No. 104.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received March 4.)

Temple, March 3, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Murray's letter of the 7th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the correspondence regarding an offer which the Hawaiian Government have made to conclude with this country a reciprocity Treaty similar to that which they have recently concluded with the United States.

That, before deciding as to the course to be taken with respect to this offer, your Lordship's attention had been directed to the terms of the existing Treaty between England and the Sandwich Islands.

That on referring to that Treaty I should observe that the IIIrd Article is a conditional most-favoured-nation Article, which stipulates reciprocal equivalent concessions as a condition of such treatment in respect of all "favours," privileges, and immunities in matters of commerce and navigation. The IVth Article, on the other hand, stipulates that, as regards imports and exports, no higher duties shall be applied to British than to any other produce.

That under the terms of the Treaty it is competent for the Hawaiian Government to terminate it by giving twelve months' notice, and a differential system of duties might thus be created in the Sandwich Islands in favour of the United States.

That to obviate an inconvenience of this nature two courses are open to your Lordship, either to accept the offer of the Hawaiian Government and to enter into negotiations for a new Treaty, or to claim, under the terms of the existing Treaty, the right of Great Britain to share unconditionally in the commercial advantages which the United States have secured by important concessions.

That should the latter course be adopted, it is not impossible that the Hawaiian Government, relying on the terms of the IIIrd Article above referred to, might resist the claim of Her Majesty's Government; and Mr. Murray was pleased to request that I would take the terms of the existing Treaty into my consideration, and report to your Lordship my opinion whether Her Majesty's Government are thereby entitled to claim unconditionally from the Hawaiian Government equal privileges to those conceded to the United States.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken the terms of the existing Treaty into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That I am of opinion that Her Majesty's Government is entitled, under Article IV of the Treaty of July 10, 1851, to insist upon no other or higher duty being imposed on the importation into the Hawaiian Islands of any article, the growth, produce, or manufacture of Her Majesty's dominions than will be payable under the Convention lately concluded between the United States of America and the King of the Hawaiian Islands on the like articles, being the growth, produce, or manufacture of the United States; and that as no duties will henceforth be payable in the parts of the Hawaiian Islands on the importation of any of the articles specified in Article II of the latter Convention, no duties can be imposed in those ports upon the importation of the like articles, being the growth, produce, or manufacture of Her Majesty's dominions.

It may be observed that the language and arrangement of the IIIrd and IVth Articles of the Treaty of 1851, differ from the language and arrangement of the paragraphs of the IVth Article of the Portuguese Treaty of 1842, and that the "conditional most-favoured-nation" clause is the subject of a separate Article in the former Treaty, and precedes the Article which contains the stipulations respecting duties upon imports and exports. This circumstance relieves the Treaty of 1851 of any possible ambiguity, as Article III of that Treaty, which contains the "conditional most-favoured-nation clauses" is totally silent on the subject of goods, and speaks exclusively of favours, privileges, and immunities granted to the subjects or citizens of the Contracting Parties; whereas the Convention lately concluded between the United States of America and the King of the Hawaiian Islands, declares goods which are the growth and produce of the United States and the Hawaiian Islands respectively, to be duty-free, without any reference to the parties importing them, whether they are subjects or citizens of the Contracting Parties or of any other State. There would thus appear to be no favour, privilege, or immunity granted by this latter Convention, which can properly be said to be granted to the subjects or citizens of the Contracting Parties, so as to come within the scope of Article III of the Treaty of 1851.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 105.

Law Officers' Report, May 18, 1868.

---

No. 106.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received August 18.)

Temple, August 18, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Murray's letter of the 16th July ultimo, stating that, on the receipt of our Report of the 18th May last upon the subject of the proposed Order in Council extending the provisions of the Foreign Jurisdiction Act to British subjects in the Fiji Islands, your Lordship requested the Lords of the Treasury to submit that Report, together with all the previous correspondence upon the subject, to Mr. Reilly, for any further observations he might have to make thereupon; and that he was then directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter from the Treasury, dated the 14th ultimo, inclosing Mr. Reilly's opinion.

Mr. Murray was pleased to remark that we would observe that, after consulting with Captain Jones, lately Her Majesty's Consul in the Fiji Islands, Mr. Reilly was satisfied that no sufficient jurisdiction had ever been exercised by Her Majesty in the Fiji Islands to warrant the passing of the proposed Order; and to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the practicability of carrying out Mr. Reilly's suggestion that an Act of Parliament should be passed for the purpose of of bringing the islands in the Pacific, and possibly other countries, within the scope of the Foreign Jurisdiction Act.

The former papers connected with this question were annexed for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That it appears to us that, in the case of the Fiji Islands and in similar cases, power might be conferred by Act of the Imperial Legislature on a Commissioner or person designated by some such title to exercise limited jurisdiction in civil and criminal cases over the British subjects resident in such islands. The Act which we have suggested would be framed somewhat on the same principle as that on which the Act passed by the United States, and of which an extract is sent to us with the papers, appears to be based, but the provisions as to the extent of jurisdiction, and the mode of giving effect to the powers of the Commissioner will require careful consideration.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

Peru.

No. 107.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received February 29.)

Temple, February 28, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 21st instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me therewith a despatch and its inclosures from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Lima, on the subject of a forced contribution which, it appears, that the revolutionary party in Peru who have taken possession of Cerro de Pasco, have compelled the inhabitants of that district, among whom are certain British subjects, to pay towards defraying the expenses of the de facto Government; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take the same into my consideration, and favour your Lordship with my opinion thereupon.

A copy of the Treaty between this country and Peru, alluded to in Mr. Jerningham's despatch, was also sent therewith.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken the despatch and its inclosures into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That I am of opinion that your Lordship cannot, under present circumstances, properly direct any complaint to be made on behalf of Her Majesty's subjects who may be established at Cerro de Pasco, against the Government of the Republic of Peru, on the ground of a violation of Article IX of the Treaty of 1850. That Article, as I understand it, stipulates for an exemption from forced loans to be levied by one or other of the Contracting Parties; but, in the present case, it appears that Cerro de Pasco is in possession of a body of insurgents, who have established a "new order of things" in that town, and that the forced loan has not been levied by the Government of the Republic of Peru, with which the Treaty was concluded, but against the will and in defiance of the authority of that Government. It may, indeed, happen that the Government of the Republic, if it should have had the power to afford assistance for the protection of the property of British subjects in Cerro de Pasco, and should have failed to do so, may have incurred a responsibility under the common law of nations, and may hereafter be called upon to make compensation, but it would be premature, I think, to raise such a question until the insurrection has been put down, and the authority of the Government of the Republic re-established in the town, as, until its authority has been re-established, there is every presumption that the power of the Government has been inadequate to control the insurgents.

1868

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 108.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received December 16.)

Temple, December 15, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 20th ultimo, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying despatch and its inclosures from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Lima, having reference to an opinion which has been given by one of the Peruvian Crown lawyers with regard to the responsibility of the Government for granting indemnity to a certain M. Prieur, a French subject, on account of his shop having been pillaged by the mob during the revolution in Lima in January last; and to request that I would take the same into consideration and furnish your Lordship with my opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the question of right as regards the claim of a foreigner to be indemnified by the Government of a country in which he has suffered loss or injury must depend upon the circumstances of each particular case, and is not in all cases governed by the principle which is assumed in the opinion of the Peruvian Crown lawyer that "the utmost protection owed to foreigners is to concede to them that which is conceded to natives." Such a rule, if applied in all its rigour, would be in evident conflict with various examples in which States have admitted their responsibility to indemnify foreigners for the seizure and confiscation of their property under circumstances when their own subjects would have had no right under their municipal law to be indemnified by their Government.

It appears to me, therefore, that your Lordship may properly approve the conduct of Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Lima in recording his dissent from the opinion issued by the Peruvian Crown lawyer, but your Lordship will probably think it advisable to instruct him at the same time not to commit Her Majesty's Government to any general proposition of public law on the subject.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

Portugal.

No. 109.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received January 13.)

Temple, January 13, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Murray's letter of the 4th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me, with reference to the Report of my predecessor, dated May 14, 1863, and July 18, 1864, a despatch from Her Majesty's Consul at Lisbon, calling attention to a Memorial of the British merchants resident at that capital, complaining of the increased taxation imposed upon them by the levying upon them of a per-centage on the "decima industrial," or tax on rents, which they contend cannot, under the terms of the Treaty of 1842 and its second explanatory note, exceed a maximum of 20 per cent.

That the per-centage thus levied, is stated to have been imposed for the maintenance of roads, and is described as an "imposto de viacão," and that I should perceive from Sir A. Magenis' despatch No. 57 of 1864, that the right to levy a per-centage for this purpose has already been questioned by the British community at Lisbon, and that the legal adviser of Her Majesty's Legation in that capital had advised Sir A. Magenis that British subjects are not exempt in Portugal from taxes which were established by law, provided those taxes are general and equal for all,—both natives and foreigners. That the opinion thus given is confirmed in the Report of my predecessor, dated July 18, 1864, and that it would therefore seem that Her Majesty's Government would not be justified in claiming redress for the British merchants as regards the imposition of this per-centage; but that before your Lordship furnishes Mr. Consul Brackenbury with instructions in the matter, your Lordship would be glad to learn my opinion on the merits of the case.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That it will be desirable that your Lordship should be furnished with precise information whether the "imposto de viacão" of which the Memorialists complain, does, or does not, as a matter of fact satisfy the conditions under which the Portuguese Law Adviser of Her Majesty's Legation at Lisbon in 1864, held that the Portuguese Government had a right to impose it, under the Treaty of 1842.

There are no particulars to be found in the correspondence, as far as I am aware, which show that the new impost is "a tax general and equal to all, both natives and foreigners," and although the mode of levying it as a per-centage upon the "mancio industrial" is by no means conclusive that the assessment is an infraction of the Treaty as the Memorialists contend, still the mode of levying it suggests that an inquiry may be usefully made before your Lordship determines what reply shall be made to the Memorialists upon two points: first, whether the "imposto de viacão" is levied upon any British or Portuguese subject who is wholly exempt from the operation of the "mancio industrial," and if so how it is circulated? secondly, whether the same per-centage upon the "mancio industrial" is levied under the name of "imposto de viacão," in the case of a Portuguese as of a British subject, as it would appear from the statement of the Memorialists that, since 1842, Portuguese merchants have only been charged with the payment of a "mancio" of 10 per cent. upon their houses &c., whilst British merchants have been assessed at the rate of 20 per cent., and if not, how the new impost is calculated in the case of a Portuguese subject.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 110.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received February 14.)

Temple, February 14, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of 10th February instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me therewith a despatch and its inclosures from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Lisbon, together with previous correspondence which has taken place, relative to the arrest and temporary detention by the police authorities in Portugal of Mr. Godson, a British subject, under the belief that that gentlemen was a person of unsound mind; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take this case into my consideration and favour your Lordship with my opinion thereupon.

1868

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken this case into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That it appears from Mr. Consul Brackenbury's letter of 12th December, 1867, that Mr. Godson, when brought by the police to the British Consulate, made no complaint, upon being asked by the principal clerk, against the local police authorities, and rather seemed anxious to exculpate them than to bring any charge against them; and further that, before he left the Consulate, he was again asked whether, on reflection, he considered that he had any grounds of complaint: upon which he reiterated his denial of having any complaint to make, and left the Consulate apparently satisfied. As these inquiries were made by the principal clerk, after he had opened the letter of the Civil Governor placing Mr. Godson at the disposal of the Consul, and after he had received Mr. Godson from the hands of the police, I consider the reason alleged by Mr. Godson in his letter to your Lordship in explanation of his having made no complaint at the Consulate against the police authorities, namely, that he was still in custody, is not satisfactory.

Further, it appears from the same letter, which is dated from Lisbon, that Mr. Godson's present complaint to your Lordship is directed against the general police authorities at Lisbon, as he states that he cannot disabuse his mind of the conviction that his being taken into custody at Cassilas "must have originated with some one here in more or less police authority." So far, however, from the facts of the case affording any reasonable grounds for such a conclusion, they point the other way; and I consider your Lordship may properly decline to entertain Mr. Godson's complaint on this head, as it is entirely unsupported by facts.

If it were necessary for your Lordship to come to any conclusion as to the state of Mr. Godson's mind, the fact of his not being able to disabuse himself of a conviction for which there is no reasonable foundation to be discovered in the events which occurred at Cassilas, would rather indicate the existence of mental delusion on his part and support the view of the Portuguese authorities that Mr. Godson is not in full possession of his intellectual faculties. The incoherency of the concluding paragraphs of his letter to your Lordship would also be accounted for on this supposition.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 111.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received March 2.)

Temple, February 29, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 23rd January ultimo, stating that he was directed to state to us that during the last two years a negotiation has been in progress between Her Majesty's Government and that of Portugal with a view to the conclusion of a Treaty, the object of which would be to place the commercial relations between the two countries on an important footing. That that negotiation has unfortunately failed for the present, and that we should observe from the inclosed extract of a despatch from Sir Augustus Paget (No. 18, Commercial, 1867), that the Portuguese Government, appealing to the terms of the IVth Article of the Treaty of 1842 between Great Britain and Portugal, copy of which was also inclosed, maintain that it is competent for them, by negotiation with other Powers, to extend to other countries advantages which would be denied to British commerce. That we should also learn from the correspondence that, in the year 1860, the Portuguese Government appealed to the same Treaty stipulation, as precluding Her Majesty's Government from establishing differential duties against Portuguese wines; and that Her Majesty's Government confined themselves, in reply, to pointing out that the scale of wine duties then established was not of a differential character as between country and country, but as between wines containing different degrees of alcoholic strength. That the question, however, as to the legal interpretation of the IVth Article of the Treaty of 1842 has now been brought under your Lordship's attention by the circumstance that the Portuguese Government have lately entered into a Commercial Treaty with the French Government, which, as we should see from the inclosed despatch from Her Majesty's Consul at Lisbon, is considered to place British interests in a disadvantageous position in violation of the spirit of the Treaty of 1842; and Mr. Egerton was pleased to request that we would take these papers into consideration and report to your Lordship our opinion as regards the power of Portugal to withhold from this country any commercial concessions which may be granted to other countries.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That the language of Article IV of the Treaty of 1842 is such that it is difficult to say that the interpretation which the Portuguese Minister seeks to put upon it is incorrect, and it is certainly unfortunate that he should be able to quote the despatch of Lord Russell of the 20th March, 1860, in support of his construction.

The contention of the Portuguese Minister rests on the concluding words of Article IV, which, he alleges, allows his Government to alter Customs duties in favour of a Power, by which an equivalent or compensation has been given, but to maintain the higher duties against a Power unable or unwilling to give an equivalent or compensation. Such a construction would clearly override the express language of the earlier parts of the Article.

The first part expressly provides that the subjects of the two Sovereigns shall not pay in the ports, harbours, &c., in either kingdom, any other or higher duties, &c., than those which are there paid by the subjects or citizens of the most-favoured nation. The next branch of the Article is equally expressed, and in terms provides, that no duty of Customs or other impost shall be charged upon any goods the produce of the one country upon importation by sea or by land from that country into the other, higher than the duty or import charged upon goods of the same kind, the produce of, and imported from, any other country. This probably refers to Customs duties existing at the time of the Treaty.

In the next branch the words are changed, and have a wider scope, and refer to future duties. "No duty restriction or prohibition shall be imposed upon the importation or exportation from one country to the other of the goods and produce of each which shall not be imposed upon goods of the same kind, when imported from, or exported to any other country."

The last branch of the Article is not, in form at least, introduced as a proviso, qualifying what precedes it, nor in terms does it relate to duties or imposts at all.

It stipulates that neither Power is to grant any favour, privilege, or immunity in matters of commerce or navigation to the subjects or citizens of any other State which shall not be extended to the subjects of the other Power gratuitously or conditionally, according to circumstances. On the best construction we can put upon these vague words, they have not the effect of qualifying or controlling the express and absolute stipulations which precede them. The words may well be satisfied by holding them referable to favours, privileges, and immunities in matters of commerce other than those relating to impost on goods which have been previously expressly provided for; and, on the whole therefore, we think that the construction sought to be put by the Portuguese Minister on this Article is not that which according to its fair interpretation it ought to bear.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 112.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received March 11.)

Temple, March 10, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Murray's letter of the 6th instant, stating that, with reference to my Report of the 13th of January, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Consul at Lisbon, containing the further information with which I requested to be furnished with regard to the right of British subjects in Portugal under the

1868

Treaty of 1842, to exemption from the payment under the name of "imposto de viação," of a per-centage upon the "decima industrial," the maximum amount of which, as fixed by the above-mentioned Treaty, is already levied upon them.

Mr. Murray at the same time returned to me the papers relating to this question which were inclosed in his letter of the 4th of January, and he was pleased to request that I would now favour your Lordship with my opinion as to the merits of the case.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That it appears from Mr. Brackenbury's despatch to your Lordship, that the "imposto de viação" is levied upon persons who do not pay the "decima industrial;" and that the form in which it is levied on such persons is by way of a per-centage upon some other tax or group of taxes to which they are liable. It appears further, that some of the British subjects upon whom the "imposto de viação" is levied, do not pay the "decima industrial," in which case they pay their contribution to the "imposto de viação" in the shape of a per-centage or surcharge upon the "predial" or "pessoal" tax. Under these circumstances I am of opinion that the "imposto de viação" must be regarded as a distinct tax from the "decima industrial," and that the assessment of it upon such British subjects as pay the "decima industrial," in the form of a per-centage upon the latter tax does not affect its character as a distinct tax, and is not a violation of the Treaty privilege of British subjects, which limits the amount of the "decima industrial" payable in their case to a maximum of 20 per cent.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 113.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received September 2.)

Temple, August 31, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Murray's letter of the 17th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me therewith, two letters, dated respectively the 14th and 15th ultimo, from Mr. Mee Mathew, who is Counsel for Mr. F. Andrews, a British subject, resident in Portugal, whose property is alleged to have sustained damage during the civil wars in that country in the years 1833 and 1834, and whose claims on that account have given rise to a long correspondence between Her Majesty's Government and that of Portugal; and Mr. Murray was pleased to request that I would take Mr. Mathew's letter, together with the former papers relating to the case, which were forwarded therewith, into my consideration, and favour your Lordship with my opinion as to whether Her Majesty's Government would be warranted in extending to Mr. Andrews the same unofficial support which, with the concurrence of Her Majesty's Advocate-General, had formerly been afforded to him.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I have perused the whole of the correspondence on the subject of this claim, and see no grounds for differing from the opinions which have been at various times expressed by my predecessors in office. As, however, Mr. Mee Mathew represents, on behalf of Mr. J. Andrews, that Count d'Avilar, who has succeeded the Count de Togal as Minister of Foreign Affairs at Lisbon, is "ready and willing to refer the claim of Mr. J. Andrews to arbitration, if your Lordship will, as your predecessors have done, again urge the Portuguese Government to do so," I think that your Lordship may, without impropriety, instruct Her Majesty's Minister at Lisbon to use his good offices with Count d'Avilar to bring about a settlement of this long-pending claim, by a reference to arbitration.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 114.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received October 13.)

Temple, October 13, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Murray's letter of the 10th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me two letters from Messrs. Capper, Clark, and Rose, complaining of the annulment by the Portuguese Legislature of a contract entered into between them and the Portuguese Government for the construction and working of a submarine telegraph cable between England and Portugal; and Mr. Murray was pleased to request that I would take these papers into consideration, and report to your Lordship my opinion whether the case is one in which your Lordship is called upon to take any or what steps.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That Messrs. Capper, Clark, and Rose appear to have entered into a contract with the Portuguese Government for the construction of a submarine telegraph between England and Portugal, which was approved by a Decree of the King of Portugal, but has been subsequently annulled by a Decree of the Portuguese Cortes.

The complainants state that the concession did not require any submission to the Cortes, but it is not suggested by them that the Cortes had no constitutional power to annul the concession. Upon the statement of facts submitted to your Lordship, I am of opinion that your Lordship is not called upon to direct any official representation to be made to the Portuguese Government in the sense suggested by the complainants, with a view to procure for them the reimbursement of their expenses and "such separation as they may consider themselves entitled to under the circumstances."

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 115.

The Queen's Proctor to Mr. Hammond.—(Received December 21.)

Doctors' Commons, December 21, 1868.

Sir,

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 24th ultimo, stating, that you were directed by Lord Stanley to transmit to me a letter from Messrs. Clarkson and Cooper, dated the 29th April last, requesting his Lordship's intervention in the matter of a collision between the British barque "Meg Merrilies" and the Portuguese vessel of war "Estaphama," and also stating that his Lordship had, on the advice of the Queen's Advocate (whose reports on the subject you transmitted), proposed to the Portuguese Government that the case should be submitted for the arbitration of the Judge of the High Court of Admiralty, and that I should perceive from the inclosed note from Count Lavradio, that the proposal had been accepted. That you were also to inclose sundry documents obtained from the respective parties, which, in the opinion of the Queen's Advocate, would be sufficient to enable the case to be submitted to the Judge of the High Court of Admiralty; and you were therefore to request that I would lose no time in taking steps accordingly, and in offering to take his directions for any assistance he might require.

I beg to state that, in accordance with Lord Stanley's directions, I prepared a case for arbitration, and waited upon the learned Judge of the High Court of Admiralty therewith, who desired me to state, that he thought the case of the Portuguese war-steamer, was left rather "bare," as there was no evidence from the man on deck at the time of the collision, nor were any extracts from the log-book produced. The learned Judge, therefore, thought that the attention of the Portuguese Minister should be called to these facts, with the view of affording him the opportunity of producing the evidence if he be in a position to do so; and, if not, his Lordship will proceed to fix a day for the hearing of the case.

I have, &c.
(Signed) F. H. DYKE.

1868

PORTUGAL.—PRUSSIA.

No. 116.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received December 28.)

Temple, December 28, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 24th instant, stating that, with reference to my Report of the 27th August last, he was directed to transmit to me the draft of a letter which was addressed from the Foreign Office to the Queen's Proctor, explaining the steps which, in compliance with my suggestions, have been taken as regards the proposed arbitration in the case of the "Meg Merrilies" and "Estephania." Mr. Otway also inclosed the reply received from the Queen's Proctor, from which I should perceive that it has been suggested to your Lordship that the Portuguese Legation should have an opportunity of putting in further evidence in support of their case; and was pleased to request that I would furnish your Lordship with my opinion, whether this step can properly be taken, and, if taken, whether any further evidence, which may in consequence be tendered on the Portuguese side, should be communicated to the parties interested in the "Meg Merrilies" before it is laid before the Arbiter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That your Lordship may properly communicate to Count Lavradio the view of the learned Judge of the High Court of Admiralty as to the case of the Portuguese war-steamer having been left rather "bare," in the absence of any affidavit from the man on deck at the time of the collision and any extracts from the log-book of the steamer, and that an opportunity should be offered for such evidence to be tendered on the Portuguese side, if it is thought by him advisable. If any such evidence should be tendered, copies should be furnished on behalf of the war-steamer to the parties interested in the "Meg Merrilies" before the hearing of the case, but it will not be necessary to furnish any such copies to those parties before it is laid before the Arbiter.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

Prussia.

No. 117.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received August 8.)

Temple, August 6, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 28th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me a letter from Mr. Herring, who requested to be informed whether a certificate of naturalization taken out by him in 1855 enables him to claim British protection as against his native country, Prussia, when travelling abroad.

A Memorandum on the subject drawn up in the Foreign Office was also inclosed therewith; and Mr. Egerton was pleased to request that I would have the goodness to take the papers into my consideration, and favour your Lordship with my opinion as to the reply which should be given to Mr. Herring's application.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That it appears from Mr. Herring's letter that he is a native of Prussia, and was naturalized in Great Britain in 1855, and has since that time been established as a merchant in the latter country; I assume, therefore, that his domicil is British at the present time, which is a consideration of preponderating weight, in my opinion, as regards the international status of Mr. Herring whilst he is travelling in any third country.

Your Lordship will, I think, be fully justified by precedent and on principle in

No. 116*.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received May 7.)

Temple, May 6, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Murray's letter of the 30th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me a letter from Mr. Crossthwaite,* formerly Her Majesty's Consul at Cologne, praying that Her Majesty's Government will intervene to procure the annulment of his naturalization, and that of his son, as Prussian subjects, in order that the latter may be exempted from the penalties of not answering the call made upon him for military service in Prussia.

Mr. Murray was pleased to remark that I should see from the annexed Report of the Law Officers of the Crown, dated November 1862,† that the legal liability of Mr. Crossthwaite's son to such service has already been under consideration. It was not considered necessary at that time to make a further reference to the Law Officers; but with reference to the remark in this Report, that it was not stated what was the obligation under which Mr. Crossthwaite had become naturalized, Mr. Murray was pleased to state to me that the obligation was imposed upon Mr. Crossthwaite by the requirements of Prussian military law, and that his Exequatur as Consul at Cologne could not be issued until he had complied with those requirements.

Under these circumstances, Mr. Murray was pleased to request that I would favour your Lordship with my opinion as to whether any, and what, steps should be taken by Her Majesty's Government in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the only mode whereby Mr. Crossthwaite can be denaturalized in Prussia, as far as I am aware, is by obtaining from the Prussian Government what is termed "a permission to emigrate."

The same observation will apply to his son, Mr. Henry Crossthwaite, who appears to have been born in England in 1843, and is therefore now of full age. I apprehend that, under the Prussian law, minor children only, who are still subject to the paternal authority, follow the condition of the father, and that it will be necessary for Mr. Henry Crossthwaite to obtain for himself "a permission to emigrate." As Mr. Henry Crossthwaite appears to have left Prussia in the year 1860, he had not at such time attained the age of 20 years complete, at which age he would have become liable to military service, and would have been bound to present himself before a Military Commission. Mr. Henry Crossthwaite does not therefore seem to have violated the law of Prussia in any other manner than by leaving the Prussian territory without permission, and thereby evading the obligation to present himself at the proper time to the Military Commission. For this he would be liable to a penalty varying from 50 to 1,000 crowns, or to imprisonment for a term varying from one month to one year.

I consider that Mr. Henry Crossthwaite, if he is desirous to divest himself of his Prussian national character, with a view to travel in security in North Germany, ought to comply with the requirements of the Prussian law, and that if he is disposed to do so the good offices of Her Majesty's Government may be exercised in his favour at Berlin to support an application on his part for "a permission to emigrate." He will, however, be required, in all probability, before his application can be entertained, to set himself right with the Prussian authorities, by submitting to any penalty to which he may be liable for leaving Prussia without permission; and I think that the good offices of Her Majesty's Government may also be exercised in his favour in that respect, so that he may be required only to pay the minimum penalty, as there can be no doubt, from Mr. Crossthwaite's statement, that his son was not aware, when he returned to England in 1860, that he was guilty of any breach of Prussian law, and that he did not at that time leave Prussia for the purpose of evading any military obligation, of which fact the Prussian authorities may require to be certified.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

* April 22, 1868.

† Confidential No. 1301, p. 272.

1868

according to Mr. Herring the full protection of the British authorities in any foreign country except Prussia. If Mr. Herring, however, should return to the country of his birth, his domicil of origin may be held to revive, and his native national character will pro tanto revert. But as long as Mr. Herring is travelling on his business as a merchant in any third country, his municipal status as a naturalized subject of the British Crown will entitle him by British law to your Lordship's protection, whilst his international status of a domiciled Englishman will justify your Lordship in claiming from the Government of the country in which he is travelling the same comity which it shows to other members of the same nation.

It is not very probable that Prussia will venture to demand from the Netherlands or France the surrender of Mr. Herring as a Prussian deserter pursuant to the Treaties of 1818 or 1828, which are referred to in the Memorandum which accompanies Mr. Egerton's letter, unless Mr. Herring should return to Prussia, and after his return attempt to evade the obligations of military service by seeking an asylum in the Netherlands or France. They would clearly not be applicable to Mr. Herring, whilst domiciled in England, on occasions of his visiting the Netherlands or France on matters concerned with his mercantile establishment in England.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 118.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received October 31.)

Temple, October 30, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 2nd instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 28th of July last, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a further letter from Mrs. Harper, with its inclosures, respecting the detention in Germany of the illegitimate daughter of her husband by the family with whom the young lady has for some time past been residing; and Mr. Egerton was pleased to request that we would take these papers into consideration and furnish your Lordship with our opinion as to the reply which should be returned to Mrs. Harper's application.

We are also honoured with Mr. Egerton's letter of the 5th instant transmitting a further despatch from Lord Loftus relating to this case.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the proper reply to be sent to Mrs. Harper will be, that it is not in the power of Her Majesty's Government, under the circumstances of this case, to insist on the delivery up of Miss Mary Harper either to Mr., Mrs., or Miss Emma Harper. That the remedy, if any exist, of any person claiming the right of compelling Mr. Ree to deliver up the girl must be in the Prussian Courts.

Whether Mr. Harper, having regard to Mr. Winke's opinion, would think it worth while to resort to those Courts, must rest with him; but there seems every reason for anticipating that such proceedings would not terminate successfully. We think that the substance of the latter part of the Prussian Minister's letter stating the grounds upon which Mr. Ree refuses to give up the girl, and the determination of the Prussian Government that they cannot interfere, might also be communicated to Mrs. Harper.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
RICHARD BAGGALLAY.
TRAVERS TWISS.

Russia.

---

No. 119.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received January 29.)

My Lord, Temple, January 29, 1868.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Murray's letter of the 26th of December, 1867, stating that, with reference to the accompanying Reports from Her Majesty's Advocate-General upon various questions which have been submitted to him respecting the proceedings of Mr. Grenville-Murray,* Her Majesty's Consul-General at Odessa, and to our Reports of the 28th May and 22nd of August last, respecting the question of the validity of a marriage celebrated at Odessa between William Laney and Sarah Cramer, he was directed by your Lordship to inform us that, in consequence of the unsatisfactory nature of Mr. Grenville-Murray's explanations upon these and other points, your Lordship considered it necessary that an inquiry should be instituted at Odessa into his proceedings and into the manner in which he has conducted his official duties; and you accordingly selected Mr. Wilkins, Her Majesty's Consul at Chicago, to undertake this duty.

Mr. Murray was also pleased to state that he was now to transmit to us that gentleman's Report, dated the 18th ultimo, together with the papers and evidence to which it refers; and to request that we would take the papers into our consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion upon the facts which they disclose, and as to the course which Her Majesty's Government should now pursue with respect to Mr. Grenville-Murray.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we have carefully considered the Report of Mr. Wilkins, and the documents referred to therein, and we have had the advantage of conferring with Mr. Wilkins on two occasions. The Report, however, appears to us to be so carefully prepared that we base our observations on the case entirely upon that Report and the documents accompanying it.

With regard to the first question investigated by Mr. Wilkins, viz., the granting of passports to the Ionians, Alexander and John Vucina, we may remark that we have not seen the earlier documents of 1863, referred to in the Report, from the recital of which, however, it appears that, in 1863, Mr. G. Murray had asked for a passport for John Vucina which had been refused by Lord Russell; and it certainly seems difficult to suppose that Mr. G. Murray could have been ignorant that these gentlemen were Ionians and that they ceased to be entitled to British protection upon the cession of the Ionian Islands to Greece in 1864.

It is true, that Mr. Grenville-Murray says he was ignorant that the applicants were Ionians, and, as far as we can judge from the statements before us, it seems difficult to ascribe any improper motive to Mr. G. Murray in allowing the passports to be issued. But upon the facts stated, unless explained, we think that Mr. G. Murray is certainly open to the charge of negligence; for if, as pointed out by Mr. Wilkins, he did not know Messrs. Vucina personally, and did not know them to be entitled to British passports, he should have required confirmation of their statements; and if he did know them personally, it was his duty to satisfy himself that they were so entitled before he gave orders that they should receive passports. Further, we think that under the circumstances of the case Mr. Wilkins' criticism on the form of application is well founded, and that the peculiar statement that the applicants have been British subjects, ought to have attracted attention and led to further inquiry. It must be remembered, however, that Mr. Grenville-Murray was on the eve of quitting Odessa, and that under the pressure of business, and preparation for departure, this may have escaped his notice.

In his letter of the 8th April, 1867, to your Lordship, Mr. Murray writing apparently from recollection, states that the passports were granted on the written declaration of two resident merchants that Messrs. Vucina were British subjects, but we find no declaration by any merchants other than Messrs. Vucina to this effect. The words, quoted apparently by Mr. Wilkins, "and not Ionians," do not appear in this letter. As regards the non-receipt of fees on passports, Mr. Grenville-Murray has already given his explanation. The fact that fees were not received is admitted. Whether Mr. Grenville-Murray acted rightly or improperly in this respect is a question upon which probably it is not expected that we should now express an opinion.

The next case to which Mr. Wilkins refers in his report is that relating to Mr. Charlton's application for the box and papers belonging to Messrs. Furness and Company, and it appears to us unnecessary to make many observations on this matter. The box and papers have been restored, through Mr. A. Cutbill, to Messrs. Furness. Mr. Grenville-Murray and Mr. Charlton are at issue upon the question, whether the latter sent the papers and box to the Consulate for safe custody, or whether the former took possession of them at the request of the late Mr. Cutbill. This is a matter which it seems unnecessary to pursue further. We have not before us Mr. Murray's letter of the 2nd March on this subject to Mr. Grenville-Murray (referred to in the letter of Mr. G. Murray of the 8th April), and cannot judge whether after that letter, which seems to have made a claim on behalf of Mr. Charlton, Mr. G. Murray was justified in handing over the box and papers without further communication with your Lordship to Mr. A. Cutbill. As, however, no complaint on this score was made at the time, we think the matter should not be adverted to now.

At the end of Mr. Wilkins's report on this case, a matter is incidentally mentioned of some importance, as bearing on the Taglioferro case—viz., the fact that M. Antonne's contract, of which a certificate of registration was given, and to which M. Antonne says Mr. G. Murray affixed the seal, bears only a medallion wafer similar to that on document No. 7, and not the Consular Seal.

The report on the Tagliaferro case, and the documents laid before us with reference to this case, are the next matters to which we have to advert.

The principal question that arises upon them is, whether the account already given by Mr. Grenville-Murray and Madame Tagliaferro can be deemed to be a truthful and satisfactory account of the document No. 7, and the purposes for which, and circumstances under which that document was signed, sealed, and issued. We have come to the conclusion that that explanation, read by the light thrown upon the case by the further documents and statements now before us, is wholly unsatisfactory. Of course, we cannot tell what further explanation may be given, nor can we form any opinion as to what Mr. Grenville-Murray's real or assumed position towards Madame Tagliaferro and her children may be; whether he is a trustee or executor under Madame Tagliaferro's late husband's will, or in what other capacity (besides that of Consul) he acts, but we cannot give credit to Mr. Grenville-Murray's statement, even though backed by that of Madame Tagliaferro in letters, which it is difficult to believe were not written in concert with Mr. Grenville-Murray, that the document in question was a draft sent to a man of business for perusal, and not used or intended to be used in the completion of the purchase. It appears to us that documents, and apparently well ascertained circumstances, completely contradict these assertions both of Mr. Grenville-Murray and Madame Tagliaferro, and cast grave suspicion upon both. The impression made on the minds of Messrs. Tubino that they have been made the victims of a fraud, and that the British Consul has aided in the deception, is certainly well justified by present appearances.

Upon the fourth matter referred to by Mr. Wilkins, and upon which he has reported—viz., the irregularities committed by Mr. Grenville-Murray with relation to the solemnization of marriages at Odessa, it appears unnecessary for us to comment at any length, as the letter of the Registrar-General, who has examined the register, and who points out irregularities in it, and also refers to the neglect of duty with respect to certified copies of marriages transmitted from Odessa (though we have no precise information as to the nature of the neglect complained of), is before your Lordship. We think that the Registrar-General should be requested to point out in detail all the informalities he has detected in the register and otherwise, and that Mr. Grenville-Murray's explanation of this charge should be required.

The "Laney" marriage we propose to advert to elsewhere.

The report of Mr. Wilkins on the fifth matter inquired into by him again discloses irregularity and improper conduct on the part of Mr. Grenville-Murray. The instructions of the Foreign Office as to registering births and deaths are not before us, but it appears clear that irregularities in carrying out the instructions have existed, and the special case of "Oakley," adverted to by Mr. Wilkins, calls for serious consideration.

On the question as to Consular fees, it appears that Mr. Wilkins does not consider his Report complete, and as it now stands the Report on this subject hardly calls for

---

* March 14, 25, and 30, April 24, May 28, August 22, 1867.

1868

any observation from us. No doubt, however, sufficient appears on the face of it to justify suspicion that Mr. Grenville-Murray was either lax in exacting the proper fees, or negligent in accounting for them.

With respect to the "Laney" marriage, the further information obtained by Mr. Wilkins shows that Mr. Horowitz says that he had a special authority (which he offers to produce) from Mr. G. Murray to act for him, and a draft letter, the original of which we presume was sent by Laney to Mr. Horowitz states, whether truly or falsely we know not, that the Rev. Mr. Clarke performed the ceremony in Mr. Horowitz's presence.

If a clergyman performed the ceremony, it may be valid, though Mr. G. Murray was not present, and either did not appoint, or could not by law appoint a substitute. The information on this case is still incomplete and unsatisfactory. We agree in thinking that the signature in the Register is not that of Mr. Horowitz (if his other signature be genuine), and it remains doubtful whether, if Mr. Horowitz were present, he acted otherwise than as a witness to the marriage.

Your Lordship will probably think that the first charge (as to the passports), is reduced to a charge of neglect on the part of Mr. Grenville-Murray, in not taking further precautions to ascertain that Messrs. Vucina were entitled to British passports, and that the second (Charlton's) need not be further noticed.

The other charges all require explanation, especially the Tagliaferro case, for as to the others to which we have adverted (except as regards the Laney marriage) the facts cannot, we presume, be much in dispute.

We think that a written statement of the results of Mr. Wilkins' investigation, should be sent to Mr. Grenville-Murray, in order that he may make such explanation or comment as he may deem right, and that he should be informed of the existence of the documents upon which in part the Report is based, and which apparently lead to the inference that his former explanations are insufficient. An offer should be made to him of copies of such documents as he desires to have, with an intimation that he may see the originals at the Foreign Office if he should wish to do so, or perhaps as regards the less important and more bulky documents, such as the extracts from Maltese tribunals, he should be offered inspection with liberty to take any extracts he may require. The same observation applies to the registers brought from Odessa.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
C. J. SELWYN.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 120.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received February 26.)

My Lord,
Temple, February 26, 1868.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Murray's letter of the 12th instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 29th ultimo, he was directed by your Lordship to state to us that your Lordship called upon the Registrar-General to give the details which we suggested that he should be asked for, regarding the irregularities of Mr. E. C. Grenville-Murray, Her Majesty's Consul-General at Odessa, with respect to the registration of births, deaths, and marriages.

Mr. Murray was also pleased to state that those details are recorded in the accompanying letter from the Registrar-General, and to request that we would favour your Lordship with my opinion as to whether the facts pointed out by the Registrar-General call for any and what action on the part of Her Majesty's Government.

Mr. Murray was at the same time to inform us that a copy of Mr. Wilkins' Report has been forwarded to Mr. Grenville-Murray for any observations that he may have to offer thereon; and that Mr. Grenville-Murray has availed himself of the offer made to him to be allowed to inspect at the Foreign Office the documents inclosed in Mr. Wilkins' Report.

Mr. Murray added that Mr. Grenville-Murray on these occasions has been accompanied by his solicitor.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we think that the attention of Mr. Grenville-Murray should be directed to the irregularities and omissions in his performance of duty pointed out by the Registrar-General as the result of his examination of the Register which it was the duty of Mr. Grenville-Murray to keep, and in the transmission of certified copies of the Registrar-General's Department.

We think, however, that the substance only of the Report of the Registrar-General should be forwarded to Mr. Grenville-Murray; and as there are certain comments, statements, and observations which it is not, in our opinion, expedient to incorporate in the document sent to Mr. Murray, we have thought it best to forward with this Report a draft letter which your Lordship may think proper and sufficient for the purpose of pointing out to Mr. Murray the irregularities and omissions which appear to exist in the Registers and the breaches of duty which require explanation.

We have taken this course because we think it open to doubt whether the Registrar-General's views as to the construction of some of the Statutes to which he refers can be supported, and on this point we would beg leave to call attention to the following remarks:—

The second irregularity noticed by the Registrar (which we have numbered in pencil (2) in the margin) would not be penal under sec. 42 of 6 and 7 Will. IV, cap. 86, unless it could be proved that Mr. Grenville-Murray, "while he had the custody of the Register Book, carelessly allowed the same to be injured whilst in his keeping."

In the charges numbered by us in pencil 3, 4, 5, and 6, all reference to the Statute 6 and 7 Will. IV, cap. 85, and the felonies created by that statute had better be avoided as it is open to grave doubt whether, although that statute is, by one of its sections, incorporated with 6 and 7 Will. IV, cap. 86; and the 12 and 13 Vict., cap. 68, is, by sec. 18, incorporated with the last-mentioned statute, such incorporation extends to the statute 6 and 7 Will. IV, cap. 85, so as to make that statute a part of the Foreign Marriages Act. The comment of the Registrar-General on case 7 ought also in our opinion to be omitted.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

Inclosure in No. 120.

Draft of Despatch to Mr. Grenville-Murray.

Foreign Office,

Sir,

BY the direction of Lord Stanley the Registrar-General has been directed to report on the state of the Register of Births, Marriages, and Deaths recently kept by you as Consul-General at Odessa; and I am desired by his Lordship to call your attention to the following irregularities and omissions which have been pointed out to his Lordship by that officer:—

The entries of marriages have not been made in regular order from the beginning to the end of the book, as required by the Foreign Marriage Act.

The Register, which ought to have been carefully kept, appears to be in a mutilated condition.

It appears that in the case of the marriage of R. F. Oakley and E. Fletcher, No. 17, solemnized 23rd August, 1863, by banns, the notice was given on the 17th of August and the certificate granted on the same day, in contravention of the provisions of the Foreign Marriage Act.

In the case of the marriage of J. Dismore and E. Somosky, No. 18, solemnized on 17th January, 1864, notice appears to have been given on 7th January, 1864, and a certificate dated on the same day but not signed. The marriage appears to have been solemnized before the expiration of twenty-one days, and without certificate being duly issued.

With respect to the marriage of W. Laney and J. Cramer, No. 19, solemnized 14th September, 1865, the notice is dated the 22nd August, 1865, and in it the essential particulars as to dwelling-place and length of residence are left blank, and the license appears to have been granted on the same day. This marriage is recorded as celebrated according to the rites of the churches of England and Scotland. There is no signature of Consul-General, or of any person described as duly authorized to act for him, appended to this entry.

With respect to the marriage of G. Goddard and M. Vasilima (No. 20), solemnized on 18th October, the notice is not signed by either party, and is dated $\frac{\text{27th September}}{\text{9th October}}$, 1865. The certificate is not signed by the Consul-General, but is dated the 9th October, 1865.

1868

The Registrar-General points out that, in the Register of Births, No. 13, the birth of Jane Sarah Oakley is recorded as having occurred at Steblow on the 24th August, 1863; whereas the father and mother are registered as having been married at Odessa the day before,—Steblow being, as it is understood, far distant from Odessa. At No. 15 in the book the same mother is recorded (forty-seven days after the birth of Jane Sarah Oakley at Steblow) to have given birth to a boy, Richard Thomas Oakley, at Kieff, on 10th October, 1863.

With respect to your conduct in transmitting certified copies of registers to the Registrar-General's Department, it is stated by the Registrar-General that he has had to notice improper delays in such transmission; that the copies have not been on proper forms; that in some cases it appears that wrong dates have been inserted; and that there have been irregularities in certifying such copies and attaching the Consular seal.

The irregularities in your conduct, with reference to your duties in and in connection with the solemnization of marriages, have led to serious inconvenience, and have caused doubts to be thrown on the validity of marriages, which have rendered it necessary to pass a special Act of Parliament; and I am directed to ask for any explanation you may desire to furnish as to these charges of improper conduct and neglect in the discharge of the duties of your office.

I remain, &c.

[J. B. K.
W. B. B.
T. T.]

---

No. 121.

Queen's Advocate's Report, March 5, 1868.

---

No. 122.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received April 3.)

Temple, April 2, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Murray's letter of the 12th ultimo, stating that, with reference to our Reports of the 26th February and 29th January, and to previous correspondence respecting the inquiry into the conduct of Mr. Grenville-Murray, Her Majesty's Consul-General for Odessa, he was directed to transmit to us the accompanying letter from Messrs. Cookson, Wainwright, and Co., solicitors to Mr. Grenville-Murray, asking, on behalf of that gentleman, for copies of various documents relating to the inquiry. A Memorandum drawn up by Mr. Wilkins, to whom the application was referred, was also inclosed, and Mr. Murray was pleased in request that we would furnish your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer that should be returned to Messrs. Cookson, Wainwright, and Co.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the general rule to be observed with respect to the application of Mr. Grenville-Murray is, that he, or his advisers, should be allowed to inspect and take copies of all documents in the possession or under the control of the Foreign Office which have any relevancy to the charges made against Mr. Grenville-Murray, so as to enable him to answer or explain those charges. Any written instructions given by the Secretary of State to Mr. Wilkins or to any person ordering inquiry to be made, or any communication made privately to the Foreign Office, should be considered confidential communications, as should cases laid before the Law Officers and opinions on such cases, and production of such documents should be refused. Any application for the production of documents not in the possession, or under the control of the Foreign Office at home or abroad, or of any document equally accessible to Mr. Grenville-Murray as to any Agent of the Foreign Office should be refused.

These answers will, we believe, easily enable your Lordship to determine as to each of the seventy-three applications made on behalf of Mr. Grenville-Murray.

We think that the answer to be given to Messrs. Cookson and Co. might properly be to the effect following:—

That the Report of Mr. Wilkins is founded, as is to be gathered from the Report itself, upon statements made to him in the course of the investigation directed by your Lordship, which investigation Mr. Grenville-Murray declined to attend, and not solely on documentary evidence.

That it is your Lordship's desire that every facility should be afforded to Mr. Grenville-Murray and his advisers to inspect every document in the control of the Foreign Office referred to in Mr. Wilkins' Report, and upon which that Report is based, and that these will be produced at the Foreign Office for inspection upon reasonable notice.

That your Lordship is not aware that there are under the control of the Foreign Office at Odessa or elsewhere, papers, deeds, documents, letters, or accounts belonging to Mr. Grenville-Murray, relating to the estate of the late M. Simon Tagliaferro and his family, but that your Lordship will give instructions that any papers, &c., in the custody or under the control of the Foreign Office in Odessa or elsewhere, relating to such estate, and which are necessary to enable Mr. Grenville-Murray to answer or explain the charges made against him, shall, on application, be produced. That your Lordship cannot consent that private Reports made to the Foreign Office, cases submitted to the Law Officers, and their opinions, instructions given to Mr. Wilkins, and other documents of a like description mentioned in the list, and assumed, in some cases erroneously, to be in existence, and which in no way tend to prove or rebut any charge made against Mr. Grenville-Murray, shall be produced; and that, while it is impossible for your Lordship to answer Messrs. Cookson, Wainwright, and Co. more specifically than you have done, in stating what existing documents included in the list can properly be produced, your Lordship will at all times, subject to what is above stated, be ready to consider any application for the production of any particular document that may be required to insure Mr. Grenville-Murray every opportunity of answering the charges made against him.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.
TRAVERS TWISS.

No. 123.

Queen's Advocate's Report, April 17, 1868.

---

No. 124.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received April 30.)

My Lord, Temple, April 29, 1868.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 24th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me a despatch and its inclosures which your Lordship had received from Her Majesty's Ambassador at St. Petersburgh (No. 38), respecting the arrest and sentence of expulsion from Russia which has been pronounced against a British subject named Demartino, under the circumstances therein set forth; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take these papers into my consideration, and report to your Lordship my opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That the circumstances of this case are not such, in my opinion, as to call for your Lordship's intervention.

It appears that the Russian authorities at Odessa or at St. Petersburgh have put in force against Mr. Demartino, a native of Malta, certain police regulations authorizing the expulsion of foreigners, whose conduct may have afforded grounds for suspicion to those authorities.

The grounds of suspicion in the present case have their foundation in a letter which was addressed by Mr. Demartino, when he was in London in 1866, to his partner, Mr. Goldstein, inclosing a Warsaw bank-note of 150 roubles for sale, and stating that if he could undertake the sale of such paper, certain parties in London would give him (Demartino) a large quantity, and allow them (Demartino and Goldstein) 50 per cent. discount.

This letter was, upon its receipt, placed by Mr. Goldstein at once in the hands of the Russian authorities at Odessa, as the bank-note was one of a large parcel of notes stolen from the Bank of Warsaw, and the matter was referred to the authorities at St. Petersburgh.

Mr. Demartino seems not to have returned to Odessa until, according to the report of Her Majesty's Consul, "the matter had quieted down," but the attempt to put the stolen bank-notes into circulation at a commission of 50 per cent., seems to have rendered Mr. Demartino an object of deserved suspicion to the Russian authorities.

Mr. Demartino has submitted to Her Majesty's Minister at St. Petersburgh a version of this transaction, which is irreconcilable with his own letter, and upon which your Lordship, in my opinion, would not be warranted in placing any reliance.

There being thus just and substantial grounds of suspicion against Mr. Demartino, I consider that the objection, to which Her Majesty's Minister alludes, respecting charges against foreigners in Russia being dealt with administratively instead of judicially, would hardly apply to a case in which the overt act, which has given rise to the suspicion, has been committed beyond the limits of Russian jurisdiction.

I have, &c.

(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 125.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received April 30.)

Temple, April 30, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Murray's letter of the 22nd April instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 2nd instant, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter dated the 17th instant, from Messrs. Cookson and Wainwright, acting on behalf of Mr. Grenville-Murray, requesting to be informed as to which of the documents connected with the case, enumerated in the list inclosed by them,* can be communicated to them, as well as with the grounds on which the production of any of the documents is declined by your Lordship.

Mr. Murray was pleased to say that he would perceive from that letter that Messrs. Cookson and Wainwright state that it will not be in their power satisfactorily to discharge their duty towards Mr. Grenville-Murray under the disadvantage of being precluded from seeing documents which they consider "throw valuable light on the proceedings of Mr. Wilkins."

That from the correspondence connected with the case, as already communicated to us, we are aware that the matter at present in question does not relate to the proceedings of Mr. Wilkins, whose Report on the case was only communicated to Mr. Grenville-Murray, as your Lordship was unwilling to arrive at a final decision on the case without affording to him an opportunity of furnishing such explanations as he might have to offer in the matter; that from the tone of Messrs. Cookson and Wainwright's letter, as quoted, there is, however, reason to surmise that the object which the parties now have in view, is to avail themselves of the opportunity thus afforded them by your Lordship to advance charges founded on the proceedings of Mr. Wilkins in discharging the duty entrusted to him by your Lordship; and that under these circumstances your Lordship is of opinion that the time has now arrived for recalling the matter to the issue which was contemplated by your Lordship, by informing

---

* Minute of Messrs. Cookson and Co.'s letter; Former papers; Messrs. Cookson and Co., March 4; to Messrs. Cookson and Co., April 3; Law Officers, April 3, 1868.

1868

Mr. Grenville-Murray, to whom alone your Lordship proposes that further communications in the matter should henceforward be addressed from your office, that he must now give a definite answer to the charges brought against him.

That, in making to Mr. Grenville-Murray a communication in this sense, he would be reminded that, when your Lordship deputed Mr. Wilkins to make the investigation into his proceedings, every opportunity was afforded to him to be present at the inquiry thus set on foot, and that he alone is responsible for any disadvantage which he may consider himself to have suffered owing to his not having availed himself of your Lordship's offer; Mr. Grenville-Murray's attention would also be called to the permission granted to him by your Lordship to visit the Foreign Office with his solicitor for the purpose of inspecting such documents connected with the case as could properly be placed before him, and he would be informed that, as he has now been enabled to make himself acquainted with the charges brought against him, and had been given every opportunity for explanations or observations, your Lordship only suspends a final decision in the matter, until your Lordship learns whether Mr. Grenville-Murray has any statements to advance in his defence.

Mr. Murray was pleased further to state, that your Lordship would be glad to learn our opinion as to the course thus proposed to be pursued in the present position of the case; but your Lordship requested that we would also report our view as to the propriety of two alternative courses, the one being whether Mr. Grenville-Murray might not properly be required to answer the specific charges contained in Mr. Wilkins' Report, without being put in possession of the grounds on which those charges were made; the second course being the indictment of Mr. Grenville-Murray for the malpractices laid to his charge in the matter of the marriages, and of Madame Tagliaferro's property.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we concur in thinking that a letter should be addressed to Mr. Grenville-Murray in the sense proposed, and that in acknowledging the receipt of Messrs. Cookson and Co.'s letter they should be referred to Mr. Murray's letter, and informed that Lord Stanley has addressed a letter to Mr. Grenville-Murray apprizing him that all further communications must take place directly between him and the Foreign Office, and that upon the charges made against Mr. Grenville-Murray of official irregularities and breaches of duties which have been brought pointedly to the attention of Mr. Grenville-Murray, and upon which his Lordship is awaiting his answer, his Lordship cannot enter into further correspondence with his solicitors.

We think that, whilst Mr. Grenville-Murray should be pressed for his answer to the charges at an early date, all reasonable indulgence should still be afforded him for the purpose of giving his answer. Mr. Grenville-Murray's policy will probably be to make out a case of hardship and difficulty in bringing forward his answer to the charges; it will be desirable not to give him any opportunity of setting up as a grievance that every reasonable opportunity has not been afforded him of meeting the charges made against him.

As to the alternative courses, to which our attention is directed, it appears to us that Mr. Grenville-Murray has already been put in possession of the grounds on which the specific charges were made, and the offer to give him access to documents cannot, we think, be retracted.

As to the second course, we do not think that it would be expedient to adopt criminal proceedings against him either with reference to the marriage registers or the Tagliaferro property. We are by no means prepared to say from our recollection of the facts that there is evidence on either of those charges sufficient to convict Mr. Grenville-Murray in a Criminal Court.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 126.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received May 28.)

My Lord,
Temple, May 26, 1868.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Murray's letter of the 19th instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 30th ultimo, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the following papers connected with Mr. Grenville-Murray's case:—

1. The draft of a letter from the Foreign Office, calling upon him for his final explanations;
2. Mr. Grenville-Murray's reply;
3. Mr. Wilkins' Memorandum on the statements contained in that reply; and,
4. The draft of a letter which your Lordship proposes to address to Mr. Grenville-Murray, communicating to him the decision at which your Lordship has arrived in the matter.

Mr. Murray was pleased to state that we should perceive that, in dealing with the case, it is your Lordship's intention to confine yourself to the facts which concern the manner in which Mr. Grenville-Murray has discharged his official duties, and that various subjects of complaint against Mr. Grenville-Murray, which have been under our consideration, are not alluded to in the proposed letter. That the matter thus assumes an official, rather than a legal form; but, inasmuch as the general charges brought against Mr. Grenville-Murray have been under our consideration, Mr. Murray was pleased to request that we would report to your Lordship at our earliest convenience our opinion whether we concur in the terms of the letter which your Lordship proposes to address to Mr. Grenville-Murray.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the first ground upon which it is stated in the draft letter proposed to be sent to Mr. Grenville-Murray, that your Lordship recommends the commission of Mr. Grenville-Murray to be cancelled, relates to the Vucina passports.

We would submit that Mr. Grenville-Murray may take exception to the grounds of the conclusion in this case.

The statement of Mr. Grenville-Murray, in his answer to the Report of Mr. Wilkins, may be read as amounting to this: that although he would have implicitly trusted a statement of a member of the Vucina firm that he was a British subject (page 27), yet his invariable rule (14) was to require the written declaration of two resident merchants as to the nationality of the applicant; and he states (page 20) that he probably gave general instructions to Mr. Perkins (who, we believe, actually issued the passports) only to issue passports on the usual evidence being furnished.

Taking Mr. Grenville-Murray's whole statement together, we suggest that he may contend that it amounts to this: that even where he implicitly trusted a statement made by one of the Vucina firm, he would still have had a certificate by two merchants in pursuance of the rules of the office, and that he did not order Mr. Perkins to issue the passports except in ordinary course—that is, after production of such a certificate. His explanation is not consistent with his letters of February 1867 and March 1867, but if your Lordship thinks our view of the present statement of Mr. Grenville-Murray correct, a modification of the first conclusion will be desirable.

The second conclusion is founded on Mr. Grenville-Murray's statement (page 183). The refutation of the accuracy of the statement is contained in the despatch which was addressed to Mr. Grenville-Murray. We presume that he does not deny the receipt of this document.

We would suggest the addition of such words as we have inserted in the margin, because your Lordship will probably think that it was culpable negligence on the part of Mr. Grenville-Murray to act without having copies of the Statutes to guide him in matters of so much importance.

As to the third conclusion, we would suggest that it can hardly be said that the fact of a register having been furnished is "proved" by the despatches quoted. A modification of this part of the draft may be thought expedient.

Subject to the above observations, and to one or two marginal suggestions, we think that, if your Lordship considers that official negligence, warranting dismissal, is sufficiently established by the conclusions arrived at, the letter is such as may be sent to Mr. Grenville-Murray.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.
TRAVERS TWISS.

1868

No. 127.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received June 2.)

Temple, June 1, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Murray's letter of the 29th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to inform us that, in pursuance of our suggestions as made in our Report of the 26th ultimo, your Lordship amended your letter to Mr. Grenville-Murray, and dispatched it in the form recorded in the accompanying draft. That its receipt had been that day acknowledged by Mr. Grenville-Murray in the accompanying letter, in which we should observe he denies the right of Her Majesty's Secretary of State to cancel Her Majesty's Commission; and Mr. Murray was pleased to request the favour of our opinion whether any, and if so, what, notice should at present be taken of that letter or of its contents.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we think that Mr. Grenville-Murray's letter requires no answer beyond a mere acknowledgment, coupled perhaps, with an intimation that no effect will be given to his protest against the cancellation of Her Majesty's Commission contained in that letter.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 128.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received June 2.)

Temple, June 2, 1868.

My Lord,

We are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 6th April last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch from Sir Andrew Buchanan, respecting the claim of the Russain Tribunals to exercise jurisdiction over persons in the employment of foreign Embassies and Legations at St. Petersburgh; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take these papers into consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion respecting this question, and as to the reply which should be returned to Sir Andrew Buchanan's despatch.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That it is somewhat difficult for us to determine the real meaning and effect of the 230th Article of the Criminal Code as completed or supplemented by the addition recently made. If the meaning of this Article be, that, in the absence of Treaty, crimes and offences of all persons in the service of Ambassadors, Ministers, and other Diplomatic Agents are subject to criminal trial on the ordinary basis, that is, as any other criminal or offender, only that the process or citation must be made through its Minister of Foreign Affaires, it appears to us objectionable and contrary to international usage; but if the meaning really be, that the trials of such persons are to be before the ordinary tribunals, but that the culprit is only to be bound to appear if the foreign Minister or Ambassador in whose service he is, shall do that which under ordinary circumstances would be done, namely, send the accused before the Court on proper application from the Russian Minister, reserving the power of refusing to waive his privilege of keeping his servant back, we think that there is no objection to it.

The Clause of the Civil Code, 225, appears to us to be in accordance with international law; but if by the new "observation" it is intended to compel persons being in the service of Ministers &c., to appear against the wish and without the consent of the Minister, before the ordinary tribunals, we think that it is objectionable. We would venture to suggest that before any remonstrance is addressed to the Russian Court on the subject of these laws, it would be expedient for Sir A. Buchanan to take an opinion of a Russian lawyer as to what, according to the Russian law, is the true scope and meaning of the Criminal and Civil Codes as now amended, and if the recognized interpretation be, that all persons in the service of the Minister, or "belonging to foreign Embassies," by which we understand members of the official suite, are to be bound to appear before the Courts, whether the Minister consents or not, remonstrance against a law, so likely to be productive of inconvenience and discomfort to the Minister, should be made.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 129.

The Attorney- and Solicitor-General to Lord Stanley.—(Received August 3.)

Temple, July 31, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 11th July instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 2nd June last, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us, together with the former papers,* the accompanying further despatch from Sir A. Buchanan,† on the question of the jurisdiction of Russian Tribunals over foreign Missions in Russia; and to request that we would again take the matter into consideration, and favour your Lordship with opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have again taken the matter into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That the Report of Mr. Roebuck upon the Code and Oukase appears to us to render it unnecessary to object to or remonstrate against the law. The 230th section of the Criminal Code is said by him to apply to those servants only who would be amenable to the ordinary Russian Tribunals. That section, however, is silent as to the mode in which such servants are to be served with process, and the supplementary law provides for the mode of procedure, ordering the service of citation to be made through the Minister of Foreign Affairs. We presume that that Minister receiving the citation would communicate with the Ambassador or Minister in whose employment the servant is, so as to consult the Ambassador or Minister as to the mode and time of serving the citation on the offender. This would be a proper and recognized course, and we think could not be objected to. The 225th section of the Code of Civil Procedure and its supplement also apply, as Mr. Roebuck states, only to such servants as before mentioned of the Ambassadors, and, as explained seems unobjectionable. By the service of process through the Foreign Minister who, as we have assumed, would consult the Ambassador as to the time and mode of service on the servant, all practical inconvenience to the Ambassador will be avoided.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.

---

Saxony.

No. 130.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received February 21.)

Temple, February 21, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letters of the 18th instant, stating that, with reference to my letter of the 18th December of last year, stating that further information should be obtained respecting the case of Mr. Joseph Warburton now in prison at Dresden, he was directed by your Lordship to

---

* Sir A. Buchanan, No. 21, March 27; to Sir A. Buchanan, No. 43, June 6, 1868.

† Sir A. Buchanan, No. 141, July 4, 1868.

1868

transmit to me a despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires in that city, containing a statement of the case which has been drawn up by Mr. Warburton's lawyer; and Mr. Egerton was pleased to request that I would favour your Lordship with my opinion as to what should be done in the matter.

The previous correspondence was therewith inclosed for my convenience.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That it appears from Dr. Gunner's statement that Mr. Joseph Warburton has been arrested on a criminal charge, and that the District Court of Dresden, before which the prosecution has been instituted, has declined to accept bail on his behalf. I do not think that it would be advisable for your Lordship to authorize Mr. Burnley to lay any statement privately before the Saxon Minister of Justice. If the health of Mr. Joseph Warburton is suffering from his imprisonment, that circumstance ought to be brought to the notice of the District Court in the ordinary way, and it will be for that Court to determine whether it can consistently with its own rules of procedure accede to an application made on those grounds. It does not appear that any such application has been made as yet to that Court. On the other hand, no suggestions has been made by Dr. Gunner of any unwarrantable delay in the conduct of the case, which would justify an intervention of your Lordship with the Saxon Minister of Justice with a view to expedite the examination of accounts, which are admitted to be of a very complicated character.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

Siam.

No. 131.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received July 9.)

My Lord,

Temple, July 8, 1868.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 20th June ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from the Colonial Office, dated the 18th untimo, forwarding a correspondence which has taken place between the Siamese Government and the Governor of Singapore, relative to the apprehension in that Colony of a Chinaman accused of coining Siamese money; and to request that we would take the papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the course that should be pursued in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers submitted to us into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we are of opinion that the answer of the Governor of Singapore to the Siamese Minister of Foreign Affairs is correct.

The statute 24 and 25 Vict., cap. 99, sections 18 to 24 inclusive, may serve as a guide for the legislation proposed by the Governor, though the statute itself not having we believe been extended to the Colonies by statute similar to the 16 and 17 Vict., cap. 48, has no operation or effect there. It appears to us right that the defect in the Criminal Law should, as proposed by the Governor, be remedied by legislation in the Colony as soon as possible.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 131*.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received July 13.)

Temple, July 13, 1368.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 28th of April last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a correspondence with the Colonial Office respecting a Convention which it is proposed to conclude with the Rajah of Queddah, a dependent of Siam,* and to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether there is anything objectionable in the provisions of the proposed Convention.

We are also honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 3rd of June ultimo, stating that, with reference to Mr. Egerton's letter of the 28th April, forwarding a correspondence with the Colonial Office in regard to a Convention which it is proposed to conclude with the Rajah of Queddah, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a further letter, dated May 25, from the Colonial Office, inclosing a copy of a despatch which has been received from the Governor of the Straits Settlements, forwarding, for ratification, a Treaty which he has entered into on the part of Her Majesty's Government with that of Siam respecting Queddah; and to request that we would take this Treaty into our consideration as a substitute for the Draft of Convention then before us, and favour your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That as the proposed Treaty sent to us on the 3rd ultimo is in substitution of the Convention forwarded to us with the previous papers, it seems unnecessary to make any comment on the form or terms of the latter document.

The new Treaty professes to be made by his Excellency the Governor on the part of Her Britannic Majesty, and the Commissioners on the part of the King of Siam, with the consent of Phya Sayburee Yeang de per Tuan of Queddah, and, by Article VI it is to come into operation from the date of the execution thereof by his Excellency the Governor of the Straits Settlements and the Siamese Commissioners, from which date all former Treaties, &c., are to be void, and after the signing of the Treaty it is to be submitted for ratification to Her Britannic Majesty and the King of Siam. It is signed by his Excellency, and the Commissioners, and by Phya Sayburee. We advert to this because, as we understand, the Governor had no power to enter into such a Treaty, and the question whether, under the circumstances, it should be recognized and ratified by Her Majesty if unobjectionable in substance, is one of policy.

The clause upon which we presume it is principally desired that we should report, is Article IV, relating to extradition. This Article states that "all convicts or prisoners awaiting trial, or persons against whom warrants for their arrest may be issued" for the crimes specified, who escape from British possessions into Queddah, or who may be found within the Kingdom of Queddah, shall upon formal requisition from the Governor of the Straits Settlements, or the Lieutenant-Governor of Penang to Phya Sayburee, be delivered up. It would be wise to exclude British subjects from the operation of this clause; and if, as we gather, Phya Sayburee is the name of the present King or Rajah of Queddah, and not the title of the Ruler, an alteration should be made in this respect, otherwise the Treaty will become inoperative on the demise of the present Ruler. The Article is defective in that part of it which stipulates that "in like manner all convicts or prisoners charged with similar offences," who may effect their escape from Queddah into British territory, shall be surrendered, inasmuch as the words "such" should precede "convicts," and after word "prisoners," the words "as aforesaid, and all persons against whom warrants for their arrest may be issued for the crimes hereafter specified," should be inserted, and the words "charged with similar offences" struck out.

As regards the crimes and offences specified, we would remark that "gang robbery" and "great personal violence," are not terms known to English law, and unless these terms are recognized in Siam and in the Straits Settlements, it would be better to have some terms known in both countries to express the crimes. Breach of prison, unless when the person is imprisoned for a criminal offence, should hardly be included. Breach of trust, too, we should think, might be omitted, and "attempts to commit any of these offences" seems too wide. It is difficult to understand how an attempt to commit perjury could be proved. The Treaty might, however, properly include attempts to commit murder, rape, burglary, arson, and robbery.

---

* Colonial Office, March 17; Extract to Colonial Office, March 25; Colonial Office, April 22, 1868.

We think for the above reasons that the clause is defective in form and substance, and that the Treaty should not be ratified as it now stands.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 132.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received November 21.)

Temple, November 20, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 2nd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me a despatch from Her Majesty's Acting Consul in Siam (No. 48), inclosing copies of a correspondence which has passed between himself and the Siamese Government, in regard to the destruction by conflagration of some British property, which originated in an attempt of the Siamese authorities to arrest some Chinese opium smugglers; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take these papers into my consideration, and favour your Lordship with my opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That I think the more advisable course for your Lordship to pursue, will be to put aside entirely the question which is in dispute between Her Majesty's Acting Consul and the Siamese authorities, as to the origin of the conflagration, to instruct Mr. Alabaster to press his claim for compensation to be made to the British tenants of the Bazaar on the non-fulfilment of the obligations contracted on the part of the Siamese authorities, under Article I of the Treaty concluded by Sir John Bowring, which stipulates that "all British subjects coming to Siam shall receive from the Siamese Government full protection and assistance, to enable them to reside in Siam in all security." With regard to the point in dispute, I consider Her Majesty's Acting Consul is justified in relying on the depositions of the witnesses examined before himself, whom the Siamese authorities refused to examine. They have deposed to having seen a Siamese, whom they agree in identifying as far as the description of his dress and his person goes, with a lighted torch, evidently engaged on the outside in setting fire to the compound; whilst the inquiry before the Siamese authorities, in the course of which a Chinaman has been produced to say that he set fire to the compound on the inside in self-defence, has not elicited any corroboration from witnesses who saw him do any such act. But, however that may be, Captain Ames, a British subject, in command of the police force of the Siamese Government, was present on the spot to protect and aid the opium farmer's agents in storming the compound, and capturing its inhabitants. It is stated by the British witnesses examined before the Acting Consul, that they called Captain Ames' attention to the progress of the fire, and he refused to interfere, although his own Report to the Siamese authorities shows that he had a force of ninety armed policemen with him to assist and protect the opium farmer's agents; and that after the compound was set on fire, no active resistance was made. He further reports, that the fire spread rapidly, and caught the adjacent house; but he does not state that the police made any effort whatever to arrest the fire, or to protect or save the property of the innocent British tenants of the adjoining bazaar. Under these circumstances, I think, that the Siamese Government is responsible for the default of its police in not affording due protection and assistance to the British tenants of the bazaar, who applied for it, and who were especially entitled to it under Article I of the Treaty to which reference has been above made, and to which Her Majesty's Acting Consul has called the attention of the Siamese Minister of Foreign Affairs in his despatch of 9th September, 1868.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 133.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received December 11.)

Temple, December 10, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 16th November ultimo, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 13th July, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from the Colonial Office, dated the 10th ultimo, inclosing for your Lordship's approval a further Draft of Convention to be concluded between Her Majesty's Government and the Rajah of Queddah; and to request that we would take this letter into our consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer which should be returned thereto.

For our convenience, Mr. Hammond was pleased to transmit to us the former papers on this subject.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we think that your Lordship may properly approve the course suggested in the despatch of Mr. Alabaster of the 18th March last addressed to your Lordship, and which his Grace the Duke of Buckingham and Chandos considers will best facilitate the conclusion of the Treaty, namely, that the Treaty should be concluded between the Siamese Government and Her Majesty's Consul after consultation with Sir H. Ord, and with the formal adhesion of the Rajah.

With regard to the substance of the Treaty, we would suggest that, in the Ist Article, the words "shall cease and determine" should be substituted for "shall be null and void." The crimes described as "gang robbery," and "great personal violence," should be properly defined by persons conversant with local law, as suggested by the Colonial Office and other attempts to commit those crimes as defined as well as the crimes of murder, robbery, arson, rape, and burglary, ought, we think, to be crimes warranting extradition.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
RICHARD BAGGALLAY.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 134.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received December 11.)

Temple, December 10, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 4th instant, stating that, with reference to his letter of the 2nd, and to my Report of the 20th ultimo, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me a further despatch from Mr. Alabaster, Her Majesty's Acting Consul in Siam (No. 54), inclosing copies of a correspondence which has passed between himself and the Governor of the Straits Settlements in regard to a difficulty as to a question of Treaty rights which has arisen between Mr. Alabaster and the Siamese Government on account of the injury done to the property of British subjects at Bangkok by a conflagration which broke out in consequence of a disturbance between some opium smugglers and the Siamese police.

Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take these papers into my consideration, and favour your Lordship with my opinion on the view taken by the Colonial Attorney-General at Singapore in this matter.

For my convenience, the former despatches connected with this question were therewith transmitted to me.*

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken these papers into consideration and have the honour to report—

That, upon the view which I have ventured to suggest in my previous Report, that the breach of Treaty, upon which it would be advisable for for Her Majesty's Consul at Bangkok to rely, was, in regard to the failure of the Siamese Government under Article I of the Treaty of the 18th April, 1855, to give "full protection and assistance to British subjects to enable them to reside in Siam in full security, no question would arise as to the proper mode of inquiry for the purpose of ascertaining

---

* From Mr. Knox, Nos. 48 and 51; to Mr. Knox, Nos. 6 and 7.

1868

the origin of the conflagration. If, however, it were necessary to determine this subordinate question, it would appear from Mr. Alabaster's despatch to Admiral Keppel (September 9, 1868) that, upon the report of the British subjects whose property had been destroyed, and who charged the agents of the opium farmer with having set fire to the building, Mr. Alabaster requested the Kalahome to institute a thorough inquiry, at which he announced his desire to be present. I consider that Mr. Alabaster was so far acting in strict accordance with the following provisions of the Commercial Agreement of the 15th May, 1856 (Hertslet x, p. 567).

"That whenever a British subject has to complain against a Siamese, he must make his complaint through the British Consul, who will lay it before the proper Siamese authorities.

"That in all cases in which Siamese or British subjects are concerned, the Siamese authorities in the one case, and the British Consul in the other case, shall be at liberty to attend, and copies of the proceedings will be furnished from time to time, or whenever desired, to the Consul or the Siamese authorities, until the case is concluded."

Whether in the course of the inquiry before the Siamese authorities, Mr. Alabaster has insisted on more than his right, will depend very much upon the interpretation, which has been in practice, given to the provisions of the Treaty, under which it would appear that the Siamese authorities were bound to institute an inquiry on this occasion.

"British subjects, their persons, houses, premises, lands, ships, or property of any kind, shall not be seized, injured, or in any way interfered with by the Siamese. In case of any violation of this stipulation, the Siamese authorities will take cognizance of the case and punish the offenders."

If Mr. Alabaster's interference in the course of the inquiry before the Siamese authorities was in substance intended to enforce upon the Siamese authorities their Treaty obligations to take cognizance of the case, and to secure a bonâ fide inquiry into the merits, then I think the question of form would be of secondary importance, and it might well be the duty of Her Majesty's Consul, if he thought the proceedings before the Siamese authorities were intended to work a fraud upon the Treaty, to protest against them.

I am so far under the necessity of dissenting from the view of Her Majesty's Attorney-General at Singapore, that the question was "purely Siamese," and that "the Consul had no right to interfere in it." At the same time I should venture to suggest that, as satisfaction has been rendered by the Siamese authorities for the losses sustained on this occasion by British subjects, Her Majesty's Consul may properly be instructed not to insist upon any explicit acknowledgment on the part of the Siamese authorities that there has been an infringement of Treaty rights in the conduct of the proceedings.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

Spain.

No. 135.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received January 4.)

Temple, January 4, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 31st ultimo, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid, inclosing a correspondence between himself and Her Majesty's Consul at Alicante, relative to the seizure of a Gibraltar vessel, the "Amalia," by a Spanish guarda-costa, and the proceedings taken against her on a charge of smuggling; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to whether the proceedings in question should form the subject of any representation to the Spanish Government by that of Her Majesty.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That it appears from the statement made by the master of the "Amalia" to Mr. Consul Barrie, that the "Amalia" was within two or three miles of the Hormiga Island when she was seized by the Spanish guarda-costa. The Spanish statement places her within half-a-mile of the Hormiga Island when she was seized, so that upon either view of the case the "Amalia" was at such time within Spanish waters, and was committing an offence cognizable by the Spanish Municipal Tribunals, if her master was approaching the shore with an intention to land a forbidden cargo on that part of the Spanish coast.

The question, therefore, resolves itself into one of probability as regards the intention of the master, who appears to have been out of his proper course, and to have endeavoured to explain his undue proximity to the Spanish coast by the action of the currents upon his vessel during a complete calm,—the existence of which calm, however, is denied by the seizors, although the existence of the currents (perhaps the most important question) does not appear to have been denied by them. As the proceedings, which have been conducted before the Junta Administrativa of Alicante, the proper Tribunal according to the requirements of Spanish law, are not impeached on the ground of any unfairness, and the master has appealed against its decision, I consider that your Lordship is not called upon at present to make any representation to the Spanish Government, but that Mr. Consul Barrie may be properly instructed to continue to watch the case, taking care always that the master shall have all necessary assistance in the conduct of his appeal, and report upon the result of the appeal.

I may add that no international question can arise upon the facts of this case, as at present disclosed, in regard to the extent of the fiscal zone which the Spanish Government may be disposed to claim; as, although the master's protest states that he was "off Hormiga Island eight miles from the shore," his statement to Mr. Consul Barrie explains that he was really within two or three miles of that island, which is situated between four or five miles from the coast.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 136.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received January 4.)

Temple, January 4, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 8th November last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Madrid (No. 22), inclosing a letter addressed to him by Señor Retortillo, the Counsel for Messrs. Saul Isaac and Co., stating that fresh questions have been raised by the Spanish Government, which will delay the final settlement of the case of the "Tornado;" and to request that we would take these papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with any observations we may have to offer thereupon.

Mr. Egerton was also pleased to inclose the former papers for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we think that the circumstances stated in Señor Retortillo's letter do not make it necessary for Her Majesty's Government to take any steps in this matter.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
C. J. SELWYN.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

1868

No. 137.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received January 25.)

Temple, January 25, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 20th instant, stating that with reference to my Report of the 4th instant on the subject of the seizure off Hormiga Island, by a Spanish guarda-costa, on a charge of smuggling, of the Gibraltar vessel the "Amalia," he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the accompanying despatches from Sir J. Crampton reporting further particulars respecting this case, and inclosing a copy of the sentence of the Court which condemned the vessel; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take these papers into my consideration, and favour your Lordship with my opinion whether the proceedings of the Spanish authorities in this matter call for any representation on the part of Her Majesty's Government.

The former papers relating to this case were also inclosed for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That Mr. Consul Barrie should be instructed to watch his appeal, and to use his good offices, if they should be required, to procure for the captain of the "Amalia," if the procedure of the Court of Appeal should admit, the examination of the keeper of the lighthouse and the Spanish boatmen, by the non-production of whose evidence before the Administrative Junta of Alicante the captain declares that he has been seriously prejudiced.

The questions in this case are twofold: first, whether the "Amalia" was within Spanish waters when she was seized by the guarda-costa. Mr. Consul Barrie states that the diary or log presented by the captain represented the vessel as being, at the time when she was detained, from two to three miles off the Island of Hormigas; though, in his defence, the captain asserted it to be from five to six. It is extremely unlikely that the Court of Appeal would allow any fresh oral testimony, if its rules will allow it to be produced, in this part of the case, to prevail against the entry in the log of the vessel; but it deserves remark that the Judgment of the Junta proceeds upon the view of the vessel having been seized within the distance of less than six miles from the coast of the Island of Hormigas, as if the position of the vessel at the time of seizure constituted an offence against the provisions of Article 462 of the Ordinances of Customs.

This gives rise to the second question, whether the vessel at the time of seizure was committing any offence against those Ordinances. It is not very clear what are the precise terms of Article 462, as in the petition of Appeal the Article is twice referred to, but in different terms; and the passage of the Judgment in which it is referred to gives a third version of the Article. It will be desirable, therefore, that Mr. Consul Barrie should be instructed to transmit an accurate version of Article 462 of the Customs Ordinance, inasmuch as the case may assume a different aspect according as the Ordinance prohibits vessels from coming within six miles from the Spanish coast, or six miles from a non-qualified port, bay, creek, or cove.

The captain of the "Amalia," upon the assumption of the latter being the correct version of the Article, denies that his proximity to the Hormigas Island constituted any infringement of Spanish Law. As the case is at present represented the guarda-costa may have been entitled to seize the "Amalia;" but it is not altogether clear that the "Amalia" was at the time of seizure violating the Spanish Ordinances of Customs.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 138.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received February 24.)

My Lord,
Temple, February 22, 1868.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Murray's letter of the 14th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the accompanying correspondence respecting various illegal and high-handed acts committed by British traders on the West Coast of Africa against the natives, and relating also to the proceedings of Her Majesty's Consul at Fernando Po for the administration of justice and the preservation of peace, against certain of which proceedings the British traders and the King and Chiefs of Bonny have written protests, which will be found among the inclosed papers.

That legitimate trade has been steadily increasing for some years past upon the West Coast of Africa, and has been watched with great interest by Her Majesty's Government, not only as an important branch of commercial enterprize, but also as the most effectual mode of extinguishing the Slave Trade. That they are, therefore, most anxious that its existence should not be imperilled either by the unjust conduct of British traders or by the feuds of native tribes; but, that before issuing any further instructions to Consul Livingstone upon the matters treated in the inclosed correspondence, your Lordship would be glad that I should take the papers into my consideration, and report to your Lordship not only upon the proceedings of that officer, who seemed to have acted in conformity with long-established custom on the West Coast of Africa, but also generally upon the powers of Her Majesty's Consuls upon that coast for preventing or punishing acts of cruelty, oppression or fraud on the part of British traders.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That it will be convenient to consider the proceedings of Her Majesty's Consul, against which the Chairman and certain members of the Equity Court at Brass have sent in written protests, apart from the proceedings against which the King and Chiefs of Bonny have complained.

Of the two protests forwarded to your Lordship, one is signed by the Chairman of the Court on his own behalf, and he complains simply of the insulting language of Her Majesty's Consul towards himself; the other is signed by the remaining members of the Equity Court, and their complaint is of a more grave character, as they protest against Her Majesty's Consul's partiality, as well as against his abusive language towards their Chairman. Your Lordship has already thought it right to address some observations to Mr. Livingstone, expressing your disapproval of the curtness and harshness of tone employed by him in his communication with some of the English traders, and your Lordship's remarks will, no doubt, impress upon him the propriety of adopting a more conciliating tone in future, and of using language more becoming his quasi judicial functions. Such a course is the more necessary on his part as, in the absence of any Order of Her Majesty in Council, Her Majesty's Consul at Fernando Po would have no legal power to enforce against British subjects the jurisdiction conferred upon him by the Agreement of 17th November, 1856 (Hertslet, vol. x, p. 691), under which Her Majesty's Consul may have considered himself to have been acting on the occasion in question, or any other customary jurisdiction. With regard to the charge of partiality brought against Her Majesty's Consul, I presume that it refers to Mr. Livingstone enforcing the payment due from Mr. Lyons, and declining to enforce the payment due to Mr. Lyons. I consider that Her Majesty's Consul was right in not allowing Mr. Lyons to make one debt a set-off against the other, as the parties were not identical; but although the facts are somewhat in dispute, I am disposed to think that Article VIII of the Agreement of 17th November, 1856, would have justified Her Majesty's Consul in pressing more strongly King Arishna to see that no loss accrued to Mr. Lyons from the default of one of his men.

A question has been addressed to your Lordship which is pertinent to the proceedings of the Equity Court, in the letter of the Liverpool African Association, touching "the legal powers of Her Majesty's Consul to imprison British subjects, traders and agents, for matters of merely a commercial character arising out of disputes between the agents and traders." I am not aware of any such power being possessed by Her Majesty's Consuls, but I observe that Mr. Livingstone, in his letter of 23rd December, 1867, informs your Lordship that he warned Mr. Lyons "to be careful to do nothing which might cause him to appear before a British Court of Justice at Lagos." I should wish to be informed if there is any Order of Her Majesty in Council under which British traders on the coast of the Bight of Biafra are amenable to a Supreme Court of Justice at Lagos for offences committed on that coast. I am not aware of any such Order.

The complaint of the Bonny King and Chiefs involves a question of fact, whether they have assisted the Okrikas against Calabar contrary to their profession of neutrality, or not. They admit that the late King, William Pepple, did assist the Okrikas and Brass nations against Calabar, for which he was fined by the Consul, and trade was stopped; but they assert that since the accession of Prince George (16th October, 1866) they have not directly or indirectly afforded any assistance to either Okrika or Brass. Unless, therefore, it can be established that the Bonny King and Chiefs have made this assertion in bad faith, I cannot advise your Lordship that it would be proper to blockade their river, or to compel them to take measures to put a stop to the war which Okrika and Brass are waging against Calabar.

One fact, however, seems to be clear, that Her Majesty's Consul at Fernando Po has not at present the requisite legal power to control and punish British traders on the coast of the Bight of Biafra, if their violation of trading usages or trading Conventions have in any way contributed to give rise to disputes between the different nations, in consequence of monopoly of trade at the opening and closing of the oil markets; and I would suggest for your Lordship's consideration that it may be expedient in the interests of legitimate trade that Her Majesty's Consul on that coast should be furnished with the necessary power by an Order of Her Majesty in Council, under the Foreign Jurisdiction Act.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 139.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received March 10.)

Temple, March 9, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 25th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the correspondence relative to the seizure by a Spanish revenue cruizer in December last, for alleged smuggling, of a Gibraltar vessel named the "Catalina;" and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take the same into my consideration, and favour your Lordship with my opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That the property and destination of the cargo on board the "Catalina" is left in too much obscurity at present for your Lordship to direct any official support to be given to the claim of the owner of the "Catalina." The owner's son, in his letter of 7th January, 1868, addressed to Her Majesty's Vice-Consul at Algeciras (Inclosure No. 2 in Sir J. Crampton's No. 41 of 18th February, 1868), states that he has no documents in proof of the order for the tobacco. He represents it to have been verbally consigned by the owner, whom he does not name, to Mr. Bennett Russo, at Tangiers, with whom he had no commercial relationship, and that he shipped it as a favour to the owners of the tobacco. This is not a very satisfactory account, more particularly as the owner of the vessel is stated to be a tobacconist. It does not appear what cargo-papers were on board the "Catalina." The Captain of the Port at Gibraltar merely speaks of the vessel being provided with the certificate of registry, articles of agreement with the crew, and bill of health (No. 3 in Sir J. Crampton's No. 13 of 15th January, 1868). He also says that she cleared with two passengers; but it appears from the examination of the captain, who is an illiterate man, and cannot write his name, that he had three passengers on board. Who these three passengers were, does not appear, further than that one of them, who is also an illiterate man and cannot write his name, describes himself of Santa Pola, and says that he was going to Tangiers. The other two do not appear to have been examined; yet it was of the greatest importance for the owner of the ship to have produced them, or to have given some account of them, with a view to show that they were persons free from all suspicion of complicity in smuggling, and that they were really going to Tangiers; for although the destination of the passengers would not be conclusive as to the real destination of the cargo, the absence of any evidence as to their destination is damaging to the claim of the shipowner.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 140.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received March 18.)

Temple, March 17, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 28th ultimo, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying correspondence relative to the seizure by the Spanish revenue cruizer "La Viva," of the Gibraltar vessel "Garibaldi," while on a voyage from that port to Falmouth; and to request that I would take this case into consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion thereupon.

Mr. Hammond was also pleased to call my attention to the question raised by the owners of the vessel as to the real limits of Spanish maritime jurisdiction in the Straits of Gibraltar, and along the neighbouring seaboard of Spain; and requested that I would furnish your Lordship with any observations I might have to make upon this point.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That this case is distinguishable from the cases of the "Amalia" and the "Catalina," which have been recently under your Lordship's consideration. In both of those cases it was alleged by the Spaniards that the vessels at the time of seizure were within a marine league of Spanish land; and their seizure, if made within that distance, was clearly valid, whatever may have been the character of the subsequent proceedings for their condemnation. But in this case, if credit is to be given to the master and crew of the "Garibaldi," the seizure of this vessel was effected by a Spanish guarda-costa in the Gulf of Cadiz, at a distance of more than four leagues from any Spanish land. The vessel appears to have been, at the time of seizure, navigating the high seas on a course not merely far outside the maritime territory of Spain, but also far outside the fiscal zone of two leagues, within which vessels with contraband goods on board are forbidden by the Municipal Law of Spain to navigate, except under certain conditions of necessity, which did not exist in the present case. According to the statement of the master and crew, if it cannot be rebutted by the seizors, it would seem that the seizure of the "Garibaldi" cannot be defended upon any plea of necessary precaution on the part of Spain, ratione loci, to prevent smuggling, as her own Municipal Law has fixed the limits of those necessary precautions to a distance of six miles from her coasts; much less upon any principle of territorial right. But there are circumstances in this case which may induce your Lordship to direct further inquiry to be made.

Mr. Consul Dunlop in his letter to Mr. Freeling of 22nd January, after reporting the result of his own examination of the master and crew, which confirms their previous depositions at Huelva, states that although no doubt exists in his mind of the fact that the vessel was seized at sea far outside Spanish waters or jurisdiction, the situation or position of the "Garibaldi" when taken, as declared by Firpo, her master, appears to him suspicious of the intention to smuggle, being certainly out of the course of vessels sailing from Gibraltar to England.

This remark (of Mr. Dunlop) deserves the more attention as it appears from the master's affidavit, made on 1st February, 1868, before the Captain of the Port of Gibraltar, that the wind had been from the eastward ever since the "Garibaldi" left Gibraltar, so that there was no necessity on account of the wind for the vessel to hug the Spanish coast, as she had evidently done, ever since she had sighted Tarifa. Unfortunately for the owners there is nothing forthcoming from on board the vessel to support her alleged destination to Falmouth except her papers, which may be colourable. All her crew appear to have shipped for a voyage out and home again to Gibraltar, and the single passenger on board her, whose destination is not deposed to by her master, does not appear to have himself made any statement.

Further, it may be gathered from the depositions that the "Garibaldi" had been much nearer inshore opposite Huelva early in the morning, and that she had hoisted more sail upon seeing the guarda-costa.

It would also appear from the subsequent deposition of the master before the Captain of the Port of Gibraltar, that certain declarations were taken from his crew by the Commander of the guarda-costa, and that those declarations were read over to them by the Spanish authorities at Huelva. There may thus have been evidence from the crew before those authorities which is not before your Lordship, and which may have furnished support to the evidence, whatever that may have been, on the part of the seizors. Whether it was proper under the circumstances of this case for the Commander of the guarda-costa to have extorted such declarations from the crew, as he is represented to have done, may be reserved for future consideration.

It appears further that an application has been made in vain by Her Majesty's Vice-Consul at Huelva for a copy of the evidence upon which the "Garibaldi" and her cargo have been confiscated.

Under these circumstances it will be proper, in my opinion, for your Lordship to direct Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid to represent to the Spanish Government that your Lordship, upon the evidence which has been submitted to you on behalf of the owners, is disposed to regard the seizure of the "Garibaldi" as a marine trespass; but that before your Lordship will think it right to make any demand for indemnification against the Spanish Government, you are desirous to be informed upon what evidence and upon what principle of public right the Administrative Board at Huelva has decreed the confiscation of the "Garibaldi" and her cargo. Her Majesty's Minister may also be instructed to state that he reserves to Her Majesty's Government the right to bring under the notice of the Spanish Government on a future occasion the conduct of the Commander and crew of the guarda-costa upon boarding the "Garibaldi."

With regard to the general question which has been raised by the owners of the "Garibaldi," as to the real limits of Spanish maritime jurisdiction in the Straits of Gibraltar and along the neighbouring seaboard of Spain, if by real limits are meant the limits of a jurisdiction which no nation may question,—such limits, I apprehend, are coincident with the extent of what would be termed Spanish waters, which include all waters within a marine league from Spanish land, and further will embrace all portions of sea cut off by an imaginary line drawn from one headland to another, when both those headlands belong to Spain, and are within a reasonable distance from each other.

It is possible that the Spanish authorities may assert that the waters of the Gulf of Cadiz, in which the "Garibaldi" was seized, are a Spanish "chamber." If such should be the case it will be proper to consider between what headlands the imaginary straight line must be drawn to constitute such a "chamber," and whether the claim will be in itself reasonable, or have any warrant in immemorial usage. But in the Straits of Gibraltar, I presume, no such question can arise; and each nation will be entitled to assert an exclusive jurisdiction over the waters measured seawards from its coast to the distance of a marine league. It appears, however, that the Municipal Law of Spain has established a zone of two leagues along its coast for fiscal purposes, and has forbidden vessels having contraband goods on board to be navigated within that zone, except under certain conditions of necessity. This limit rests, however, upon other considerations than those of absolute right. Nations have been accustomed to concede to one another a certain exercise of police over merchant ships on the high seas beyond the limit of a marine league from their coast, with a view to prevent illicit trade; and when the municipal regulations of a State are in such matters reasonable, and its police is enforced with fairness and equity, foreign nations have acquiesced in its exercise.

I am not disposed to think that a fiscal zone of two leagues, which has been adopted by Spain, is in itself unreasonable. The British Quarantine Laws (6 Geo. IV, cap. 18), take effect upon foreign vessels when they come within a zone of two leagues from the United Kingdom; and the British Revenue Laws (16 & 17 Vict., cap. 107) take effect on foreign vessels, under certain circumstances, when they are found within three leagues from the coast of the United Kingdom. But if this permissive police is exercised with undue severity or with injustice, the comity of nations will not require the State whose subjects are harshly treated to acquiesce in its exercise. This, however, must depend upon the circumstances of each case; and it will be advisable for your Lordship in due time to ascertain what can be said in defence of the alleged misconduct of the seizors.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 141.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received March 28.)

Temple, March 28, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 17th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to us the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid (No. 72), inclosing a letter which had been addressed to him by Señor Villalobos, a Spaniard, requesting that his son, who was born in England, may be registered at Her Majesty's Legation as a British subject.

That Sir John Crampton, as we should perceive, has deferred complying with M. Villalobos' wishes until he can receive instructions on the subject; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take the matter into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer which should be returned to M. Villalobos.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That if by the laws of Spain the son of Señor Villalobos is held to be a Spanish subject, though born in England, it would be contrary to practice that he should be registered as a British subject in Spain, although elsewhere than in Spanish dominions he would be entitled to British protection as a natural-born subject of this realm.

We think that an answer to the above effect should be returned to Sir John Crampton.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 142.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received April 21.)

Temple, April 21, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 15th instant, stating that with reference to our Report of the 17th of August, and to previous Reports on the case of the "Queen Victoria," he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatches from Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid and Consul at Cadiz, relative to the offer of 4,835*l*. 16*s*., which has been made to the owners by the Spanish Government in settlement of all claims on account of this vessel; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take the same into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether the claimants should be advised to accept this offer.

The previous papers relating to this case were also forwarded for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we think that under all the circumstances it would be wise for the claimants to accept the offer made, without delaying the settlement of this matter by insisting on a claim which possibly, to some extent, might be advanced with justice for interest on the amount which the Spanish Government admits to be fairly payable.

It appears to us that if by the waiver of any claim for interest, speedy payment of the amount agreed to can be secured, the parties concerned will be acting wisely in foregoing any further claim or dispute upon this matter.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.
TRAVERS TWISS.

No. 143.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received April 28.)

My Lord, Temple, April 28, 1868.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 21st instant, stating that with reference to a Report of the Law Officers of the 4th July, 1866, and previous Reports on the case of the British vessel "Mermaid," which was alleged to have been sunk by a shot fired from the batteries of Ceuta in October 1864, he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying correspondence, from which I should learn that the Spanish Government have lately consented to refer the claim on this account to a Mixed Commission, and that Messrs. Barter and Co., who represent the owners, have been directed to take steps for preparing their case for submission to the Commissioners. This Messrs. Barter have as yet failed to do, and in a letter from them of the 17th instant, which was also inclosed, they state the cause of the delay, and request the advice and assistance of Her Majesty's Government. That your Lordship proposes to inform Messrs. Barter, in reply to this letter, that your Lordship cannot undertake to say what evidence the Commission will admit or reject, or give any other advice than that they should make their case as complete as they can, substantiating it by such oral or documentary testimony as they can produce. That the Commission can alone decide as to the admissibility of any portion of it, and also to urge them to expedite the preparation of their case, as the Spanish Commissioners are ready to commence the inquiry; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take this matter into consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion, at my earliest convenience, as to whether the proposed answer to Messrs. Barter is right and proper.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That Messrs. Barter and Co.'s attention may be properly directed to the provisions of Article III of the Convention, under which the Commissioners are bound to receive all written documents and statements which may be presented to them on behalf of the owners of the "Mermaid," or of the Spanish Government, and to receive and consider any evidence ("testimonio") that may be tendered to them on either side. Under this Article, I consider that the claimants will be warranted in tendering to the Commission the protest and affidavits which have been laid before Her Majesty's Government, and that they will do well to frame their case in accordance with the state of facts deposed to in those documents.

It will also be advisable for Messrs. Barter and Co. to produce for cross-examination as many as possible of the parties whose affidavits they may propose to tender, as thereby the case, as far as it rests upon such affidavits, will be rendered more complete.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 144.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received May 1.)

My Lord, Temple, April 30, 1868.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 9th instant, stating that, with reference to the Report of the Law Officers of the 13th September, 1865, and previous Reports on the same subject, he was directed to transmit to me therewith a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid, stating that he has reason to believe that the Spanish Government are not disinclined to award a reasonable indemnity to the relations of Daniel Hocken, who was killed on board the "Mountaineer" in 1864, by a shot fired from the Fort of Tarifa, and requesting to be informed what sum under the circumstances would be considered satisfactory by Her Majesty's Government; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take this case into consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the amount which should be named on this account.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the sum of 1,000 dollars may, I think, be reasonably claimed by your Lordship by way of compensation from the Spanish Government to the parents of Daniel Hocken.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 145.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received July 15.)

My Lord, Temple, July 14, 1868.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 9th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the accompanying letter and its inclosures from the Colonial Office, relative to the proceedings of a Spanish guarda-costa in intercepting and boarding a Gibraltar schooner named the "Fanny," while on a voyage with a cargo of tobacco from that port to Oran; and to request that I would take the case into consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the mode in which the "Fanny" had been hovering off the Spanish coast for four hours and a-half before the first visit of the Spanish guarda-costa was calculated, in my opinion, to excite reasonable suspicions on the part of the Spanish Custom-house officers, and justified them in boarding her. Her subsequent navigation, after they had ascertained that she was laden with tobacco, was not calculated in my opinion to disarm their suspicions; and unless it can be shown that there were hindrances to the schooner prosecuting her voyage to Oran, notwithstanding that there was a favourable wind from east-north-east, and that the Spanish Custom-house officers ought to have taken those hindrances into account after they left on the first occasion, I think it to be a matter of doubtful expediency for your Lordship to direct any further representation to be made to the Spanish Government.

It is very possible that the representation of the crew of the guarda-costa will be less favourable to the schooner than the depositions of her own crew.

There seems, however, to have been some laxity of conduct on the part of the crew of the guarda-costa as regards the bottle of gin which they found and drank off on board the schooner; but as that fact has been already made known to the Spanish Government, it is hardly deserving of further serious notice from your Lordship.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 146.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received July 23.)

My Lord, Temple, July 22, 1868.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 7th instant, stating that with reference to my Report of the 17th March last on the subject of the seizure by a Spanish revenue cruizer of the Gibraltar vessel, the "Garibaldi," while on a voyage to Falmouth, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid, inclosing a copy of a letter, with a translation, which has been addressed to your Lordship by the Spanish Minister for Foreign Affairs, stating the grounds upon which the Spanish Government consider the "Garibaldi" to have been legally captured, and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take the same into my consideration, and favour your Lordship with my opinion thereupon.

The previous papers relating to this case were also inclosed, for convenience of reference.

In obedience to the commands of your Lordship I have taken this case into consideration, and have the honour to Report—

That it appears from the despatch of the Spanish Minister of Foreign Affairs that the evidence, upon which the "Garibaldi" was condemned by the Spanish authorities, conflicts in important particulars with the depositions made by the master and crew of that vessel before the British authorities at Huelva and Cadiz after the condemnation of the vessel, and upon which my previous Report to your Lordship was founded.

Upon the evidence, which the Spanish Minister reports to have been given before the Junta Administrativa at Huelva by the crew of the coast-guard vessel, coupled with the evidence of the log-book and of the master and crew of the "Garibaldi," who were personally examined by the Spanish authorities, it would be difficult to contend that the seizure and condemnation of the "Garibaldi" may not have been justifiable under the Spanish Revenue Law. It is said, however, by Mr. Consul Dunlop, in his despatch of 22nd January, 1868, that he had ascertained, upon cross-examining the master and crew of the "Garibaldi," that threats were used to obtain such evidence from them (in Colonial Office letter of 8th February, 1868). The case, however, does not rest alone upon oral evidence. There are certain points upon which the crew of the coast-guard vessel and the "Garibaldi" are at issue, and in regard to which the entries in the log-book of the "Garibaldi" may be of service in determining to which side credit ought to be given. The Spanish Minister has justly called attention to the fact of the statement of the master of the "Garibaldi," that he sailed from Gibraltar on 16th December being contradicted by the ship's manifest, which shows that the "Garibaldi" cleared from Gibraltar on the 12th December, which latter circumstance is confirmed by the certificate of the Captain of the Port of Gibraltar, of 31st December, 1867 (No. 5 of Sir J. Crampton's No. 21, of 26th January, 1868). The log-book of the "Garibaldi" ought to throw valuable light upon this interval of time, respecting which the captain and crew of the "Garibaldi" are totally silent in their depositions. If it be true, as stated in the Spanish Minister's despatch, that the "Garibaldi" lay-to during those four days, and kept close to the Spanish coast, such a fact would probably be noted in the log-book, and would be of the greatest importance, as confirmatory of the suggested intention of the captain to take advantage of an opportunity to land contraband goods on the Spanish coast. But there is an important discrepancy in the statements on either side as to the conduct of the "Garibaldi" when the coast-guard vessel fired a signal for her to bring-to, which the log-book may assist to clear up. The Spaniards say that the "Garibaldi," when sighted by the coast-guard vessel, took to flight, and hoisted no colours, although invited to do so by some musket-shots from the coast-guard vessel. The master of the "Garibaldi" in his first statement, made on 21st December, 1867, to the British Consul at Cadiz, is silent on the subject of his hoisting any colours; and it is not, apparently, until after the master and crew had been examined by the Spanish authorities at Huelva, and had been liberated, that mention of British colours having been hoisted was for the first time made by the master in his protest on 14th January, 1868, declared before the British Vice-Consul at Huelva. As the Spanish Minister of Foreign Affairs refers to the log-book of the "Garibaldi," and other official documents in the possession of the Spanish authorities, as corroborating the Spanish account of the seizure of the "Garibaldi," and showing the incorrectness of the information which has been communicated to your Lordship, I think it would be desirable for your Lordship to instruct Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid to state that it would be very satisfactory to your Lordship if the Spanish authorities would favour your Lordship with copies of the log-book, and the official documents to which his Excellency has referred.

1369

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 147.

The Attorney-General to Mr. Hammond.—(Received July 30.)

Temple July 30, 1867.

Dear Mr. Hammond,

IN the papers now before us, a letter is referred to, said to have been written by Señor B. De Castro to Sir J. Crampton, on 11th December 1865, a copy of which was forwarded to Lord Clarendon.

It is stated that in this letter a promise was made that all claimants should be heard before the Council of State, and it is on the faith of this promise that Isaac, Campbell, and Co., require Her Majesty's Government to insist on their being so heard.

I cannot find a copy of this despatch, or of the petition presented to the Council of State by Isaac, Campbell, and Co., to be heard among the papers.

There is also a letter from General Calonge to Sir J. Crampton, of 21st November, 1867, which I cannot find.

If you have any of these papers in the Foreign Office, will you send them to me? They are important for me to see before advising.

Very faithfully, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.

---

No. 148.

The Attorney-General to Mr. Egerton.—(Received July 31.)

Temple, July 31, 1868.

Dear Egerton,

THE letter of the 11th December, 1865, which you have sent me, is not the one I want. There appears to have been other inclosures in Sir J. Crampton's despatch of 13th December, 1865, and perhaps one of De Castro's as to the right of appeal to Councils of State, may be among them. The letter you send relates solely to privateers.

Your ever, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.

---

No. 149.

The Attorney-General to Mr. Egerton.—(Received August 1.)

Temple, August 1, 1868.

Dear Egerton,

I THINK I have the right letter now, but I should be glad if you obtain copies of the other letters to which I referred in my note, and a copy of Isaac, Campbell, and Co.'s petition to the Council of State.

Very faithfully, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.

---

No. 150.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received August 8.)

Temple, August 8, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 4th instant, stating that, with reference to my Report of the 14th ultimo, relative to the boarding of the Gibraltar schooner "Fanny" by a Spanish revenue cruizer, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me therewith, together with the previous papers, a letter from the Colonial Office, requesting to be informed what are the particular statements in the depositions on which the view taken by me of the case is founded, and to which the Governor of Gibraltar's attention should be called; and Mr. Egerton was pleased to request that I would take the same into my consideration, and favour your Lordship with my opinion as to the answer, which should be returned to the Colonial Office.

In obedience to the commands of your Lordship I have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That upon the view which I have taken of the depositions of the master and crew of the schooner "Fanny," and it may be observed that their depositions are ex parte, and may be presumed to present the most favourable view of their case. I consider it to be established that the "Fanny" left the Bay of Gibraltar on the 16th June, 1868, with a steady breeze from east-north-east. Her destination is alleged to have been for Oran, with a cargo of tobacco. At half-past 3 P.M., having been four and a half hours at sea, the "Fanny" was only distant 3 miles from Europa Point, bearing north-west by north. She was at this time boarded for the first time by the Spanish Revenue boat. If, as his Grace the Duke of Buckingham gathers from the papers, the "Fanny" had been making from two to three miles an hour during this interval of time, she ought to have been from ten to twelve miles distant from the Spanish coast, if she had been making the best of her way to Oran. I am therefore led to the conclusion that the "Fanny" must have been tacking about—in other words, was hovering off the Spanish coast under circumstances which might reasonably warrant the Spanish revenue boat in visiting and overhauling her.

The first visit of the revenue boat seems to have lasted about ten minutes, and their conduct, with the exception of taking away a bottle of gin from one of the crew, does not seem open to any fair complaint, as the "Fanny" was at once allowed to proceed on her voyage.

After the lapse of an hour the "Fanny" is represented by her master and crew to have advanced on her alleged destination to Orna only half a-mile. It is not stated that the wind had become unfavourable in any way to the "Fanny" since she left

Gibraltar, and no explanation is offered for her continuing thus to hover off the Spanish coast. The officer in charge of the revenue boat, on boarding her the second time, seems to have decided to take her to Algeciras, and altered her course for Cabreta Point. After keeping her on this course for about a quarter of an hour, no reason being stated by the master of the "Fanny" for the officer's change of purpose, he is represented to have left the "Fanny;" at this stage of the case there is a conflict of evidence between the master and the mate of the "Fanny." The mate states that, after the Spaniards left her on this occasion, she proceeded towards Gibraltar in order to report the circumstance, and had proceeded for about half a-mile, when the revenue boat returned and boarded her a third time. On the other hand, the master, in his statement, made at Gibraltar on the 17th June, 1868, says that he was at a distance of three and a-half miles from Gibraltar when he was boarded the second time, and the third time about four miles. He also says that he had proceeded about half a-mile upon his course after the Spaniards had left him for the second time, before the boat for the third time returned and boarded him. The master and mate are thus in direct conflict as to the course of the "Fanny" after the Spaniards left her on the second occasion. It may be observed that during the whole of this time the "Fanny" was within the Spanish Fiscal Zone, which, from the evidence in other cases, appears to extent to a distance of six miles from the Spanish coast. It is not stated in the depositions at what time the "Fanny" was boarded for the third time, but it is stated that, after the third visit of the revenue boat, she returned to Gibraltar and anchored there at 7·30 P.M. There would thus be altogether an interval of eight hours and a-half during which, although the "Fanny" had a fair wind for Oran, she was at no time further distant from Europa Point or Gibraltar than four miles.

After the third visit, the revenue boat is stated to have steered for Ceuta with oars and sail. Nevertheless, the Captain states that he returned to Gibraltar after rather a formal leave-taking on the part of the officer of the revenue boat, "fearing that he should be captured."

His Excellency the Governor of Algeciras, in his letter to his Excellency the Governor of Gibraltar, states that the crew of the schooner, the whole of them being Spaniards as well as the Captain, are known by the Spanish revenue authorities to be engaged in the smuggling trade, and that it is imputed to them that, although they were provided with papers for Oran, their real intention was to land their cargo on the Spanish coast, or to tranship it into small boats to be smuggled on shore. I cannot but think that the circumstance of the "Fanny" continuing to hover off the Spanish coast after the officer of the Spanish revenue boat had visited her, not merely once, but a second time, remains without any sufficient explanation, and that his Grace the Duke of Buckingham may properly direct the attention of his Excellency the Governor of Gibraltar, to the silence of the master and crew upon this subject, as well as to the conflict between the evidence of the master and mate, and to the unsatisfactory reasons alleged for the vessel not proceeding on her course to Oran after the officer of the revenue boat had finally taken leave of her on seeing the English steamer.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 151.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received August 15.)

My Lord,

Temple, August 14, 1868.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Murray's letter of the 17th day of July last, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 4th of January last, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter from Messrs. S. Isaac, Campbell, and Co., protesting against the final decision of the Prize Court at Cadiz, by which it appears their vessel, the "Tornado," has been condemned as prize of war, and requesting the intervention of Her Majesty's Government with a view to prevent the sentence being confirmed by the Council of State.

Mr. Murray was pleased to inclose the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid, having reference to the same subject, and to request that we would take these papers into our consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

We were also favoured with three notes from Mr. Egerton dated respectively the 18th, 23rd, and 25th July, transmitting to us further despatches from Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid and a further letter from Messrs. Saul Isaac, Campbell, and Co., relating to the case of the "Tornado."

We are also favoured with a letter from Mr. Hammond dated 6th August instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us, for our consideration, the accompanying letter from Messrs. Isaac, Campbell, and Co., dated the 4th instant, inclosing Counsel's opinion on the present position of the "Tornado" case regarded in a legal point of view.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands, we have taken the papers transmitted to us into our consideration and have the honour to Report—

That we find from the papers now before us that the Prize Court at Cadiz, which, after the former sentence of condemnation was set aside, was appointed for the hearing of the case of the "Tornado," has pronounced a sentence of condemnation of the vessel.

The proceedings on this trial are not sent to us, and have probably never been forwarded to the Foreign Office, but on the 14th July last Messrs. Isaac, Campbell, and Co. announced the fact, that they had received a copy of the final decision of the Prize Court or "Junta Economica," and in a letter, remarkable for the numerous inaccurate statements contained in it, they have protested against the sentence of condemnation, as having been accomplished in utter disregard of facts and in violation of those principles of international law hitherto respected by all maritime States.

The course taken by Isaac, Campbell, and Co. before this Court does not very clearly appear. As far as we can gather it from the statements contained in this letter, they appeared before the Court, protested, and took no further part in the proceedings. They had the opportunity of being heard, but did not avail themselves of it, because, as they represent, with a perfect consciousness of their own innocence, they knew that the vessel would be condemned.

It appears further that, after the sentence was pronounced, it was referred by the Minister of Marine to the Council of State, but whether for revision or only for advice whether the sentence should or should not be confirmed, is not clear.

The claimants petitioned to be heard before the Council of State, but whether by the Law of Spain there is any right of appeal, and if there be any such right, what the proper mode of proceeding is no one in Spain seems to know. This may be inferred from the petition of Don Eusebio Casaes in the name of the owners of the "Tornado" to the Minister of Marine asking for guidance as to appealing to the Council of State.

Of course, if there be a right of appeal by Law, and the claimants without default on their part are deprived of that right by the action of the Spanish Government, it would be matter for serious remonstrances. But the case at this moment hardly assumes that aspect. It is contended that independently of any question of law, such solemn assurances have been given by the Spanish to Her Majesty's Government, that an appeal was permitted to the Council of State in prize cases that, acting on these assurances, Her Majesty's Government should insist on an appeal being allowed.

The first of these promises, and the one mainly relied upon, as appears from Don Eusebio Casaes' letter to Sir John Crampton of the 15th July last, is a letter dated the 11th December, 1865 (long before the capture of the "Tornado"), of which we have obtained a copy from the Foreign Office. That letter, apparently one of a series of correspondence between Don Bermudiz de Castro and Sir John Crampton, which related specially to Prize Courts held on board Spanish ships of war, states that there is an absence of any reason for harbouring the slightest suspicion of injustice in the decisions of the tribunal over which the Commander of the Spanish squadron would preside, "considering that they would have to receive the confirmation of the Council of State, before which is allowed the most ample defence of the captured vessels.

But besides this letter, there is one from General Calonge to Sir John Crampton dated the 21st November, 1866, and written specially with reference to the "Tornado" and the constitution of the Prize Court at Cadiz. Speaking of the preliminary inquiry ("sumario") and the full inquiry ("plenario"), he says—

"The measures of the former must necessarily be secret, because they are for the purpose of substantiating the fact and of obtaining the data necessary for the qualifying of it; in the second, the suit has already arrived at that stage, in which the accused uses the right of defence and takes such measures as he may consider necessary to clear himself from the charges brought against him, as the results of the preliminary proceedings, and he may also afterwards appeal against the sentence which may be given in the first instance, and amplify, in the second instance, his defence for the sustaining of that appeal."

And further, "For the rest you may assure the British Government that without the necessity of any apprehension, and in fulfilment of the existing laws, the tribunal will take care that none of the parties shall be deprived of the legitimate means of defence, permitting the owners of the prize to employ Counsel, and to hold direct communication with the British Consul in Cadiz, so far as the law may allow."

It appears to us that these passages do amount to an authoritative statement, that an appeal in prize cases is allowed, and we think that your Lordship may instruct Sir John Crampton to refer to these statements, and to urge on the Spanish Government that the privilege of appealing which is said to be secured to a claimant, and of which the claimants are desirous of availing themselves, before any sentence is enforced, should be given to the claimants in this case so that the representations made to Her Majesty's Government as to the law and practice of Spain in such cases may be fulfilled.

We think that, so far as Messrs. Isaac, Campbell, and Co. are concerned, your Lordship, while communicating to them your intention of instructing Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid to put himself in communication with the authorities there to ascertain why an appeal has not been, or should not be, allowed, will probably think it right to abstain from expressing any opinion that these gentlemen have had any injustice done them by the sentence in condemnation of the vessel already pronounced, or that the principles of international law have been violated by the Spanish Tribunal.

With reference to the opinion of the learned Counsel recently sent to your Lordship, we cannot, as far as we know the facts, agree with him in his views.

He assumes that the claimants have been condemned unheard and without the opportunity of being heard; whereas, we believe that they had the opportunity of being heard but refused to avail themselves of it: nor, as at present informed, do we know, as is assumed, that the law of Spain has been departed from by a refusal to allow an appeal, which, by the law of Spain, exists.

If by law this right does exist and has been denied, the propriety of remonstrating is, as we have already said, clear enough. It is the doubt as to what the law really is which makes the case a difficult and delicate one to deal with; for if by law no appeal is allowed, we should hesitate to advise your Lordship that the statements contained in the letters referred to would, if founded on a misconception of the law, entitle your Lordship to ask that a Special Tribunal should be formed to entertain such an appeal.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 152.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received August 19.)

My Lord, Temple, August 18, 1868.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 4th of June last, stating that, with reference to our previous Reports on the case of the "Tornado," he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter from Mr. Forbes Campbell, making a representation on behalf of the crew of that vessel, and inclosing Counsel's opinion with regard to their claims upon the Spanish Government; and to request that we would take these papers into our consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer which should be returned to Mr. Forbes Campbell.

Mr. Hammond was also pleased to inclose the most recent correspondence for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That it is hardly necessary to point out to your Lordship that the statement of facts upon which the opinion of the learned Counsel is based, is one which it is impossible to admit as accurate, and we cannot attribute importance to advice given upon such premises.

We think that Messrs. Isaac, Campbell, and Co. should be informed that the final issue of the proceedings in the "Tornado" case must be awaited before any decision is arrived at as to the course to be adopted with reference to the claims of members of the crew for compensation. At present a sentence of condemnation of the vessel has been pronounced; and against this sentence, as your Lordship is aware, the claimants are urging their right of appeal. The delay in this case, in the Spanish Courts, has, beyond doubt, been very great; but we cannot help observing that not a little of that delay appears to have resulted from the course taken by the claimants themselves.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 153.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received August 21.)

Temple, August 20, 1868.

My Lord

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 13th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to request my opinion on a point which has been raised in the discussion of the case of the "Mermaid," by the mixed English and Spanish Commission appointed under the agreement which he inclosed.

Mr. Hammond was pleased to send me, for my more complete information, all the Reports of the Commissioners, but he observed that the point on which the parties are at issue is stated in the despatches Nos. 25, 26 and 27, and that I should see, that the arbiter selected jointly by the English and Spanish Commissioners having left Cadiz apparently for an indefinite time, after having given his decision on a point referred to him, the Spanish Commissioners contend that, under the Articles of Agreement, another arbiter should be appointed, while the British Commissioners maintain that any subsequent differences which may arise, should be referred to the arbiter first appointed, notwithstanding his absence from Cadiz.

Mr. Hammond was pleased to ask my opinion on this appointment, and if I should consider that there should be a new appointment of an arbiter, he was to request me to say whether such arbiter would be entitled to set aside the decision of his predecessor by decisions opposed to the tenor of that already pronounced by him.

That I should perceive from the remarks of the British Commissioners, that this point is one of some importance, if they are correct in considering that the decision already given practically decides the points remaining to be discussed by the joint Commission.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I consider that, under the Articles of Agreement, the Spanish Commissioners are correct in contending, that in the absence of M. Benedetti from Cadiz a new person should be named by the Commissioners to act as umpire.

With regard to the authority of a new umpire, he will be empowered under the Articles of Agreement to act as arbitrator on any point within the sphere of the Commission, on which the Commissioners may differ in opinion.

With regard to the question which has been referred to M. Benedetti, whether it is proved that the shot from the battery struck the "Mermaid," I consider that his decision in that particular point is final and conclusive.

But with regard to the remaining questions, which the Commissioners at the commencement of their proceedings have agreed to discuss, if the Commissioners should differ in opinion with regard to any point, the Spanish Commissioners would be entitled under the Articles of Agreement to claim that it should be referred to the new umpire, and I do not consider that the new umpire would be bound by the reasons, which M. Benedetti may have given for the conclusion at which he arrived, so as to be precluded by them from deciding the point referred to him, according to his conscience. At the same time, as regards the conclusion itself, at which M. Benedetti has arrived, as it must be taken under the Articles of Agreement to be final, I consider that no decision of the new umpire upon the remaining questions, if it should be opposed to the tenor of that conclusion, can set it aside, as regards the matter of fact immediately decided by M. Benedetti.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

No. 154.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received September 8.)

My Lord, Temple, September 7, 1868.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 31st August ultimo, stating that, with reference to his letter of the 4th of June last, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying further letter from Mr. Forbes Campbell, dated the 24th ultimo, in answer to one addressed to him founded on our Report of the 24th August, and to request that we would take the paper into our consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer which should be returned to Mr. Forbes Campbell.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the letter from Mr. Forbes Campbell into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we submit to your Lordship, that the briefest possible acknowledgment will be a proper and sufficient reply to the letter which Mr. Forbes Campbell has thought proper to address to your Lordship.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 155.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received September 16.)

My Lord, Temple, September 16, 1868.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 11th instant, stating that, with reference to my Reports of the 20th ultimo, he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying despatch from the British Commissioners sitting on the case of the "Mermaid," stating that the Spanish Commissioners will not consent to the remaining questions being decided without a new arbitrator, and that the labours of the Commission have in consequence come to a standstill; and Mr. Egerton was pleased to request that I would take this Report into consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to what instruction should now be addressed to the British Commissioners. The previous papers were also inclosed for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the British Commissioners should be instructed not to object to the discussion of the question which the Spanish Commissioners propose to raise, whether the captain of the "Mermaid," either from carelessness or want of skill, was, in a great measure, the cause of that vessel being lost, after the shot from the battery struck her. I think this question is so intimately connected with the 12th and 13th of the remaining questions of the series, which has been drawn up for consideration, that its discussion could not well be avoided whenever those questions should come on. But, independently of those questions, the analogy of the practice of the High Court of Admiralty in causes of collision at sea, affords strong support to the Spanish Commissioners. The practice of that Court in such cases, is to allow a party to admit his liability for the damage immediately resulting from the collision; but to deny his liability for the damage subsequently resulting from the other vessel foundering at sea, owing to the alleged carelessness or want of skill of the master, and therefore issue may be taken upon the latter question.

A far more important point is involved in the 14th and 15th questions, which deal with the burden of proof; and here again I think that the British Commissioners may be properly instructed to be guided by the analogy of the practice of the High Court of Admiralty; and it may be convenient that they should be furnished with a copy of the Judgment of Dr. Lushington, in the case of the "Pensher" (Swabey's Admiralty Reports, page 213), in which two important principles are laid down:—

1. That the onus probandi lies on the party alleging negligence or want of skill and knowledge, distinctly to prove it; and,

2. That ordinary nautical skill and experience is all that can be required from the master of a small merchant-vessel.

The order in which the series of questions has been drawn up by the Commissioners, is certainly most inconvenient; but I do not see how the British Commissioners can refuse to proceed in due order to discuss them. It may be proper, perhaps, that they should be instructed, lest they should be led further into error, that "the principle laid down on a late occasion by the Law Advisers of the Crown," was not that M. Benedetti's decision was right, but that it must be taken to be conclusive, upon the question submitted to him. With regard to the appointment of a new arbitrator, it is obvious that the questions which may have to be submitted to him, will be of the greatest importance as regards the final result.

Under the circumstances that a difference of opinion already exists between the naval members of the Commission upon the subject of the master's conduct after the shot struck the "Mermaid," it would not be advisable, in my opinion, for the British Commissioners to acquiesce in the proposal, that a Spanish naval officer should be named umpire in the place of M. Benedetti. It does not appear from the despatch of the British Commissioners that any application has been made to any of the foreign Consuls at Cadiz to replace M. Benedetti. I might venture to suggest that the assistance of one of the foreign Consuls, to be agreed upon by both parties, as sole umpire, would be likely to prove more satisfactory than the appointment of a person on each side, and a decision by lot which of the two persons so appointed should act as umpire for the remaining questions.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 156.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received September 17.)

Temple, September 17, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Murray's letter of the 16th instant, stating that, with reference to his letter of the 11th instant, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the accompanying telegram from Mr. Walsham, one of the British Commissioners sitting on the case of the "Mermaid," stating that they hope to be able to secure the services of the Captain of Her Majesty's ship "Bristol," for the purposes mentioned in their despatch No. 30 of the 5th of September.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I presume, from Mr. Walsham's telegram, that the British Commissioners hope to be able to secure the services of the Captain of Her Majesty's ship "Bristol," as the person to be named by them under the alternative course contemplated in the Convention, when the Commissioners cannot agree upon an umpire, and when each side is to nominate a person, and it is to be decided by lot which of the two persons so nominated shall act as umpire.

I have already, in the report which I had yesterday the honour of addressing to your Lordship, pointed out certain objections against adopting this alternative, having regard to the questions which remain open for discussion. At the same time, those objections are not paramount, and your Lordship may, I think, properly authorize the British Commissioners to exercise a free judgment on this point after weighing the objections, as probably they alone can fully appreciate the difficulty of proceeding any further with the business of the Commission, unless they are left at liberty to adopt the alternative course.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 157.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received October 23.)

Temple, October 23, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 13th instant, stating that, with reference to my report of the 16th ultimo, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me therewith two despatches from the British Commissioners sitting upon the case of the "Mermaid," accompanied by the several drafts of arguments which they have prepared for presentation to the Arbitrator, when the time arrives for submitting to him the several questions to which they refer, and

1868

Mr. Egerton was pleased to request that I would take the same into my consideration, and favour your Lordship with my opinion thereupon.

The previous papers were also sent therewith for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands, I have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That the arguments of which the drafts have been prepared by the British Commissioners for presentation to the Arbitrator, if the occasion should arise, are, in my opinion, very able and very exhaustive, and I have nothing to suggest to your Lordship as a matter of further instruction to the Commissioners in regard to the mode of treating the five remaining questions.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 158.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received October 28.)

Temple, October 27, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 17th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me, together with the previous paper, a letter from the Colonial Office, dated the 15th instant, inclosing a copy of a despatch from the Acting Governor of Gibraltar, furnishing further explanations with reference to the points adverted to in my Report of the 8th August, with regard to the boarding of the Gibraltar schooner "Fanny" by a Spanish revenue cruizer; and to request that I would take this case again into consideration and furnish your Lordship with my opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That, upon a careful consideration of the Report made by the Lieutenant and Commander of Her Majesty's gun-boat "Skylark" to the Senior Naval Officer, on the 16th September, 1868, and of the subsequent Report made by the Senior Naval Officer to his Excellency the Governor of Gibraltar on the 19th September, I see no reason to alter my opinion that the manner in which the "Fanny" was navigated was calculated to awaken the suspicions of the Spanish guarda-costa as to the destination of the "Fanny," and to justify their boarding her. The Commander of the "Skylark" says, "It certainly appears, even after allowing for baffling winds and calms which do prevail during easterly winds in the vicinity of the rock, that the 'Fanny' was an unusually long time in arriving at the place where she was first boarded." The Senior Naval Officer, who is disposed to think it possible that the "Fanny" might have been prevented by baffling winds from making further progress on her course to Oran before she was boarded for the first time, says, "the statement which makes the 'Fanny' only sail half-a-mile in one hour, the time which elapsed between the first and second boarding, requires explanation."

I am therefore not disposed to think that this case, so far as the conduct of the guarda-costa is concerned in boarding the "Fanny," calls for any further action on the part of Her Majesty's Government than has already been taken by his Excellency Sir R. Airey. But with regard to the further question raised by the Senior Naval Officer as to the right of the Spanish guarda-costa to search the "Fanny" at all, "as she was not at any time more than four miles distant from Europa Point, and consequently was in British waters or on the high seas," and the view which the Acting Governor of Gibraltar has expressed that "although the 'Fanny' may possibly have been rather more than three miles from Europa Point, yet at no time was she within even the six miles from their coast claimed by the Spaniards as their fiscal zone, I am unable to form an opinion upon the matter of fact without further information as to the precise locality where the vessel was boarded, and its bearings in regard to the Spanish coast. With regard, however, to the question of law, I may observe that a great distinction must be made between "British waters," and the "high seas," as regards the action of the Spanish guarda-costas, and that whilst under no circumstances are they entitled to search any merchant-vessel within British waters, they would be justified under the comity of nations in searching a foreign vessel on the high seas if she was within six miles of their coast, and they had reasonable grounds for believing that she was bound to a Spanish port, or meant to land her cargo anywhere on the coast of Spain.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 159.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received November 12.)

Temple, November 11, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 2nd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the accompanying letter from the Colonial Office, inclosing a copy of a letter from the Acting Governor of Gibraltar, reporting the circumstances under which a deserter from the Spanish army, named Antonio Baey Brabo, claims protection from the Gibraltar Government as a British subject, and forwarding a copy of a report on the facts of the case which has been drawn up by the Attorney-General of Gibraltar; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take these papers into my consideration and favour your Lordship with my opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That I am of opinion that, under the circumstances of this case, Antonio Baey Brabo has no claim to the protection of the Governor of Gibraltar against the Spanish authorities. Antonio Baey Brabo appears to have been of Spanish origin, both his parents being Spanish subjects, his mother, however, was by accident within the lines of Gibraltar in itinere at the moment of his birth, his father being at such time in Spain. Under such circumstances, the child under the law of nations, would follow the condition of its parents, and its national character would be Spanish. Antonio Baey Brabo seems always to have resided in Spain, and has come within the British lines under circumstances which entitle the Spanish Government, under an agreement with the Governor of Gibraltar of April 21, 1838 (Hertslet, vii, page 1011), to claim that he should be delivered up. I consider that it would be a breach of that agreement for the Governor of Gibraltar to refuse to deliver up Antonio Baey Brabo, and that he is not precluded from delivering him up by the circumstance of his having been born, as aforesaid, within the British lines.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 160.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received November 14.)

Temple, November 13, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 24th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the accompanying correspondence, as marked in the margin,* with regard to a request made by Mr. W. Grain to be allowed to have access to the Reports of the Commission appointed under the Act 10 Geo. IV, cap. 20, for the settlement of certain British claims upon Spain, and certain Spanish claims upon Great Britain.

Mr. Hammond was pleased also to inclose a Memorandum, dated the 20th ultimo, with regard to this application, which had been prepared in the Foreign Office, and to request that I would take these papers into my consideration, and favour your Lordship with my opinion as to the propriety of complying with Mr. Grain's request.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to Report—

That your Lordship may, I think, properly allow Mr. Grain to have access to the ship-papers and cargo-papers of the four treasure-ships "Media," "Fama," "Clara," and "Mercedes," which were captured by the order of the British Government previous to the Declaration of War by Spain in 1804, and which he has specified as being the particular vessels respecting which he has failed to discover any evidence of their capture in the indices here, or by reference to the Vice-Admiralty Courts.

With regard to the proceedings of the Commission on claims settled under the Treaty of Amiens, I think it not advisable that Mr. Grain should be allowed to peruse the correspondence between the British and Spanish Governments on the subject of the claim of the Marquis de Yranda, in respect of property captured on board the Spanish vessel "La Minerva," without the consent of the Spanish Minister; but I see no objection, on principle, to his being allowed to see the particulars of the claim itself, which was given in on behalf of the Marquis de Yranda, and which the British Government refused to admit. It may, however, deserve consideration on the part of your Lordship whether the circumstance of your predecessor in office having tacitly declined to comply with the request of the Spanish Minister in 1866, that he should be furnished with certain information, which was then required by the Spanish Government to protect itself against claims arising out of the Treaty of Amiens, will not preclude your Lordship on the present occasion from furnishing to a Spanish subject information which he requires to support a claim under that Treaty against that Government. I would suggest to your Lordship that it might be desirable to ascertain on what grounds the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury did not give the necessary directions in 1866, in order that the information desired on that occasion should be communicated to the Spanish Government.

---

* Treasury, September 4; Mr. Grain, September 5; to Mr. Grain, September 7; Mr. Grain, September 11, 1870.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 161.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received November 18.)

Temple, November 17, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Spring Rice's letter of the 3rd instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying despatches and their inclosures from Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid, relative to the seizure by a Spanish ship of war on the high seas, and to the subsequent release of the "Gibraltar Segundo," a vessel sailing under the British flag; and Mr. Spring Rice was pleased to request that I would take the same into consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the "Gibraltar Segundo" appears to have been seized and taken possession of by the Commander of the war-steamer "Favorite," under the impression that she was unlawfully navigating under the British flag, none of her crew being British subjects. It does not appear from the correspondence, in whom the ownership of the vessel was vested, but I infer that the register, or rather I presume, certificate of registry, of which Mr. Consul Turner speaks in his letter of 24th September, No. 15, was a British certificate delivered at Gibraltar under the provisions of the Merchant Shipping Act, 17 and 18 Vict., cap. 104, sec. 30, which constitutes the Governor, or other person administering the government at Gibraltar a registrar for the purposes of that Act. The exhibition of that certificate ought to have satisfied the Commander of the Spanish cruizer that the vessel was British-owned, and entitled to use the British flag; but he appears to have been misinformed as to the requirements of the British Municipal Law, and to have suspected a fraud on the part of those on board her, none of the crew or passengers being of British nationality. As the vessel and her crew have been released upon the representation of the British Consul that the vessel was duly navigated in compliance with the requirements of British law, I consider that your Lordship may properly direct Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid to refrain from interfering further in the matter.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 162.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received November 19.)

Temple, November 17, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Murray's letter of the 7th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the accompanying letter, dated the 5th instant, from the Colonial Office, and its inclosures, relative to the seizure by Her Majesty's ship "Skylark," of a Spanish revenue cruizer while searching a Spanish trader in British waters, and to the subsequent proceedings of the Acting Governor of Gibraltar with regard to those vessels; and Mr. Murray was pleased to request that I would take the same into my consideration, and favour your Lordship with my opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That it appears from the Report of the Commander of Her Majesty's gun-boat "Skylark," that in consequence of a signal having been made from the Signal Station, that a Spanish revenue boat was boarding a British trader in British waters, he got up his steam, and proceeded to the vessels, and thought it his duty to detain them both, and to take them into the New Mole at Gibraltar, having transferred the crew of the revenue boat into his own vessel. Upon the examination of the crews of the revenue boat and the trader before the police magistrate at Gibraltar, it appeared that Her Majesty's gun-boat was not justified in detaining and taking into port either of the vessels, as the trader proved to be a Spanish vessel belonging to Estepona, and the officer in charge of the revenue boat asserted that he had gone on board the trader for water, and not for the purpose of searching her for revenue purposes; in which story he was confirmed by the master of the trader. It may be open to question whether this story was altogether consistent with the facts observed from the "Skylark;" but I think the British authorities were right in acting upon it. Under the circumstances, therefore, that both vessels were Spanish, and that the Spanish revenue boat had not attempted to exercise any right of search within British waters, the Governor of Algeciras would have been entitled to demand that both vessels should be given up to him; and it was a proper act of courtesy on the part of the Acting Governor of Gibraltar to anticipate any such demand by sending in the vessels to Algeciras, with an explanation of the grounds of seizure. I do not consider that the letter of 19th August, 1868, which the Acting Governor of Gibraltar addressed to the Governor of Algeciras on sending back the two vessels, was calculated to lead the latter to suppose that the Spanish trader had been sent in to Algeciras, "as she appeared to have been about to smuggle tobacco into Spain." The fair construction of the letter would appear to be, that although the Acting Governor had misgivings as to the conduct of the revenue boat, "he felt himself at liberty to place both vessels at the disposal of his Excellency." With regard, therefore, to the proceedings of the Acting Governor, upon the view which I have ventured to take of them, I think that they were proper. But it seems to have been stated by the master of the trader before the police magistrate at Gibraltar, that he had on board a cargo of tobacco, which he intended to smuggle into Spain; and the Governor of Gibraltar, who was not himself at Gibraltar at the time of the seizure, alludes to that amongst other facts in his despatch of 16th October, to his Grace the Duke of Buckingham and Chandos, which may have led his Grace to suppose that it was the motive for the Acting Governor of Gibraltar handing over the trader to the Governor of Algeciras. If his Grace's supposition should prove to be correct, it was an error on the part of the Acting Governor to send in the Spanish trader to Algeciras in order that she should be dealt with according to Spanish law. But I do not think the circumstance of the trader having tobacco on board would have been a sufficient answer to the Spanish authorities, if they had sent to demand the surrender of both vessels whilst they were under seizure; and therefore I consider that it did not preclude the Acting Governor of Gibraltar from handing over the Spanish trader to the Spanish authorities at the same time when he handed over the revenue boat.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 163.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received December 5.)

Temple, December 5, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 30th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the accompanying correspondence relative to the seizure by a Spanish revenue cruizer, while on a voyage from Gibraltar to Laraiche, of the British falucho "San Pablo," and to her subsequent condemnation as prize by the local tribunals at Algeciras; and Mr. Egerton was pleased to request that I would take this case into my consideration, and favour your Lordship with my opinion as to any steps which Her Majesty's Government should take with regard to it.

1868

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken this case into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That it does not appear to be advisable for your Lordship to raise any question with the Spanish Government in this case in regard to the Spanish fiscal zone, of two leagues, as the "San Pablo" was within two miles, or a mile and a half from the coast of Spain, when she was seized by the Spanish revenue vessel.

With regard to the case itself, I think that the statement given by the master in explanation of the navigation of his vessel is not satisfactory. According to his deposition, the vessel had used her oars in the early part of the morning as well as sails, to enable her to leave the port of Gibraltar and reach Calrita Point, after which the wind freshened, and she is stated to have made an offing of 4½ miles from that point, when the wind failed, and the current drove her in shore towards Botiga. At half-past 12 a light wind sprung up from the westward, notwithstanding which she was at 1·30 P.M. two miles only off the Spanish coast, abreast of Botiga, standing towards the south. No attempt seems to have been made by the master, when he found himself within Spanish waters, to make use of his oars as he had done in the earlier part of the day; whilst, according to his statement at the time, when his vessel was seized by the Spanish revenue boat, she was scarcely moving through the water.

It is agreed by all parties that, at the time of seizure, the "San Pablo" was in 20 or 21 fathoms water, and two experts are stated to have deposed before the Junta at Algeciras that the "San Pablo" could not have been driven by the currents to the spot where she was seized.

Upon the report made by Mr. Griffiths (No. 2 in Sir John Crampton's despatch No. 211A), I consider that the owners of the vessel and cargo have no just ground of complaint, as regards the proceedings before the Junta. The crew and passengers appear to have been examined before the Junta, in the presence of the British Consular Officer, Mr. Griffiths, who was an eye-witness of all that passed, and there was evidence before the Junta, upon which it might condemn the vessel and cargo.

On which side, however, the weight of evidence preponderated cannot be ascertained, as the proceedings before the Junta have not been made public. Mr. Griffiths reports that the parties have appealed, and if the good offices of Her Majesty's Minister should be required to secure the due hearing of their appeal before the Junta of Madrid, I think your Lordship may so far direct assistance, if required, to be given to the parties, but I do not think that it is a case at present which calls for any diplomatic intervention on your Lordship's part with the Spanish Government.

With regard to the Memorial addressed by Messrs. Charles and John Garcia to his Excellency the Governor of Gibraltar, which is inclosed in the Colonial Office letter of September 30th, 1867, after stating in the fourth paragraph that, in consequence of the currents, the wind being then calm, they were driven to Botiga, about one mile and a half from the shore; they go on to submit to his Excellency in the seventh paragraph "that if the law which the Spanish Government wish to put in force with respect to the capture of vessels within the zone, particularly in the Straits of Gibraltar were recognized by the English Government, no British vessel under 200 tons could safely pass the Strait. Moreover, it is well known that, in consequence of the currents that exist in the mid Strait, and which are continually varying, all vessels, and particularly so small faluchas or crafts, are obliged to sail along the Spanish coast to avoid the currents."

It does not, however, appear from the facts of this case that any question arises as to the passage of the Strait itself, and the further question whether, in the Strait itself small vessels may not be obliged to sail along the Spanish coast to avoid currents, is also foreign, if I mistake not, to the present case, as the allegation of the parties is, not that they were sailing along the Spanish coast to avoid the currents, but that they had been driven to the spot, where they were seized by the force of the current.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 164.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received December 11.)

Temple, December 10, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in a note from Mr. Hammond dated the 26th November last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us, for our consideration with the papers then before us, the accompanying letter from Mr. Kirby, containing a statement bearing on the case of the steam-ship "Tornado."

We are also honoured with a note from Mr. Egerton, dated the 28th November last, inclosing a further letter from Mr. Kirby bearing on the case of the "Tornado."

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we think that an acknowledgment of Captain Kirby's letters is all that is needed.

The information contained in them appears to have only a remote bearing on the "Tornado" case, and, in fact, they are hardly intelligible without the communication (No. 1) referred to in the letter of the 23rd November.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
RICHARD BAGGALLAY.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 165.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received December 11.)

Temple, December 10, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in a note from Mr. Egerton, bearing date the 9th November ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us, for our consideration with the papers then before us, the accompany despatch and its inclosures from Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid, on the subject of the case of the "Tornado."

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That if, as we have suggested in another report, an application be made to the Spanish Government, that the claimants of the "Tornado" should have an opportunity of being heard against treating the vessel as prize, the Government may properly be asked that the vessel shall not be sold in pursuance of the existing sentence of condemnation.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
RICHARD BAGGALLAY.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 166.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received December 12.)

Temple, December 10, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 12th September last, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 14th ultimo, and previous Reports, on the case of the "Tornado," he was directed to transmit to us the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid, containing copy and translation of the Report of the Spanish Minister of Marine to the Minister of State and Foreign Affairs, announcing the definitive confirmation of the sentence of the Tribunal at Cadiz in the case of that vessel; and to request that we would take these papers into consideration, and furnish your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

We are also honoured with Mr. Egerton's letter of the 14th October and 4th instant, transmitting further papers respecting this case.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in Sir John Crampton's letter of the 6th September, 1868, inclosing the copy and translation of the Report of the Spanish Minister of Marine to the Minister of State and Foreign Affairs, announcing the definitive confirmation of the sentence of the Tribunal of Cadiz, Sir John adds that he had instituted inquiries with a view to elucidate more fully the points referred to in your Lordship's despatch No. 94, respecting the legal proceedings in this case, and the rights of defence and of appeal which may, under Spanish law, appertain to the Defendants, as well as to the manner in which they may have availed themselves of those rights, or in how far they may have been prevented or have abstained from so doing. Events that have recently occurred in Spain have prevented Sir John from ascertaining from the Government of Her Catholic Majesty, how it was that the promise made to your Lordship that the claimants should have a full opportunity of appealing against the sentence of the Court at Cadiz was unfulfilled, notwithstanding the applications of the claimants to be allowed a hearing before the Council of State.

Señor Retortillo, however, in his letter to Sir J. Crampton, of the 19th October, 1868, states the actual course of events and proceedings in this case, and from this statement it appears, that the claimants desisted entirely from taking any step, or offering any evidence before the Cadiz Prize Court, relying, it is said, upon the certainty of being able to defend themselves before the Council of State. In effect, therefore, the Cadiz Prize Court, after giving the claimants the fullest opportunity of appealing and being heard against the sentence of condemnation, considered the case upon the materials before the Court, and, for the reasons stated in the Decree, pronounced for the condemnation.

The use of these materials as a foundation for such a sentence is objected to by the claimants, but we cannot say that a sentence founded upon them (after full opportunity given to the claimants to supply fresh evidence, and object to and maintain the worthlessness of that used), made the decision one contrary to justice, and in fact we are not aware that any promise or representation was ever made by the Spanish Government, that on the appeal, which it was stated the claimants were entitled to, any other evidence could be used than that produced and relied upon in the first Prize Court. Senor Retortillo, as we gather, considers that, from the peculiar "administrative" character of the proceedings, defence as of right before the Council of State was not allowed, but that having regard to the obligations which the Spanish Government had contracted with the British Government, on the fulfilment of which the owners had always relied, "the Spanish Government ought to have transmitted the defence of the owners to the Council." No reply was however given to the claimants' petition to be heard, and the sentence of the Cadiz Court was affirmed without any such hearing. We are of course ignorant as to what evidence the claimants intended to produce to prove the innocence of the vessel, but relying on their statement that they anticipated that they should be allowed the opportunity of defence before a Tribunal of Appeal, your Lordship may properly represent to the Spanish Government, the circumstances under which the claimants postponed, and declined to enter into their defence, and ask that under these circumstances a special Tribunal after hearing both sides may determine, whether the "Tornado" was or was not good prize.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
RICHARD BAGGALLAY.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 167.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received December 12.)

Temple, December 10, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 24th of October last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us for our information the accompanying extract of a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid, from which we should learn that the Chamber of Appeal called the "Seccion Contenciosa," has been abolished by a Decree of the Spanish Provisional Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we understand from the letter of Señor Retortillo of the 19th of October, 1868, now before us with other papers relating to the "Tornado," that in prize proceedings the Spanish Prize Courts proceed administratively, and that there is no appeal and further hearing before the Council of State, the functions of which in such cases are consultative, and are only set in motion by the Minister of Marine invoking its advice. It does not appear to us, therefore, that the abolition of the Contentious Section of the Council of State, before which judicial sentences are appealed, can have any bearing upon the case of the "Tornado" of such a character as to call for notice from the British Government.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
RICHARD BAGGALLAY.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 168.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received December 16.)

Temple, December 14, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 11th instant, stating that, with reference to his letter of the 28th ultimo, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us for our consideration a further letter, dated the 8th instant, from Mr. Richard Kirby, bearing upon the case of the "Tornado."

In obedience to your Lordship's commands, we have the honour to report—

That the receipt of Mr. Kirby's further letters should be acknowledged, and that he should be informed that your Lordship will bear his communications in mind; but that your Lordship does not consider that there is any occasion for confronting Mr. Kirby with Messrs. Campbell and Co. and Messrs. Spyers and Hayward, and, therefore, that there does not seem to be any reason for Mr. Kirby to alter his arrangements. The charter-party of the "Alicia Annie" may, at the same time, be returned to Mr. Kirby.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
RICHARD BAGGALLAY.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 169.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received December 31.)

Temple, December 30, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammonds's letter of the 20th instant, stating that, with reference to my Report of the 22nd of July last, he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid inclosing copies and translation of the log-book of the "Garibaldi" and of other documents throwing light on the circumstances attending the capture of that vessel; and to request that I would take the same, together with the previous papers, into my consideration and furnish your Lordship with my opinion upon this case.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the so-called log-book of the "Garibaldi" is not, properly speaking, a ship's log-book, but is a kind of protest apparently made by the master of the "Garibaldi" after his arrival at Huelva, and so far worthless for the purpose for which I was desirous to see it, as likely to contain entries made before the seizure of the vessel. On referring to the document your Lordship will find that, as respects that part of it which professes to be a journal of navigation, it contradicts the ship's manifest and the certificate of the Captain of the Port of Gibraltar, to which I have alluded in my Report of 22nd July last, in regard to the day on which the "Garibaldi" sailed from that port, and so far from throwing any light upon the navigation of the vessel between the 12th and 16th December, for which purpose I thought it might be especially useful, it ignores that interval of time altogether.

Under the very suspicious circumstances of this case, I think your Lordship will be justified in instructing Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid to intercede no further with the Spanish authorities on behalf of the owners of the "Garibaldi" and her cargo.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

1868

Switzerland.

---

No. 170.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received April 25.)

Temple, April 25, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 23rd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the accompanying letter from Mr. W. G. Farrer, respecting a claim made by the Swiss authorities at Lausanne to be paid the sum of 2,650*l.* as duty upon the estate of the late Rev. Chauncey Hare Townshend, in this country, before permitting his executors to have access to papers and property left by the deceased in a villa rented by him at Lausanne.

Mr. Hammond was also to inclose a Memorandum which has been drawn up in that office with reference to this case, from which I should perceive that, in the year 1837, a claim advanced by the authorities of Zurich under somewhat similar circumstances was successfully resisted by Her Majesty's Government; and, as the principle involved in the present case is of considerable importance, Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would favour your Lordship with my opinion upon it, and as to any steps which it may be desirable that your Lordship should take with reference to Mr. Farrer's application.

The Decree of the Federal Directory of July 1818, the Declarations of Great Britain, and of the Directory of the Swiss Cantons in 1841 and 1842, and the Treaty of Commerce with Switzerland of September 6, 1855, bearing upon this case, were also annexed for my information.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That it appears from Article IV of the Treaty of 1855, that the Federal Council of the Swiss Confederation has contracted with Her Majesty the Queen of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland to allow the heir or representative of any British subject, who may have acquired or possessed property of any description within the territories of the Confederation, to succeed and take possession of that property in the ordinary form of law, as any Swiss citizen may do.

It would seem, therefore, that Her Majesty's Government is entitled to insist of right that the representative of Mr. Townshend shall be allowed to take possession of all the personal property of that gentleman within the Canton of Vaud.

But it is of importance to ascertain in the first place from Mr. Farrer whether the Rev. Mr. Helmore has proceeded strictly according to the ordinary form of law as a Swiss citizen would do, and whether it may not be necessary for him to obtain from some tribunal of the Canton of Vaud a judicial recognition of his character as representative, before he can claim to be put into possession of the late Mr. Townshend's property. A foreign probate would not be of conclusive authority in England, and the representative of a foreign testator under a will proved abroad would be required to obtain the authority of an English Testamentary Court, before he could claim to be put into possession of any personal property in England which had belonged to the testator.

Assuming, however, that all the requirements of the law of the Canton of Vaud have been or will be satisfied, I am of opinion that the representative of Mr. Townshend may thereupon demand of right to be allowed access to the property of the testator before any payment can be demanded of him; for the Treaty stipulates that the representative of a foreigner shall not "pay upon the value of such property"—that is, property in the territory of the Swiss Confederation—"any other or higher impost, duty, or charge than is payable" by a Swiss citizen; but for the purpose of this payment the value of such property must be ascertained by the representative, and he cannot ascertain its value unless he is permitted to have access to it.

With regard to the demand of 2,650*l.*, which is stated to have been made by the Cantonal Authorities, under the pretext of a duty levied upon the property of Mr. Townshend in England. I am of opinion that such a demand is in direct violation of the Treaty of 1855, and that if Mr. Helmore has complied with all the antecedent forms which may be required by the Swiss law, to constitute him the legal representative of Mr. Townshend, Her Majesty's Minister would be justified in presenting a note to the Federal Directory, calling upon it to take the necessary measures to secure that effect may be given by the authorities at Lausanne to the provisions of the Treaty of 1855.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 171.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received May 6.)

Temple, May 6, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 4th instant, stating that, upon the receipt of my Report of the 25th ultimo, respecting the claim of the Swiss authorities at Lausanne, to be paid duty on the estate of the late Mr. Townshend in this country, your Lordship directed inquiry to be made of Mr. Farrer in the sense suggested in my letter; and Mr. Egerton was pleased to transmit to me the reply which has been received from Mr. Farrer to that inquiry, and to request that I would again take these papers into consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the course which Her Majesty's Government should pursue in the matter.

The previous papers were also inclosed for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the Government of the Canton of Vaud is entitled to put the executors of the will of the late Mr. Townshend upon the proof of his testamentary domicil, more particularly as the probate taken out in England, which has been exhibited to the Cantonal authorities, describes Mr. Townshend, according to the statement in Mr. Farrer's last letter of 30th April, as of Norfolk Street, Park Lane, and of Lausanne, in Switzerland. The Cantonal authorities may not unreasonably hold that, as the English probate has described Mr. Townshend to be of Lausanne, in Switzerland, as well as of Norfolk Street, Park Lane, they are entitled to be satisfied that Mr. Townshend was not domiciled at Lausanne before they give up their claim to the succession duty on his personal estate.

If the main ground upon which the Cantonal authorities are disposed to rely is the fact, that Mr. Townshend took out a permis de domicile, it is of importance that such domicil, which is essentially a domicil for municipal purposes, should not be confounded with international domicil, by which the disposition of personal property is regulated.

Municipal domicil may be properly held to be some evidence of international domicil, but it is not conclusive evidence of it; on the contrary, the presumption arising upon it is a very weak presumption, upon which English Courts do not lay much stress, but it is of importance that the executors should fully instruct their legal representative at Lausanne as to the facts upon which they rely to support the English international domicil, in case the Cantonal authorities should be disposed to attach undue weight to the municipal domicil.

It does not appear from Mr. Farrer's letter whether the Cantonal authorities will treat the question of Mr. Townshend's domicil administratively or judicially.

If the inquiry is to be conducted judicially, I am of opinion that Her Majesty's Government is not at present called upon to give any assistance to the executors, but if the question is to be treated administratively, your Lordship may properly allow Mr. Farrer to communicate with your Lordship further on the subject, if he has any doubts as to the proceedings of the Cantonal authorities being at variance with the spirit of the Treaty of 1855.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

1868

Turkey.

No. 172.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received January 4.)

Temple, January 3, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 31st ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatches from Mr. Francis, recently appointed Judge of Her Majesty's Consular Court at Constantinople (No 14, December 18), but who is still at Alexandria, and from Mr. Lane, who is temporarily acting at Constantinople, in Mr. Francis' place (No. 31, 9th December), stating the nature of the difficulties and objections which each of these officers have raised, to presiding at the trial of Mr. Calvert, which is fixed to take place at Constantinople on the 30th January.

And Mr. Hammond was to inform us that your Lordship had, previously to the receipt of Mr. Francis' despatch of the 18th instant, instructed him to return to Constantinople, in time to preside at the trial; but in view of the reasons advanced by Mr. Francis for not wishing to do so, your Lordship would be glad to be favoured with our opinion, whether they are of such a nature as to preclude Mr. Francis from presiding at the trial, and if so, whether it is expedient that Mr. Lane should undertake this duty.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That in our opinion the reasons advanced by Mr. Francis would not preclude him from trying Mr. Calvert. We do not think that what has occurred should make Mr. Francis doubt his ability to conduct with impartiality the trial, and direct the jury properly upon the evidence judicially before him on the points of law and fact, which may arise in the course of it. If, however, Mr. Lane be competent to conduct the trial, we think that your Lordship may, under the circumstances of the case, after having received from Mr. Francis so strong a representation of his impressions of Mr. Calvert's guilt, and of his consciousness that he would preside at the trial with a predisposition against the prisoner, as that which he has forwarded, properly relieve Mr. Francis from the duty of so presiding at the trial. And we think that if your Lordship should take this course, it will be better for Mr. Francis to be absent from Constantinople altogether and take no part in the trial. Mr. Lane, in his letter, appears to raise no objection to presiding as Judge, but only to appearing as prosecuting Counsel.

We have, &c.

(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
C. J. SELWYN.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 173.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received January 6.)

Temple, January 4, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 31st ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me a letter from Messrs. J. L. Manasce and Sons, stating the circumstances under which they ask that instructions should be sent to Her Majesty's Consul at Alexandria, to support their correspondent at that place in their endeavours to recover the amount of certain bills accepted by His Highness Mustapha Fazil Pasha; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would furnish your Lordship with my opinion whether Her Majesty's Government would be justified in instructing Her Majesty's Consul to interfere in the case, and if so, to what extent.

---

No. 171*.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received November 11.)

Temple, November 11, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 28th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Agent and Consul-General at Tunis, representing that certain clauses of the Treaty lately concluded between Italy and Tunis, of which a translation was inclosed, are at variance with the provisions of the Treaty between this country and Tunis, and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take Mr. Wood's despatch into consideration, and report to your Lordship my opinion on the points therein adverted to. A copy of the Convention between Great Britain and Tunis was also inclosed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That it appears from the despatch of Her Majesty's Agent and Consul-General at Tunis that the paragraph of the Treaty lately concluded between the Italian and Tunisian Governments, which he considers to be at variance with the provisions of the Treaty between Great Britain and Tunis, has reference to the settlement of disputes which may arise in regard to immovable property in the Regency of Tunis between Italian and British subjects, and that he is of opinion that the Italian Treaty will work a hardship to British subjects in three respects:—

1. With regard to the Tribunals at Tunis, by which such disputes will have to be determined.
2. With regard to the law which such Tribunals will administer.
3. With regard to the right of appeal from the decision of such Tribunals.

The Italian Treaty provides as follows:—

"Si au contraire le différend surgirait entre deux Italiens, ou qu'il s'éleverait entre un Italien et un sujet d'une tierce Puissance, la partie qui aurait été citée par-devant le Tribunal de la Magistrature locale aura le droit de renvoi de cause par-devant l'autorité Consulaire respective pour y être jugée de la manière habituelle."

The British Treaty, on the other hand, whilst it provides for cases of litigation respecting immovable property between two British subjects, giving to either party the option of having the question "heard and determined by the British Consul," with the proviso that "his decision shall be governed by the laws and usages of the country, so far as they can be ascertained, and so far as the conditions expressed in the Contract will permit," does not contain any provision to meet cases of litigation which may arise respecting immovable property between British subjects and the subjects of another Christian Power. There is thus undoubtedly a variance between the British and Italian Treaties as respects the additional provision in the latter Treaty, which, however primâ facie, should work no hardship to British subjects, as the advantages or disadvantages resulting from it will be reciprocal, and it is framed after the practice which has hitherto prevailed in Tunis in disputes respecting personal property between the subjects of Christian Powers. Her Majesty's Agent, however, considers that the paragraph above recited of the Italian Treaty will deprive British proprietors of an essential part of the immunities and privileges which have been secured to them by Articles IV and XVII of the British Treaty. The former of those Articles, which refers in express language to matters in litigation ("choses en action"), has been already alluded to, and I am of opinion that the Italian Treaty will not interfere with any right accorded to British subjects under that Article. The latter Article, on the other hand, does not appear to me to be properly interpreted by Her Majesty's Agent, as I consider it not to have any application to the adjudication of disputes by legal Tribunals, but to refer to immunities, privileges, and rights as regards the enjoyment of property ("choses en possession"). Thus it provides that "British subjects, holding immovable property in the Regency of Tunis, shall, in conforming to the local laws and Regulations, exercise and enjoy the same immunities, privileges, and rights that are accorded to Tunisian proprietors," but if the term "rights" is to be construed in this Article as applying, amongst other things, to the legal Tribunals which are to adjudicate in disputes respecting immovable property, this Article will be in evident conflict with Article IV, under which the right of convening a British subject before a Tunisian Tribunal is secured to a Tunisian proprietor, but a British proprietor may be precluded from such right, the option being given to any British subject, who is defendant in a suit in which a British proprietor is plaintiff, to have the difference heard and determined by the British Consul.

1868

The second point, however, to which Her Majesty's Agent has called your Lordship's attention with regard to the law, which the Consular Tribunals will administer in such disputes under the words of the Italian Treaty, "pour y être jugée de la manière habituelle," may involve a question of principle of no slight importance. If I understand rightly, the system under which the Consuls of Christian Powers at Tunis, and in other of the Barbary States, have been accustomed to entertain suits respecting personal property against the subjects of the Powers under whose Commission they respectively act, when the plaintiff is the subject of another Power, it has not been the result of any Convention; but a custom has grown up under the comity of nations ob reciprocam utilitatem, inasmuch as by no other means could the plaintiff obtain justice, the subjects of Christian Powers being, by Treaty, exempt from the jurisdiction of the local Tribunals. The general rule of the Roman Code, which is expressed in the maxim "Actor sequitur forum rei," has been applied to such cases, not upon the ground of showing more favour to the defendant than to the plaintiff, but in order that the adjudication might be made where it could be enforced. The authority, on the other hand, of the Consular Court to enforce its decisions against the subjects of that Power, under whose Commission it acts, is derived from the law of the domicil of the defendant, and thus it happens that in suits respecting personal property brought in the Consular Courts the law of the forum has been the law of the domicil of the defendant. There is no objection on principle to questions of real property between foreigners resident in the Regency of Tunis being heard or decided before the defendant's Judge, if in such cases the law of the forum is the law of the country where the property is situated. I do not, therefore, think that there is any violation of international law in the Government of Tunis allowing the Consul of the party defendant in a suit touching property within the Regency of Tunis to exercise jurisdiction, if the Consul is authorized by the Power under whose Commission he acts to decide the question in accordance with the laws and usages of Tunis. No stipulation, however, is found in the Italian Treaty that the decision of the Consul in such cases shall be governed by the law of Tunis; yet all jurists of note agree that the law of the situs exclusively governs as to immovable property. Pothier, as cited with approval by Mr. Justice Story, in his "Conflict of Laws," § 427, has laid down the rule in the most general form, that "real laws have an exclusive dominion over all things submitted to their authority, whether the persons owning them live within the territory, or without the territory" ("Coutumes d'Orleans," Ch. I, § 2); and Vattel has laid it down as a principle of international law that immovables are to be disposed of according to the laws of the country where they are situated ("Law of Nations," L. 11, § 110). All the authorities in England and the United States recognize this principle in its fullest extent, and it may be taken for granted that in a suit brought by a foreigner in an English Court against a British subject respecting real estate in a foreign country, the law of the forum would be the law of the country in which the property is situate. A British Consul would, therefore, I think, properly decide any suit brought before him against a British subject under the Italian Treaty according to the law of Tunis, but I am not aware whether Italian Courts would or would not administer the law of the situs.

Her Majesty's Agent seems to apprehend that they would apply the laws of Italy instead of the Tunisian laws. It will, therefore, be of importance to ascertain (1) whether the Tribunals of Italy differ in their practice from those of England; and (2) whether the parties to the Italian

Treaty contemplate that justice shall be administered in the Consular Courts according to a different rule from that which the Treaty provides in regard to the Tunisian Courts, namely: "Les lois à être appliquées pour la décision de la cause lorsque le différend devra être résolu par les Tribunaux et autorités du pays seront celles du pays même, pourvu qu'il ne s'agisse point d'établir l'état et la capacité personnelle de la partie Italienne, ni d'autres questions pour lesquelles il deviendrait nécessaire de recourir à d'autres législations, selon les règles et les distinctions du droit international privé communément acceptées."

I think that it would be matter of just complaint on the part of the British Government if the Tunisian Government has not secured for British proprietors holding land under the sovereignty of Tunis, who may be involved in litigation with Italian proprietors, the same measure of justice which it has secured for Tunisian proprietors as regards the lex rei sitæ. "Quæ realia aut mixta sunt, haud dubie locorum et rerum situm sic spectant, ut aliis legibus, quam territorii, judicari non possint." (D'Argentre, quoted by Story, § 426A, 4th edition.)

On the third point touched upon by Her Majesty's Agent with regard to the right of appeal from the decision of the Consular Courts, I am rather at a loss for information. I am not aware of any right of appeal from a British Consular Court to the Court of Queen's Bench, as seems to be suggested by Her Majesty's Agent. No such appeal has been given from any of the Consular Courts in the Barbary States by 6 and 7 Will. IV, c. 78 (Hertslet V, p. 503), and I am not aware of any Order in Council of Her Majesty regulating the course of proceedings in such Courts which grants any such appeal.

It is possible, however, that an appeal from the Italian Consular Courts in those States to the Supreme Court at Genoa may have been granted by some Italian Statute or Ordinance. It certainly would be a great hardship upon a British subject whose title to real estate in the Regency of Tunis had been acquired under the law of the country, if he could not obtain justice according to that law in a matter touching that estate against an Italian subject without being liable to have the suit carried by the defendant before an Appellate Court at Genoa. I should observe that 6 and 7 Will. IV, c. 38, above referred to, has been repealed by 6 and 7 Vict., c. 94, which empowers Her Majesty to exercise any jurisdiction which she may have acquired by Treaty within any foreign country in the same and as ample a manner as if Her Majesty had acquired such power and jurisdiction by the cession or conquest of territory.

Her Majesty may, therefore, by Order in Council, authorize the British Consul at Tunis to exercise the jurisdiction accorded to him by the British Treaty, and to administer the law of the country in all differences between British subjects touching immovable property there situated, and if jurisdiction over such differences, when they arise between a British subject and the subject of a Christian Power, should also be conceded to Her Majesty by a further Treaty, Her Majesty may also issue an Order in Council to empower the British Consul to exercise such jurisdiction. In the absence, however, of any such Order in Council, it may be doubtful whether the British Consul could be duly authorized to exercise the jurisdiction accorded by Article IV of the British Treaty, or by any Article of a further Treaty.

I venture to suggest to your Lordship that some further inquiry should be made as to the interpretation which the Tunisian and Italian Governments propose to give to the words "la manière habituelle" in the 4th paragraph of Article XXII of the Italian Treaty, as Great Britain, with all the other Powers whose subjects have acquired property under Treaties like the British Treaty, have a direct interest in the question. It may be that the provisions of the Italian Treaty are not intended to conflict with those of the British Treaty, but to supply a defect in it, in which case it may deserve your Lordship's consideration whether a supplemental Treaty may not be requisite to enable Her Majesty to entertain questions affecting the rights of foreigners, not British subjects, to land in Tunis.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken this case into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That your Lordship would not, I think, be justified in instructing Her Majesty's Consul to interfere at present in this case.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 174.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received January 7.)

My Lord, Temple, January 7, 1868.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 31st ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the papers respecting a representation addressed to the Foreign Office by Messrs. Hall, in which they complain that the transit of gunpowder, destined for the Danubian Principalities, through the Straits of Constantinople, is prohibited by the Turkish authorities; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take these papers into my consideration and favour your Lordship with my opinion as to whether Her Majesty's Ambassador at Constantinople is correct in considering that the Turkish Government are justified, under the XVth Article of the Treaty of Commerce with this country of 1861, in prohibiting the import of gunpowder into the Ottoman dominions.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That Her Majesty's Ambassador is, in my opinion, correct in considering the Turkish Government to be entitled under the XVth Article of the Treaty of Commerce of 1861 to prohibit generally the importation of gunpowder into the Ottoman dominions.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 175.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received January 13.)

My Lord, Temple, January 11, 1868.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Murray's letter of the 3rd instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Consul-General at Bucharest, stating that a practice exists not only as regards the Government of the Principalities, but also as regards the Representatives of Powers, of calling upon foreign Consular Officers to communicate to persons residing in the countries which such Consular Officers represent, summonses, notices, and other papers connected with civil suits; and Mr. Murray was pleased to request that we would furnish your Lordship with our opinion as to the course which British Consular Officers should be instructed to pursue with reference to applications so made to them.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That it appears to us to be no part of the duty of Consular Officers to forward documents connected with civil suits, dishonoured bills, &c., to England through the Foreign Office.

The practice of doing this has, however, as we understand, prevailed for some time, and a similar practice is adopted by the Consuls of other countries. Whether it should be continued or not is a question of expediency. We, like the Consul at Bucharest, are ignorant as to the course adopted by the Foreign Office in communicating the documents forwarded to persons for whom they are destined in England, and the amount of trouble entailed on Government officials by the adoption of the practice. If it should be continued, we think that the Consuls should expressly intimate to all officials sending documents through them, that no responsibility is assumed, save that of seeing that the documents are sent off to England to the parties concerned, under cover to the Foreign Office.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
C. J. SELWYN.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 176.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received January 29.)

Temple, January 28, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Murray's letter of the 23rd instant, stating that, with reference to my letter of the 2nd December last, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me a further letter which your Lordship had received from Mr. Petherick, stating the reasons why he considers the items of his account, which I then rejected, to be fairly claimable from the Egyptian Government; and Mr. Murray was pleased to request that I would take this letter, together with the former correspondence, into my consideration, and that I would favour your Lordship with my opinion as to the answer which should be returned to Mr. Petherick.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken this letter, and also the former correspondence, into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That, as it appears from Mr. Petherick's further letter, that the net produce of the merchandize embarked in the boats at Khartoum, which has been recently paid over to him, amounts only to 1,421*l.* 13*s.* 7*d.*, instead of 1,582*l.* 2*s.*, as calculated by him when he prepared the account transmitted in his letter of the 23rd November, 1867, the difference of 160*l.* 8*s.* 5*d.* in favour of Mr. Petherick may properly be added to the sum of 3,679*l.* 11*s.*, so that the total amount proposed to be claimed on his behalf will be 3,839*l.* 19*s.* 5*d.*

With regard to the reasons alleged by Mr. Petherick in the same letter, why he considers the other items of his account, which have been rejected as fairly and properly claimable from the Egyptian Government, his primary reason, namely, that "it was solely owing to the unjust and selfish conduct of the Egyptian Government that he was totally deprived of the value of the merchandize and accessories consigned by himself to his Agent at his stations on the White Nile," is not, in my opinion, borne out by the facts which have been elicited in the correspondence. I have had the honour to state to your Lordship the grounds of my opinion on this part of the case in my previous Report, from which I see no reason to depart. With regard to Mr. Petherick's further observation, that he is at a loss to see what difference can be made "between the seven items of his claim which have been rejected, and the eighth item, which your Lordship has been advised can be properly demanded from the Egyptian Government," if Mr. Petherick, on reconsideration, and from his own more accurate knowledge of the circumstances, feels satisfied that no valid distinction can be made between the eighth and the rejected items, such as I presumed to be intended by him when he attached to this item the words "consequent on the stoppage of supplies from Khartoum," as if to show that this item of expense had a distinctive character from the other items, I see no sufficient reason why any demand should be made upon the Egyptian Government for this item; but Mr. Petherick's attention may properly be called to the distinction which he has himself made in his account, before the item is struck out from the claim.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 177.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received February 1.)

Temple, January 31, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 26th December, 1867, stating that, with reference to our Reports of the 15th of June and 16th of July, 1867, respecting the Law and Protocol recently promulgated by the Porte to enable foreigners to hold real property in Turkey, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a copy of a despatch from the Marquis de Moustier to the French Ambassador at this Court, in reply to a Memorandum founded on those Reports, which was communicated to the French Chargé d'Affaires last August, and which was also therewith inclosed.

Mr. Hammond was also pleased to transmit to us the previous papers, as well as the correspondence which has taken place since the date of our last Report; and to request that we would again take this question into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with such observations as we may have to offer thereupon.

We are also honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 3rd of December last, stating that, with reference to his letter of the 26th of that month, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch from Mr. Elliot respecting the question of the tenure of land in Turkey by foreigners, and inquiring which clauses in the Protocol are considered objectionable by Her Majesty's Government; and to request that we would take this despatch into consideration, together with the papers then before us, and favour your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That when the papers relating to the proposed Projet de Loi and Protocol were before the Law Officers last year, it appeared from Lord Lyons' despatch of the 11th of April that both his Lordship and M. Bourrée had expressed strongly the opinion that all the concessions, in derogation of the Capitulations which were proposed in the Protocol, would be better omitted. That they appeared to Lord Lyons and M. Bourrée to have no necessary connection with the question of holding real property, and, trifling as they were, to be more likely to lead to embarrassment and inconvenience than to any practical result.

As far as appeared from the papers then before the Law Officers, the Capitulations, though of ancient date, had worked well and satisfactorily for the protection of British subjects in Turkey; and, having regard to the opinions of Lord Lyons and M. Bourrée, whose knowledge of the country to which the Capitulations applied, and of the practical effect of those Capitulations rendered their opinions eminently worthy of respect, the Law Officers advised that it would not be expedient to sanction such provisions of the Protocol as interfered with existing Capitulations.

The views of Her Majesty's Government upon the Protocol, referring to the objections of Lord Lyons and M. Bourrée, were embodied in the Memorandum sent to the French Ambassador, dated the 22nd July, 1867.

Since the Law Officers wrote their Report, Lord Lyons has left Constantinople, and a change in what was assumed to be the view of M. Bourrée has taken place, or, at all events, his Excellency states that the representation of Lord Lyons as to his opinion was founded on misconception. In his despatch of the 10th of December, 1867, to the Marquis de Moustier, he writes, "J'avoue humblement n'avoir rien trouvé de mieux que le Protocole auquel par erreur le Ministre Anglais me croit opposant."

M. Bourrée and the Chargé d'Affaires, M. Outrey, believing that the Projet de Loi will only become operative if the Protocol is agreed to in substance, now appear to be in favour of the Protocol. They believe that the Capitulations do not and would not work well; that they are defective in many respects; that the alterations effected by the Protocol will in the main be beneficial; and that the law as regards British and French subjects would, if the Protocol were assented to and adopted, be preferable to that by which the rights and privileges of subjects of the Treaty Powers are regulated under existing Capitulations.

It seems pretty clear that the Projet de Loi will only be in force in favour of the subjects of those Powers who assent to the Protocol, and it is admitted that the law on land tenure in Turkey, as it affects foreigners (including British subjects), is now unsatisfactory. But, as far as we are informed, notwithstanding all that is urged by M. Bourrée and M. Outrey, the privileges conferred upon British subjects resident in Turkey by the Capitulations have not been found otherwise than valuable or such as on slender grounds should be abrogated or altered.

In their former Reports the Law Officers, acting upon what they believed to be the reasonable views and opinions of Lord Lyons and M. Bourrée, thought that none of these well established privileges should be abandoned.

But in the present aspect of things the question whether they should be modified appears to be a question of policy.

As far as our limited knowledge of the state of things to be provided for in Turkey extends, the clauses of the Protocol do not seem, in themselves, objectionable.

Whether, for the sake of securing to British subjects the right to hold land on a safer and more secure footing than has hitherto been recognized, the privileges secured, not merely by the letter but by the well-established construction and working of the Capitulations, shall be abandoned or repealed and qualified by assent to the terms of the Protocol, is a question upon which it is beyond our province to advise.

That the rights of British subjects will be materially altered is obvious. It may be, as M. Bourrée seems to think, that an equivalent will be found in the security given to the holders of land in Turkey by subjects of a country assenting to the terms of the Protocol by the outlet for capital and by various other considerations to which he adverts.

Mr. Elliot expresses his opinion that a new state of things will be created to which the old Capitulations in their integrity will not be applicable, and considers that new laws will be necessary to meet the probable increase of foreigners in the Dominions of the Sultan.

In our opinion, if the Capitulations are not to be maintained in their integrity, it is not very material, as far as we can judge, whether the clauses of the Protocol stand as in the text or with the modification proposed by M. Bourrée in clause 15.

With respect to the 18th Article, it may be well to understand clearly what right Ottoman subjects have in the cases referred to by this Article, which it is proposed shall be equally enjoyed by foreigners. The 9th and 14th Articles give the Sublime Porte the right of making special rules and edicts to carry out the law, which we would suggest should be submitted to the foreign Powers agreeing to the Protocol before they are promulgated.

It may not be thought beyond our province to suggest that the opinion of Consuls of experience, and of British merchants and other British subjects resident in Turkey, might be useful in determining the question whether the working of the proposed law will be such as to render it expedient, under all the circumstances, to assent to and adopt it, notwithstanding its modifying effect on the existing Capitulations,

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
C. J. SELWYN.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 178.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received February 7.)

Temple, February 7, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are favoured with your letter of the 6th February instant, stating that you were directed by Lord Stanley to inform us that he had received from Colonel Stanton a despatch, in which he reported that a settlement which he hoped would prove satisfactory, had been agreed to by the Egyptian Government in regard to the claims of the engine-drivers; and to request that we would return the papers on this subject which accompanied your letter of the 4th ultimo.

In compliance with the request contained in your letter, we have the honour to report—

That in pursuance of Lord Stanley's directions we return these papers without further report upon them.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
C. J. SELWYN.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 179.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received February 8.)

Temple, February 7, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Murray's letter of the 18th January, 1868, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying correspondence regarding the imprisonment, by order of the British Consul at Scutari, of a British subject named Thomas Holroyd.*

Mr. Murray was also pleased to state that the circumstances which led to this person's imprisonment are detailed in Mr. Consul Reade's despatch of the 8th November last, and we could thereby see that Mr. Reade's proceedings were based on what he considers to be his magisterial or judicial powers.

Mr. Murray was further pleased to state that these, as we are aware, are regulated by the Order in Council of the 30th November, 1864, which is applicable to offences committed by British subjects in Ottoman dominions; and to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion upon the course which it will be proper for Her Majesty's Government to pursue in regard to the representation now made by Mr. William Bristow on behalf of Holroyd.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That Consul Reade and Mr. Holroyd differ so completely in their statements, as to the circumstances that led to the arrest, that it is difficult to form any clear opinion as to how far the Consul was in the wrong, and how far Mr. Holroyd brought upon himself, by alleged deception practised on the Consul, and by his own violent conduct, the imprisonment and other grievances of which he complains.

We think that, in the present state of things, all that your Lordship can do is to state, in answer to Mr. Bristow's letter, that Consul Reade has been called upon for an explanation of his conduct, and that his version of the affair is widely different from that maintained by Holroyd, and the substance of the Consul's explanation should, we think, be forwarded to Mr. Bristow, in order that it may be communicated to his client.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
C. J. SELWYN.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 180.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received March 2.)

Temple, February 29, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 25th January last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatches from Lieutenant-Colonel Stokes, the British member of the European Commission of the Danube, urging the necessity for the establishment of a Tribunal to take cognizance of cases in which the Commission, in its corporate capacity, proceeds against vessels navigating that river.

A copy of Protocol No. 196 of the Danube, referred to by Colonel Stokes; a copy of the Treaty of Paris of 1856, under Article XIX of which Treaty certain Powers have the right to station vessels of war in the Danube; a copy of the Public Act by which the Police Regulations now in force on that river are determined; and a copy of the Order in Council of the 9th of April, 1866; and also a letter from the Board of Trade, concurring in this proposal, and containing suggestions respecting the constitution of the Tribunal,—were also inclosed.

And Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take these papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion in regard to this matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That under the 17th section of the Treaty of Paris it is stipulated that a permanent Commission should be appointed, which should prepare regulations of navigation and river police, it being understood (Article XVII) that the European Commission (appointed under Article XVI) should have completed its task within the period of two years.

It appears, however, that the European Commission was continued and is still in existence, and that the Powers who signed the Treaty accorded to their delegates in the said Commission full powers to determine by an international Act "the duties and obligations arising under existing circumstances" (Protocol 28th March, 1866). The Conference then gave sanction and consent to the public Act signed by the Delegates at Galatz on 2nd November, 1865, with slight modifications.

---

* Mr. Holroyd, October 8; to Mr Holroyd, October 22; to Consul Reade, October 22; Mr. Lewis, October 26; to Mr. Lewis, October 30; Consul Reade, No. 22, November 8; to Consul Reade, No. 7, November 27; Consul Reade, No. 24, December 12, 1867; Mr. Bristow, January 10, 1868.

We do not find, however, in any of the papers before us that any new powers have been conferred upon these Delegates, as Plenipotentiaries, to alter or amend the public Act before referred to, and in the absence of such power, the new réglement proposed by them appear to be wholly ultra vires.

The reasons for giving jurisdiction to try cases of collision, &c., to some independent Tribunal, such as that which it is proposed to establish, are no doubt cogent, but unless some power, of which we are unaware, has been conferred upon the European Commission to establish a new Court for such purposes, we think that Colonel Stokes should be informed that the réglements are considered to be unauthorized, and that such a Court as is contemplated would be illegal.

There are special objections to some of the réglements, which at present, and until we know under what authority, if any, the Commission assumes to act, it appears unnecessary to dwell at length.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 181.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received March 23.)

Temple, March 21, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 13th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me a letter from Mr. Freshfield, in which he sets forth the particulars of a case in which he represents that certain parties with whom he is connected, are aggrieved by the terms and operation of a contract into which the Turkish Government have entered with Messrs. Charnaud, Barker, and Guarracino, and with a Company, which those gentlemen undertook to form, and since established under the name of the "Smyrna Quay Company," for the construction of a new quay at that port.

Mr. Egerton was pleased to request that I would take Mr. Freshfield's letter into my consideration, and report to your Lordship my opinion whether the case to which it refers, is one which calls for any or what interference on your Lordship's part.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken Mr. Freshfield's letter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That it appears that the Ottoman Government has contracted for the erection of a new quay at Smyrna, which will extend to the seaward of and parallel to the whole existing seaboard of the town. Mr. Freshfield represents that the new quay will cut off certain existing wharves, one of which is the property of Mrs. Hanson, from their present communication with the sea. It appears further, that the Ottoman Government has provided that the owners of such wharves shall have a right of pre-emption in regard to the ground filled up in front of their respective properties, at a price based upon the prices of filled-up ground, which prevailed in 1864 and 1865. Mr. Freshfield represents that those years were years of great and unexampled prosperity, and that such a standard of price will be an aggravation of the injury inflicted by the Ottoman Government upon the owners of seashore property.

It is not suggested that the Ottoman Government is dealing with the seaboard of the town of Smyrna in a manner which violates any law upon which Mr. Hanson, when he constructed the wharf, was entitled to rely as securing to him the property of the foreshore in perpetuity, or that Mrs. Hanson's position as a British subject is in any way exceptional from that of Ottoman subjects who own existing wharves, which will be cut off by the new quay from their present communication with the seashore.

I am of opinion that this is not a case of grievance to a British subject, which calls for any interference on your Lordship's part.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 182.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received April 4.)

Doctors' Commons, April 3, 1867.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 2nd instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the correspondence which has passed between the Foreign Office and Messrs. Cavan, Lubbock, and Co., and Colonel Stanton, respecting a claim preferred by the Société Agricole et Industrielle d'Egypte, against the Viceroy; and Mr. Hammond was to request that I would take the inclosed papers into consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion as to the course which your Lordship should now take with regard to this matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I am of opinion that your Lordship should apprise Messrs. Cavan, Lubbock, and Co., that Her Majesty's Government cannot interfere further on their behalf than by directing Colonel Stanton to continue to use such good offices for the adjustment of their claims as in his discretion he may think expedient. That Her Majesty's Government cannot prefer any direct demand of positive right in this matter against His Highness the Viceroy of Egypt.

I have, &c.
(Signed) ROBERT PHILLIMORE.

---

No. 183.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received April 6.)

Temple, April 6, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 28th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me, with reference to my letter of the 28th January last, a further letter your Lordship has received from Mr. Petherick, together with the former correspondence relating to his claim against the Egyptian Government; and Mr. Egerton was pleased to request that I would take this letter into consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion whether the circumstances under which Mr. Petherick embarked in trade at Khartoum, and the obligations imposed upon him by his position as Her Majesty's Consul, were such as to entitle his claim to exceptional support from Her Majesty's Government, and if so, whether any other of the items in his account, besides those already allowed, should be included in the claim to be made on his behalf against the Egyptian Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That it does not appear from the documents submitted to your Lordship in Mr. Petherick's last communication, that he was induced in his official capacity by the suggestions of Mr. Consul-General Murray, to form his trading establishments on the White Nile.

Mr. Petherick appears to have had the conversations with Mr. Consul-General Murray, to which he alludes in his letter of 28th ultimo, prior to his first appointment as Her Majesty's Consular Agent at Khartoum, and although he may have accordingly proceed to Kordofan in October 1849, his appointment taking place in the following month of May, to establish himself as a trader in the hitherto monopolized commercial productions of the Soudan, under the encouragement given to him by the expression of Mr. Consul-General Murray's views of the importance of British subjects commencing trade there, I am of opinion that that circumstance does not in any way support his claim to be repaid or indemnified by the Egyptian Government in the full amount of the losses sustained by him in respect of his establishments on the White Nile.

In fact, the formation of those establishments were beyond the scope of Mr. Consul-General Murray's suggestions, and unless Mr. Petherick's business as trader may be taken to be quite independent of his duties as Consular Agent, the formation of those establishments would have been at variance with the instructions conveyed to him on his appointment in the latter capacity, which limited his duties to the southern boundary of the regions which were under the Egyptian Government.

With regard to the further topic in Mr. Petherick's letter, where he says that he could not with honour to himself, or in justice to Her Majesty's Government, follow the course which the other European traders adopted in order to save their property, your Lordship will probably be better able than myself to appreciate the view which Mr. Petherick takes of his position at Khartoum in relation to Her Majesty's Government; but as far as I can form an opinion from the general intructions conveyed to him by Mr. Consul-General Murray in 1850, the obligations imposed upon him by his position as Her Majesty's Consul at Khartoum would not warrant your Lordship in making any additional claim on his behalf against the Egyptian Government in respect of losses incurred by him as a trader, however much those losses, if they were incurred by him from a sense of public duty, might recommend him to the generous consideration of Her Majesty's Government.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 184.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received April 15.)

My Lord,

Temple, April 13, 1868.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Murray's letter of the 2nd of April instant, stating that, on the receipt of our Report of the 7th of February, upon the subject of the imprisonment of an engineer named Holroyd by order of Her Majesty's Consul at Scutari, your Lordship caused a communication to be addressed to Mr. Bristow in accordance with our recommendation; and Mr. Murray was now to transmit to us the accompanying reply which has been received from Mr. Bristow, in which he contradicts the statements of Consul Reade and reasserts those of Mr. Holroyd.

Mr. Murray was also to inclose for our more complete information, the previous correspondence connected with this matter;* and to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion, whether it is incumbent on Her Majesty's Government to take any, and what, further steps in this matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That it appears to us that the documents annexed to Mr. Bristow's letter have but little bearing upon the subject of Mr. Holroyd's complaints, and that they do not support, to any material degree, his statements that he had duly settled with the Turks, that his resignation had been accepted, &c.

As might be expected Holroyd's account of the whole transaction differs widely from that of Mr. Reade, and it is very unlikely that your Lordship will ever be able to arrive at any certain conclusion, as to where the truth really lies. Holroyd, however, now makes further serious charges affecting the Consul, which he ought, as we submit to your Lordship, to have the opportunity of answering or explaining.

He (Holroyd) alleges that he had no notice of any money claim being lodged against him before he was sent to prison; that the Consul had been consulted by Holroyd about the claim spoken of, and had advised him not to pay it; that he remained at Scutari a week after his release, and during that time had no notice of any claim, and that he believes that no claim was lodged against him until after he had left Scutari; that the Consul sent to him after he had left, and informed him that he must go back to Scutari unless he paid the debt; and that under those circumstances he paid it, amounting to 258 piastres, He concludes by saying that all the ill-treatment was inflicted upon him because Consul Reade was annoyed at Holroyd's refusal to take the Consul's nurse to England free of expense.

Probably all this story is utterly groundless, but as the charge has been made, your Lordship may think it should be answered.

The assertion that the claim for the debt had not been lodged until after Holroyd had left Scutari, may probably be capable of being refuted by the creditor who lodged the claim. Holroyd's violence at the Consulate may be confirmed by an independent person, and the nurse may assist Mr. Reade in refuting the charge of motive which Holroyd imputes.

We think that Mr. Bristow should be informed that the charges now made for the first time against Consul Reade of having acted in bad faith, and of having made statements for the purpose of misleading, are of a grave character, of which your Lordship will try and ascertain the truth by further investigation. That the motive to which Holroyd attributes treatment on the part of the Consul, which as Mr. Bristow states, would, unless motive existed, doubtless appear to be incredible, will also be made matter for further investigation.

---

* Mr. Holroyd, October 8; to Mr. Holroyd, October 22; to Consul Reade, October 22; Mr. Lewis, October 26; to Mr. Lewis, October 30; Consul Reade, No. 22, November 8; to Consul Reade, No. 7, November 8; Consul Reade, No. 24, December 12, 1867; Mr. Bristow, January 10; to Mr. Bristow, February 13, 1868.

The substance of Mr. Bristow's letter might be communicated to Mr. Consul Reade, with directions to him to offer such explanation as he thinks fit, with any corroborative statements which he may deem it desirable to forward.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 185.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received April 28.)

My Lord,

Temple, April 27, 1868.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 12th February last, stating that he was directed to transmit to us the accompanying draft of an instruction founded upon our Report of the 31st January last, which your Lordship proposes to address to Her Majesty's Ambassador at Constantinople upon the question of the tenure of land in Turkey by foreigners; but that, before transmitting the instruction in question to Mr. Elliot, your Lordship would be glad to be furnished with our opinion thereupon.

We are also honoured with Mr. Hammond's letter of the 1st instant, stating, that, as it appears from the accompanying despatch from Lord Lyons (No. 313) that the French Government are desirous of learning the decision of Her Majesty's Government upon the question of the tenure of land in Turkey by foreigners; he was directed to request that we would furnish your Lordship with our opinion thereupon at our earliest convenience.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we have made alterations in the draft despatch which we now return. It seems desirable that British subjects should be chargeable only with pecuniary, and not with personal services, which might be imposed on Turkish subjects in respect of lands held by them.

As regards offences committed on the land, we would suggest that there is no reason for making British subjects amenable to the ordinary Turkish tribunals, unless the offences are connected with the tenure of land.

In respect of offences, which in their nature are unconnected with the tenure of land, such for instance as assaults, we think that it is reasonable that they should still be judged according to the capitulations. As an exception to the rule, that entry is not to be made on the lands of British subjects in Turkey, possibly it may be considered right that entry in the particular cases which we have referred to in a paragraph in page 7 might properly be allowed. We presume that it is not considered desirable to consult the Consul or British merchants on the question, whether a British subject should be allowed of his own motion to submit himself to the jurisdiction of Turkish tribunals.

We have added a few words in page 10 which may induce those, whose opinion is asked, to view the question submitted to them in a liberal spirit, so that they may not advise opposition to modifications of the Capitulations on insufficient grounds, or simply because they oppose changes in the law applicable to British subjects in Turkey.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 186.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley—(Received April 30.)

Temple, April 30, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 13th of April instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Consul-General and Judge of the Consular Court at Constantinople, dated the 23rd ultimo, in which he suggests for various reasons, that Mr. Calvert, who has been recently tried and convicted of swindling before that Court, should be removed from Constantinople to Malta, to undergo his sentence.

Mr. Hammond was also pleased to state that your Lordship considers as sufficient the reasons given by Mr. Francis for making this suggestion; but as it appears from the annexed despatch from Mr. Lane, who presided at Calvert's trial as Acting Judge in the absence of Mr. Francis, that Mr. Lane decided upon Constantinople as the proper place of imprisonment, Mr. Hammond was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion whether or not Mr. Francis can properly be authorized to send the prisoner to Malta.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That Mr. Calvert, having been convicted before a Consular Court in the Ottoman Dominions, it is, we think, within the power of the Judge of the Supreme Consular Court by virtue of Art. 66, of the Order in Council of the 30*th November*, 1864, to cause him to be sent to Malta in order that the sentence may be carried into effect there.

The approval of Her Majesty's Secretary of State to this course is not required, and we think therefore that a formal approval should not be given.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 187.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received May 9.)

Temple, May 8, 1868.

My Lord.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 16th March last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the accompanying letter, dated the 13th March last, from Messrs. Elmslie, Forsyth, and Sedgwick, animadverting on the course pursued by the Turkish Government in regard to the claim of their client, M. de Matto, against the Ottoman Artillery Department. Mr. Hammond was pleased also to transmit a despatch from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Constantinople (No. 77) inclosing a copy of the note received from Fuad Pasha, in reply to a communication which, after the receipt of my Report of the 5th October last and a reference to Mr. Francis, the Legal Vice-Consul in Egypt (who was at that time in this country) in regard to the lex loci solutionis, upon which I was of opinion M. de Matto's claim for interest depended. Mr. Elliot was instructed to make to the Turkish Government on the subject.

The former papers connected with this case were also annexed, and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take them, together with the additional papers referred to, into my consideration, and report to your Lordship my opinion as to the course which should now be taken in this matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That it would appear from the note of his Excellency Fuad Pasha, that the Administrative Department of Tophané has represented to his Excellency that the sum of money which it paid into the Ottoman Bank to the account of M. de Matto was paid by it in full discharge of all claims on the part of M de Matto, whilst the solicitors of M. de Matto have represented to your Lordship that the agent of M. de Matto declined at first to receive the money on that understanding, but ultimately took it out of the Bank reserving the right to claim interest, and that he lodged a protest to that effect with Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires, which was brought forthwith to the notice of Aali Pasha, the then Minister of Foreign Affairs.

His Excellency Aali Pasha seems at once to have objected to the payment of any interest, on the grounds that the contract contained no stipulation for interest, and that the rate of interest ("taux d'intérêt") demanded by M. de Matto was exorbitant.

It appears, however, from the Report of Mr. Francis, that if the claim of M. de Matto under a similar contract had been made against a Turkish subject in a Turkish Commercial Court, interest would have been allowed by the Court, and also that the rate of interest claimed by M. de Matto is not excessive, according to the current rate at Constantinople.

That some interest should be paid to M. de Matto by the Ottoman Government seems to be consistent with general principles of equity, seeing that, by the terms of the contract, the purchase-money was to be paid within twenty-one days from the delivery of the coals.

Of the breach of this engagement on the part of the Ottoman Government, his Excellency Aali Pasha seems not to have taken sufficient note.

Looking, however, to the position originally taken up by his Excellency Aali Pasha, and the position now taken up by his Excellency Fuad Pasha, I am of opinion that it would be useless for Her Majesty's Government to press any further M. de Matto's claim for interest unless under an overture of reciprocity, and that, in return for the concession which the Ottoman Government must make in point of principle, if they are to entertain M. de Matto's claim at all, M. de Matto ought to be prepared to authorize Her Majesty's Government to make an equitable concession on his behalf in the rate of interest claimed by him.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 188.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received May 20.)

Temple, May 20, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 14th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me a letter from Mr. J. Hughes, dated the 12th instant, stating the circumstances under which he entered into an engagement with the Egyptian Government, and complaining of the breach of the terms of that engagement; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take Mr. Hughes' letter into consideration, and report to your Lordship my opinion as to the course which it would be proper for him to take in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken Mr. Hughes' letter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That Mr. Hughes may be properly requested to furnish your Lordship with a copy of the agreement with the Société Agricole et Industrielle d'Egypte, which he states that he executed before he left England under the belief that, as regards the Société, it was only nominal or a mere matter of form, and that, truly or substantially, he was engaged in the service of the Viceroy of Egypt.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 189.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received June 3.)

Temple, June 3, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Murray's letter of the 13th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me a despatch and its inclosures from Her Majesty's Consul-General in Egypt, respecting a decision which had been given in the Egyptian Naval Court at Alexandria, in a case of collision between an English vessel, the "Mogul," and an Egyptian steamer, the "Mussr," which case had been pending for a considerable time, owing to the delay of the Egyptian Government. That it is asserted that the judgment given by the Court in this case against the owner of the "Mogul" is not in accordance with evidence; and Mr. Murray was pleased to request that I would favour your Lordship with my opinion whether Her Majesty's Government would be justified in taking any and what steps in favour of the owner of the "Mogul."

The correspondence which led to Colonel Stanton's Report was annexed.

I am also honoured with a further letter of the 20th ultimo, relative to this case, transmitting a further despatch from Her Majesty's Consul-General upon this subject.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That as the claim of the owner of the "Mogul" has been heard by a Naval Court, which primâ facie was fairly constituted, and the Viceroy has declared that he cannot cancel the decision, but is willing that the question should be referred to some other tribunal, it is advisable, in my opinion, that your Lordship should accept the proposal of the Viceroy, and that the case should be referred, if possible, to another mixed tribunal, constituted, as suggested by Her Majesty's Consul-General, of five members, of which two should not be open to any imputation of sympathy with either side by reason of ther common nationality.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 190.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received June 5.)

Temple, June 5, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 28th ultimo, stating that, as it appeared from my Report of the 8th ultimo that I considered it would be useless for Her Majesty's Government to press on the Porte any further M. de Matto's claim for interest, unless under an overture of reciprocity, he was now directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the accompanying reply which has been received to the communication, which was addressed to Messrs. Elmslie, Forsyth, and Sedgwick on that subject, from which I should perceive that M. de Mattos declines to accept any proposal involving a lower rate of interest than 7 per cent, which was what Sir H. Bulwer proposed in 1865, and was rejected by the Porte; and Mr. Egerton was pleased to request that, under these circumstances, I would report to your Lordship my opinion as to the course which should now be taken in regard to M. de Matto's claim.

The former papers connected with this case were inclosed for reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That, as M. de Matto declines to accept any proposal involving a lower rate of interest than 7 per cent., which was proposed by Sir H. Bulwer, and rejected by the Porte in 1865, I think it would be desirable for your Lordship to direct further inquiry to be made whether there is any positive law in Turkey under which interest is payable account of delay of payment of a simple contract debt in the absence of any express contract as to the payment of interest.

I observe that Mr. Francis states that "M. de Matto would have the right to demand interest under his contract, and a Turkish tribunal would be entitled to give interest on the class of cases of which that of M. de Matto forms one." As Mr. Francis does not say that a Turkish tribunal would be bound by Turkish law to award interest, it is possible that it is only under the equity of the Commercial Courts that interest in such cases could be awarded.

It is only within a comparatively recent period that the law in this country has been settled by 3 and 4 Wm. IV, c. 42, section 28, under which a jury is authorized to allow interest upon all debts or sums payable at a certain time. Prior to this Statute there had been apparently conflicting decisions in the Common Law Courts on this subject; and Lord Ellenborough had laid it down so recently as in 1810 (Gordon v. Swan, 12 East., p. 419), that the giving of interest should be confined to bills of exchange, and such like instruments, and to agreements reserving interest. It will be important, therefore, to ascertain whether the refusal of the Turkish Government to pay interest to M. de Matto is countenanced by any positive rule of the lex loci solutionis, it being assumed that the goods were to be paid for at the place of delivery and not in England.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 191.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received June 20.)

Temple, June 20, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 17th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying letter from Messrs. Baxter, Rose, Norton, and Co., requesting the assistance of Her Majesty's Government in regard to a claim upon the Egyptian Government arising out of an alleged breach of a contract on its part, for raising a loan entered into with MM. Cartaret and Co; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take this matter into consideration, and report to your Lordship my opinion as to the course which it would be right and proper to pursue in regard to it.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That Messrs. Baxter, Rose, Norton, and Co. have requested your Lordship to submit to the Egyptian Government the claims of certain parties for whom they are interested, in respect of their having undertaken to associate themselves with M. Cartaret, a French subject, in carrying out a contract which he had entered into in Paris with the Egyptian Minister of Finance, and which contract is in abeyance.

I am of opinion that your Lordship cannot properly accede to the application.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 192.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received June 26.)

Temple, June 25, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 22nd February last, stating that, during the stay of the Viceroy of Egypt in this country, Nubar Pasha pressed upon Her Majesty's Government His Highness' desire that the Powers of Europe should concur in an alteration of the judicial system prevailing in Egypt, in cases where natives and foreigners were concerned; that the question had been previously mooted, as we would find in some of the papers sent to us; and after his return to Paris from this country Nubar Pasha communicated through Her Majesty's Ambassador there, in more specific terms, the wishes of the Viceroy; that your Lordship thereupon addressed to Her Majesty's Agent and Consul-General in Egypt, on the 18th October, a despatch explaining the willingness of Her Majesty's Government to take part in an inquiry to be held with the view of ascertaining how far foreign Powers could comply with the wishes of the Egyptian Government, and a copy of that despatch was communicated through Her Majesty's Representatives to the different Powers of Europe.

Mr. Hammond also stated that much correspondence, as we would perceive, had since ensued, partly between Her Majesty's Government and other Powers and partly between them and the Egyptian Government; but at present Her Majesty's Government had declined to express any further opinion as to the course which should be pursued until the Commission of Inquiry should be established.

That the French Government, however, had instituted an inquiry for themselves, the result of which is contained in the printed pamphlet, and they express great anxiety to learn the views of Her Majesty's Government on the conclusions contained in that pamphlet. These, however, your Lordship had hitherto declined to set forth, but your Lordship thought it desirable to ascertain the opinion of Her Majesty's servants in Egypt on the French Memorandum, the result of which opinion is set forth in Colonel Stanton's despatch No. 10 of the 28th January; that we would see by Lord Lyons' despatch No. 181 of the 20th February that the French Government still pressed for some expression of opinion on the part of Her Majesty's Government, but although your Lordship had not decided upon the question of giving one in the present stage of the business, you would be glad to learn what view we take not only of the question generally, but also of the principles set forth in the French Memorandum; and on the receipt of our opinion your Lordship would decide what course can best be taken at the present time.

We are also honoured with further letters from Mr. Hammond in reference to this same subject bearing dates respectively the 4th and the 13th March and the 1st, 12th, and 25th May last, and the 5th, 6th, 13th, 15th, and 16th days of June instant, and containing further papers for our consideration.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, with the papers originally laid before us, and which included the print of the Report of the French Commission of Inquiry, we were directed to express an opinion not only on the question of the necessity for alterations of judicial reforms in Egypt, but also on the principles set forth in the French Memorandum.

Since these papers were sent to us they have been supplemented from time to time by additional papers, correspondence, and despatches; and the chief matter upon which our opinion now seems to be required is whether the Capitulations alone, or the Capitulations and the usages which have sprung up in Egypt, and which are said to have been a departure from the letter and spirit of the Capitulations, should be taken as the basis for an inquiry, with a view to an alteration of the judicial system in Egypt.

It appears to us that it is unnecessary to discuss at length the grounds upon which the necessity for judicial reform in Egypt rests. That necessity is fully admitted in your Lordship's despatch of the 18th October, 1867, and appears to be recognized by Colonel Stanton and Mr. Francis.

Nubar Pasha agrees with many of the conclusions arrived at by the French Commission, and a Memorandum dated the 4th June, 1868, sets out in opposite columns these conclusions and the answers of his Excellency, showing how far the opinion of the Viceroy coincides with the views of the Commission.

To the conclusion of the French Commission that, as regards suits between foreigners and natives, the legal maxim actor sequitur forum rei should, to a certain extent only be abandoned on conditions mentioned by them. His Excellency replies: "The Viceroy cannot accept the maxim of actor sequitur forum rei as applicable to the question at issue. He may, by the force of circumstances, be obliged to submit to abuses against which he has not the power to contend, but cannot consent to confirm such abuses, &c.

In his letter to Lord Lyons of the 9th May, 1868, Nubar writes, "Le Vice-Roi demande que le Gouvernement de Sa Majesté la Reine ait la bonté de se prononcer sur le point suivant:—'Les Capitulations réservent-elles, oui ou non, au tribunal territorial le jugement de tous les procès qui peuvent survenir entre indigènes et étrangers indifféremment, demandeurs ou defendeurs?'"

In his letter of the 25th May, 1868, dated London, his Excellency is equally anxious to obtain the specific declaration that the Capitulations alone should regulate judicial proceedings in which foreigners are concerned in Egypt, and that usages by which a foreigner defendant can withdraw himself from the jurisdiction of the native tribunal and insist upon being tried by his Consul are abuses which ought not to be recognized or insisted on as forming, either with or without the Capitulations, the proper basis for discussing judicial reform.

Your Lordship having, as we understand, required us to state our views as to the validity of these usages as regulating the relations of foreigners with the Egyptian Government, we beg to express our opinion that, whilst usages which have been in existence and acted upon for many years past, and apparently sanctioned by the Rulers of Egypt, may properly be considered as binding on the Government, notwithstanding they may establish a state of things not in accordance with the letter of the Capitulations themselves, still such usages as have sprung up in recent times (and it is said that most of them have come into existence in the last fifteen years) not only without the sanction, but against the consent of the Viceroys, who, however, have been powerless to prevent usurped jurisdiction, cannot be put forward as constituting the basis upon which inquiry into the judicial system with a view to its reform ought to be made.

But we ought to add that we feel the great inconvenience that may arise from stating to Nubar Pasha, or to the French Government, in terms, that Her Majesty's Government consider particular usages as mere usurpations. If any attempt to reform the judicial system were to break down it would be difficult henceforth to insist upon usage which had been formally admitted to have originated in abuse; and we would venture to suggest that the prudent course to adopt would be to take as the basis of the proposed inquiry the Capitulations and such well-established usage as may appear to have been adopted and sanctioned, as the exposition of, or substitute for, the exact letter of the Capitulations.

We think that if, on inquiry, it should be found that tribunals such as Nubar Pasha contemplates, fitted to administer justice in such manner as that foreigners would be constrained to admit their independence and competence, could be established, it would be just and right that a foreigner should be bound to submit to the jurisdiction of such tribunals. The complaints of Nubar Pasha appear to us to be only too well founded; the usurped Consular jurisdiction which the Viceroy cannot prevent, is necessarily most galling and offensive to him, and subject to the above remarks. The French proposal duly considered and matured in all its details, might we think be advantageously adopted as a basis for a new system of judicial procedure in Egypt.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 193.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received June 27.)

Temple, June 27, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 25th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to us the accompanying despatch, with its inclosures, from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Constantinople, containing information respecting an alleged project of a British subject, named Palmer, for destroying the Turkish fleet at Candia; and to request that we would take these papers into our consideration, and report to your Lordship whether, in our opinion, Her Majesty's Government would be justified in taking any, and if so, what, steps in this matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, Her Majesty's Government can take no steps beyond those which have already been taken by Mr. Elliot with reference to Mr. Palmer. It will be quite right that Mr. Palmer's movements should be strictly watched by the British Consul, and Her Majesty's Government be furnished with any information that may be obtained as to his alleged project and his communications with the Cretan Committee.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 194.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received June 29.)

Temple, June 29, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 25th of June instant, stating that, with reference to our Reports of the 31st of January and 27th of April last, upon the question of the tenure of land by foreigners in Turkey, he was now directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatches from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Constantinople, containing observations respecting an "Acte Spécial," of which a copy was inclosed, under which French subjects will be admitted to the power of holding real property in Turkey; and to request that we would take these papers into our consideration, and report to your Lordship at our earliest convenience, our opinion as to the course which we consider it would be right and proper that Her Majesty's Government should now take in this matter.

The previous papers were also inclosed therewith.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That it appears to us that the practical question now is, whether assent should be given to the Protocol as it now stands? for having regard to the fact, that it has been adopted by the French, and that the Austrian and Swedish Ambassadors are prepared to assent to it, it cannot, we think, be reasonably expected that, at the instigation, or on the request of Her Majesty's Government, any alteration will be made in its provisions. We do not find that any merchants or British subjects (other than

Mr. Elliot, Mr. Francis, and Mr. Cumberbatch) have expressed any opinions upon this law. The views of such merchants and British subjects, would nevertheless be deemed valuable by your Lordship if they could be obtained, in order to enable a decision to be arrived at, upon what appears to us to be a question of policy.

It seems clear, that British subjects will not be entitled to the benefits of the land law, except upon the terms of their giving up some of the advantages and privileges now secured to them by Treaty, and the question resolves itself into this, whether, the right to hold lands according to the new law is so valuable as to make it worth while to concede and yield up, as a consideration for such privilege, some of the immunities, safeguards, and protection, reserved to foreigners under existing circumstances?

The expediency of giving up these immunities, in return for the power of holding land, is a matter upon which our opinion is probably not expected. Mr. Francis appears to be in favour of the adoption of the Protocol. We agree with that gentleman, and with Mr. Elliot, that the clause giving power to foreigners to render themselves amenable to the ordinary tribunals without Consular assistance has no necessary connection with the question of the tenure of property; but we venture to suggest that, if any alteration could be obtained in this clause (which seems improbable), Her Majesty's Government would hardly like to insist upon the alteration suggested by Mr. Elliot, and then give such directions to the Consuls as will render the altered clause a dead letter.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 195.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received July 2.)

Temple, June 30, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 8th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying correspondence which has taken place since the receipt of my predecessor's Report of the 3rd April, 1867, respecting the claim of Messrs. Cavan, Lubbock and Co., against the Viceroy of Egypt in connection with a company called the "Société Agricole et Industrielle d'Egypte;" and Mr. Hammond was to request that I would again take this case into consideration, and report to your Lordship my opinion thereupon.

I am also honoured with Mr. Hammond's letter of the 11th instant, transmitting further correspondence in connection with this case.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That it will be proper for your Lordship, in reply to the communication of Messrs. Cavan, Lubbock, and Co., of 2nd June, 1868, to apprize them that Her Majesty's Government cannot direct Colonel Stanton to support their increased demand against the Viceroy of Egypt of payment in full for their shares in the Société Agricole et Industrielle d'Egypte.

On the other hand, the request which has been made to your Lordship by the Directors of the Egyptian Commercial and Trading Company, in their letter of the 15th May, 1868, that Her Majesty's Consul-General in Egypt may "be instructed to give his good offices with the Viceroy to appoint a competent tribunal before which the case of the shareholders in the Société Agricole et Industrielle d'Egypte may be fairly and impartially heard," may, I think, be so far favourably entertained by your Lordship, that your Lordship may direct Colonel Stanton to intimate to the Viceroy your satisfaction that he has avowed his readiness to have the question of his liability submitted to a tribunal at Constantinople. If the constitution of that tribunal should be matter of mutual arrangement, as proposed by the Viceroy, between the Ambassadors of the foreign Powers and the Sultan's Minister of Foreign Affairs, it is obvious that it will be a more satisfactory Court than any which the Viceroy could himself appoint, as suggested by the Directors of the Egyptian Commercial Company. Meanwhile it may be proper for your Lordship to apprize the Egyptian Commercial Company that His Highness the Viceroy has intimated his willingness to have the question of his liability submitted to a tribunal at Constantinople to be agreed upon between the Ambassadors of the foreign Powers and the Sultan's Minister of Foreign Affairs; and that your Lordship will instruct Her Majesty's Representatives in Egypt and at Constantinople to co-operate with the Representatives of other foreign Powers in bringing about such a result.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 196.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received July 9.)

Temple, July 8, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 6th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the accompanying document signed by Messrs. Cavan, Lubbock, and Co., and others, requesting the assistance of Her Majesty's Government in support of their claims against the Viceroy of Egypt, in connection with the Company called the "Société Agricole et Industrielle d'Egypte;" and Mr. Hammond was pleased to state that, before acting upon the opinion contained in my Report of the 30th ultimo, upon the papers which had already been submitted to me in reference to this question, your Lordship would be glad to be informed whether the statements contained in this further document will in any way affect that Report; and also what, in my opinion, would be a proper answer to return to the Memorialists.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I have carefully considered the statements contained in the Memorial signed by Messrs. Cavan, Lubbock, and Co., and other British shareholders in the Société Agricole et Industrielle d'Egypte, and I do not find any new fact in those statements which would induce me to vary my previous Report to your Lordship.

I am unable to concur with the Memorialists in their view, that "the sole fact of the infringement of the statutes of the Society," by the Directors in entering upon undertakings foreign from the object for which the Society was constituted, "would be sufficient to justify them in demanding, as their right, to be reimbursed by the Egyptian Government for the capital which they have invested in the Society, with interest to the date of payment;" but I think that, if it can be established as suggested by the Memorialists, that everything took place at the instigation of the Viceroy, and that he has been benefited by the misfeasance of the Directors at the expense of the shareholders, when his Government ought to have appointed a Commissioner on its behalf to prevent the Directors doing anything against their statutes, they may have an equitable claim against him, and that the question of the liability of the Viceroy in respect of such claim may be properly submitted to the Tribunal of Arbitration proposed to be constituted at Constantinople. I think your Lordship may so far accede to the prayer of the Memorialists as to promise to instruct Colonel Stanton to support a reference of any claim on their part to the Tribunal of Arbitration, if it should be constituted as proposed by the Viceroy at Constantinople.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 197.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received July 29.)

Temple, July 29, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 29th ultimo, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 29th February last, in which we advised Her Majesty's Government not to concur in the recommendation of the European Commission of the Danube for the establishment, in the manner proposed in Protocol No. 198, of a tribunal to take cognizance of cases in which the Commission proceeds against vessels navigating that river, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us, together with the previous papers, and the draft of an Instruction which was founded on our Report which was addressed to Colonel Stokes, the accompanying despatch and Protocol No. 210, inclosed therein, setting forth the manner in which the Commission now proposes to attain the object in view; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take this matter into consideration, and furnish your Lordship with our opinion thereupon, and as to the instructions with which Colonel Stokes should be furnished.

1868

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the new regulations are made professedly under the power conferred by Article 112 of Annex A, to the Public Act, relative to the navigation of the mouths of the Danube as a "modification" of the regulations contained in that Annex. No new tribunal is established as was previously contemplated, and though it is only perhaps by a liberal interpretation of Article 112 that these new regulations can be considered as "modifications" of the réglements of March 1865, we think that, as all the members of the Commission have assented to them, Her Majesty's Government need not disapprove of them.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 198.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received August 21.)

My Lord,
Temple, August 20, 1868.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 6th June last, stating that the papers which he then sent us by your Lordship's direction, would explain to us what had lately been passing between certain Powers and the Government of the Danubian Principalities, with reference to the wish of the latter to be released from the operation of the Turkish Capitulations in matters of civil and criminal jurisdiction.

Mr. Hammond also stated that the last papers consisted of a communication made to your Lordship by the French Ambassador, inclosing a memorandum explanatory of the concessions which the Russian Government are prepared to make to the Principalities in that respect, and stating the views of the French Government on the subject; and a despatch from Her Majesty's Agent and Consul-General at Bucharest commenting on them.

That your Lordship would be glad to receive from us our opinion as to how far it might be prudent or possible for Her Majesty's Government to depart from insisting on the strict observance in the Principalities of the provisions of the Turkish Capitulations in matters of jurisdiction.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, from a perusal of the papers before us, we cannot fail to be struck with the very unsatisfactory state of things existing in the Danubian Principalities, with reference to the Capitulations, and the rights, privileges, and immunities claimed for foreigners under them, but practically refused to be recognized; nor is it possible to disagree from Mr. Elliot's conclusion in his despatch to your Lordship, dated the 18th January, 1868, that there is a great want of dignity in the position occupied by Great Britain in the Principalities with reference to the Capitulations.

To put a stop to this state of things would, as it appears to us, be very desirable, and, as far as we can judge from all the papers before us, a departure from insisting on the strict observance in the Principalities of the provisions of the Turkish Capitulations in matters of jurisdiction might afford a relief from existing difficulties if this departure could be safely conceded.

But if we are right in understanding your Lordship as desiring to know our opinion, whether it would be prudent or possible not to insist on the strict observance of the Capitulations tacitly only, and without any Treaty or arrangement as to the jurisdiction which is to be permitted to the native tribunals, or the extent to which observance of the Capitulations may be waived, we think that it would be a very inexpedient course to adopt. The applicability of the Capitulations to the provinces, though denied by their Government, has always been insisted upon by Her Majesty's Government, and unless and until those Capitulations have been duly abrogated or modified, British subjects in the provinces who claim the right to live in them clothed with the immunities or privileges conferred by the Capitulations, might, as it seems to us, justly feel aggrieved if they were left to the mercy of the territorial tribunals, and stripped of the protection to which they claim to be entitled, without any Treaty being made which would define their true position, obligations, and privileges, or secure to them any new rights in lieu of those which are surrendered by them.

The Russian Memorandum, we observed, suggests an "International Convention" to regulate the rights, privileges, and obligations of Russian subjects in the Principalities.

Speaking generally, we think that this memorandum might usefully form the basis of a fresh arrangement with the Porte and the Principalities; but we agree with the view expressed by Mr. Green in his letter of the 22nd May, 1868, that the "system of reciprocity" in enforcing judgments is a measure which, in the existing state of the law of this country, could not be carried into effect here.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 199.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received August 29.)

My Lord,
Temple, August 28, 1868.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 20th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the accompanying letter, which had been received from Messrs. Cavan, Lubbock, and Co., in reply to a letter, of which the draft was inclosed, which was addressed to them after the receipt of my Report of the 8th ultimo, on the subject of their claim against the Viceroy of Egypt, in connection with the Société Agricole et Industrielle d'Egypte. Mr. Egerton was pleased also to inclose the accompanying further papers which had been received on the subject since the date of my Report; and to request that I would take those papers into my consideration, together with the former ones therewith inclosed, and report to your Lordship my opinion as to the course which Her Majesty's Government should now take in the matter.

I am also honoured with Mr. Hammond's letters of the 13th and 15th instant, inclosing further papers on the same subject.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That the amended claim of the English shareholders in the Société Agricole et Industrielle d'Egypte, which has been submitted to your Lordship in their letter of 6th August, 1868, differs very materially from their original claim, which your Lordship instructed Colonel Stanton to bring to the notice of the Viceroy, and which his Excellency Raghib Pasha discussed with Colonel Stanton. Their original claim, as stated in their letter of 28th July, 1867, was that, inasmuch as "their shares were scarcely negotiable at a loss of 50 per cent. on the amount paid up, and this depreciation had been entirely caused by the acts of the Viceroy, the Viceroy should relieve them of their shares, reimbursing to them the amount paid on them, as they did not wish to make any claim that was not founded upon the strictest justice." After Messrs. Cavan, Lubbock, and Co. had been informed by your Lordship of the result of Colonel Stanton's interviews with the Viceroy, and with Raghib Pasha, and of Colonel Stanton's private opinion that the Egyptian Government would probably consent to purchase the shares of the different holders at half-price to put an end to all further contestation, Messrs. Cavan, Lubbock, and Co., in their letter of 30th March, 1867, stated to your Lordship that they had refused indirect offers of more than half-price for their shares, and concluded by saying that "they felt assured that ere long, with the kind assistance of Colonel Stanton, the Viceroy will recognize that, in merely asking to be relieved of their shares, without making any claim for interest (although they had to lay out their money through a period during which they could easily and without risk have been making 12 per cent. with it here), they are only asking what is reasonable."

Your Lordship directed this second letter to be forwarded to Colonel Stanton, and informed Messrs. Cavan, Lubbock, and Co., that Colonel Stanton would be instructed to continue to use his good offices to procure the adjustment of their claim. It would appear from a subsequent letter of Messrs. Cavan, Lubbock, and Co. of 24th June, 1867, that several French shareholders, in the same position as the English shareholders, "were making strong representations to the Viceroy, calling upon him to take over the shares at par." No progress, however, towards a settlement seems to have been made, when on 4th May, 1868, Messrs. Cavan, Lubbock, and Co. renewed their application to your Lordship, requesting your Lordship to inform Colonel Stanton that, "the Austrian Government had instructed its Consul-General at Alexandria, to obtain from the Viceroy, the recognition of a similar claim to their own on behalf of an Austrian subject," and suggesting that the present, would seem to be a favourable moment for again pressing the matter on the attention of the Viceroy.

Colonel Stanton was thereupon instructed by your Lordship on 8th May, 1868, "to take such further steps to assist their claim, as in his discretion he might see fit," and it would appear from the memorandum drawn up for your Lordship on May 26, 1867, with reference to the motion of Mr. Neville Surtees in the House of Commons, that the claim was then considered to be a claim "to recover from the Viceroy the amount of the shares paid up by the shareholders."

Colonel Stanton appears to have reopened the question with the Viceroy, upon this basis. The Viceroy, however, persisted an denying his liability, stating that he had himself been a victim of the bad management, if not bad faith, of the Directors; but at a later interview, the Viceroy consented to have the question of his liabiliy submitted to any tribunal at Constantinople, that might be agreed upon between the Ambassadors of the foreign Powers, and the Sultan's Minister of Foreign Affairs.

Meanwhile certain Directors of the Egyptian Commercial and Trading Company addressed a Memorial to your Lordship stating, that they had been instrumental in forming the Société Agricole et Industrielle d'Egypte, and soliciting on its behalf the good offices of Her Majesty's Government, "to appoint a competent tribunal, before which the case of the shareholders might fairly and impartially be heard, in which case the shareholders would be prepared to send out a delegate to act on their behalf;" and your Lordship directed this Memorial to be transmitted to Colonel Stanton on the 5th of June last, before his despatch had arrived in England announcing the proposal of the Viceroy to have the question of his responsibility referred to a tribunal at Constantinople; and your Lordship instructed him to represent the case of the Société Agricole to the Egyptian Government, as set forth in the Memorial. Colonel Stanton appears, by his despatch of July 3, 1868, to have read this Memorial to Cherif Pasha, who replied that "he could give him no other answer than the Viceroy had already made, mamely, that his Highness was ready to submit the question of his liability to any tribunal at Constantinople, that might be agreed upon between the Ambassadors of the Foreign Powers, and the Minister of Foreign Affairs at the Porte.

It appears to me to be a matter of the last importance in this stage of the case, to provide against any misunderstanding, as to the question to be submitted to the tribunal at Constantinople, for the English shareholders have raised a new question of responsibility against the Viceroy which had not been raised by Colonel Stanton, when the Viceroy proposed to refer the question of his liability to a tribunal at Constantinople, and they have also set up a claim not merely to be indemnified for the value of their shares at par, but for damages on the ground of loss of probable profits and interest on their money. With regard to their claim to be indemnified for their shares at par, I consider that the shareholders may be justified in contending, that the proposal which they made to Nubar Pasha "that if he would settle the matter at once, they would accept 75 per cent." should be without prejudice to them, and that, as Colonel Stanton has always demanded on their behalf that, the Egyptian Government should purchase their shares at par, that such a claim may be properly held to be their original demand; but I consider that a very serious question may arise upon the demand which they have made for damages and interest in the final statement of their claim as set out in their printed pamphlet.

Their grounds for advancing this demand, had been submitted to your Lordship in their letter of 16th July last, namely, that "if a reference to arbitration should be persisted in, as in such a reference a claim cannot be increased and may be reduced, it is not just that the shareholders should demand only the lowest sum to which they could possibly be entitled, i.e., the payment in full of their shares; but should be allowed to add interest and such damages for the delay in settlement, as the tribunal may think reasonable."

Your Lordship will readily perceive, on perusing the pamphlet, that there are principles involved in this demand which are materially different from the principles involved in the original claim, and that the Viceroy, who was willing to refer the original question as raised by Colonel Stanton to a Tribunal at Constantinople, namely, whether he was responsible for the miscarriage of the Company and, in equity, liable to indemnify the shareholders for their actual losses, may reasonably decline to go to arbitration upon a demand which is a departure from the original claim and will be at variance with the demand made by the Consuls of France and Austria on behalf of French and Austrian shareholders which, as I understand the proposal of the Viceroy, is to be referred to a common Tribunal.

I venture to suggest that it would be extremely hazardous to disturb the basis upon which the negotiations for a reference have been hitherto conducted, not merely on the ground that it would be a departure from the original understanding and might furnish a reasonable excuse to the Egyptian Government for receding from their present engagement, but that I consider the final statement of the shareholders' claims to proceed upon principles of legal right, which an arbitrator might well hold not to be applicable to the question between the shareholders and the Viceroy. The inquiry into facts as regards this final statement would also be of a most complicated character, whereas the question as it is most conveniently raised in the first letter of the Egyptian Commercial and Trading Company will admit of an easy solution, as regards the matter of fact, whether the directors of the society were guilty of a gross fraud against the shareholders, for which the remedy of the shareholders is against the Directors, or whether the Viceroy was guilty of a palpable breach of faith with the Directors and is in equity bound to indemnify the shareholders.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 200.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received August 31.)

Temple, August 29, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 25th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me, together with the previous papers, the accompanying despatch from Mr. Elliot, in reply to the inquiry contained in my Report of the 5th June last, as to the bearing of Turkish law on the question of interest claimed from the Porte by M. de Matto; and Mr. Egerton was pleased to request that I would again take this case into consideration and report to your Lordship my opinion as to the course which your Lordship should now pursue in regard thereto.

In obedience to the commands of your Lordship I have again taken this case into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That it appears from Consul-General Francis' Report that the objections raised by his Excellency Aali Pasha to the payment of interest to M. de Matto on the two-fold ground that his contract with the Ottoman War Department was silent on the subject of interest, and that the rate of interest claimed by M. de Matto was exorbitant, would not have prevailed if M. de Matto could have sued the chief of the War Department before the Tidjaret Court. Your Lordship will, therefore, be fully justified in instructing Her Majesty's Minister at Constantinople to renew the application which Sir H. Bulwer made to the Ottoman Government in 1865 if a favourable opportunity should present itself, more particularly, as it appears to have been originally stated by the Turkish authorities, that the payment of the principal sum had been delayed owing to financial difficulties which may have passed away, or, at least, may no longer be such as to constrain the Ottoman Government to refuse a demand which is consistent with natural equity, and which it appears that their own Courts would have enforced if M. de Matto had dealt with a subject of the Porte and not with a Department of the Government.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 201.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received September 8.)

Temple, September 7, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 29th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the accompanying despatch from Colonel Stanton (No. 95, August 12), respecting a claim advanced by the Suez Canal Company for the exemption from Customs dues of all stores imported for use or consumption within the territory occupied by the Company, and for the exemption from search of goods conveyed through the canal. A copy of the Convention of the 22nd February, 1866, referred to in these papers, was also inclosed; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take this matter into consideration, and report to your Lordship my opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken this matter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That it appears from the note of M. de Lesseps of the 12th May, 1866, addressed to Ismail Bey, Governor of the Isthmus, that he claims in favour of all private persons who may have established themselves on the isthmus, within the dependencies of the canal, an exemption from the payment of duties of any kind upon articles imported from abroad, and in support of the claim he cites Article 13 of the Act of Concession of the 5th January, 1856, the text of which is as follows:—

"Le Gouvernement Egyptien exonère la Compagnie de tous droits de Douane, d'entrée et autres, pour l'introduction en Egypte de toutes machines et matières quelconques, qu'elle fera venir de l'étranger pour les besoins de ses divers services en cours de construction ou d'exploitation."

It further appears from the same note that the Company itself originally imported from abroad whatever stores were required for the support of its workpeople, but that at the present time private individuals of various nationalities have formed establishments on the isthmus, and supply many articles in the ordinary way of commerce to the workpeople. M. de Lesseps contends, that as the liberty of importing such articles duty free was granted to the Company with a view to keep down the cost of constructing the canal, it is in accordance with that principle that no duties should be levied upon any stores imported on private account for consumption on the isthmus, inasmuch as the ultimate incidence of such duties will be upon the labourer, and thereby the price of labour will be enhanced to the Company.

The difficulty seems to have arisen in consequence of the establishment of a Custom-house at Port Said in pursuance of Article XI of the Convention of the 22nd February, 1866, through which I gather that all goods landed at that place are required to pass, and the question now raised would seem to be whether articles imported by private persons from abroad and intended for consumption on the isthmus, as distinguished from articles intended to be carried inland, and to be consumed beyond the dependencies of the canal, should be allowed to passed through that Custom-house duty free.

If the determination of this question rested solely upon the interpretation to be given to Article 13 of the Act of Concession of the 5th January, 1856, I should be of opinion that M. de Lesseps was not warranted in the application which he contends should be given to it by the Egyptian Government, as I consider that Article was intended to establish a corporate exemption in favour of the Company, and not to create a territorial privilege in favour of the isthmus. In fact, the exemption is not limited to articles imported into the isthmus, but it applies to articles imported by the Company into any part of Egypt, provided they are required for the support of the services of the canal. M. de Lesseps, however, in his note of the 18th April, 1868, addressed to Voisin Bey, the Director-General of Works, rests the claim upon another ground, to which he likewise calls Colonel Stanton's attention in his note of August 8, 1868, when he says:—

"Tout ce qui passe ou se consomme dans l'Isthme est affranchi de tout droit, moyennant la charge du prélèvement de 15 pour cent en faveur du Gouvernement Egyptien sur les produits de la Compagnie, pendant toute la durée de sa concession."

The position here taken up by M. de Lesseps would seem to be independent of Article 13 of the Act of Concession of the 5th January, 1856, and I gather from his letter to Colonel Stanton, that he relies for the support of it upon certain Conventions between the Company and the Egyptian Government on the subject of Customs duties, which are not before me, and upon the construction of which I am unable to offer any opinion to your Lordship, as to whether, if there be any such composition as suggested between the Company and the Egyptian Government, it would constitute an exemption of any other kind than a corporate exemption in favour of the Company itself. I may, however, observe that the composition is represented by M. de Lesseps to be in force for the entire period of the concession of the canal; and if the construction, which M. de Lesseps has put upon the Conventions, be correct, the effect of it would be virtually to constitute Port Said, with its dependencies, a free port for the whole of that period. Colonel Stanton has pointed out that Port Said already "instead of being a simple workshop for the Company, has grown into a considerable town, having a commerce of its own," and that if the claim of M. de Lesseps be well founded, "its inhabitants will be permitted to enjoy privileges which are not extended to other parts of the country." Of the international advantages of such a result, as regards the rapid development of Port Said, your Lordship will be best able to judge; but I do not agree altogether with Mr. Stanton, in holding that the claim of M. de Lesseps, as long as it is confined to import duties, and does not extend to general taxes, which, however, his reasoning embraces, is so much at variance with the stipulations of Article XII of the Final Convention of the 22nd February, 1866, as to be on that ground inadmissible. That Article provides as follows:—

"Dans l'intérêt du commerce de l'industrie ou de la prospère exploitation du canal, tout particulier aura la faculté, moyennant l'autorisation préalable du Gouvernement, et en se soumettant aux réglements administratifs ou municipaux de l'autorité locale, ainsi qu'aux lois, usages et impôts du pays, de s'établir soit le long du Canal Maritime, soit dans les villes élevées sur son parcours."

I think that the obligation which is by this Article imposed upon private persons establishing themselves within the dependencies of the canal to submit to the laws, usages, and taxes of the country points rather to taxes to be levied upon persons or their property, not to duties on goods passing through the Custom-house; but I should agree with Colonel Stanton in holding that this Article, so far as it implies that private persons must submit to the taxes of the country, as a condition of being allowed to establish themselves on the isthmus for the purpose of retail commerce, is at variance with the principle upon which M. de Lesseps relies, in claiming for them an exemption from import duties, on the ground that such charges would tend to raise the price of labour to the Company.

The question then which remains to be solved, as regards the first division of M. de Lesseps' claim, is the proper interpretation to be given to the Conventions, under which he asserts that, in consideration of a preference charge of 15 per cent. in favour of the Government upon the returns of the Company during the entire period of the Commission, all articles consumed within the isthmus are exempted from all duty.

With regard to the second division of M. de Lesseps' claim in favour of goods passing along the canal from sea to sea being exempted from Customs duties. I consider that he is justified in that claim under the XIIIth Article of the Final Convention of 22nd February, 1866, which maintains the privilege of free transit along the canal in favour of all vessels without any distinction or preference of person or nationality. It will, therefore, be unnecessary to consider what may be the effect of any previous Conventions in their bearing on this division of M. de Lesseps' claim, unless a difficulty should be raised in regard to the interpretation to be given to the Final Convention.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 202.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received October 17.)

Temple, October 16, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 12th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying despatch which has been received from Her Majesty's Agent and Consul-General in Egypt, containing observations in reply to the instruction which was addressed to him on the 14th of September, founded upon my Report of the 7th ultimo, in regard to the claim of the Suez Canal Company for exemption from Customs dues of all stores imported for the use of the Company within the territory occupied by them; and Mr. Egerton was pleased to request that I would furnish your Lordship with any observations I may have to offer upon the claim of the Company after the perusal of Colonel Stanton's despatch. That I should perceive from the accompanying despatches from Lord Lyons and Colonel Stanton that an arrangement has been made for submitting the claim of the Suez Canal Company to a Commission.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I agree with Colonel Stanton in his view that the XVIIIth Article of the Act of Concession of January 5, 1868, appears to strengthen the position that Article XIII of the Act of Concession of January 5th, 1856, was intended to establish a corporate exemption in favour of the Canal Company, that is, an exemption in favour of the Company as a corporate body, and not to create a territorial privilege in favour of the isthmus, or, in other words, an exemption which should apply to all persons inhabiting the isthmus.

1868

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 203.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received November 17.)

Temple, November 16, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 23rd September last, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying letter from Messrs. Lubbock, King, and Saunders, containing observations in reply to a letter which was addressed to them on the 11th September, founded on my Report of the 28th August, on the subject of the claim of the Société Agricole et Industrielle d'Egypte, against the Viceroy; and to request that I would take this letter into my consideration, together with the former papers, and report to your Lordship my opinion as to the course which it would now be right and proper to take in this matter.

I am also honoured with Mr. Egerton's letter of the 14th instant, stating that he was directed to call my attention to a further letter, 11th November, from Messrs. Lubbock, King, and Saunders, respecting this case, and requesting that I would furnish your Lordship, at my earliest convenience, with my opinion thereupon, before your Lordship grants Messrs. Lubbock, King, and Saunders, the interview which they now request.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That your Lordship cannot well allow the Committee of Shareholders to take up a different position from that which Her Majesty's Agent and Consul-General at Cairo has, with great difficulty, as appears from his despatch of 28th May, made good for the shareholders represented by Messrs. Cavan, Lubbock, and Co. If the Committee represent other shareholders, as is probable, in addition to those who were represented by Messrs. Cavan, Lubbock, and Co., the interveners may, I think, be properly informed that your Lordship cannot at this stage of the negotiation with the Egyptian Government shift the basis of it, and that the interveners, as in a Court of Justice, must be content to take the case as they find it at the time of their intervention. It is entirely foreign to the question for the Committee to observe in their letter to your Lordship of 21st September, 1868, that their statement "cannot properly be considered as an amended statement so far as that Committee is concerned," and to insist that the statement of the Committee has to be considered on its own merits apart from any statement put forth by previous Memorialists." They have themselves described it as an amended statement of the claims of the shareholders against the Viceroy of Egypt; and I gather from their letter of 6th August, in which they state that they had the honour of submitting to your Lordship an amended statement of those claims, that Mr. Egerton had, in his interview of 21st July, intimated his willingness to receive from the Committee a statement more clear and complete in its details, but not a statement of which the merits were to be considered apart from any previous statement. It is possible that the Committee may not be aware that your Lordship has only undertaken to use your good offices with the Viceroy, as it is at present by no means clear that the shareholders have not been the victims of a fraud on the part of the Directors, for which their proper remedy would be against the Directors.

With regard to the subsequent letter addressed to your Lordship on 11th November by the Committee of Shareholders, in which they state that they have not as yet learnt either by information from your Lordship, or otherwise, that any initiatory steps has been taken by the Viceroy of Egypt, your Lordship may, I think, properly inform the Committee, that Her Majesty's Agent and Consul-General at Cairo was instructed by your Lordship in last July to press, that the Court should be constituted without further delay, and that he had obeyed your Lordship's instructions, and had informed your Lordship that he feared some further delay would be experienced, as the French and Austrian Governments had not at that time accepted the Viceroy's proposal of referring his liability to a Tribunal.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 204.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received December 10.)

Temple, December 9, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 2nd October last, stating that, with reference to our Reports on the question of the tenure of land by foreigners in Turkey, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch and its inclosures from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Constantinople, calling attention to the difference of opinion which appears to exist in regard to the interpretation put by the French Ambassador upon the Protocol permitting foreigners to hold real property in Turkey, and that given to it by the Porte; and to request that we would take this question into consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That although the Protocol may be open to the interpretation put upon it by M. Bourrée, it appears to us that it is susceptible of the meaning attributed to it by the Turkish Government—namely, that certain of the stipulations in the Protocol apply to all the subjects of a Power which has signed such Protocol, and not merely to those of its subjects which may have availed themselves of the law empowering them to hold real property. We may add that, having read through the correspondence and documents placed before us, it appears to us that, taking such documents and correspondence, with one exception, which we advert to presently, Her Majesty's Goverment and Her Majesty's Representatives in Turkey understood the terms of the Protocol in the sense in which Fuad Pasha interprets them; and the Attorney-General for himself desires to state that he personally considered the proposal of the Turkish Government to be that, in consideration of the boon offered by the Turkish Government of granting the right or permission to the subjects of a foreign Power to hold land, provided that the foreign Power agreed to the terms of the Protocol, the foreign Power so agreeing imposed on all its subjects in Turkey, and not merely on those who availed themselves of the real property law, the obligations applicable to them imposed by the Protocol, so that, for instance, any British subject—and not merely a British subject who was a holder of land under the Projet de Loi—might waive the right of having the assistance of the Consul in certain cases.

The exception to which we refer is the draft letter dated 2nd July, 1868, from your Lordship to Mr. Elliot (No. 280), in which it is stated "that only those British subjects who take the benefit of the new arrangement and become landed proprietors, are called upon to renounce any of the present privileges." On the whole, however, we venture to submit that this is not the true interpretation of the Protocol.

We have. &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
RICHARD BAGGALLAY.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 205.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received December 10.)

Temple, December 9, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Murray's letter of the 7th ultimo, stating that, with reference to Mr. Egerton's letter of the 2nd October last, on the question of the tenure of land in Turkey by foreigners, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a further despatch from Mr. Elliot on the subject.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the formalities enjoined by the Turkish Government, and which, Mr. Elliot states, have been referred to Mr. Francis, who considers them unobjectionable, appear to us to be such as call for no special remark from us. They appear sufficiently clear and reasonable.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
RICHARD BAGGALLAY.
TRAVERS TWISS.

1868

No. 206.

Law Officers' Report, December 23, 1868.

---

United States.

No. 207.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received January 14.)

My Lord,
Temple, January 11, 1868.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 4th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to us a letter and its inclosures from the Colonial Office, relative to the abduction of two British subjects from the Province of New Brunswick into the territory of the United States; and to request that we would take these papers into consideration, and furnish your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That it will be desirable for your Lordship to await the further information for which Lord Monck has written, in explanation of the part which the chief of the police and the police magistrate at St. John's have taken in furthering the removal of the applicants from British territory. At present, no justification for the invasion of British territory is disclosed in the documents forwarded, and we think that Lord Monck has done right in promptly calling the attention of the Chargé d'Affaires at Washington to the circumstances of the case, with a view to his communicating with the Secretary of State of the United States, and asking for investigation into them.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
C. J. SELWYN.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 208.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received February 15.)

My Lord,
Temple, February 14, 1868.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 21st ultimo, stating that, with reference to the Law Officers' Report of the 23rd March, 1864, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me a letter from Mrs. Blackie, dated 13th January, in regard to her claims, as one of the heirs of the late Mr. Purvis, against the United States' Government, for compensation for the destruction of their property near Vicksburg during the late civil war in America. The previous correspondence respecting this case was also transmitted; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take these papers into consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken this case into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That there are no grounds which would justify your Lordship's official interference in support of the claims of the heirs of the late Mr. Purvis; and, with regard to the good offices of Her Majesty's Government, it would be unadvisable, in my opinion, for your Lordship to direct Her Majesty's Minister at Washington to press the matter again upon the attention of the United States' Government, as there are no circumstances in this case which would operate to take it out of the rule laid down by the Act of Congress, which prohibits compensation being made for any damage done by the military authorities or troops of the United States within the limits of any State, which was declared to be in insurrection by the President's Proclamation of July 1, 1862, or which by an Ordinance of Secession, attempted to withdraw itself from the Government of the United States.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 209.

Law Officers' Report, February 21, 1868.

---

No. 210.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received March 11.)

My Lord,
Temple, March 11, 1868.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 9th March instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a Treaty recently concluded between Prussia and the United States on the subject of naturalization, and which had been confidentially communicated to Her Majesty's Government; and to request that we would consider the same and report to your Lordship at our earliest convenience whether there would be any objection to Her Majesty's Minister at Washington being instructed to conclude a Treaty between this country and the United States in terms identical with those of the Treaty between Prussia and the United States.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That it appears to us that it would not be expedient to instruct Her Majesty's Minister at Washington to conclude a Treaty between this country and the United States, in terms identical with those of the Treaty between Prussia and the United States.

We think that the stipulation that five years' residence, with naturalization, shall alter the nationality of the person naturalized, though clear enough as regards such person, leave open very material questions which ought to be determined by express regulation. What, for instance, is to be the status of a child born after naturalization, and before the expiration of the five years; and what is to be the status of a child born after naturalization, and after the lapse of five years, whose parent afterwards goes back to and becomes again a citizen of his own or of a third country?

These cases and many others are left unprovided for.

THE OCEANA GROUP PUBLISHERS
1868

The IIIrd Article would, of course, not be adopted, as it is inapplicable to a Convention between England and the United States.

The IVth Article is objectionable in consequence of the doubt to which it would give rise.

It would be most difficult to ascertain in many cases whether a particular person, at a particular period after his return to his original country "had renewed his residence without intent to return" to the country of his naturalization, and the concluding paragraph of that Article providing that the intent not to return may be held to exist where the person naturalized in the one country resides more than two years in the other country, by which we understand that such residence would only be primâ facie evidence of intent, would leave open questions most doubtful and difficult of solution in each case where a claim to, or denial of, nationality was raised.

It seems to us, too, very doubtful, whether it would be deemed proper to admit an American naturalized in this country, and resident therein for five years, to all rights of citizenship—even to being a Member of the Privy Council and Members of Parliament—as if he were by origin a British subject.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 211.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received March 11.)

My Lord,
Temple, March 11, 1868.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 10th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Washington, respecting an Order recently issued by the United States' Government, recommending all citizens, native or naturalized, about to visit this country or Ireland, to furnish themselves with passports while the Habeas Corpus Act remains suspended in the latter country, and requesting to be furnished with instructions as to the course he should pursue as regards affixing the visa of Her Majesty's Legation to the passports of British subjects who may have become naturalized subjects of the United States, who may apply for it. Mr. Hammond was also pleased to state that your Lordship proposes to authorize Mr. Thornton to grant the British visa, should it be asked for; but that before doing so, your Lordship would be glad to be furnished with our opinion as to whether any inconvenient effect might arise therefrom; and he was therefore to request that we would take Mr. Thornton's despatch into immediate consideration, and furnish your Lordship, at our earliest convenience, with our views upon this subject.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we believe that at this moment no passport is required by British law to enable an American subject or citizen to enter the United Kingdom; and, if passports are granted by the United States during the suspension of the Habeas Corpus Act in Ireland, for the purposes, and with the objects mentioned in the Order or Notifications sent to us with these papers, the force and effect which they should have in the United Kingdom, should, we think, rest upon the fact of their being issued by the American authorities, and not upon the ground of their being viséd by Her Majesty's Minister at Washington. It appears to us that the avowed object of the issuing these passports by the United States is to impress upon the bearers of them the character of Americans, and, if issued for this purpose, and afterwards viséd by Her Majesty's Minister at Washington, such visa would, we think, be used in Great Britain, as a recognition of the nationality of the bearer, a course which, as it appears to us, might probably lead to embarrassment and inconvenience.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 212.

The Law Officvrs of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received March 14.)

Temple, March 14, 1868.
My Lard,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 13th March instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 11th instant, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the draft of a despatch which you propose to address, by the mail of this day, to Her Majesty's Minister at Washington, on the subject of the overture made to him by Mr. Seward, for the conclusion of a Naturalization Treaty; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take the same into our consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion whether it may be properly sent on.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the despatch into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we see no objection to the despatch proposed to be sent to Mr. Thornton. We suggest, however, a slight alteration in the wording of one sentence, which we have made in the margin of the draft.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 213.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received March 14.)

Temple, March 14, 1868.
My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 13th instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 11th instant, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith the draft of a despatch which your Lordship purposes to address by the mail of to-day to Her Majesty's Minister at Washington, on the subject of visèing passports issued by the United States' Government to Americans, whether native or naturalized, visiting the United Kingdom during the suspension of the Habeas Corpus Act in Ireland; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take the same into our immediate consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion whether it may properly be sent on.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the draft despatch into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we think it would be better that the proposed certificate should not be added to a passport given by the American authorities, and we would suggest the omission of the instructions respecting such certificate. In other respects we see no objection to the draft despatch.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 214.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received March 20.)

Temple, March 20, 1868.
My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 16th March instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the despatch on the subject of Naturalization Treaty, which, altered as we suggested in our Report of the 14th instant, was forwarded to Mr. Thornton by the mail of Saturday night.

That your Lordship had, however, received another telegram from Mr. Thornton strongly urging the importance of taking advantage of the present favourable disposition of the Government of the United States, to dispose of a question which at any moment may become one of serious importance; and, as your Lordship fully concurs in that view of the question, you directed him to state to us that your Lordship would be much obliged to us to consider whether it is not possible to frame on the basis of the Prussian Treaty, which Mr. Hammond was pleased to return to us for the purpose, a Draft of Convention which might be proposed to the Government of the United States, and which would obviate the difficulties arising, on the one hand, out of the claims of the United States in behalf of naturalized citizens, and those, on the other hand, which we consider would attend the acceptance of the Prussian Treaty as it now stands.

Mr. Hammond further stated that it might perhaps be possible to provide that the status of children of naturalized persons during the whole period of their minority should be regulated by and follow that of their father for the time being; and continue to do so afterwards, unless on their obtaining their majority they elected specially for one or other nationality, and recorded their election by some formal act, leaving it open to them thereafter, notwithstanding their acquiescence in the status of their father, or their subsequent election of a different status, themselves to go through the process of naturalization with similar consequences as regards their own descendents, the succession of property being regulated accordingly.

And, further, Mr. Hammond was pleased to say that your Lordship suggests also that the other difficulty specified by us might perhaps be met by applying to the question of proof of intention to resume original allegiance, principles similar to those which may be applicable to questions of domicil; and lastly, Mr. Hammond stated that your Lordship had desired him to throw out those suggestions for what they may be worth, but that you would be glad to receive from us, at an early day, a draft of Convention, if, after giving the matter full consideration, we should see our way to framing one.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we have prepared a Draft of a Treaty as nearly as possible in the terms of the Prusso-American Treaty with some alterations, the object of which we have explained briefly in notes annexed to the draft.

It appears to us of great importance that the effect of such a Treaty, if it is to be made, should be fully considered before it is concluded. It is difficult to foresee without much consideration all the consequences which would flow from the recognition of British-born or descended persons as temporary aliens, and we have pointed out some out of many considerations which appear to us to bear materially on the question as to the propriety of entering into a Treaty, and the terms in which it should be framed.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

Inclosure in No. 214.

Draft Treaty between Great Britain and the United States, respecting Naturalization.

HER Majesty, &c.

ARTICLE I.

SUBJECTS of the British Crown[a] who have become and are[b] or shall hereafter become naturalized citizens of the United States of America, and (in each case) shall have resided or shall reside uninterruptedly five[c] years within the United States, shall be held by Great Britain to be American citizens,[d] and shall be treated by Great Britain[e] as such.[f]

Reciprocally, citizens of the United States who have become and are or shall hereafter become naturalized British subjects, and shall (in each case) have resided or shall reside uninterruptedly five years within the British dominions, shall be held by the United States to be subjects of Great Britain, and shall be treated by the United States as such.

The mere declaration[g] of an intention to become a citizen or subject of the one or the other country has not for either party the effect of naturalization.

ARTICLE II.

Any such[h] naturalized subject or citizen of the one party on return to the territory of the other party, remains liable to punishment for acts or offences punishable by the laws of his original country, and committed before his emigration, saving always the limitations (if any) established by the laws of his original country.

ARTICLE III.

If a British subject naturalized in America renews his residence in British dominion, after such naturalization and residence,[i] as mentioned in Article I without the intent to return to and reside[j] in America, with intent to remain in the British dominions, he shall be deemed to have renounced his American naturalization, and shall no longer be treated by Great Britain as a citizen of the United States.[k]

Reciprocally, if an[l] American naturalized as aforesaid renews his residence in the United States, after such naturalization and residence as before mentioned, without the intent to return to and reside in the British dominions, with intent to remain in the United States, he shall be held to have renounced his British naturalization, and shall no longer be treated by the United States as a British subject.

ARTICLE IV.

Each party to this[m] Treaty shall issue to its naturalized subjects or citizens who have resided the required period, certificates in such form and under such authority as each such party may direct, evidencing such naturalization and residence.

ARTICLE V.

(Duration of Treaty.)

J. B. K.
W. B. B.
T. T.

---

[a] The Treaty is intended to apply, we presume, to all British subjects abroad and in the Colonies, as well as in the United Kingdom.

[b] The Treaty is intended, we presume, to be retroactive, but the words in the Prussian draft are vague, and we have altered them so as to make them more specific.

[c] It is believed that the present law in the United States requires five years' residence to complete naturalization. This law may be altered to-morrow, but we presume that five years' residence is still to be required. Our law does not enjoin five years' residence.

[d] "Citizens" is a vague term, as the Americans admit that they cannot define a "citizen." Still, we presume, no other word would be acceptable to them.

[e] We have added the words "by Great Britain," which, we believe, is in accordance with the German text, though not found in the translation. The words are needed, as it is not, we presume, intended that America should stipulate that these naturalized citizens are to be treated as American citizens to all intents and purposes. Probably they have, or will have, special laws to regulate their status.

[f] The full effect of this must be very carefully considered. Great Britain agrees to treat the persons as American citizens, and therefore cannot treat them as British subjects also. Now many Statutes of the United Kingdom, and probably of the Colonies, prescribe laws for "British subjects," and "natural-born subjects." Are these persons to cease to be within the Statutes, and temporarily, at all events, to be aliens? Are they, in British dominions, to be entitled to a jury de medietate linguæ, as aliens; and would they be eligible as "aliens" on a jury de medietate linguæ? With reference to the laws of property, also important questions may arise, which will require very careful consideration with reference to our laws and the alterations which it might be requisite to make in them to meet the cases of these "temporary aliens."

[g] This seems to apply only to the present law of the United States. In this country no "declaration of intention" is required.

[h] The word "such" is added to limit it to persons naturalized and resident. This clause, so far as England is concerned, only stipulates for that which could be done at present, for a British subject, naturalized in America and returning to this country, would be punishable for all crimes committed before he left. This Article makes him punishable whether he return animo manendi or not.

[i] This is probably intended, though it is not so stated in the Prussian Treaty.

[j] This will always raise a most difficult question, but it cannot be avoided. The words "and reside" have been added, so that the mere intention to return temporarily shall not be sufficient to prevent his renunciation. The words "return to America" do not meet the intended cases. We think that the words we have substituted would better attain the desired object. It will probably be necessary to declare by Statute what is to be the effect of this return and renunciation.

[k] These words which are added seem to be necessary, as the mere renouncing by the person naturalized might not, as between the two contracting Governments, justify the country, of which the person was a natural-born subject, from declining to treat him as a subject of the adopted country.

[l] The proviso has been omitted because it appears to us to be so vague that it would only give rise to difficulties.

[m] This Article is new, but it seems very essential to have some such document to refer to, in order to ascertain whether a person has become naturalized, so as to be within the Treaty. If a British born person is naturalized in America, and has resided the required period, and happens to be in Hong-Kong or in China, or elsewhere, where Her Majesty has jurisdiction by Statute and Treaty over British subjects, it would be most difficult to ascertain whether such a person was liable to British jurisdiction or not.

J. B. K.
W. B. B.
T. T.

No. 215.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received April 4.)

My Lord,
Temple, April 4, 1868.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 2nd instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 20th ultimo, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a copy of a despatch which your Lordship had received from Her Majesty's Minister at Washington, inclosing a draft of Convention on Naturalization which Mr. Seward is prepared to sign, should it be approved by Her Majesty's Government; and to request that we would take these papers into our consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That the proposed Convention appears to us to be framed in language somewhat more precise and distinct than that which was lately entered into between the United States and Prussia.

The Ist Article applies to Great Britain and Ireland and all other parts of the British Dominions, thus including the Colonies.

The IIIrd Article in its first clause uses the word "abode," and its second, "residence," as equivalent terms. The word "residence" should be adopted in each. Upon this Article we would call attention to the remarks we made upon the draft Article drawn up by us by your Lordship's directions, and which accompanied our Report of the 20th ultimo.

The IVth Article applies to Great Britain and the Colonies. No such Article is to be found in the Treaty with Prussia. The rights and privileges which, according to its provisions, would be conferred upon naturalized subjects in this country and in the Colonies are very large; but the Article is silent as to whether they are to cease upon renunciation of naturalization or upon the cesser of the Treaty.

The difficulties in the way of entering into a Convention on this subject until it has been more fully considered with reference to the laws of the United Kingdom and the Colonies have been pointed out by us in former Reports, and it appears to us to be a question of much importance whether, until the extent of the alterations which may be required in those laws has been carefully considered and ascertained, any Convention on this subject should be entered into.

Should any Convention be agreed upon we would suggest that it might contain a clause similar to that to be found in the Convention with France in 1852 (9 Herts., 281, clause 15), so as to make the Convention operative only when an Act of Parliament has been passed to carry its provisions into execution.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 216.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received April 8.)

My Lord,
Temple, April 7, 1868.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 25th March ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter which you had received from the Secretary of State for the Colonies forwarding copies of a correspondence which has passed between the Governor-General of Canada and Her Majesty's Legation at Washington in regard to a demand made by the United States' Government for the extradition from Canada of a man named Freeman B. Smith, who is charged with forgery; and to request that we would take these papers into our consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether the conclusion arrived at by the Governor-General of Canada on this case was right and proper.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we are of opinion that the conclusion arrived at by the Governor-General of Canada on this case was right and proper—the offence with which Freeman B. Smith was charged not being forgery within the meaning of the Extradition Treaty.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 217.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received April 8.)

My Lord,
Temple, April 8, 1868.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 3rd instant, stating that, with reference to his letter of the 25th ultimo, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a further letter dated the 28th ultimo, from the Colonial Office, relating to a demand made by the United States' Government for the extradition of a man named Freeman B. Smith, and to the judgment delivered by the Canadian Court in his case; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take this paper into our consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this further paper into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That the judgment delivered by the Canadian Court in this case appears to us to have been in accordance with law.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 218.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received April 21.)

My Lord,
Temple, April 20, 1868.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 23rd March ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from Messrs. I. and W. Parr respecting their claim against the Government of the United States for injuries and losses which they sustained during the late civil war in America, and requesting that we would take the case into our consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That the injuries and losses of the petitioners appear to have been sustained by them during the civil war in America, during which Isaac Parr was forced to take up arms and join the militia in the State of Texas.

We think that in these cases Her Majesty's Government cannot interfere to support a claim for indemnity and compensation for such losses from the United States' Government. We infer from the involved and obscure statements of the petitioners that the losses they sustained were chiefly in respect of personal property and damage to timber and landed property during the war; but in William Parr's letter of the 14th January he speaks of "property which at the surrender of the war passed into the hands of the United States' Government, and they sold it." If this was real property which belonged to Parr, and which was thus seized and sold by the United States, possibly Her Majesty's Government might, if Parr was really forced into the Confederate army against his will, properly apply to the United States' Government for favourable consideration on his behalf, but certainly no interference could be made until further and fuller explanation on this point has been given to Her Majesty's Government.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.
TRAVERS TWISS.

No. 219.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received June 1.)

Temple, June 1, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 27th April last, stating that, with reference to our letter of the 4th April he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Washington forwarding a Report which has been drawn up by Mr. Carlisle, the Legal Adviser of the Legation, on the bearing upon the laws of the United States of the Treaty respecting naturalization recently signed between that country and Prussia; and to request that we would take this paper into consideration and furnish your Lordship with our opinion as to whether, under the statements contained in it, it might not be possible to frame a Treaty with the United States.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That, having read the papers now furnished to us, we venture still to doubt the expediency of doing that which Mr. Seward desires, namely, entering into a Treaty which should lay down the "great principle of expatriation and naturalization," and leave all other details for a future Convention, more especially as Her Majesty has now appointed a Commission to inquire into the state of the law connected with these matters, and the expediency of allowing British-born subjects to expatriate themselves, and renounce their allegiance to the Sovereign.

Probably the fact of the Commission having been appointed would of itself make your Lordship hesitate to instruct Mr. Thornton to conclude even a provisional Treaty recognizing the principle of expatriation. We still continue to think that it is important that the changes necessary in our own Municipal Law should be fully considered and determined upon before a British subject has his status so completely altered, as it would be if a Treaty were concluded and confirmed by Statute, whereby he may be made capable of renouncing his allegiance altogether and becoming a subject of another country. Mr. Carlisle, indeed, appears to entertain the idea that Her Majesty's Government contemplate some adaptation of the Municipal Laws of the two countries to the new condition to result from the Treaty, though he adds "if this had not been indicated, it would not have seemed to me to be necessarily, or even actually connected with the mere recognition of the principle of expatriation under such limitations as the Treaty should prescribe." Now we by no means think that it is necessary, as supposed by Mr. Carlisle, that stipulations with reference to the civil rights of expatriated persons need be "mutual or reciprocal;" but it is important, at least, that our own Municipal Laws should be moulded to meet the many new cases which will arise and have to be provided for in the event of a British-born subject being permitted to expatriate himself, or of an American citizen becoming to all intents and purposes by naturalization a British subject.

We observe that Mr. Seward, after having promised a Lawyer's Report on the bearing of the provisions of the Treaty of Naturalization between the United States and the North German Confederation, upon the laws of America, confesses his inability to comply with Mr. Thornton's wishes for the reasons pointed out by the despatch of the 13th April; and yet Mr. Seward still presses for a simple Treaty engagement on the great principles of expatriation and naturalization, the discussion and negotiation of further details to be deferred to a later period, when experience may have thrown more light on the subject.

In furtherance of our view as to the inexpediency of entering into any such Treaty as proposed by Mr. Seward at this moment, we would remark, that the admission of "the great principles of expatriation and naturalization," if made, would probably be used at once in support of the requests which are made for the release of Warren and other Fenians claimed by the United States as American subjects.

We think that such a Treaty as suggested, entered into even provisionally, might cause embarrassment and difficulty; and in our opinion it will be better to wait until the subjects, which the Commissioners are directed to inquire into, have been considered, before any Convention or Treaty is arranged or concluded.

We have, &c.

(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 220.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received July 4.)

Temple, July 2, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 8th of June ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter (2nd June), from the Colonial Office, and a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister (No. 156, 18th May), at Washington, relating to an application made by the United States' Consul-General in Canada, on behalf of a prisoner named Felix Callaghan; and to request that we would take these papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That it seems probable, from Mr. Thornton's letter, that the request made by the United States' Consul will not be renewed.

But if it should be, we think that it should not be complied with. The only ground upon which the request appears to be made is, that Callaghan, who is a British-born subject, and who for three years previous to and at the time of his arrest had been and was resident in Canada, had been previously naturalized in the United States, and according to the law of that country had become a citizen thereof. In our opinion, the right of the United States to interfere in the proceedings against such a person, ought not to be admitted; but if Mr. Seward does renew the request already made, the matter should be reported at once to Her Majesty's Government.

We have, &c.

(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 221.

The Attorney- and Solicitor-General to Lord Stanley.—(Received July 9.)

Temple, July 8, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 7th April last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to inclose, for our information, and for any observations which we might have to make upon it, a despatch (No. 74), from Her Majesty's Minister at Washington, forwarding a decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in the case of a claim against underwriters on account of the capture of a vessel by a Confederate cruizer in May 1861.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have perused the papers transmitted to us, and have the honour to report—

That it appears to us that the judgment of the Supreme Court pronounced by the majority of the Judges, affirming the judgment of the District Court (Chief Justice Chase and Mr. Justice Selwyn having, on grounds which are not stated, dissented from the judgment of the Supreme Court), is in accordance with the law as recognized by the Prize Courts and Common Law Courts of this country. The judgment is not unimportant, inasmuch as it recognizes the existence of a state of belligerency between the United States and the "so-called" Confederate States, which are admitted "to have been in possession of many of the highest attributes of Government, sufficiently so to be regarded as the ruling or supreme power of the country."

We have, &c.

(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.

---

No. 222.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received July 22.)

Temple, July 21, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 8th day of February last, stating that, with reference to the Report of the late Law Officers, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter, dated 5th February, with its inclosures, from Mr. Forbes Campbell, the agent and attorney for the owners of the cargo of the "Springbok," requesting that Her Majesty's Government will make a demand on the Government of the United States for compensation to the owners of that vessel on account of the seizure, sale, and condemnation of their property in 1863.

Mr. Hammond was also pleased to say that, for convenience, he transmitted to us the whole of the correspondence in regard to the case; and to request that we would take all the papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers transmitted to us into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we are of opinion that the request made by Mr. Forbes Campbell, who describes himself as the agent and attorney for the owners of the cargo of the "Springbok," that Her Majesty's Government will, on the strength of documents which he forwards, demand compensation on their behalf from the United States' Government for the unlawful seizure, sale, and condemnation of their property, and which he suggests should be taken at 66,378*l*. 11*s*. 11*d*. sterling with interest, costs, and damages, is one which should not be complied with.

Mr. Campbell, who is himself one of the owners of the cargo condemned, relies in support of his application on the joint opinion of Mr. Mellish and Mr. Vernon Harcourt, and on declarations of witnesses for the purpose of showing that the Supreme Court came to a conclusion which was erroneous and unjust; and that, in the condemnation and forfeiture of the cargo of the "Springbok" there was a miscarriage of justice. The Memorialists, Thomas Sterling Begbie and Messrs. Saul Isaac, Campbell, and Co., who describe themselves as owners of the cargo, allege that the Judgment of the Supreme Court rests upon nothing but groundless suspicion, misapprehension, illogical and unfair inferences, and the unjustifiable imputations to the claimants of intentions which they never had.

We think that the Memorialists are justified in insisting that there may be circumstances under which a State may, notwithstanding a decree of condemnation by its own tribunals, make restitution or compensation on the demand of the Sovereign of the claimant if justice or policy requires it; but we think that the Sovereign of the claimant would only be justified in making such a demand after a regular sentence of condemnation pronounced upon due inquiry by a competent Prize Court, when the adjudication is plainly against right, and where manifest wrong has been done by such condemnation of the property. (Vattel 11, c. 18, s. 350.)

In a case like the present, therefore, it is, in our opinion, necessary that the claimant should prove to the satisfaction of your Lordship not merely that there are errors in some of the premises, or in some of the conclusions, upon which the judgment is founded, but that there has been upon the whole case presented to the Supreme Court and on which that Court decided, a failure of justice; or that new facts and circumstances brought to notice since the judgment was pronounced, which for good reasons were not submitted to the Prize Court, show that the sentence is contrary to the justice of the case.

It cannot be denied that "the judgment of the Supreme Court, bears marks of want of care and accuracy which certainly disfigure it, and diminish its authority, and some of these faults are pointed out and commented upon by the Counsel whose opinion is relied upon in the Memorial of the owners of the cargo.

In the judgment of the Supreme Court after comments upon certain concealments on the part of the claimants, it is said:—"We are next to ascertain the real destination of the cargo, for these concealments do not of themselves warrant condemnation. If the real intention of the owners was, that the cargo should be landed at Nassau, and incorporated by real sale into the common stock of the island, it must be restored notwithstanding this misconduct. What then was that real intention?" And the Court comes to the conclusion, that the cargo was shipped in England by the shippers, with the intention of its being transhipped at Nassau for the purpose of being run through the blockade, and not for bonâ fide importation into Nassau.

The learned counsel say, "We assume for the purpose of this opinion, that the law is correctly laid down in the judgment of the Supreme Court, and that if the cargo was shipped in England with the original intention of being transhipped at Nassau for the purpose of being run through the blockade, the sentence of condemnation is right. If on the other hand, the cargo was shipped as the claimants contend, deliverable to the order of an agent in Nassau, to be there sold in the open market to bonâ fide purchasers, the cargo could not be condemned even though it was of a contraband character and though the purchasers in Nassau might have bought, with the distinct intention of running the goods through the blockade.

They find fault with the judgment, because one ground taken by the Court as justifying the conclusion, that Nassau was not the real destination of the cargo, is derived from the form of the bills of lading and manifest, the bills of lading not disclosing the contents of the packages, and no consignee being named; but the cargo being deliverable to "order or assigns," circumstances which the Court alleges show concealment of the real destination of the cargo. The counsel proceed to state, "We have before us a statement of some of the principal sworn brokers of London, which accords with our own experience, that the bills of lading are in the usual and regular form of consignments to an agent for sale at such a port as Nassau."

No doubt the form is usual in time of peace; but the learned counsel overlook the circumstance to which we think the Court was really referring, viz.: that a practice which may be perfectly regular in time of peace under the municipal regulations of a particular state, will not always satisfy the requirements of the laws of nations in time of war, more particularly when the voyage may expose the ship to the visit of belligerent cruizers.

It may well be, that at the immediate commencement of a war it would be too much for a belligerent captor to assume, that every omission of a wise precaution on the part of a neutral merchant is evidence of a fraudulent intention (the "Primus," 1 Spinks, 356,) but the late learned Judge of the Admiralty Court (Dr. Lushington), in the case of the "Abo" (1 Spinks, p. 350), which came before him in the late Russian war, after conceding so much to the shippers of cargo, observes, that "if cargo has been shipped, to use the expression of Lord Stowell, flagrante bello, the bills of lading ought on the face of them to have expressed, for whose account and risk, the property was shipped." Further, the ship's manifest was equally silent on the subject, and the master, in his examination in preparatorio, in his answer on oath to the 16th interrogatory, says, "The goods were to be delivered at Nassau for account and risk of Begbie and Company, the charterers; I know nothing of the qualities, quantities, or particulars of the goods, or to whom they would belong if restored and delivered at the destined port."

The evidence of Mr. Hart, who now makes a declaration, was not, it must be remembered, before the Court, and it was upon the evidence as it stood that the Court says "that some other destination than Nassau was intended may be inferred from the fact that the consignment shown by the bills of lading and the manifest was to order or assigns. Under these circumstances it must be taken as a negation that any sale had been made to any one at Nassau. It must also be taken as a negation that any such sale was intended to be made there, for had such a sale been intended, it is most likely that the goods would have been consigned for that purpose to some established house named in the bills of lading."

It appears, therefore, that the question under the consideration of the Court was whether any such sale of the cargo at Nassau was intended, as would constitute a bonâ fide importation—not a mere colourable sale, which would not be a bonâ fide importation according to the decisions of British and American Prize Courts (the "William," 5 Ch. Rob., pp. 388 and 396; the "Stephen Hart," Blatchford's Reports, p. 407), and they considered that the bills of lading would probably—if a real importation into Nassau on a sale of the goods was intended—have disclosed the name of the consignee there, and that the absence of the name of the consignee was, under all the circumstances, a matter from which they might draw the inference that a bonâ fide importation was not intended.

The argument by the Court on this point, though weak, is not, we think, wholly untenable, especially when regard is had to the many other circumstances relied upon to show that the claimants were engaged in blockade running and importation of contraband into the blockaded ports, and that all trade carried on ostensibly to Nassau was of a most suspicious and doubtful character.

The letter of instructions addressed to the master by Spyer and Haywood, as agents of the charterer, is one of the circumstances of suspicion relied on by the Court.

The next argument of the learned Counsel—viz., that the character of the cargo, being fitted for blockade-running, was a proof that it was destined for Nassau, which was the great entrepôt for contraband of war, is one of very little weight.

The Court thought that there was evidence to satisfy them that these goods, fitted for blockade-running, were from the first intended to be carried, after a colourable importation, into Nassau to blockaded ports.

The claimants who now say, as we understand, that the goods were sent to Nassau with the full knowledge and intention that they should find their way to a blockaded port, gave no explanation by evidence as to what was to become of the goods on their arrival at Nassau, and under all the circumstances of time and place, and in the absence of any such evidence, we think that the Court was entitled to draw the inference that the consigners of the goods, when they were taken out of the "Springbok" at Nassau, intended to be parties to their immediate transhipment and importation into a blockaded port.

The learned Counsel then deal with a statement made by the Court, which was undoubtedly an error of fact, viz., that the "Gertrude" was in the harbour of Nassau with the undenied intent to run the blockade about the time when the arrival of the "Springbok" was expected there. Mr. Justice Betts was more near the truth when in the District Court he observed that the "Gertrude" might have been expected to arrive in due course at Nassau a few days after the "Springbok." As a fact, her voyage appears to have been delayed, but when she did arrive at Nassau, after the capture of the "Springbok," she took on board a contraband cargo, the marks and numbers upon which were, to some extent, in correspondence with certain marks and numbers on many packages on board the "Springbok," and she was captured and condemned, without any attempt being made to resist such condemnation.

Having regard to the whole tenor of the observations with reference to the "Gertrude" by the Supreme Court, we think that the Court did not base their decision upon the ground that the "Gertrude" was to carry on the goods from Nassau. The Court finds "that the owners of the cargo intended that it should be transhipped at Nassau in some vessel more likely to succeed in reaching safely a blockaded port than the 'Springbok,' but it does not find that the 'Gertrude' was the intended vessel."

The Supreme Court comments on the fact that, notwithstanding all the circumstances of suspicion in the case, "not only has no application been made by the claimants to furnish some explanation of these circumstances, but that no claim sworn to personally by either of the claimants has ever been filed," and it certainly does appear to us most extraordinary that Mr. B. W. Hart, who now makes a declaration for the purpose of showing that he was the agent at Nassau to sell the goods for the claimants there, so that they should absolutely cease to have any interest in the goods upon a sale out and out at Nassau, never attempted to support the case of the claimants in the Prize Court, and that even now none of the claimants make declarations for the purpose of explaining any of the suspicious circumstances of the case, although in general terms, in their Memorial, they complain of being victims of unjust suspicions, and of being subjected to unjustifiable imputations of intentions which they never entertained.

As regards Mr. B. W. Hart, the Counsel, whose opinion is relied on by the claimants, say, "It is, no doubt, a very unfortunate circumstance for the claimants that the statement of Mr. B. W. Hart was not put in evidence in the District Court, for had it been so, we consider that the cargo of the 'Springbok' could not have been condemned. But it must be remembered that at the time the proofs were taken, the doctrine of continuous voyages had not been carried to the full extent to which it was ultimately pushed. And the claimants probably thought that when they had proved the vessel had a bonâ fide destination to a neutral port, the cargo was, in all events free. The materiality of the question of the sale at Nassau was consequently, at that time, not so apparent as it afterwards became." But this, after all, is a mere suggestion of Counsel, uncorroborated by the claimants or by Hart, who gave no explanation of their reasons for keeping silence at the trial, or throw any light on the numerous circumstances of suspicion tending to show that they were engaged in blockade-running; and in the result, though, as we have said, we do not consider the judgment of the Supreme Court to be a careful, accurate, or well-considered judgment, we are not satisfied, having regard to all the circumstances of the case, that the Court came to a wrong conclusion on the evidence before it, or that the declarations and statements, which are mere exparte statements unsifted by cross-examination, now relied upon, establish completely and fully the innocence of the owners of the cargo, which in the present state of the matter ought to be made out clearly by them.

We cannot think that in any view the case set up by the claimants themselves is one entitling them to much sympathy or support, even if it were fully established.

The right of a neutral to trade in time of war to a neutral port is, it is true, a well established right; but the trade with Nassau during the war was so peculiar and exceptional that, having regard to its character and to the fact that there was really no market at that port except with Confederate agents and blockade-runners, who, we believe, generally transhipped almost directly, and ran, or attempted to run the blockade, it may be open to doubt whether such trade could be properly considered bonâ fide neutral trade within the rule, so as to be protected ("Thomyris," 1 Edwards 17).

The judgment of the Court, however, proceeded on other grounds.

If, therefore, your Lordship should adopt the view which we have expressed, that the new statements and declarations made by and on behalf of the claimants are insufficient under all the circumstances of the case to satisfy your Lordship that the shippers of these goods were not engaged in prohibited trade, in respect of these goods with the Confederate States, we think that Her Majesty's Government will not feel that, upon a full consideration of the whole case, they can, on the materials before them, make any claim for compensation or damages upon the United States' Government as requested by Mr. Campbell.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 223.

Law Officers' Report, August 31, 1868.

No. 224.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received September 8.)

My Lord, Temple, August 31, 1868.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 7th April last, stating that he was directed to transmit to us the accompanying correspondence respecting the case of the "Pearl," a British steamer which was captured by a United States' cruizer in January 1863 for an alleged intended breach of the blockade of the Confederate ports; that the release of the vessel was ordered by the American Prize Court; but the United States' Government having appealed against that decision, Her Majesty's Minister at Washington was informed in August 1864, on the recommendation of the then Law Officers of the Crown that the result of the appeal remained to be seen, and that meanwhile Her Majesty's Government did not consider that there was any reason for official interference on their part on behalf of the "Pearl;" that several applications have been, since that date, received from persons interested in the "Pearl," but that no action has been taken on them, as Her Majesty's Government had received no information of the Supreme Court having given judgment on the appeal; that that judgment, however, appears to have been delivered in December 1866, and a copy of it has now been received from Mr. J. Johnson, which we should find inclosed in his letter of the 4th April last; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take these papers into consideration, and furnish your Lordship with our opinion as to whether any steps should now be taken in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, for some unexplained reason, the judgment on appeal in this case pronounced in December 1866 has only recently been brought to the attention of Her Majesty's Government by Messrs. Johnson, who appear in the character of claimants of the vessel and cargo, and have been treated as owners in the correspondence that has taken place upon the subject of the capture and the proceedings in the Prize Court, although Mr. George Wigg has also been recognized as owner. Whether Messrs. Johnson had any, and if any, what, interest in the vessel and cargo, or either of them, we know not; but it appears that, in the proceedings in the Prize Court, George Wigg was put forward as the owner of the ship, and Adderley and Co., of Nassau, as consignees and owners of the cargo, although in a declaration made on oath by George Wigg (dated the 23rd June, 1863, he positively swears that he was the owner of the ship and cargo, and that Adderley and Co. were merely his agents for sale of the cargo at Nassau. Captain Maxted, on the 6th May, 1863, makes a positive affidavit that Wigg was the sole owner of the ship. On the 25th May, 1863, Judge Marvin, in the District Court, made the following order:—

"It is ordered that the claimant of the ship in this case be allowed to produce further evidence by his oath and otherwise touching his interest therein, and the use he intended at the time of the capture to make of the vessel after her arrival at Nassau, the trade or business he intended she should be engaged in, and for what purpose she was going to that port, and that the claimant of the goods have time to produce an affidavit of his right and title thereto, and to produce such other proof of neutral ownership as he may be advised."

It appears that, notwithstanding this order, no further explanation as to the interest in the vessel was given by Mr. Wigg, or as to the purpose for which the vessel was to be used after reaching Nassau, and no affidavit was made by Adderley and Co., the claimants of the goods, as to their right to them, probably because, if Mr. Wigg's statement be true, they had no interest in them and were only agents for sale.

Although this order was not obeyed it appears that a new judge, Mr. Fraser, made a decree that the ship and cargo be restored to the claimant upon payment by the claimant of expenses of captors and costs of proceedings. This order was dated 12th February, 1864, and the only additional evidence (as far as we can gather) before Judge Fraser consisted of two Colonial Government Notices of the 13th July, 1861, and the 4th July, 1863, which appear to have been put in by consent in corroboration of Maxted's affidavit, and which, as we understand their bearing upon the case, appear wholly inconsistent with his statement, namely, "that the steamer was purchased by George Wigg to carry mails for the British Government between the West India Islands and Cuba under proposals offering 5,000*l.* per annum for three years." We have pointed out the dates of these Notifications, which do not refer to steamers, but to fast sailing-vessels: and the "Pearl," a paddle-steamer, was purchased by George Wigg on the 24th September, 1862, more than a year after the first Notification and ten months before the second.

The United States' Government and the claimants appealed against the Judgment of the District Court, and the Supreme Court, upon the grounds stated in its Judgment, has condemned both ship and goods. If this application of Messrs. Johnson, as parties alleging themselves to be interested in ship and cargo, be that your Lordship shall make a claim upon the United States' Government on the ground that the vessel and cargo have been unjustly condemned, we beg to state that we think that such an application should not be complied with. There were circumstances of suspicion attaching to the vessel which (without going into details) gravely affect her character, ownership, and destination; and having regard to the absence of any affidavit by way of further proof of Mr. George Wigg in pursuance of the order of the Court and the unsatisfactory character of Maxted's affidavit, which is wholly uncorroborated by any proof, and other matters in the case, we think there were grounds for condemning the vessel and cargo, and that Her Majesty's Government should not interfere in the matter.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 225.

The Attorney-General to Lord Stanley.—(Received October 3.)

Temple, October 3, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter to the Law Officers of the 1st instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to state that since the arrival of the new American Minister in this country, he had been in verbal communication with him on the question of the naturalization laws of this country and the United States, Her Majesty's Government are exceedingly anxious, with a view to the promotion of good relations between the two countries, that an arrangement should be come to upon this subject, and that your Lordship had prepared the inclosed sketch of a Protocol intended to be signed by yourself and Mr. Reverdy Johnson, in order to place on record the intentions of the two Governments, subject, of course, to the action of Parliament, which may be expected to take up the matter when the forthcoming Report of the Commission on the Laws of Naturalization shall have been presented.

Mr. Egerton was also pleased to state that your Lordship requested that we would take the inclosed draft into consideration, and report to you at our earliest convenience our opinion thereupon. Should we be of opinion that it requires alteration, you would be glad if we would suggest such amendments as we might think desirable.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I have perused the Protocol submitted to the Law Officers, and which it is considered desirable to perfect at the present moment, although the Report of the Commission upon the naturalization laws, has not yet been presented.

Subject to the alterations which I have made in the draft, I think that it is suitable for the object proposed; and, as the matter required immediate attention, I have, in the temporary absence of the Solicitor-General and the Queen's Advocate, returned the draft with alterations proposed by me, without waiting to discuss the papers with my colleagues.

I have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.

I have the honour to state to your Lordship that I fully concur in the Report made by the Attorney-General. (Signed) RICHARD BAGGALLAY.

October 5, 1868.

I have the honour to report to your Lordship my concurrence in the Report made by the Attorney-General. (Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

October 14, 1868.

No. 226.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received November 7.)

My Lord, Temple, November 7, 1868.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 6th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying Memorandum, showing the result of a conference between your Lordship, the Attorney-General, and Mr. Reverdy Johnson, the United States' Minister at this Court, at which a proposal was made by Mr. Reverdy Johnson on behalf of his Government, for the settlement of the British and American claims arising out of the late civil war in the United States, was taken into consideration.

That this Memorandum has been seen and provisionally approved by the Lord Chancellor and Mr. Disraeli, and a Protocol has been drawn up of which a draft was inclosed embodying the principles contained in the Memorandum; and Mr. Egerton was to request that we would take this draft into consideration, and furnish your Lordship with our opinion, at our earliest convenience, whether it is right and proper.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we have suggested some alterations in the draft sent us, which we submit to your Lordship.

The addition in the preamble is made in order to give time to present claims. It will be found in substance, to be similar to the provisions contained in the Convention of 1853.

In Article I, we have struck out the words "under Section 3" as qualifications are contained in other sections as well.

The alterations in Article II are merely formal.

In Article III, we have altered the description of the "Alabama" claims, as the words "other similar claims" may, as it appears to us, give rise to discussions and difficulty.

We propose that clauses 5 and 6, shall be transposed, as clause 6 relates exclusively, like those immediately preceding it, to "Alabama" claims.

In other respects we think that the draft carries out the terms of the Memorandum.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
RICHARD BAGGALLAY.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

Inclosure in No. 226.

Draft of Protocol.

THE Undersigned, Edward Henry Lord Stanley, Her Britannic Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, and Reverdy Johnson, Esquire, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States of America, being respectively authorized and empowered to place on record the bases on which Her Majesty the Queen of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and the United States of America, are prepared to effect a settlement of all claims on the part of subjects of Her Britannic Majesty upon the Government of the United States, and of all claims on the part of citizens of the United States upon the Government of Her Britannic Majesty, which have been presented to either Government for its interposition with the other, or which may be so presented within six months after the first meeting of the Commissioners hereinafter referred to, or within an extended period not exceeding three months after the expiration of such six months, in any case where reasons for delay shall be established to the satisfaction of the Commissioners hereinafter referred to, arising out of any transaction of a date subsequent to the exchange of the ratifications of the Convention concluded on the 8th of February, 1853, for the settlement of claims then outstanding, have agreed upon the following Protocol:—

I. The two Governments shall, in the first place, name Commissioners, two on each side, who shall meet in London, and who shall have power to determine all such claims as aforesaid (whether or not arising out of the late civil war in the United States), subject to the several qualifications hereinafter mentioned.

II. The said Commissioners shall, before they proceed to any other business, agree upon an arbitrator, to whose final decision shall be referred any claim (except as hereinafter mentioned), upon which the Commissioners may differ in opinion. If they should not be able to agree upon an arbitrator, the Commissioners on either side shall name a person as arbitrator; and in each case in which the Commissioners may not be able to come to an unanimous opinion as to the decision which they ought to give, it shall be determined by lot which of the two persons so named shall be the arbitrator in that particular case.*

III. The said Commissioners shall have power to adjudicate upon the class of claims referred to in the official correspondence between the two Governments as the "Alabama" claims; but before any of such claims is taken into consideration by them, the respective Governments shall fix upon some Sovereign or Head of a friendly State as an arbitrator in respect of such claims, to whom such class of claims shall be referred in the event of any disagreement between the Commissioners upon the same.

IV. In the event of a decision on any of such last-mentioned claims being arrived at by such arbitrator, involving a question of compensation, the amount of such compensation shall be referred to the Commissioners for adjudication; and, in the event of their differing, it shall then be decided by the arbitrator who shall have been appointed, or determined by lot, as the case may be, under section 2.

V. In regard to the beforementioned "Alabama" class of claims, it is agreed that neither Governments shall make out a case in support of its position, but that the questions at issue, as set forth in the official correspondence between the two Governments, shall be referred to the Commissioners; and in the event of their so disagreeing as aforesaid, then to the arbitrator, without argument or the production of further evidence, unless such evidence or argument shall be called for by the Commissioners unanimously, or by the arbitrator, as the case may be.

VI. The awards of the Commissioners in all cases shall be unanimous, otherwise the matter in dispute shall be decided by the arbitrator.

J. B. K.
R. B.
T. T.

---

No. 227.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received November 24.)

Temple, November 24, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 20th November, stating that he was directed to transmit to us a letter from Messrs. Roscoe, Field, and Francis, requesting to be informed, what time the British Government decided that the belligerent character of the so-called Confederate States had ceased, and by what Proclamation, if any, or other Act such decision was witnessed. A sheet of the "London Gazette" containing a letter from Earl Russell to the Admiralty and other Departments, dated June 2, 1865, announcing that Her Majesty's Government were of opinion that neutral nations could not but consider the Civil War in America at an end, and also some papers laid before Parliament on the same subject, were also inclosed; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion, as to whether the parties might not properly be referred for the information they require, either to the "London Gazette" alone, or also to the Papers presented to Parliament.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the parties may properly be referred by your Lordship for the information which they require to the "London Gazette" of June 6, 1865, as a public notification that, on the second of that month, the British Government declared that the Civil War was at an end, and acted upon that decision by the instructions issued to the Admiralty and other Departments.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
RICHARD BAGGALLAY.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

* This was the arrangement in the Convention of 1853.

No. 228.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received November 28.)

My Lord, Temple, November 25, 1868.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 22nd ultimo, stating that with reference to the Law Officers' Report of November 18, 1865, he was directed to transmit to us for our perusal a despatch which has been received from Her Majesty's Consul at New York, together with one from Her Majesty's Minister at Washington, reporting the decision come to by the Supreme Court of the United States in regard to the steamer "Wren," which vessel was seized and condemned in 1865, on the ground of her having run the blockade of Galveston and of being enemy's property.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That it appears to us, so far as we can gather the facts of this case from the judgment of the Supreme Court, that a fair and just decision has been arrived at by that Court.

There seems to have been no ground for holding that the "Wren" was, at the time of her capture, engaged in blockade-running, and as the evidence which might be properly taken into consideration, satisfied the Court that the vessel was bonâ fide British-owned, the Court acted rightly in reversing the judgment of the District Court. No doubt the former Law Officers of the Crown, who advised that the "Wren" was not bonâ fide a British vessel, had statements before them which fully justified that opinion; but, speaking only of the case as it comes before us now, we think that the Supreme Court had good grounds for arriving at a conclusion favourable to the claimant.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
RICHARD BAGGALLAY.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 229.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received November 30.)

My Lord, Temple, November 28, 1868.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 13th ultimo, stating that he was directed to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Washington requesting authentic information as to the rights of aliens having claims against the English Government to guide him in similar cases of British subjects having claims against the Government of the United States; and Mr. Egerton was pleased to request that we would take this despatch into consideration and furnish your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer which should be returned to Mr. Thornton.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we think that an answer should be sent to Mr. Thornton to the effect that the mode in which subjects of the Crown maintain suits against the British Government is by petition of right, a remedy the proceedings in which have been greatly simplified and improved by a recent statute known as the "Petitions of Right Act, 1860." (23 & 24 Vict., c. 34.) A Petition of Right is, to quote the words of the Lord Chief Justice in a recent case (Feather v. the Queen, 6 Best and Smith, 257), "open to the subject when land, or goods, or money of a subject have found their way into the possession of the Crown, and the purpose of the Petition is to obtain restitution, or, if restitution cannot be given, compensation in money; or when the claim arises out of a contract, as for goods supplied to the Crown, or for the public service." (See also Tobin v. the Queen, 16 Common Bench, N. S. 310.)

But to mere "torts" or wrongs committed under colour of authority from Government the Petition of Right is not applicable.

In such cases, if the Act complained of be not adopted by the Government, the party injured would be entitled to an action of the ordinary character against the actual wrong-doer. If such an Act were adopted by the Government the action would not be sustainable, and there would be no remedy in the Courts of Law. Such a case would have to be dealt with (as an act of State), in a case where an alien friend was the complaining party, between the two Governments.

In this country an alien friend is, as regards his power of maintaining suits against the Crown, in the manner and subject to the limitations and restrictions above-mentioned, in as good a position as a British subject.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
RICHARD BAGGALLAY.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 230.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received December 7.)

Temple, December 7, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Egerton's letter of the 8th September last, stating that, with reference to our letter of the 21st of July last, he was directed to transmit to us a further letter from Mr. Forbes Campbell urging the claims of the owners of the "Springbok" to the interference of Her Majesty's Government on their behalf; and to request that we would take this paper into consideration and furnish your Lordship with a report thereupon.

The previous papers were inclosed for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the letter of Mr. Forbes Campbell to your Lordship, in answer to Mr. Egerton's letter of the 24th July (and which appears to have been written by a professional adviser), enters into lengthy arguments in support of the statement that the Judgment of the Supreme Court rests on "groundless suspicion, misapprehension, illogical and unfair inference, and the unjustifiable imputation of intentions which the claimants never had."

We have already pointed out that the Supreme Court in dealing with this case acted upon some premises which appeared to be unfounded; but, in our view, the question whether your Lordship should treat the sentence of that Court as one contrary to justice and right, and therefore void, and thereupon demand compensation on behalf of the claimants for the unlawful seizure, sale, and condemnation of their property, depended, not simply on whether the sentence was founded in some degree on incorrect assumptions of fact, but whether the claimants satisfied your Lordship that upon the whole there had been a failure of justice, or that new facts and circumstances brought to notice since the sentence was pronounced, which for good reasons were not submitted to the Court, show that the sentence was contrary to the justice of the case.

Mr. Campbell proceeds to deal with the statements in Mr. Egerton's letter by way of offering some explanations and making some observations in reply thereto. It would hardly serve any useful purpose if, in our Report on this letter, we were to enter into counter arguments on every point urged by Mr. Campbell; but there are some matters to which we think it right to advert in support of the opinion which we entertain that Mr. Campbell is not successful in showing that the Judgment of the Supreme Court is manifestly contrary to justice and right upon the facts before the Court, or that new facts which for satisfactory reasons were not brought before the Court show that such sentence cannot be justified.

First, Mr. Campbell states the grounds on which, as he says, it was not thought necessary to call as a witness Mr. B. W. Hart, the consignee of the goods at Nassau—a circumstance which was deemed "unfortunate" by the learned Counsel, whose opinion was forwarded to your Lordship, and which they accounted for in their own way. Notwithstanding Mr. Campbell's explanation, we think that in any view of the case, and whether for the purpose of exempting the ship or the cargo, or both, from condemnation, Mr. Hart was obviously a most important witness. If the cargo had been bonâ fide destined for Nassau, there to be incorporated into the stock of the country, proof of this fact by Mr. Hart would have gone far to exculpate the ship, as well as to save the cargo; but when it was seen by the Court from evidence in the case that Mr. Hart was the person to whom the captain was to report himself at Nassau, and from whom he was to receive orders as to the delivery of the cargo, and any further information he might require, and Mr. Hart was not called as a witness and subjected to cross-examination, the Court might well comment on his absence as a most suspicious circumstance against the claimants. Mr. Hart's ex parte deposition, made since the sentence, for the purpose of inducing your Lordship to act in accordance with Mr. Campbell's request of treating the sentence as void, does not strike us as satisfactory. No explanation has ever been given as to the circumstance under which large quantities of brass buttons which, to use Mr. Hart's words, "were stamped with initial letters and devices," found their way to Nassau, or what these initial letters and "devices" meant, or how they came to be manufactured in England, and sent to Nassau. It was said by the captors in the Prize Courts that these were to be used for Confederate uniforms. It was suggested by the claimants that this was not necessarily the case, but no special proof as to these goods was given, and even now no explanation is given except that, while afloat, they were "sold to one J. A. Weston." Are these part of the goods which Mr. Campbell, in paragraph 4, suggests might have found their way to Matamoras or any other market? There is certainly nothing in Mr. Campbell's explanations to show that these buttons were not, as alleged, expressly manufactured for the Confederates. He is silent altogether on this point, contenting himself with alleging that everything on board was to be sold at Nassau, at which place the claimants would cease to have any interest in or control over them. With regard to Mr. Campbell's explanation as to the "Gertrude" in paragraphs 2 and 3, we would only remark whether Judge Betts' references to the "Gertrude" were made in his judgment (and we understood that what is said now to have been a "pamphlet or apology written by Judge Betts," was an extended judgment), or not, the information now given about the "Gertrude" is extremely meagre. Mr. Begbie, her former owner, simply makes a statutory declaration, in which, without giving any detailed account of the "Gertrude," he states as a fact that she reached Queenstown on the 31st January 1863, and was there on the 3rd February following. We think it needless to notice or reply at length to Mr. Campbell's observations about the case of the "Abo," or to express our opinion on the question whether the "Springbok" was seized simply because she was on the "black list," or to discuss or comment at length on the whole of the evidence and arguments adduced and not adduced before the American Courts. We would suggest that a reply should be sent to Mr. Campbell, simply stating that, after full consideration of his letter, your Lordship does not feel justified, upon the depositions forwarded by him, or the arguments pressed upon your Lordship, in insisting that the sentence of condemnation of the cargo is contrary to justice and void, and making a claim upon the United States' Government for compensation.

We believe that the Convention recently signed by your Lordship and Mr. Reverdy Johnson has not technically been made public, but if carried into effect it will probably be open to Isaac, Campbell, and Co. to bring forward their claim in respect of the alleged improper condemnation of the cargo of the "Springbok" before the Commission appointed for determining the claims of British subjects, in which event they and Mr. B. W. Hart, and all other witnesses whom they might desire to produce, could be examined and cross-examined fully, so that the truth might be satisfactorily ascertained. Whether your Lordship may think it right to refer to this Convention in the answer to be returned to Mr. Campbell will probably depend upon your Lordship's opinion as to whether it can be properly referred to at the present moment.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
RICHARD BAGGALLAY.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 231.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received December 12.)

Temple, December 10, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 20th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter from Messrs. Westhead and Co. inclosing a copy of a deed by which they claim to be in a position to treat for the settlement of the claims on Her Majesty's Government of a Mr. J. A. Machado, a United States' citizen, whose vessels the "Mary Varney" and "Thomas Watson," were detained by British cruizers off the African coast in the years 1854 and 1857 on suspicion of being engaged in the Slave Trade; and to request that we would take those papers into our consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion whether, Mr. Machado having failed to carry out his part of the agreement as set forth in the inclosed deed, Her Majesty's Government will be justified in proceeding to a settlement of those claims with Messrs. Westhead, and if not, what answer should be returned to Messrs. Westhead's letter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in the absence of any statement as to whether John Albert Machado has made and is prosecuting against the British Government such claims as are referred to in the recital of the deed, it is difficult to advise fully as to the course to be taken by Her Majesty's Government.

If, as seems probable, such claims, if advanced at all, have been made by Mr. Michado through his own Government, we think that Her Majesty's Government should in no wise recognize any right on the part of Messrs. Westhead to interfere in the negotiation of a settlement of such claims, except through the intervention of the Government of the United States.

Further, we are of opinion that, under any circumstances, Her Majesty's Government, though they may acknowledge the receipt of Messrs. Westhead's letter and of the deed inclosed, should inform Messrs. Westhead that further evidence must be given that, under the terms of the deed, the rights of Messrs. Westhead have attached, and that, for this purpose, it will be desirable for them to obtain a duly verified statement from the assignor, John Albert Machado, that they have duly become entitled to the benefits claimed by them under the deed.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
RICHARD BAGGALLAY.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 232.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received December 17.)

Temple, December 17, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 16th December instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith a Memorandum which had been placed in his hands by the United States' Minister respecting the case of James Anderson, an American seaman, now undergoing his sentence of imprisonment for manslaughter, under the circumstances set forth in the Memorandum, and at page 574 of the sessions paper sent therewith; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take the case into immediate consideration and report to your Lordship whether the circumstances of it are such as would admit of your Lordship recommending to the Secretary of State for State for the Home Department that a free pardon should be granted to James Anderson.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, with respect to the Memorandum submitted by the United States' Minister, we have to observe that the assertion that Anderson "acted in self-defence" cannot be assented to; the verdict and the sentence must be accepted as conclusive; that he was guilty of manslaughter; and further that it must be taken as admitted at the trial, and found by the jury that this manslaughter was committed on board a British ship by a seaman employed in such ship "in tidal waters." This being so, it appears to us that the fact of Anderson being an American by birth in no way affects the jurisdiction of the Central Criminal Court to try him. However that may be, it appears that a case was reserved by the Judge for the Court of Criminal Appeal. If the prisoner failed, (as we are disposed to infer) to prosecute this Appeal which was open to him, the United States' Minister would have no good reason to complain of the miscarriage of our tribunals, even if the verdict were wrong. We are not, indeed, informed that any formal complaint or remonstrance, or even request, has been urged on Her Majesty's Government, and in the absence of further information do not feel that sufficient grounds are established for recommending the pardon of Anderson.

We have, &c.
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
T. D. COLERIDGE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

No. 233.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received December 22.)

Temple, December 22, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 18th instant, stating that a Convention for the settlement of British and American claims was signed by Lord Stanley and the United States' Minister on the 10th November last, and further stating that shortly after the Convention was received at Washington objections were raised to its terms by the United States' Government, and that the nature of those objections was set forth in Mr. Thornton's despatch therewith sent to us; and further stating that a copy of the Convention as signed was also sent to us, and that we should find in the margin of the several Articles the observations and suggestions which the United States' Minister was directed to make on them; and further stating that your Lordship had in consequence prepared a fresh Draft of Convention to be substituted for the signed Convention, which embodied the greater part thereof, but in which amendments were inserted in italics to meet the difficulties raised by the Government of the United States, and generally to provide an arrangement for the settlement of the claims of the respective countries; and that he was to request that we would take the said draft into our consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion as to the sufficiency of such draft to provide for the object the two Governments have in view.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this case into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the Draft Convention with your Lordship's amendments substantially provides for what we assume to be the objects which the two Governments have in view. We have ventured to suggest in the margin one or two verbal alterations.

We have, &c.
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
T. D. COLERIDGE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

Inclosure in No. 233.

Draft of Convention between Great Britain and the United States of America for the Settlement of all Outstanding Claims.

WHEREAS claims have at various times since the exchange of the Ratifications of the Convention between Great Britain and the United States of America, signed at London on the 8th of February, 1853, been made upon the Government of Her Britannic Majesty on the part of citizens of the United States and upon the Government of the United States on the part of subjects of Her Britannic Majesty; and whereas some of such claims are still pending, and remain unsettled; Her Majesty the Queen of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and the President of the United States of America, being of opinion that a speedy and equitable settlement of all such claims will contribute much to the maintenance of the friendly feelings which subsist between the two countries, have resolved to make arrangements for that purpose by means of a Convention, and have named as their Plenipotentiaries to confer and agree thereupon, that is to say:—

Her Majesty the Queen of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, the Right Honourable Edward Henry Stanley, commonly called Lord Stanley, a Member of Her Britannic Majesty's Most Honourable Privy Council, a Member of Parliament, Her Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs;

And the President of the United States of America, Reverdy Johnson, Esquire, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary from the United States to Her Britannic Majesty;

Who, after having communicated to each other their respective full powers, found in good and due form, have agreed as follows:—

ARTICLE I.

The High Contracting Parties agree that all claims on the part of subjects of Her Britannic Majesty upon the Government of the United States, and all claims on the part of citizens of the United States upon the Government of Her Britannic Majesty, which may have been presented to either Government for its interposition with the other since the 26th of July, 1853, the day of the exchange of the ratifications of the Convention concluded between Great Britain and the United States of America, at London, on the 8th of February, 1853, and which yet remain unsettled; as well as any other such claims which may be presented within the time specified in Article III of this Convention, whether or not arising out of the late civil war in the United States, shall be referred to four Commissioners, to be appointed in the following manner, that is to say: two Commissioners shall be named by Her Britannic Majesty, and two by the President of the United States, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. In case of the death, absence, or incapacity of any Commissioner, or in the event of any Commissioner omitting or ceasing to act as such, Her Britannic Majesty, or the President of the United States, as the case may be, shall forthwith name another person to act as Commissioner in the place or stead of the Commissioner originally named.

The Commissioners so named shall meet at Washington at the earliest convenient period after they shall have been respectively named, and shall, before proceeding to any business, make and subscribe a solemn Declaration that they will impartially and carefully examine and decide, to the best of their judgment, and according to justice and equity, without fear, favour, or affection to their own country, upon all such claims as shall be laid before them on the part of the Governments of Her Britannic Majesty and of the United States, respectively; and such Declaration shall be entered on the record of their proceedings.

The Commissioners shall then, and before proceeding to any other business, name some person to act as an arbitrator or umpire, to whose final decision shall be referred any claim upon which they may not be able to come to a decision. If they should not be able to agree upon an arbitrator or umpire, the Commissioners on either side shall name a person as arbitrator or umpire; and in each and every case in which the Commissioners may not be able to come to a decision, the Commissioners shall determine by lot which of the two persons so named shall be the arbitrator or umpire in that particular case. The person or persons so to be chosen as arbitrator or umpire shall, before proceeding to act as such in any case, make and subscribe a solemn declaration, in a form similar to that made and subscribed by the Commissioners, which shall be entered on the record of their proceedings. In the event of the death, absence, or incapacity of such person or persons, or of his or their omitting, or declining, or ceasing to act as such arbitrator or umpire, another person shall be named, in the same manner as the person originally named, to act as arbitrator or umpire in his place and stead, and shall make and subscribe such declaration as aforesaid.

ARTICLE II.

The Commissioners shall then forthwith proceed to the investigation of the claims which shall be presented to their notice. They shall investigate and decide upon such claims in such order and in such manner as they may think proper, but upon such evidence or information only as shall be furnished by or on behalf of their respective Governments. The official correspondence which has taken place between the two Governments respecting any claims shall be laid before the Commissioners, and they shall, moreover, be bound to receive and peruse all other written documents or statements which may be presented to them by or on behalf of the respective Governments, in support of or in answer to any claim, and to hear, if required, one person on each side on behalf of each Government, as Counsel or Agent for such Government, on each and every separate claim. Should they fail to decide by a majority upon any individual claim, they shall call to their assistance the arbitrator or umpire whom they may have agreed upon, or who may be determined by lot, as the case may be; and such arbitrator or umpire, after having examined the official correspondence which has taken place between the two Governments, and the evidence adduced for and against the claim, and after having heard, if required, one person on each side as aforesaid, and consulted with the Commissioners, shall decide thereupon finally and without appeal.

If, however, it shall appear to the Commissioners, or any two of them, that, from the nature of any particular claim in regard to which they may have been unable to come to a decision, it is desirable that a Special Arbitrator or Umpire shall be named, to whose decision such claim shall be referred, the Commissioners shall report to that effect to their respective Governments, who shall thereupon, within six months, agree upon some Sovereign or Head of a friendly State who shall be invited to decide upon such claim, and before whom shall be laid the official correspondence which has taken place between the two Governments, and the other written documents or statements which may have been presented to the Commissioners in respect of such claims.

The decision of the Commissoners, and of the Arbitrator or Umpire, shall be given upon each claim in writing, and shall be signed by them respectively and dated. The decision of the Arbitrator or Umpire on any particular claim so referred to him shall rule any other claims of the same class.

In the event of a decision, involving a question of compensation to be paid, being arrived at by a special Arbitrator or Umpire, the amount of such compensation shall be referred back to the Commissioners for adjudication; and in the event of their not being able to come to a decision, it shall then be decided by the Arbiter or Umpire appointed by them, or who shall have been determined by lot.

It shall be competent for each Government to name one person to attend the Commissioners as Agent on its behalf, to present and support claims on its behalf, and to answer claims made upon it, and to represent it generally in all matters connected with the investigation and decision thereof.

Her Majesty the Queen of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and the President of the United States of America, hereby solemnly and sincerely engage to consider the decision of the Commissioner, or of the Arbitrator or Umpire, as the case may be, as absolutely final and conclusive upon each of such claims decided upon by him or them respectively, and to give full effect to such decision without any objection or delay whatsoever.

It is agreed that no claim arising out of any transaction of a date prior to the 26th of July, 1853, the day of the exchange of the ratifications of the Convention of the 8th of February, 1853, shall be admissible under this Convention.

ARTICLE III.

Every claim shall be presented to the Commissioners within six months from the day of their first meeting, unless in any case where reasons for delay shall be established to the satisfaction of the Commissioners, or of the Arbitrator or Umpire, in the event of the Commissioners differing in opinion thereupon: and then and in any such case the period for presenting the claim may be extended to any time not exceeding three months longer.

The Commissioners shall be bound to examine and decide upon every claim within two years from the day of their first meeting. It shall be competent for the Commissioners, or for the Arbitrator or Umpire if they differ, to decide in each case whether any claim has or has not been duly made, preferred, or laid before them, either wholly, or to any and what extent, according to the true intent and meaning of this Convention.

ARTICLE IV.

All sums of money which may be awarded by the Commissioners, or by the Arbitrator or Umpire, on account of any claim, shall be paid in coin or its equivalent by the one Government to the other, as the case may be, within eighteen months after the date of the decision, without interest.

ARTICLE V.

The High Contracting Parties engage to consider the result of the proceedings of this Commission as a full and final settlement of every claim upon either Government arising out of any transaction of a date prior to the exchange of the ratifications of the present Convention; and further engage that every such claim, whether or not the same may have been presented to the notice of, made, preferred, or laid before the said Commission, shall, from and after the conclusion of the proceedings of the said Commission, be considered and treated as finally settled and barred, and thenceforth inadmissable.

ARTICLE VI.

The Commissioners and the Arbitrator or Umpire appointed by them shall keep an accurate record and correct minutes or notes of all their proceedings with the dates thereof, and shall appoint and employ clerks or other persons to assist them in the transaction of the business which may come before them.

The Secretary shall be appointed by Her Britannic Majesty's Representative at Washington, and by the Secretary of State of the United States, jointly.

Each Government shall pay the salaries of its own Commissioners. All other expenses, and the contingent expenses of the Commission, including the salary of the Secretary, shall be defrayed in moieties by the two Parties.

ARTICLE VII.

The present Convention shall be ratified by Her Britannic Majesty and by the President of the United States, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate thereof; and the ratifications shall be exchanged at London as soon as may be within twelve months from the date hereof.

In witness whereof the respective Plenipotentiaries have signed the same, and have affixed thereto their respective seals.

Done at London, the day of , in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty- .

---

Venezuela.

No. 234.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received January 8.)

Temple, January 7, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 1st January instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us Mr. Smith's letter of the 13th September, inclosing the statement of the Captain of the "Bolivar," and other documents, which was referred to our consideration in his letter of September last, but which was accidentally omitted to be sent us in his further letter of the 16th November; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would inform your Lordship, whether the statement of the Captain would in any way lead us to alter the opinion as to the claims of the officers and crew of the "Bolivar" on Her Majesty's Government, as expressed in our Report of the 30th ultimo.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the statement of the Captain and the other documents sent to us (and of which we had a general recollection when we wrote our former Report) do not lead us to alter the opinion which we expressed on the 30th ultimo.

We have, &c.

(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
C. J. SELWYN.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 235.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received January 28.)

Temple, January 28, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 25th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me a despatch which your Lordship has received from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires to the Republic of Venezuela, inclosing the draft of an Agreement for the settlement of British claims upon the Government of the Republic by means of a Mixed Commission. The draft of the answer, which your Lordship proposes to address to Mr. Fagan in reply, with an amended draft of Agreement was also transmitted; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take these papers into consideration, and report to your Lordship my opinion upon the drafts proposed to be to be sent to Mr. Fagan. Mr. Hammond was further pleased to state that your Lordship would be glad to receive my Report in time to enable your Lordship to write to Mr. Fagan by the mail of the 1st February.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the draft Agreement as amended may, I think, with some further alteration in Article II, be approved by your Lordship.

It would be advisable that some words should be introduced in Article II, to provide that the promissory note should be forthwith transmitted to the British Legation.

Mr. Fagan's experience may possibly satisfy him, that a promissory note, drawn in the form suggested by him, will be payable at the proper time, otherwise, I should have been disposed to suggest a provision, that the goods should not be allowed to be cleared at the Custom-house, except upon the production of a receipt or certificate of payment from the British Legation.

With regard to the letter proposed to be addressed to Mr. Fagan I would suggest the substitution of the word "either," for "one" of the Commissioners.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 236.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received April 8.)

My Lord,
Temple, April 7, 1868.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 7th September last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the accompanying Memorandum drawn up in the Foreign Office, together with several papers relating to the claim of Mrs. Ackers-Cage upon Her Majesty's Government, which has been repeatedly before my predecessors; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take these papers into consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion thereupon. The previous papers were also inclosed for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That it appears to me that a clear line of distinction exists between the old account and the new account given in by Mr. Bingham; that up to the period when the Venezuelan Court decided in favour of Miss Ackers' right of succession to her natural father's estate, as Mr. Bingham's conduct in taking possession of Miss Acker's estate on behalf of the Crown had been approved by Her Majesty's Treasury under their Minute of 5th April, 1855, Her Majesty's Government would, in my opinion, be responsible towards Miss Ackers for the account delivered by Mr. Bingham, and that if there are any charges in that account for expenses incurred officially by Mr. Bingham in the management of the estate, or in defending the supposed rights of the Crown, which cannot properly be charged against Miss Ackers, Her Majesty's Government ought, I think, to make them good to Miss Ackers. Whether Mr. Bingham should be called upon by your Lordship to re-imburse Her Majesty's Government would depend upon the bona fides of the charges. If charges were incurred bonâ fide by Mr. Bingham in the course of his duty, I think Her Majesty's Government ought not to call upon him to defray them. These remarks would apply to the charge to which Miss Ackers objects on aceount of medical attendance on J. Rivas, who may have been a sub-agent or factor employed in the charge of the estates, and to certain law expenses incurred in opposing Miss Ackers' claim.

With regard to Mr. Bingham's charges for fees and commission, Miss Ackers clearly ought not to be called upon to pay them, inasmuch as it proved that Her Majesty's Consul had no legal right whatever to have intermeddled with the succession of Mr. Ackers. I do not understand on what pretext Mr. Bingham has charged a commission as well as fees. There may be some pretext for the fees under 6 Geo. IV, c. 87, but none for the commission; and, as regards the fees, it must depend on the bona fides of Mr. Bingham whether the Crown would allow them. I may observe there is a mistake in the account of 220 dollars, which ought to be rectified and placed to the account of Miss Ackers.

The new account, which extends from January 1857 to December 1858, appears to me, if I rightly understand the intricacies of the case, to come under very different considerations as regards Her Majesty's Government, inasmuch as Mr. Bingham's management of the estate during this period was conducted under some kind of private agreement or understanding with Miss Ackers, to which Her Majesty's Government were in no way a party. I consider, therefore that Her Majesty's Government is not under any obligation to re-imburse Miss Ackers for any undue charges which Mr. Bingham may have set down in the new account against Miss Ackers, and that her only remedy is by proceedings at law or equity against Mr. Bingham himself. There is, however, a difficulty in respect of the new account, inasmuch as the balance of the old account in favour of Miss Ackers has been transferred to the new account. If this was part of the new understanding between Mr. Bingham and Miss Ackers after the decision of the Venezuelan Court in favour of Miss Ackers' succession, Her Majesty's Government would clearly not be responsible to Miss Ackers for it. But if it has been arbitrarily transferred to the new account without Miss Ackers' consent, then I think Miss Ackers is entitled to look to Her Majesty's Government, as it is a balance for which Her Majesty's Government will be responsible. Under the latter view of the case, Her Majesty's Government would be entitled to call upon Mr. Bingham to make good this amount, and if Mr. Bingham should be in receipt of any pension, Her Majesty's Government may, I think, properly deduct this sum and the charge for commission from Mr. Bingham's pension.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 237.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received April 23.)

Temple, April 23, 1868.
My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 21st instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Caracas, inclosing a copy and translation of a Decree issued by the Venezuelan Government, which establishes a blockade of the State of Nueva Barcelona; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would, if it appeared to me necessary that a notification of the same should appear in the "London Gazette," prepare a form for insertion accordingly.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I have prepared a form for insertion in the "London Gazette," announcing that your Lordship has received an official copy of the Decree of the Venezuelan Government, declaring the coast of the State of Nueva Barcelona to be in a state of blockade. The translation which has been forwarded with the official copy of the Decree, does not appear to me to be sufficiently accurate for insertion in the Gazette. I have made several pencil notes in the margin of it, and should suggest an amended version of it. I beg at the same time to call your Lordship's attention to the Vth Article of the Decree, providing that the captor may release a captured vessel carrying articles contraband of war, upon the master of such vessel delivering up such Articles to the captor. This provision may possibly be in accordance with Treaty stipulations between the Venezuelan Government and some of the Transatlantic States; but it is at variance with the practice of European Nations, and is open to grave objections. No obligation is imposed upon the captor by the Decree, to take the cargo so delivered up into port for adjudication, so as to enable the owner to claim it if it has been illegally captured, and improperly given up, and a door will be open to grave irregularities, if bulk is allowed to be broken by the captors on board of a neutral ship on the pretext of separating contraband articles from the rest of the cargo.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

Inclosure in No. 237.

Notification of Blockade.

Foreign Office, April , 1868.

IT is hereby notified that the Right Honourable Lord Stanley, M.P., Her Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, has received from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Caracas a despatch inclosing an official copy of a Decree issued on the 9th March, 1868, by the Venezuelan Government, declaring the Coast of the State of Nueva Barcelona from the mouth of the River Uchire, to Point Conoma, to be in a state of blockade.

The following is the official copy of the said Decree, with a translation thereof.

[Here insert verbatim a copy of the official copy of the Decree of the Venezuelan Government, with the translation of the same.]

T. T.

---

No. 238.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Lord Stanley.—(Received May 11.)

Temple, May 11, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 21st April ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch and its inclosures from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Venezuela, relative to a violent outrage committed by some soldiers in the service of that Republic, upon a British subject named Hipolite Noel which resulted in his death; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take the same into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to any instruction which should be given to Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires with regard to the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we think that Mr. Fagan has acted properly in instructing Mr. Joel to watch the proceedings of the Court, and to report upon them to Her Majesty's Government.

Until the whole facts are before Her Majesty's Government, and an accurate account furnished as to the history of the deceased, the circumstances under which the injuries were inflicted upon him which are said to have caused death, whether he left a family dependent upon him for support, and other like matters, it is, we think, impossible for Her Majesty's Government to decide whether any claim for indemnity should be made as mentioned in Mr. Fagan's letter.

In case any reluctance or remissness should be shown in bringing the offenders to justice, a strong remonstrance should be addressed to the Venezuelan Authorities insisting upon a full and fair investigation of the case.

We have, &c.
(Signed) JOHN B. KARSLAKE.
WM. BALIOL BRETT.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 239.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received July 3.)

Temple, June 30, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 1st instant, stating that, with reference to a Report of Her Majesty's Advocate-General of the 12th January, 1866, he was directed to transmit to me, together with the papers referred to, two despatches from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Caracas, relative to the arrest and imprisonment of Mr. O'Callaghan, who was born in Venezuela of British parents. That Mr. O'Callaghan, as I should perceive, has been set at liberty by the Authorities at Venezuela, but that the question of the nationality of persons born of British parents in that Republic has again been raised; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take Mr. Fagan's note to Señor Arvelo into consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion whether his views on this point are right and proper,

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That your Lordship cannot properly dispute the right of the Venezuelan authorities, in the absence of any Treaty engagements to the contrary, to hold all persons born of British parents within the territory of that Republic to be natural-born citizens of it, although there may have been a practice and usage prior to the Constitution of 1864, to treat the children of foreigners, though born in Venezuela, as foreigners. The case of Mr. Michael O'Callaghan does not appear to me to form any exception to the general rule, and the document which he has in his possession signed by his Excellency Marshal Faleon, in which he is described as a British subject, cannot avail against the admitted fact of his birth, to relieve him from his obligations as a Venezuelan citizen under the altered state of the law. The document had an intelligible object prior to the Constitution of 1864, as a certificate of his title to enjoy all the privileges granted at that time to the children of foreigners. At present it has no legal value, except as an acknowledgment on the part of the Venezuelan authorities of his British origin, and so far of Mr. Fagan's title to use his good offices on his behalf.

It does not appear from the correspondence transmitted by Mr. Fagan, upon what charge Mr. O'Callaghan was arrested and imprisoned by the Venezuelan authorities; but if he was arrested arbitrarily by the President without any warrant of Venezuelan law, as is suggested by Mr. Fagan, I think that Mr. Fagan was justified in demanding that he should be set at liberty.

With regard to other persons who are in the same position as Mr. O'Callaghan, in respect of their nationality, and respecting whom Mr. Fagan is anxious to receive some instructions from your Lordship as to how he should conduct himself, it may, I think, be advisable for your Lordship to instruct him that he should confine himself to the exercise of his good offices on their behalf, so long as they are allowed the full advantages of Venezuelan law.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 240.

The Queen's Advocate to Lord Stanley.—(Received November 24.)

Temple, November 24, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 19th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying letter and its inclosures from the Colonial Office, relative to a claim of 2,000*l.* made upon the Venezuelan Government by Dr. R. Bakewell, a public officer of Trinidad, for his alleged wrongful detention at Cumana; and to request that I would take the same into consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That it appears from Dr. Robert Bakewell's letter, that he landed at Cumana on 14th July last, upon a medical mission of inquiry authorized by the Governor of Trinidad, and that after completing his inquiry he prepared to return to Trinidad by a steam-vessel which plied between Caracas and La Guayra, calling at Cumana. Unfortunately however for Mr. Bakewell, Caracas was at war with Cumana, and the steamer, not being allowed by the authorities of Caracas to touch at Cumana, passed that port on 10th August, without calling for passengers. Dr. Bakewell thereupon obtained a passport for himself from the Prefect of Cumana for Barcelona, but was unable to obtain a license for a boat and crew to take him to that place. No reason seems to have been given by the Prefect for the refusal of the license; but it appears that Cumana had been declared by Caracas to be under blockade, and that the crew of the boat were themselves afraid of being captured by the Caracas flotilla. It further appears that on the 29th August, Dr. Bakewell obtained a passage in a schooner from Cumana to Carupano, and that the schooner narrowly escaped capture by the enemy's cruizers.

Under these circumstances Dr. Bakewell proposes to claim 2,000*l.* from the Venezuelan Government in compensation for his detention at Cumana, and for the great inconveniences and dangers to which he was exposed in consequence of Cumana having been twice in a state of siege.

1868

I am of opinion that Dr. Bakewell has made out no case which would justify your Lordship's interference with the Venezuelan Government in support of his claim for compensation from that Government. The refusal of his license for a boat to leave the port of Cumana may have been most proper by way of precaution on the part of the Prefect for the protection of the boatmen, whilst Dr. Bakewell appears merely to have undergone mental alarm, and to have suffered no personal violence or ill-treatment during the state of siege.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

4

1869

Printed for the use of the Foreign Office. December 1873.

CONFIDENTIAL.

REPORTS

FROM THE

LAW OFFICERS

OF THE # CROWN.

1869.

1869

LIST OF COUNTRIES.

- Abyssinia.
- Africa (Slave Trade).
- Argentine Confederation.
- Brazil.
- Central America—
  - Guatemala.
  - Nicaragua.
  - Costa Rica.
  - Honduras.
  - Salvador.
- Chile.
- China.
- Colombia. (See New Granada.)
- Denmark.
- Equator.
- France.
- Greece.
- Hayti.
- Italy.
- Japan.
- Madagascar.
- Mexico.
- Monte Video.
- Netherlands.
- New Granada (Colombia).
- Pacific Islands.
- Persia.
- Peru.
- Portugal.
- Prussia.
- Russia.
- Salvador.
- Saxony.
- Spain.
- Sweden.
- Switzerland.
- Turkey.
- United States.
- Venezuela.
- Wurtemberg.

ALPHABETICAL INDEX.

ABYSSINIA.

Claim to compensation precluded by application to Court of Law, 1.
Ravolet, M., 1.

AFRICA. (Slave Trade.)

Act of Parliament (Aberdeen). Repeal, 2.
Awards to be paid through Government of the United States, 2.
Brazil. Aberdeen Act. Repeal, 2.
Hook, Mr., 3.
Machado, J. A., 2, 3.
"Mary Varney," 2.
Mixed Commission Courts. Termination, 4, 5, 7.
Portugal. Convention. Mixed Commission Courts, 7.
Salaries. Refusal to produce order for payment of, 3.
"Thomas Watson," 2.
United States. Convention. Mixed Commission Courts, 4, 5.
Vredenburgh, Consul, 3.
Westhead, Messrs., 3.

ARGENTINE CONFEDERATION.

Arbitration. "Prince Albert," 9, 10.
Arms. Seizure of, exported for use of a belligerent, 10.
Belligerents. Diplomatic correspondence with neutral States. Privileged character of, 9.
Seizure of arms for, 10.
"Caroline," 9.
Diplomatic Correspondence. See "Belligerents."
Johnson, R., 10.
Neutral States. Privileged character of correspondence of belligerents with, 9.
"Prince Albert," 9, 10.
Rivers. Closing of during war, 10.
Stewart, Mr., 10.

BRAZIL.

"Guiseppina," 11.
Haycroft and Pethick, 11.
Slave Trade. See Africa.

CENTRAL AMERICA.

Arbitration. Payment of costs, 14, 15.
Consuls. Foreign. Administration of oaths in Great Britain, 15.
" " Appointment to Commission of the Peace, 15.
Decree. Honduras. Losses of foreigners during civil war, 11.
Foreigners. Losses during civil war, &c. Decree of Honduras Government, 11.
Marriages within Consular District of Central America, 12.
Oaths. Administration by foreign Consuls in England, 15.
San Geronimo Estate, 13, 14, 15.
War. Civil. Losses of foreigners during. Decree, 11.

CHILE.

Deserter. Surrender under Article XIII of Treaty of 4th October, 1854, 15.

CHINA.

Admiralty Cases. Jurisdiction of Shanghae Court, 23.
Anglo-British Chinese. Distinctive dress, 19, 21.
Collisions. British and Chinese vessels. Prevention of, 29.
Criminals. Hong Kong. Arrest on Chinese territory, 19, 20.
Disputes. British and Chinese subjects, 25, 26.
Evidence. Chinese. Admissibility, 28.
Extradition. Criminals. Hong Kong and Macao, 26.
" Article IX of Treaty of Hoomun Chae not prolonged by Treaty of Tien-tsin, 21.
Foreigners arriving in China on board British vessels. Jurisdiction over, 24.
Gold mining. Notification to British subjects, 18.
Hong Kong criminals. Extradition. Articles XV and XVI of Treaty of Tien-tsin, 27.
" " Arrest on Chinese territory, 19, 20.
Hong Kong waters. Extent of British jurisdiction, 22.
Jurisdiction over British subjects in Chinese service, 18.
" Hong Kong waters, 22.
" of Court of Shanghae, in Admiralty cases, 23.
" over foreigners arriving in China on board British vessels, 24.
Jury. Trial for murder, 28.
Macao. Extradition of criminals, 26.
Missionaries. Right of protection under Treaty, 17.
Murder. Trial. Supreme Court at Shanghae. Jury. Chinese evidence, 28.
Oaths. Administration to Chinese witnesses, 28.
Omichund v. Barker, 28.
Ordinance. Extradition. Hong Kong and Macao, 26.
Shanghae. Court of. Jurisdiction. Admiralty cases, 23.
" Land and Municipal Regulations. Sanction, 29.
"Spray," 23.
Tien-tsin. Treaty of. Extradition of Hong Kong criminals. Articles XV and XVI, 27.
" " Modification of Article XVII. Disputes between British and Chinese subjects, 25, 26.
Turberville, Rev. Mr., 17.
Vessels. Seizure for carrying informal papers, 23.
Yangtze River. Shan Shoe Channel. Use by British shipping, 22.

DENMARK.

Declaration. Mutual exemption of subjects from forced loans, military exactions or requisitions, and compulsory military service, 30.

EQUATOR.

Bondholders. Detention of money forwarded for payment of, 30.

FRANCE.

Armament. French term, with reference to Foreign Enlistment Act, 32.

1869

Austria and France. Commercial Treaty between, not applicable to British vessels, 33.
Bentzen, W., 39.
Brandeis, M., 38.
Calicut. French factory. Execution of processes of British Courts, 33.
Clarkson, Mr., 39.
Consuls. British. Legalization of documents. Objection of Society of Notaries to, 37.
Convention of Commerce of 1826. Import of European productions into France. Application of Articles I and II, 33.
Convention. Postal, 1856. Application to French Messagerie steamer, 31, 34.
Crete. Insurrection. Arrangement proposed by France for terminating, 31.
Foreign Enlistment Acts. French term "Armament" with reference to, 32.
Greece. Power of Government to prevent departure of armed vessels, 31.
India. French factories. Opinion in favour of French rights, 34.
Imports into France, by British vessels, of productions of European countries under Articles I and II of Convention of January 1826, 33.
Marriage in Embassy at Paris. A British naturalized Jew to a French subject, 38.
"Mercutio," 35.
Naturalized subjects. Marriage, 38.
Packets. French. Arrest of seamen. See "Tigre."
Postal Convention of September 1856. Articles applicable only to vessels employed in actual conveyance of correspondence, 31, 34.
Railway Shares, the property of British subjects. Transfer, 36, 37.
Simpson, Mr., 35.
"Tigre," 31, 34.
Tremlett, W., 36.
Wreck. Expenses of. Detention of ship's papers as security, 35.

GREECE.

Compensation for assaults on British subjects, 41.
Farugier, Q., 41, 43.
Ionian Bank, 39.
Maltese. Illegal punishment for robbery, 42.
Nationality of persons born abroad of British parents, 43.
"Sylph," 41, 43.
Treaty of 29th March, 1864. Infringement by issue of Treasury Notes, 39, 40.
Zamont, M. and F., 42.

HAYTI.

Blockade. Examination of vessels previous to entering a port under. Convention with France, 44.
Cesvert, M. N., 47.
Compensation for losses during insurrection, 46.
Compensation. Pillage of house of British Chargé d'Affaires at Port au Prince, 46.
Duranty and Co., 46, 47.
"Express," 48.
France and Great Britain. Joint action of naval officers to obtain release of British and French vessels seized by Haytian Authorities, 44.
Paris. Declaration of, 1856. Enforcement of, 44.
Port au Prince. Pillage of residence of British Chargé d'Affaires, 46.
Ports closed to foreign trade. Seizure of vessel for communicating with, 48.
"Telegrefo," 47, 48.
Vessels. British and French. Seizure by Haytian Authorities, 44.
War. Civil. Losses by foreigners. Compensation, 46, 47.

ITALY.

Dues. Anchorage. Payment by steamers, 49.
Famolaro, Captain, 50.
"Lady Briggs," 50.
Manifests. Ships'. Deficiency of cargo, as compared with, 50.
Marriage, Civil, in London, between a Roman and British subject. Non-recognition, 51.
Riso, J. de, 50.

JAPAN.

Arms, &c., supplied to Rebels. Notification against, 54.
Austria. As to British Consuls acting for, 58.
Belligerent Rights. Recognition to rebels, 54.
Consul. Liability to action for enforcing decisoin as Arbitrator, 56.
Consular Court. Naval officers not called upon to enforce process, 57.
Consuls. Appointment of naturalized aliens, 53.
„ British in China and Japan. How far they can act for Austria, 58.
Great Britain. Subjects. Non-registered. Jurisdiction over, 56.
Gutman, Miss, 52.
Jurisdiction by naturalized aliens under Order in Council, 53.
Kempner, W., 52, 55.
Kerais. Rebel. Recognition of belligerent rights to, 54, 56.
Neutrality. Amended Order in Council. Mikado, 55.
„ Revocation of Order in Council of May 1868, 54.
"Ocean Queen," 56.
Order in Council. Power of a naturalized alien to exercise jurisdiction and act as Consul under, 53.
„ „ of May 1868. Neutrality. Revocation, 54.
Robertson, Consul, 56.
War. Civil. Definition, 54.
„ „ Non-registered British subjects engaged in. Jurisdiction over, 56.

MADAGASCAR.

Order in Council. Consular jurisdiction, 59.
„ „ Consular jurisdiction. Rules and Regulations, 59.

MEXICO.

"Chanticleer," 60.
Mazatlan. Closing of port by Captain of "Chanticleer," 60.
War. Making of by a naval officer without authority of his Government, 60.

MONTE VIDEO.

Commercial Bank of Salto. Seizure of. Legality, 61.

NETHERLANDS.

Davidson, Mr., 62.
Great Britain. Subject. Liability to serve in Java Militia, 62.
Militia. Liability of British subjects to serve in, 62.

NEW GRANADA (COLOMBIA).

Aria, P. A., 65.
Brandon, P., 64, 67.
Claim on account of certain bonds issued by a former Government, 67.
Consul. Legal proceedings against for enforcing Board of Trade instructions, 66.
Foreigners. Damage done to property during Civil War, 65.
George, Mr., 65.
Nationality of a person born in Jamaica of Spanish parents, 65.
Panama Ship Canal. Convention between Colombia and the United States. Its effect upon Convention of 1850, 63, 64.
"Patrono," 64.
Stiebel, Messrs., 67.
War. Civil. Damage to property of foreigners, 65.

PACIFIC ISLANDS.

Fiji Islands. Extension of Foreign Jurisdiction Act to, 70.
Foreign Jurisdiction Act. Extension to Fiji Islands, 70.
Oath. Persons serving on General Council of Tahiti. Effect with regard to protection of British subjects, 71.
Tahiti. General Council. Effect of oath as regards protection of British subjects, 71.

PERSIA.

Anglo-Indian Subjects. Right to British protection of grandchildren born in Persia, 71.
Meerza Aly Akhbar, 71.
Protection of grandchildren of Anglo-Indian subjects born in Persia, 71.

PERU.

Decree. Losses of foreigners during Civil War, 72.
Foreigners. Compensation for losses during Civil War. Decree, 72.
Great Britain. Right of Peruvian subjects to succeed to moveable property, 73.
Property. Inheritance by foreigners. Reciprocity, 73.
„ Moveable. Right of a British subject to succeed to, 73.
„ „ Right of Peruvian subjects to succeed to in Great Britain, 73.
Stevenson, Mrs., 73.
War. Civil. Compensation to foreigners for losses during, 72.

PORTUGAL.

Andrews, Mr., 76, 77.
Amaral, Senhor, 75.
Cassels, Mr., 75.
Claims of bondholders of South Eastern Railway. Support of, 74
Foreigners. Religious prosecution, 75.
Hong Kong. Trial of Mr. Saint for libel against Senhor Amaral, 75.
Railway. South Eastern of Portugal. Claim of bondholders, 74.
Saint, Mr., 75.

PRUSSIA.

Cobb, J., and Pearson, 79.
Naturalization. Children of naturalized British subjects born abroad previous to Act of Naturalization, not entitled to be considered British subjects by law of England, 78.
Writs. Serving of in Prussia, 79.

RUSSIA.

Barrow, Consul, 79, 80.
Blair, Mr., 79, 80.
Buckell, Dr., 83, 84.
Consul. Assistance rendered to a British subject to escape from justice, 79.
Furness and Co., 82, 83.
Great Britain. Subject. Assistance in case of murder, 81.
Miller, Mr., 81.
Odessa. Paving Committee, 82.
Passport. Claim on account of delay in granting a, 83, 84.
Paving Committee of Odessa. Appointment of Arbitrator and Umpire, 82.

SALVADOR.

Bonds. Reduction in value by issue of a Government Decree, 84.
Kerford and Co., 84.

SAXONY.

Burnley, Mr. Is a Minister according to Act 4 Geo. IV., c. 91, 85.
Marriages of British subjects at Dresden, 85.
„ No legal restrictions as to hour of, 85.
Warburton, J., 85.

SPAIN.

"Africa," 86.
"Alar," 110.
Arms. Export of for Cuban Insurgents. British Government cannot prevent, 110.
„ „ from Bahamas. Proclamation against, 111.
Bahama Islands. Proceedings of Spanish cruizers. Remonstrance against, 91.
„ Export of arms. Proclamation against, 111.
Campbell, F., 101, 118.
Capture of a vessel for conveying passengers for Cuba Insurgents. See "Galvanic."
„ of an United States' vessel in British waters by a Spanish cruizer. See "Mary Lowell."
„ Protest sufficient to prevent it being quoted as a precedent, 110.
„ Illegal. Restoration of vessels at places where seized, 112.
Certino, M., 114.
Claims on account of captures by Spanish squadron during San Domingo Blockade, 86.
Collision. "Phillis and Mary" and the "Villa de Madrid," 93, 97.
"Commonditorio." Capture by Spanish cruizers in West Indies, 93.
Court of Law. Spanish. Attendance of Consul or interpreter, 98, 102.
"Criticado," 114, 117.
Cuba Cays. Claim of Spain to, 87.
„ Captures off Coast of. Pain of death, 89, 108.
„ Treatment of British subjects. Claim to compensation, 104.
„ Right of Spanish authorities to close ports, 107.
„ Illegal captures off coast by non-existence of belligerent rights, 107.
„ Captures off Coast of. Proclamation and Treaty of 1835, 108.
„ Treatment of crews of captured vessels as prisoners of war, 108.
„ Belligerent terms used in Spanish Proclamation, 109.
„ Insurgents. Exportation of arms for, from Great Britain, 110.
Curbelo, G. C., 107.
Decree issued by Governor of Cuba inflicting punishment of death on crews of vessels captured off Coast of Cuba, 89.
"Elisa." Capture off Coast of San Domingo, 116.
"Elva." Capture by Spanish cruizers in West Indies, 93.
Fergusson, Mr., 104.
Foreign Enlistment Act. Breach by use of Port of Nassau by Cuban Insurgents, 87.
„ „ Detention of vessel at Nassau for breach of. See "Salvador."
„ „ Detention of vessel at Nassau for action against authorities. See case of "Salvador."
„ „ State of law. Proposed Circular to Naval Officers and Colonial authorities, 105.
"Forward," 86.
"Galvanic." Seizure for conveying passengers to join Cuban Insurgents, 88, 91, 107.
„ Trial of crew. Cannot be tried criminally unless they were Spanish subjects, 88.

1869

"Galvanic." Trial of crew. Right of British Consul to remonstrate, 88.
"Garnet," 109.
Gibraltar, Bishop of. Spiritual superintendence extension, 115.
Isaac Campbell and Co., 101.
Jamaica. Complaint of Spanish Government at "Peril" being allowed to coal at, 107.
"Jeff. Davis," 105.
Kelly, Mr., 104.
"La Have," 110, 112.
Leon, Mr., 86.
"Lilian." Detention at Nassau, sailing under flag of insurgent Cubans, 117.
"Mary Lowell." United States' vessel. Capture in British waters by a Spanish cruizer, 89, 90, 92, 93, 103, 104, 111, 112, 113.
  „ „ Demand of the United States that British Government should claim reparation for capture, 90, 113.
Marcella, Mr., 114, 117.
Moxey, Mr., 86.
Nassau. Port of. Use of by Cuban insurgents. Proclamation, 87.
  „ Action of owners of the "Salvado" against Authorities, 102.
"Peril," 107.
"Phillis and Mary." Collision, 93, 97.
Phillimore, Captain, 112.
"President." Capture of, Coast of San Domingo, 116.
"Salvador." Detention at Nassau for breach of Foreign Enlistment Act, 96, 102, 105.
San Domingo. Blockade. Claims on account of captures, 86, 116.
Terry, J., 115.
Thompson, J. J., 105.
"Tornado." Reference of case to Special Tribunal, 94.
  „ Claim of crew to compensation, 98.
  „ Approving correspondence with Madrid, Mr. F. Campbell, and Messrs. Isaac Campbell and Co., 101.
  „ Compensation to crew. Claim of Mr. F. Campbell, 118.
"Villa de Madrid." Collision, 93, 97.
War. Implements of. Power to detain when imported for use of Cuban insurgents, 109.
West Indies. Proceedings of Spanish cruizers. Instructions to British naval officers, 92, 95, 96.
  „ Proceedings of Spanish cruizers. Remonstrance, 93, 101.
White, W., 106.

SWEDEN.

Consul. Vice, at St. Ive's. Assault on, 119.
St. Ive's. Assault on Swedish Vice-Consul, 119.

SWITZERLAND.

Convention. Wounded in war. Extension to Naval Warfare, 119, 120.
Property. Succession to by British subjects, 121.
Townshend, C. H., 121.

TURKEY.

Beretta, M., 124.
Carver and Gill, 124.
Claims. Société Agricole d'Egypt. Government support to, 122.
  „ Ionian subjects to lands in Turkey, 124.
  „ Non-fulfilment of a contract at Constantinople, 129.
Consul. Absence from trial. Mixed Commission Court in Egypt, 124.
Contract. Claim on account of non-fulfilment of, 129.
Egypt. Société Agricole. Claims, 122.
Ernani Bey, 124.
Galatti, J. S., 128.
Marriages. Polygamic contracts not recognized in English Court of Divorce, 127.
  „ British Indian Jews, 127.
Mixed Commission Court. Absence of Consul from trial, 124.
Nationality. Grant of British protection to minors, 123.
Naturalization. New Law of, in Turkey and its effect on Treaty rights, 126.
  „ New Law of, in Turkey. Circular, 127.
  „ Protection of firms abroad, of foreigners enjoying British, 128.
Schilizzi, P., 123.
White, Mr., 129.

UNITED STATES.

Chantems, Madame, 129.
Clay, General, 129.
"Colombia." Detention by legal process, 130.
Consular Convention. Opinion on Articles proposed by United States' Government, 132.
Great Britain and United States. Disputed question. Lecture of Professor Wolsey, 131.
Iron-clad Vessels. Purchase for Peruvian Government, 130.
Neutrality. No breach committed by departure of iron-clad vessels for Peru, 130.
Peru. Departure of iron-clads purchased for, 130.
  „ Policy of United States during Civil War in, 1857, 131.
Wolsey, Professor, 131.

VENEZUELA.

Blundel and Hartman. Claims, 133.
Claims. Mixed Commission of, and Venezuelan Decree of 16th June, 1865, 134.
  „ of foreigners. Effect of new Law respecting, 136.
Diplomatic Immunities. Protest against infringement of, 136.
"Elizabeth," 134.
Every, Mr., 134.
Foreigners. Law passed respecting, in contravention of Treaty stipulations, 135, 136.

WURTEMBERG.

Marriage at British Legation of two Wurtemberg subjects, but one a naturalized British subject, 137.
  „ at Stuttgardt and Heidelberg. Legality, 137.
  „ Certificate. Not required to be registered at Legation, when performed in accordance with law of the country, 137.

LIST OF REPORTS.

Arranged according to Countries.

ABYSSINIA.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 1 | June 9, 1869 | Law Officers .. | Claim to compensation of a French subject, named Ravolet, for having been flogged during Abyssinian Expedition by order of a British officer. His having sought redress in a Court of law precludes claim to compensation .. .. | 1 |

AFRICA. (Slave Trade.)

| | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 2 | Jan. 5, 1869 | Law Officers .. | Slave Trade. Brazil. Approving proposed Bill for repeal of the "Aberdeen Act" (8 and 9 Vict., c. 122, 1845) .. | 2 |
| 3 | Feb. 17, | Queen's Advocate | Mr. J. A. Machado. Claim on account of detention of his vessels, the "Mary Varney" and "Thomas Watson," by British cruizers on coast of Africa, on suspicion of being engaged in Slave Trade. Award should be paid through the Government of the United States. (For previous Report, in 1868, see "United States," No. 231) .. | 2 |
| 4 | Mar. 27, | Queen's Advocate | Mr. J. A. Machado. Should treat with Messrs. Westhead as principals, on their obtaining required document in proof of Mr. Machado's claim .. .. .. .. | 3 |
| 5 | Apr. 14, | Law Officers .. | Claim of Mr. Hook on Mr. W. Vredenburgh, Her Majesty's Consul and Commissary Judge at Loanda. Approving answer to inquiry with regard to person holding power of attorney for Mr. Vredenburgh .. .. .. | 3 |
| 6 | 24, | Law Officers .. | Claim of Mr. Hook on Consul Vredenburgh. Approving answer to demand for copies of orders for payment of Mr. Vredenburgh's salary .. .. .. .. | 3 |
| 7 | July 30, | Queen's Advocate | Opinion on proposed Draft of Convention for putting an end to that portion of the Treaty with the United States of the 7th April, 1862, which relates to the maintenance of Mixed Commission Courts .. .. .. .. | 4 |
| 8 | Oct. 30, | Queen's Advocate | Further opinion regarding proposed Convention with the United States on the subject of the Treaty of the 7th April, 1862 .. .. .. .. .. .. | 4 |
| 9 | Dec. 18, | Queen's Advocate | Further opinion regarding Convention relating to Treaty with the United States of the 7th April, 1862 .. .. | 5 |
| 10 | 18, | Queen's Advocate | Opinion with regard to proposed Convention with Portugal for putting an end to the stipulations contained in the Treaty of the 3rd July, 1862, on the subject of Mixed Commissions .. .. .. .. .. | 7 |

1869

ARGENTINE CONFEDERATION.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 11 | Jan. 16, 1869 | Queen's Advocate | Correspondence addressed by the Government of Paraguay to their Diplomatic Agents in London and Paris. Privileged character of correspondence between belligerents and their Agents residing in neutral States. Principle laid down by Lord Stowell in the case of the "Caroline," 6 ch., Robinson, p. 461 .. .. .. .. .. | 9 |
| 12 | Apr. 3, | Queen's Advocate | Case of the "Prince Albert." Opinion with regard to proposal of Argentine Government to submit case to arbitration .. .. .. .. .. .. | 9 |
| 13 | Aug. 19, | Law Officers .. | Claim of Mr. Stewart on the Argentine Government, on account of the seizure of a cargo of arms on its way to Paraguay; also for sufferings incurred from imprisonment, and, finally, for an increase of duty levied upon a cargo of yerba. Opinion with regard to seizure of arms destined for a belligerent. Closing of rivers in the event of war between .. .. .. .. .. .. | 10 |
| 14 | Sept. 24, | Queen's Advocate | Case of the "Prince Albert." Approving statement prepared by Mr. Stuart for proposed arbitration of Mr. Reverdy Johnson .. .. .. .. .. | 10 |

BRAZIL.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 15 | May 22, | Queen's Advocate | Case of Messrs. Haycroft and Pethick. Responsibility of Italian Government for sale, by Italian Vice-Consul at Paranagua, of portion of cargo of Italian vessel "Guiseppina".. .. .. .. .. .. | 11 |

CENTRAL AMERICA.

(Guatemala, Nicaragua, Costa Rica, Honduras, and Salvador.)

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 16 | Jan. 27, | Queen's Advocate | Civil war and revolution. Decree of Honduras Government limiting its liability in cases of claims of foreigners for losses during. Suggests declaration in support of rights of foreigners .. .. .. .. .. | 11 |
| 17 | Feb. 24, | Law Officers .. | Question as to right of two British subjects to be married, after a month's residence within the Consular District of Central America, but within the limits of different States. (See previous Report of the 23rd October, 1868.) Validity of marriage under 12th and 13th Vict., cap. 68, sec. 13 .. | 12 |
| 18 | 24, | Queen's Advocate | San Geronimo Estate. Opinion in favour of accepting terms of arbitration proposed by the Government of Guatemala.. | 13 |
| 19 | Mar. 27, | Queen's Advocate | San Geronimo Estate. Expenses of arbitration should be borne by the Guatemalan Government. Opinion with regard to the employment of a professional lawyer .. | 13 |
| 20 | May 5, | Queen's Advocate | San Geronimo Estate. Opinion as to Her Majesty's Government pressing for payment of claim previous to award being made by Arbitrator .. .. .. .. | 14 |
| 21 | July 15, | Queen's Advocate | San Geronimo Estate. Opinion as to payment of costs of Arbitration .. .. .. .. .. | 14 |

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 22 | Oct. 16, 1869 | Queen's Advocate | Declaration on oath required to be taken before Nicaraguan Consul by merchants exporting goods to Nicaragua Opinion as to power of Nicaraguan Consul-General, by the authority of his exequatur, to administer oaths within Her Majesty's dominions, and as to his name being inserted in the Commission of the Peace .. .. | 15 |
| 23 | Nov. 12, | Queen's Advocate | San Geronimo Estate. Opinion as to payment of costs of arbitration in the event of an award being made.. .. | 15 |

CHILE.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 24 | Mar. 22, 1869 | Queen's Advocate | Opinion in favour of non-application of the XIIIth Article of Treaty with Chile of 4th October, 1854, with regard to a deserter from Chilian militia, who had been enlisted in Her Majesty's service, subsequent to his return to his native country, Peru .. .. .. .. .. | 16 |

CHINA.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 25 | Jan. 7, 1869 | Queen's Advocate | Protection of missionaries. Opinion as to their rights to protection under Treaty. Application of the Rev. Mr. Turberville .. .. .. .. .. .. | 17 |
| 26 | 12, | Law Officers .. | Approving notification to British subjects at Chefoo on subject of gold mining .. .. .. .. .. | 18 |
| 27 | 19, | Law Officers .. | Opinion with regard to the jurisdiction of Chinese authorities over British subjects in Chinese service .. .. | 18 |
| 28 | Mar. 2, | Law Officers .. | Opinion with regard to regulation requiring Anglo-British Chinese to wear a distinctive dress when travelling in China | 19 |
| 29 | 19, | Law Officers .. | Opinion as to arrest, on Chinese territory, of Chinese subjects who have committed crimes at Hong-Kong, and then escaped to China .. .. .. .. .. | 19 |
| 30 | Apr. 7, | Law Officers .. | Opinion as to Treaty right of British authorities to arrest on Chinese territory a British subject who has committed a crime on British territory .. .. .. | 20 |
| 31 | 26, | Law Officers .. | Extradition of British subjects. Article IX of the Treaty of Hoomun Chae (1843) not kept alive by Article LIV of the Treaty of Tientsin .. .. .. .. | 21 |
| 32 | 27, | Law Officers .. | Regulations with regard to Anglo-Chinese distinctive costume. Approving views of Sir R. Alcock with regard to change in Regulations .. .. .. .. | 21 |
| 33 | 29, | Law Officers .. | Opinion with regard to the wording of the Regulation prohibiting the use of the Shan Shoe channel in the Yangtze River to British shipping .. .. .. .. | 22 |
| 34 | 30, | Law Officers .. | Extent of British jurisdiction in waters adjacent to Hong-Kong. Approving drafts of despatches to Her Majesty's Minister at Pekin and the Colonial Office, founded upon Reports of the 19th March and 26th April .. .. | 22 |
| 35 | May 12, | Law Officers .. | Case of the "Spray." Opinion as to whether the Court at Shanghae, under the 103rd section of the Merchant Shipping Act, has jurisdiction in Admiralty cases, with regard to vessels carrying informal papers .. .. .. | 23 |
| 36 | July 5, | Law Officers .. | Case of the "Spray." Opinion as to further instructions being sent to Consuls, under the 103rd section of the Merchant Shipping Act, on the subject of the seizure of vessels for carrying informal papers .. .. .. | 23 |
| 37 | Sept. 13, | Law Officers .. | Opinion with regard to jurisdiction over foreigners arriving in Chinese ports on board British vessels . .. .. | 24 |

1869

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 38 | Sept. 30, 1869 | Law Officers | Opinion with regard to the modification of Article XVII of the Treaty of Tientsin, on subject of settlement of disputes between Chinese and British subjects | 25 |
| 39 | Oct. 2, | Law Officers | Disputes between British and Chinese subjects. Modification proposed in Article XVII of Treaty of Tientsin. Opinion expressed in Report No. 38 not changed by Sir E. Hornby's statement | 26 |
| 40 | 9, | Law Officers | Opinion with regard to proposed Ordinance for mutual extradition of criminals escaping from Hong-Kong and Macao | 26 |
| 41 | 20, | Law Officers | Opinion with regard to interpretation of Articles XV and XVI of the Treaty of Tientsin on the subject of the rendition of criminals escaping from Hong-Kong to mainland | 27 |
| 42 | 20, | Law Officers | Administration of oaths to Chinese witnesses. Opinion with regard to a judgment passed by Sir E. Hornby on the subject. Decision of Lord Justice Willis in the case of Omichund v. Barker | 28 |
| 43 | Nov. 30, | Law Officers | Trial for murder in Supreme Court at Shanghae. Opinion in favour of Sir E. Hornby's view of the law relative to the sufficiency of the jury, and admissibility of Chinese evidence | 28 |
| 44 | Dec. 21, | Law Officers | Opinion with regard to the enforcement of Regulations for prevention of collisions between British and Chinese shipping | 29 |
| 45 | 29, | Law Officers | Provisional Land Regulations and "Réglement Municipal" at Shanghae may properly be confirmed by Her Majesty's Government | 29 |

DENMARK.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 45 | Jan. 30, 1869 | Law Officers | Opinion with regard to Declaration to be exchanged between Great Britain and Denmark, mutually exempting the subjects of each from forced loans, military exactions or requisitions, and compulsory military service | 30 |

EQUATOR.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 46 | Sept. 17, 1869 | Queen's Advocate | Her Majesty's Government not called upon to interfere to recover for Ecutorian Government certain sums detained by their Agent in England, which had been forwarded for payment of bondholders. Ecutorian Government should take legal proceedings | 30 |

FRANCE.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 47 | Jan. 13, 1869 | Law Officers | Arrest at Hong Kong of French seamen belonging to the French Messageries steamer "Tigre." Articles of Postal Convention, 24th September, 1856, not applicable to the case of the "Tigre," she being employed in the carriage of baggage only and not of correspondence | 31 |
| 48 | 14, | Law Officers | Insurrection in Crete. For opinion on arrangement proposed by Government of France for settlement of differences between Turkey and Greece. Query as to power of Greek Government to absolutely prevent the departure of armed vessels | 31 |
| 49 | 16, | Attorney-General | Observations on French term "armement," with reference to Foreign Enlistment Acts | 32 |

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 50 | Apr. 17, 1869 | Queen's Advocate | Opinion that Articles I and II of the Convention of Commerce and Navigation between Great Britain and France, of the 26th January, 1826, restricts the importation into France of the productions of the countries of Europe to such products as have been laden in some port of the United Kingdom. The stipulations in Commercial Treaty between France and Austria not applicable to British vessels | 33 |
| 51 | 22, | Queen's Advocate | Opinion with regard to the execution of the processes of British Courts within the limits of the French factory at Calicut | 33 |
| 52 | 30, | Law Officers | French factories in India. Opinion in favour of French rights, even in such factories as are now unoccupied | 34 |
| 53 | May 11, | Law Officers | Case of the French Messageries steamer "Tigre." Consider that vessels chartered or subsidized as packets, actually conveying correspondence, come within the scope of Article V of the Anglo-French Postal Convention of 1856 | 34 |
| 54 | 12, | Queen's Advocate | Opinion with regard to claim of Mr. Simpson on the French Government on account of the wreck of the "Mercutio." Case of detention of papers by French authorities as security for payment of expenses of wreck | 35 |
| 55 | 31, | Law Officers | Opinion with regard to the difficulties existing to effect the transfer of French railway shares the property of deceased British subjects | 36 |
| 56 | July 2, | Queen's Advocate | Opinion with regard to arrest of Mr. Washington Tremlett during certain riots in Paris | 36 |
| 57 | Aug. 11, | Law Officers | Opinion with regard to proposal of French railway authorities for facilitating the transfer of French railway shares belonging to deceased British subjects. Certificate proposed to be given by British Consuls in France | 37 |
| 58 | 19, | Law Officers | Transfer of railway shares. Observations on objection of Society of Notaries in Paris to British Consuls in France certifying to legal documents | 37 |
| 59 | Nov. 3, | Queen's Advocate | Opinion with regard to the application of Mr. Brandeis, a British naturalized Jewish subject, to be married to a French subject in the British Embassy or Consulate at Paris. Not expedient to sanction, Mr. Brandeis having an Austrian domicile as a banker at Vienna | 38 |
| 60 | 19, | Law Officers | Case of Clarkson v. Bentzen. A judgment by default in the Queen's Bench, or any other superior Court, is a final judgment, and while it stands is conclusive | 39 |

GREECE.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 61 | Jan. 18, 1869 | Law Officers | Ionian Bank. Opinion as to infringement of Article VII of the Treaty of the 29th March, 1864, by the Royal Decree authorizing the issue of Treasury notes to the amount of 15,000,000 drachmas | 39 |
| 62 | Feb. 2, | Law Officers | Financial measures of Greek Government. Opinion that Her Majesty's Government cannot invoke VIIth Article of Treaty of 1864 so long as the revenues assigned to the guaranteed loan are not diverted to other objects | 40 |
| 63 | Mar. 25, | Queen's Advocate | Assault on master of the British schooner "Sylph." Inadequacy of sentence on offenders. Greek Government should be warned that Her Majesty's Government will demand compensation for British subjects if it permits its laws to be violated with impunity | 41 |
| 64 | 27, | Queen's Advocate | Trial of L. Farugia at Corfu. Her Majesty's Government not called upon to demand compensation, the laws of Greece having been contravened by L. Farugia | 41 |

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 65 | Apr. 9, 1869 | Queen's Advocate | Alleged illegal punishment of two Maltese, M. and F. Zamont, accused of robbery at Syra | 42 |
| 66 | May 24, | Queen's Advocate | Case of L. Farugia. Question as to recognition as a British subject of a person born abroad of British parents. Rights enjoyed under Statute Law of England by persons born abroad of British parents | 43 |
| 67 | June 4, | Queen's Advocate | Case of the "Sylph." Efforts of Greek authorities to punish offenders should be considered as satisfactory | 43 |

HAYTI.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 68 | Jan. 11, 1869 | Queen's Advocate | Seizure of British and French vessels by Haytian authorities. Joint action of French and English officers to obtain release. The Declaration of Paris of 1856 having been accepted by the Government of Hayti, effective assistance should be rendered by British naval officers in procuring a strict observance of its principles | 44 |
| 69 | Apr. 2, | Queen's Advocate | Opinion with regard to Convention signed between the Government of Hayti and the French Chargé d'Affaires, by which French vessels are allowed to enter the ports in possession of the rebels and under blockade, on condition of their first visiting a port under the control of the Haytian Government, so as to verify their not having on board contraband of war | 44 |
| 70 | 6, | Queen's Advocate | Pillage of house of British Chargé d'Affaires at Port-au-Prince by Government troops. Her Majesty's Government should support demand for compensation | 46 |
| 71 | 17, | Queen's Advocate | Claim of Messrs. Duranty and Co. on the Haytian Government for property destroyed during insurrection at Port-au-Prince | 46 |
| 72 | Aug. 21, | Law Officers .. | Case of the "Telegrafo." Case of piracy | 47 |
| 73 | Sept. 23, | Queen's Advocate | Case of Messrs Duranty and Co. Cannot claim compensation of Haytian Government on account of property belonging to Messrs. Duranty and Co. destroyed in the stores of M. N. Cesvet, the latter being a Haytian subject | 47 |
| 74 | Oct. 1, | Law Officers .. | Case of the "Telegrafo." Her release. Opinion with regard to refusal of Governor of the Leeward Islands to grant her a British register | 48 |
| 75 | Nov. 29, | Queen's Advocate | Case of the "Express." Her seizure for having contravened the Haytian laws of trade by communicating with a port not open to foreign trade. Her Majesty's Government should claim indemnity for losses sustained by the owners | 48 |

ITALY.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 76 | Jan. 22, 1869 | Queen's Advocate | Question regarding the payment of anchorage dues. Article X of the Treaty with Italy of the 13th August, 1863, applies equally to steamers as to sailing vessels | 49 |
| 77 | Sept. 10, | Queen's Advocate | Claim of Signor I. de Riso against Italian Government, on account of certain property seized by Garibaldi, in which two English ladies were interested | 50 |
| 78 | Sept. 13, | Queen's Advocate | Case of the "Lady Briggs." Action brought against Captain Famaloro, on account of a deficiency in his cargo as compared with his manifest. Her Majesty's Government not called upon to intervene | 50 |

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 79 | Oct. 26, 1869 | Queen's Advocate | Refusal of Roman authorities to recognize a marriage celebrated between a Roman artist and a Scotch lady by civil rite in London in 1860. Question with regard to the right of succession to property on the death of the former | 51 |
| 80 | Nov. 12, | Queen's Advocate | Assistance to be rendered to widow whose marriage with a Roman subject in London the Roman Government refused to recognize | 51 |

JAPAN.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 81 | Jan. 30, | Law Officers .. | Estate of late Mr. W. Kemptner. Application of executors for assistance to obtain possession of a plot of land left to Miss Gutman by testator. Jurisdiction of Prussian Consul, three of the transferees being Prussian subjects | 52 |
| 82 | Feb. 23, | Law Officers .. | Opinion in favour of an alien born, to whom letters of denization have been given, being able to exercise jurisdiction under the Order in Council and to hold the appointment of Consul | 53 |
| 83 | Mar. 13, | Law Officers .. | Approving notification issued by Sir H. Parkes forbidding British subjects from conveying troops, arms, or munitions of war to certain Japanese rebels at Hakodate | 54 |
| 84 | Apr. 19, | Law Officers .. | Opinion as to recognition of belligerent rights to the rebel Kerais. Definition of civil war | 54 |
| 85 | 29, | Law Officers .. | Revocation of Order in Council of the 14th May, 1868, on the subject of neutrality during civil war is not necessary | 54 |
| 86 | May 10, | Law Officers .. | Amended Order in Council respecting neutrality, by it being made applicable to the Mikado in the place of the Tycoon | 55 |
| 87 | June 28, | Law Officers .. | Estate of the late Mr. Kemptner. Further opinion | 55 |
| 88 | 20, | Law Officers .. | Opinion with regard to the exercise of British jurisdiction over British subjects not registered in one of Her Majesty's Consulates, who may be concerned in the insurrectionary proceedings of the Tokugawa Karais | 56 |
| 89 | Dec. 18, | Law Officers .. | Case of the "Ocean Queen." Liability of Consul Robertson to an action for recovery of money paid by owners in consequence of his enforcing his decision as arbitrator | 56 |
| 90 | Dec. 27, | Law Officers .. | Opinion that Naval Officers are not liable to be called upon to enforce the civil process of a Consular Court | 57 |
| 91 | 29, | Law Officers .. | Opinion as to how far Her Majesty's Consuls in Japan and China can act as Consuls for the Austro-Hungarian monarchy | 58 |

MADAGASCAR.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 92 | Jan. 5, | Law Officers .. | Approving amended Order in Council conferring power of jurisdiction upon Her Majesty's Consul at Madagascar | 59 |
| 93 | Oct. 4, | Law Officers .. | Approving amended Rules and Regulations framed by Her Majesty's Consul under the Order in Council of 4th February | 59 |

MEXICO.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 94 | Feb. 22, | Attorney- and Solicitor-General | Case of the "Chanticleer." Opinion as to right of a British Naval Officer to make war without the authority of his Government. Closing of port of Mazatlan, in order to obtain satisfaction for insult offered to Her Majesty's flag | 60 |

1869

MONTE VIDEO.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 95 | June 25, 1869 | Queen's Advocate | Seizure of Commercial Bank of Salto by Uruguayan authorities. Her Majesty's Government not called upon to interfere, the directory of the bank not having conformed to the Uruguayan law | 61 |

NETHERLANDS.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 96 | June 12, | Queen's Advocate | Case of Mr. Davidson. Liability of Mr. Davidson to service in the local militia at Sourabaya, in Java | 62 |

NEW GRANADA (Colombia).

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 97 | Mar. 23, | Law Officers | Convention signed between the United States of America and the United States of Colombia respecting the construction of a ship canal across the Isthmus of Panama. Opinion as to its effect upon Convention signed between Great Britain and the United States in 1850 | 63 |
| 98 | May 8 | Queen's Advocate | Claim of Mr. P. Brandon on the Government of New Granada for detention of his vessel the "Patrono" | 64 |
| 99 | 31, | Law Officers | Further opinion with regard to effect upon stipulations of the Clayton-Bulwer Treaty of the Convention signed between the United States of America and the United States of Colombia, respecting the construction of a Panama Canal | 64 |
| 100 | June 21, | Queen's Advocate | Opinion as to right of Mr. P. A. Aria to British protection in Colombia, he being the son of a Spaniard, but born in Jamaica. | 65 |
| 101 | July 16, | Queen's Advocate | Claim of Mr. George upon the Colombian Government on account of damage to his mine during a revolution in 1861. Her Majesty's Government not called upon to interfere, in consequence of doubts regarding real ownership of mine | 65 |
| 102 | Aug. 7, | Queen's Advocate | Legal proceedings brought against Her Majesty's Consul at Carthagena, in consequence of his enforcement of Board of Trade instructions with regard to the discharge and release of British seamen. His right to enjoy same protection as other foreign Consuls under the favoured nation clause of Convention between Great Britain and Colombia | 66 |
| 103 | 21, | Queen's Advocate | Case of Messrs. Stiebel, Brothers. Seizure of lead by Colombian authorities. Necessity of a declaration being signed by Messrs. Stiebel, to prove that the lead was their property at the time of seizure, and not that of a foreigner | 67 |
| 104 | Oct. 9, | Queen's Advocate | Case of Mr. P. Brandon. Claim on account of certain bonds issued by the former Government of New Grenada. Explanations required from Messrs. Brandon and Nicholson with regard to a certain deed of agreement between them | 67 |

PACIFIC ISLANDS.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 105 | May 15, | Law Officers | Opinion with regard to proposed Bill for extending the Foreign Jurisdiction Act to places where Her Majesty has no jurisdiction by Treaty or otherwise. Approving instructions to Consul March in the Fiji Islands | 70 |
| 106 | July 15, | Queen's Advocate | Oath required to be taken by all persons serving as Members of the General Council of Tahiti. Opinion as to effect of a British subject taking such oath with regard to his right to protection | 71 |

PERSIA.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 107 | June 29, | Queen's Advocate | Opinion as to right of Meerza Aly Akhbar to British protection, as the grandson of an Anglo-Indian subject born in Persia | 71 |

PERU.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 108 | Jan. 8, | Queen's Advocate | Opinion respecting proposed Peruvian law declaring that foreigners cannot claim from the Government of the Republic compensation for losses incurred during political commotions or disturbances | 72 |
| 109 | 13, | Law Officers | Claim of Mrs. Stevenson to the inheritance of certain property in Peru. Reciprocity claimed by the Peruvian law with regard to the inheritance by foreigners of property in Peru. Opinion against claim of Mrs. Stevenson | 73 |
| 110 | May 31, | Law Officers | Claim of Mrs. Stevenson. Opinion in favour of right of Mrs. Stevenson to succeed to moveable property, the law of England granting reciprocity to Peruvian subjects | 73 |

PORTUGAL.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 111 | Apr. 2, | Law Officers | Claims of bondholders of South-Eastern Railway of Portugal. Decree confiscating their property. Amount of support to be rendered to them by Her Majesty's Government | 74 |
| 112 | May 29, | Queen's Advocate | Opinion with regard to the prosecution of Mr. Cassels, accused of "disseminating opinions contrary to the doctrines of the Church of Rome" | 75 |
| 113 | June 22, | Law Officers | Legal proceedings at Hong-Hong in the case of the Queen v. Saint. Prosecution of Mr. Saint by Acting Attorney-General at Hong Kong, for a libel against Senhor Amaral, former Governor of Macao. Opinion that the Crown had been unnecessarily brought into Court, and that the trial should be discontinued | 75 |
| 114 | July 10, | Queen's Advocate | Claim of Mr. Andrews. Opinion in favour of decision of Portuguese Government | 76 |
| 115 | Aug. 31, | Queen's Advocate | Claim of Mr. Andrews. Opinion against Her Majesty's Government taking further steps in the matter | 77 |

PRUSSIA.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 116 | June 23, | Queen's Advocate | Opinion that the children of naturalized British subjects born abroad previous to the Act of Naturalization are not entitled to be considered British subjects by the law of England | 78 |
| 117 | Dec. 24, | Queen's Advocate | Opinion respecting question raised by Messrs. J. Cobb and Pearson, with regard to the serving of writs in Prussia | 79 |

RUSSIA.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 118 | Jan. 16, | Queen's Advocate | Opinion with regard to complaint of Russian Government against Her Majesty's Consul at Kertch, for having assisted Mr. Blair in escaping from justice | 79 |
| 119 | 21, | Queen's Advocate | Opinion with regard to conduct of Consul Barrow in the case of Mr. Blair | 80 |

1869

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 120 | Mar. 6, 1869 | Queen's Advocate | Opinion with regard to the interference of Her Majesty's Government in the case of Mr. Miller, an English engineer, accused of murder | 81 |
| 121 | 24, | Queen's Advocate | Opinion with regard to case of Messrs. Furness and Co. against Paving Committee of Odessa. Suggestions respecting the appointment of an Arbitrator and Umpire | 82 |
| 122 | May 25, | Queen's Advocate | Opinion as to the interference of Her Majesty's Government in favour of claim of Dr. Buckell, for compensation in consequence of his detention at Poli by Russian authorities delaying to grant him a passport | 83 |
| 123 | June 16, | Queen's Advocate | Case of Messrs. Furness and Co. Her Majesty's Government should request the good offices of Russian Government in favour of Messrs. Furness and Co. | 83 |
| 124 | Dec. 14, | Queen's Advocate | Case of Mr. G. A. Buckell. Not entitled to compensation on account of his detention at Poli by Russian authorities in consequence of passport regulations | 84 |

SALVADOR.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 125 | Sept. 17, | Queen's Advocate | Claim of Messrs. Kerford and Co. Injury suffered by a decree issued by Government of Salvador in 1865, by which the value of certain bonds belonging to claimants were reduced in value | 84 |

SAXONY.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 126 | Apr. 20, | Law Officers | Marriages of British subjects at Dresden. Mr. Burnley, Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Dresden, is a Minister within the meaning of Act 4 Geo. IV, cap. 91. No legal restrictions as to the hours within which marriages may be solemnized abroad exist under 4 Geo. IV, c. 91 | 85 |
| 127 | June 1, | Queen's Advocate | Mr. J. Warburton's case. No existing grounds for the intervention of Her Majesty's Government | 85 |

SPAIN.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 128 | Jan. 26, | Law Officers | Claim of Mr. Moxey on account of capture of the "Forward" by Spanish blockading squadron of St. Domingo. Opinion with regard to money paid by Mr. Moxey to the captain of the "Africa," and as to disposal of moneys paid to Mr. Leon by the captain of the "Africa," for the benefit of certain passengers of the "Forward" | 86 |
| 129 | Feb. 17, | Law Officers | Foreign Enlistment Act. Breach of, by use made of the port of Nassau by the Cuban insurgents. Suggests issue of Proclamation by Governor of the Bahamas, warning persons against infringement of Act | 87 |
| 130 | 18, | Law Officers | Opinion in favour of the claim of Spain to sovereignty over the cays off the island of Cuba | 87 |
| 131 | Apr. 2, | Law Officers | Case of the "Galvanic." Seizure and condemnation by Cuba authorities whilst, as stated, on a voyage between Nassau and San Domingo. Alleged conveyance of passengers to join insurgents in Cuba. Opinion that crew could not be tried criminally unless they were Spanish subjects. Right of British Consul to remonstrate against trial of crew | 88 |

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 132 | Apr. 17, 1869 | Queen's Advocate | Decree issued by Government of Cuba with regard to capture of vessels off the coast of that island, having on board men, arms, ammunition, &c., for the use of Cuban insurgents. The pain of death inflicted by this decree is a glaring violation of the law of nations. Her Majesty's Government should protest against enforcement of edict against British vessels captured on the high seas | 89 |
| 133 | 19, | Queen's Advocate | Case of the "Mary Lowell." An American vessel laden with arms and munitions of war, alleged to have been captured in British waters by a Spanish vessel of war. Statement in Court of her having been captured on the high seas, would enable the United States to claim restitution, inasmuch as the Proclamation issued by the Government of Spain is an implicit negation of the existence of a state of war, which would entitle Spanish cruizers to exercise belligerent rights on the high seas against neutral vessels | 89 |
| 134 | 24, | Law Officers | Case of the "Mary Lowell." Violation of British territory by Spain, by capture within British waters. Opinion with regard to claim made by the United States' Minister in London, that the British Government should exact reparation from Government of Spain, and obtain indemnification | 90 |
| 135 | 24, | Law Officers | Case of the "Mary Lowell." Opinion in favour of Her Majesty's Government at once demanding redress of the Government of Spain | 90 |
| 136 | 24, | Law Officers | Proceedings of Spanish armed vessels in Bahama waters, in capturing British vessels and landing armed men on British territory, &c., should be urgently remonstrated against by Her Majesty's Government | 91 |
| 137 | 27, | Law Officers | Case of the "Galvanic." Opinion that the above vessel was captured on the high seas, if she was captured near the spot marked on the Admiralty chart | 91 |
| 138 | 29, | Law Officers | Proceedings of Spanish cruizers in the West Indies. Opinion respecting proposed instructions to Naval Officers in those waters. Suggests that expression "neutral vessels" should be substituted by "vessels under the flag of other nations," as there are no neutrals where there are no belligerents. Proclamation issued by the Government of Cuba would justify the forcible interference of British cruizers, in case of British vessels captured on the high seas | 92 |
| 139 | May 6, | Law Officers | Case of the "Mary Lowell." Opinion in favour of the "Mary Lowell" having been captured in British waters | 92 |
| 140 | 20, | Law Officers | Case of the "Mary Lowell." Opinion that further papers relating to the proceedings of the Spanish authorities in the West Indies fully justify the earnest remonstrance of Her Majesty's Government. Cases of the "Commanditorio" and the "Elva" | 93 |
| 141 | 22, | Queen's Advocate | Claim of owners of the "Phillis and Mary," in consequence of alleged collision between that vessel and the Spanish vessel of war "Villa de Madrid." Further evidence required previous to making representations to Spanish Government | 93 |
| 142 | 22, | Law Officers | Case of the "Tornado." Refusal of Spanish Government to accept proposal of Her Majesty's Government that the question of the "Tornado" should be referred to a special tribunal. Her Majesty's Government should press acceptance | 94 |
| 143 | 25, | Law Officers | Approving instructions issued by Admiral Mundy to Naval Officers in the West Indies, for the protection of British vessels against Spanish cruizers | 95 |
| 144 | 31, | Attorney- and Solicitor-General | Approving the detention of the "Salvador" at Nassau for breach of Foreign Enlistment Act | 96 |

1869

| No. | Date. | | SUBJECT. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 145 | June 3, 1869 | Law Officers | Case of the "Salvador." Breach of Foreign Enlistment Act by enlistments at Nassau for service with Cuban insurgents. Approve the detention of the "Salvador," at the risk of failure to establish a legal case | 96 |
| 146 | 4, | Law Officers | Proceedings of Spanish cruizers in Bahama waters. Do not consider it expedient to withdraw instructions to British Naval Officers during the existence of the decree of Spanish authorities with regard to captures of neutral vessels | 96 |
| 147 | 8, | Queen's Advocate | Case of the "Phillis and Mary." Presumed collision with Spanish frigate "Villa de Madrid." Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid should be instructed to submit the question to a tribunal headed either by a Judge or Arbitrator | 97 |
| 148 | 16, | Law Officers | Opinion with regard to the attendance of an interpreter or Consular officer during the trial of a British subject in a Spanish Court of law | 98 |
| 149 | 19, | Law Officers | Case of the "Tornado." Claim of crew to compensation. Opinion that under the circumstances of the capture of the "Tornado," and the evidence in favour of the crew having a knowledge of her destination, Her Majesty's Government cannot support claim for compensation . | 98 |
| 150 | 22, | Law Officers | Proceedings of Spanish authorities in British waters in the West Indies. Opinion with regard to reply of the Spanish Government to remonstrance of British Government. Vague charges made against British officials | 101 |
| 151 | 23, | Law Officers | Case of the "Tornado." Approving drafts of letters to Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Madrid, to Mr. F. Campbell, and to Messrs. Isaac, Campbell, and Co. | 101 |
| 152 | 24, | Law Officers | Case of the "Salvador." Breach of Foreign Enlistment Act by embarkation on board at Nassau of Cuban insurgents. Her seizure on her return to Nassau. Action brought by owners against British authorities. Indemnification should be granted to the latter by Her Majesty's Government | 102 |
| 153 | 24, | Law Officers | Opinion respecting instructions to Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Madrid, on the subject of interpreters attending in Spanish Courts on the trial of British subjects | 102 |
| 154 | 28, | Law Officers | Case of the "Mary Lowell." Further evidence required as to her capture within British waters | 103 |
| 155 | 29, | Law Officers | Case of the "Mary Lowell." Necessity of obtaining further evidence as to the capture of the "Mary Lowell" before reporting on reply of Spanish Government to Her Majesty's Government. Full inquiry required in justice to the United States' representations | 104 |
| 156 | July 6, | Law Officers | Opinion in favour of compensation being demanded of Spanish Government, on account of treatment of two British subjects, Messrs. Fergusson and Kelly, by authorities in Cuba . | 104 |
| 157 | 8, | Law Officers | Case of the "Jeff. Davis." Her Majesty's Government cannot claim compensation for Mr. J. J. Thompson, of Nassau, on account of the capture of the above vessel by Spanish authorities in Cuba, she having embarked Spanish subjects on board, without the documents required by the Spanish law | 105 |
| 158 | 12, | Law Officers | Case of the "Salvador." Opinion respecting the proposed circular to naval officers, and the Colonial authorities, with regard to the exact state of the law under the Foreign Enlistment Act, on the subject of the detention and seizure of vessels laden with arms, &c. | 105 |

| No. | Date. | | SUBJECT. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 159 | July 15, 1869 | Queen's Advocate | Amount of assistance to be rendered by Her Majesty's Government to Mr. W. White, to obtain the restitution of his daughter, who is detained by her mother at Seville. Mr. White should apply to magisterial or judicial authorities at Seville | 106 |
| 160 | 15, | Law Officers | Case of the "Galvanic." Refer to Report No. 161 . | 106 |
| 161 | 15, | Law Officers | Case of the "Galvanic." Opinion with regard to the detention, by Spanish authorities, of G. G. Curbelo, a United States' citizen, who was on board the above vessel at the time of capture. Observations respecting the illegal capture of the above vessel, by her being beyond Spanish jurisdiction, and by the non-existence of belligerent rights, in conflict between Spanish insurgents and Spanish authorities in Cuba. Right of Spanish authorities to close ports against foreign vessels | 107 |
| 162 | Aug. 4, | Law Officers | Case of the American steamer "Peril." Complaint of Spanish Government at her being allowed to coal at Port Royal, Jamaica, notwithstanding the suspicion that she was employed in service of Cuban insurgents. Answer to be returned to Spanish remonstrance | 107 |
| 163 | 5, | Law Officers | Opinion respecting the Proclamation issued by Spanish authorities in Cuba, on the subject of the capture of foreign vessels. The right of chase and capture by Spanish vessels is confined to their own territorial limits. No right to treat crews as prisoners of war. Non-application of Treaty of 1835, regarding right of search, to VIth Article of Proclamation | 108 |
| 164 | 20, | Queen's Advocate | Opinion with regard to terms used in proclamation of Spanish authorities in Cuba, such as "hostile," "contraband," "enemies," which all point to a state of war | 109 |
| 165 | Sept. 18, | Law Officers | Opinion as to the power of Her Majesty's Government to detain a packet containing an implement of war, imported from Belgium on board the British vessel "Garnet," and supposed to be for the use of Cuban insurgents | 109 |
| 166 | Oct. 2, | Law Officers | Case of "La Have." Capture by Spanish ships of war on the high seas. No further steps required to be taken by Her Majesty's Government, the protest against such capture being sufficient to prevent it being quoted as a precedent | 110 |
| 167 | 4, | Law Officers | Representation of Spanish Government respecting reshipment of arms, &c., on board the "Alar," supposed to be for the use of the Cuban insurgents. Spanish Government should be informed that Her Majesty's Government cannot undertake to prevent the export of arms (as distinguished from armed vessels) whatever may be their suspected destination. | 110 |
| 168 | 4, | Law Officers | Opinion as to expediency of a similar Proclamation being issued by the Governor of the Bahamas as that issued in Jamaica, forbidding the export of arms and munitions of war | 111 |
| 169 | 4, | Law Officers | Case of the "Mary Lowell." Opinion that, as the act of formal submission of the above vessel took place on the high seas, the subsequent taking possession of the prize was not an act of violence, forbidden by the law of nations to to take place within the territory of a third Power, and therefore Her Majesty's Government would not be entitled to claim the restoration of the vessel. Opinion founded upon evidence and maps prepared by Commodore Phillimore | 111 |
| 170 | 9, | Law Officers | Case of "La Have." Opinion that no general rule can be laid down for the guidance of Her Majesty's Consul-General at the Havana, on the subject of illegal captures, and the towing of captured vessels back to the place at which they were seized | 112 |

1869

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 171 | Oct. 20, 1869 | Attorney and Solicitor-General | Case of the "Mary Lowell." Opinion with regard to further evidence sent to Colonial Office by the Governor of Bahama, by which doubts are thrown on accuracy of evidence and maps forwarded by Commodore Phillimore | 112 |
| 172 | 29, | Law Officers | Case of the "Mary Lowell." Suggests certain alterations in draft of proposed answer to the United States' Government | 113 |
| 173 | 30, | Queen's Advocate | Case of the "Criticado." Opinion with regard to Report of Don M. Certino, an eminent Spanish lawyer, in favour of Mr. Marcella's right to damages, on account of the seizure and detention of the above vessel, in 1860, by the Spanish authorities | 114 |
| 174 | 30, | Queen's Advocate | Claim of Mr. J. Terry, a resident at Cienfuegos in Cuba, to British protection. Opinion that Mr. Terry is not entitled to be considered a British subject, in consequence of his not having selected British nationality on the occasion of the cession of the Island of Curaçao to the Dutch, in which island he was born during British occupation | 115 |
| 175 | Nov. 17, | Law Officers | Bishop of Gibraltar. Opinion with regard to proposed circular for extending his spiritual superintendence | 115 |
| 176 | 17, | Queen's Advocate | Cases of the "President" and "Eliza." Opinion that owner of the "Eliza" has no just claim to demurrage on account of her capture in 1864, for alleged breach of blockade at San Domingo | 116 |
| 177 | Dec. 13, | Queen's Advocate | Case of the "Criticado." Opinion regarding second legal opinion sent by Mr. Marcella respecting his right to damages for detention of the above vessel | 117 |
| 178 | 21, | Law Officers | Case of the "Lilian." Opinion that the seizure and detention of the above vessel, sailing under the flag of the insurgents in Cuba, by the Bahama authorities, and also of the vessel which was supplying her with coal within British waters, was perfectly legal | 117 |
| 179 | 21, | Law Officers | Case of the "Tornado." Opinion with regard to communication to be made to Mr. F. Campbell on the subject of the gratuity of 1,500*l.* offered by the Spanish Government to the crew of the above vessel | 118 |

SWEDEN.

| | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 180 | June 19, | Law Officers | Alleged assault on Swedish Vice-Consul at St. Ives. Opinion that Her Majesty's Government should express their regret to the Government of Sweden, and also prosecute offender if pointed out by the Vice-Consul | 119 |

SWITZERLAND.

| | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 181 | Jan. 13, | Queen's Advocate | Opinion regarding the proposed extension of the Convention of 1864, respecting the sick and wounded, to naval warfare, particularly with regard to proposed Xth Additional Article | 119 |
| 182 | Mar. 3, | Queen's Advocate | Opinion in favour of approval of Additional Articles to Sick and Wounded Convention of 1864; the explanation given by the French Government regarding Article X being satisfactory | 120 |
| 183 | June 25, | Queen's Advocate | Estate of the late Mr. C. H. Townshend. Opinion that Federal Council should be informed that the arrangements made between the legatees and the Swiss Cantonal authorities, cannot be considered as a precedent for future cases | 121 |

TURKEY.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 184 | Feb. 1, 1869 | Queen's Advocate | Claims of the "Société Agricole d'Egypte" against the Viceroy. Opinion with reference to request of British shareholders to be furnished with instructions for their guidance, in the prosecution of their claims before Tribunal at Constantinople | 122 |
| 185 | 8, | Queen's Advocate | "Société Agricole d'Egypte." Opinion with regard to the support to be given by Her Majesty's Government to shareholders, in order to procure access to the books in the possession of the liquidators of the Company | 122 |
| 186 | Mar. 2, | Law Officers | Case of P. Schilizzi. Opinion with regard to the grant of British protection to minors | 123 |
| 187 | 18, | Queen's Advocate | Case of M. Beretta. Opinion as to assistance which should be granted by Her Majesty's Government in support of M. Beretta's claim on the Government of Turkey, on account of certain lands belonging to his wife and his father-in-law, an Ionian merchant. The case had commenced previously to the transfer of the Ionian Islands to Greece | 124 |
| 188 | 19, | Law Officers | Claims of Messrs. Carver and Gill, arising out of a lawsuit against Ernani Bey, in the Mixed Commission Courts in Egypt. Opinion in favour of Her Majesty's Consul-General in Egypt endeavouring to obtain a declaration that the proceedings were null and void, on the ground of the non-observance of Article 24 of the Capitulations, by the absence of the British Consul from the trial | 124 |
| 189 | Apr. 29, | Law Officers | New law of naturalization in Turkey. Opinion as to its violation of existing Treaty rights between Turkey and foreign Powers. Suggests that Turkey should be urged to examine new law, with reference to existing Treaty rights | 126 |
| 190 | 30, | Law Officers | New law of naturalization in Turkey. Have no observations to make on Circular addressed to the vilayets of the Turkish Empire on the subject | 127 |
| 191 | June 10, | Law Officers | Opinion with regard to trial at Aleppo, arising out of the conflicting laws of marriage applicable to Jews who are British subjects. Consul at Aleppo has no jurisdiction to entertain a purely matrimonial suit between British Indian Jews living under British protection. Polygamic contracts not recognized in the English Court of Divorce, nor in the Courts of Common Law, even when sanctioned by the lex loci. Opinion in favour of case being referred to Supreme Consular Court | 127 |
| 192 | July 24, | Queen's Advocate | Opinion with regard to application of Mr. J. S. Galatti, a naturalized British subject, for British protection in favour of his firm at Alexandria, consisting of his two nephews, one of whom is stated to be a naturalized British subject. Considers that Mr. Galatti's certificate of naturalization would entitle his firm to British protection so long as he is resident within British dominions, and provided that the house was exclusively his own and his nephews were his agents only; such protection, however, would not extend to his nephews, except for the interests which they represented in the firm | 128 |
| 193 | Aug. 18, | Queen's Advocate | Further opinion regarding application of Mr. J. S. Galatti for protection for his firm at Alexandria. Such protection could only be granted in so far as British interests are concerned | 128 |
| 194 | 26, | Queen's Advocate | Claim of Mr. White on certain parties at Constantinople for non-fulfilment of a contract negotiated by his son. Her Majesty's Government not called upon to interfere | 129 |

1869

UNITED STATES.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 195 | Jan. 11, 1869 | Queen's Advocate | Claim of Madame Chantems, a British subject married to a Swiss, who is a naturalized Russian subject, to assistance of Her Majesty's Government in a suit which she is about to commence against General Clay, late American Minister at St. Petersburgh. Madame Chantems being a married woman, and the cause of action having arisen during coverture, she must sue General Clay in her husband's name, and she must address herself to Russian protection at Washington | 129 |
| 196 | Jan. 14, | Law Officers | Departure from New Orleans of two iron-clad vessels purchased by Peruvian Government from the Government of the United States. Have no observation to make on Mr. Thornton's despatch reporting fact | 130 |
| 197 | Apr. 26, | Law Officers | Departure of iron-clads from New Orleans involve no breach of neutrality on the part of the United States' Government. | 130 |
| 198 | June 14, | Law Officers | Opinion that the detention of the British steamer "Colombia," by legal process at New York, does not call for the interference of Her Majesty's Government | 130 |
| 199 | 30, | Law Officers | Opinion with regard to the lecture of Professor Wolsey on disputed questions between Great Britain and the United States | 131 |
| 200 | July 14, | Law Officers | Observations on documents sent home by Mr. Thornton regarding the policy pursued by the United States during the Civil War in Peru in 1857 | 131 |
| 201 | Oct. 4, | Law Officers | Opinion with regard to the Articles of Convention proposed by the United States, on the subject of Consuls | 132 |

VENEZUELA.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 202 | Feb. 23, | Queen's Advocate | Mixed Commission of Claims. Opinion with regard to claims of Messrs. Blundel and Hartman, and the Venezuelan Decree of June 16, 1865 | 133 |
| 203 | May 21, | Queen's Advocate | Claim of Mr. Every, the owner of the "Elizabeth." Opinion in favour of Mr. Every's claim to compensation and demurrage on account of the illegal detention of the above ship by the Venezuelan Customs authorities | 134 |
| 204 | Oct. 30, | Queen's Advocate | Opinion with regard to law passed by the Venezuelan Legislature, affecting foreigners. Its contravention of Treaty stipulations | 135 |
| 205 | Nov. 12, | Queen's Advocate | Further Report regarding Venezuelan law on the subject of foreigners. Its effect upon the claims of foreigners | 136 |
| 206 | Dec. 20, | Queen's Advocate | Copy of Protest addressed to the Venezuelan Minister for Foreign Affairs, by the Diplomatic Body, against Article 7 of the Law passed by the Legislature on May 15, which, in their opinion, infringed the immunities enjoyed by them in the countries to which they are accredited. Protest should be signed by Her Majesty's Representative | 136 |

WURTEMBERG.

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 207 | June 29, | Queen's Advocate | Despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Stuttgardt, inquiring whether he would be justified in marrying at the Legation two Wurtemberg subjects, one a naturalized British subject. Opinion that marriage should not be allowed at the Legation, unless Her Majesty's Minister is perfectly satisfied that all the preliminaries required by the Wurtemberg law have been satisfied | 137 |

| No. | Date. | | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 208 | Oct. 16, 1869 | Law Officers | Opinion with regard to certain marriages performed at Stuttgardt and Heidelberg, with the concurrence of Her Majesty's Minister. Legality of marriage when performed according to the law of the country. Certificate of marriage according to the law of the country, and, subsequently, according to rites of the Church of England, not required to be registered at the Legation | 137 |

1869

Printed for the use of the Foreign Office. December 1873.

CONFIDENTIAL.

LAW OFFICERS' REPORTS: 1869.

Abyssinia.

No. 1.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received June 10.)

My Lord, Temple, June 9, 1869.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 28th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the accompanying correspondence, arising out of a representation made by the French Chargé d'Affaires at this Court, respecting a claim to redress and compensation on the part of a French muleteer named Ravolet, employed in the Abyssinian Expedition, who was flogged by order of a British officer; and Mr. Otway was pleased to request that we would take these papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our advice as to the course to be pursued in this matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That on the merits of this case we should be of opinion that credit is to be given to Captain Bartholomew, whose letter, transmitted through the Indian Government, appears satisfactorily to explain the circumstances and occasion of the punishment inflicted on the French subject, and entirely to justify him in inflicting it. But as Ravolet himself appealed to the English Consular Court, and there brought an action, it seems to us that it is hardly necessary to go into the original merits of the case, which Ravolet made the subject of a law suit He chose his mode of redress, and is not entitled to apply to the English Government, unless the action of the English Court was in some way unjustly impeded by Captain Bartholomew, or by the English authorities acting in concert with him and in his interest. Of this there seems no evidence. We do not very clearly discover whether the Judge had or had not discretion under the circumstances to insist, or not to insist, on security for costs. If he had not, but was bound to require security, of course the case fails. But if he had, he appears to have exercised it moderately and reasonably; and Ravolet failed according to the regular course and practice of the Court. Neither, therefore, upon the original merits, if it be necessary to consider them, nor upon the conduct of the Judge in the suit, does it appear to us that any valid claim for compensation on his part can be sustained against Her Majesty's Government.

We have, &c.
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
J. D. COLERIDGE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

1869

Africa.

No. 2.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received June 6.)

My Lord, Temple, January 5, 1869.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Murray's letter of the 17th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a correspondence relative to the intention of the late Government to bring a Bill into Parliament for repealing the so-called "Aberdeen Act," which was passed in the year 1845, with a view of putting an end to the African Slave Trade in Brazil, and to inquire whether, if Her Majesty's present Advisers should determine upon introducing into Parliament a measure having the same object, we concur with the late Law Officers of the Crown in considering the annexed draft of a Bill to be proper and effectual for that purpose.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have perused and considered the papers in this case, and have the honour to report—

That in the event of Her Majesty's Government coming to the determination that the "Aberdeen Act" should be repealed, as to the policy of which determination we do not understand our opinion is asked, the draft Bill sent to us will be proper and effectual for repealing it.

We are, &c.
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
J. D. COLERIDGE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 3.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received February 17.)

My Lord, Temple, February 17, 1869.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 3rd instant, stating that, with reference to the Law Officers' Report of the 10th of December last, respecting Mr. Machado's claim on Her Majesty's Government, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the draft of a letter which was addressed to Messrs. Westhead and Co. on the 23rd of December, together with the reply which had been received from them on the subject, from which I should perceive that Messrs. Westhead wish to be informed—

1st. Whether they are to infer that, in addition to the claim being arranged through the United States' Government the amount that may be awarded is also to be paid through the same channel, or if, on substantiating their claim, they can receive the amount direct from Her Majesty's Government; and,

2ndly. Whether, owing to their ignorance as to where Machado is now to be found, and their consequent inability to procure any document from him, setting forth that his debts to Messrs. Westhead are not discharged, it will be sufficient for them to make an affidavit to that effect; and Mr. Otway was pleased to request that I would take these papers into my consideration, and favour your Lordship with my opinion as to the answer which should be returned to Messrs. Westhead's letter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That Messrs. Westhead and Co. should be informed that any amount that may be awarded them will have to be paid through the United States' Government, and that Her Majesty's Government cannot accept an affidavit from Messrs. Westhead and Co. in lieu of the evidence specified in your Lordship's communication.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 4.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received March 29.)

My Lord, Temple, March 27, 1869.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 3rd instant, stating that, with reference to my Report of the 17th ultimo upon the subject of the claim of Messrs. Westhead to be in a position to treat with Her Majesty's Government for the settlement of the claims of Mr. Machado, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me, together with the former papers relating to this case, a further letter from Messrs. Westhead, inquiring whether Her Majesty's Government will be prepared to treat with them as principals, through the medium of the United States' Government, in the event of their being able to discover Mr. Machado, and to procure from him the required document in proof of their claim, and Mr. Otway was pleased to request that I would favour Lordship with my opinion as to the answer which should be returned to Messrs. Westhead's letter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That it would not be advisable for your Lordship to consent to the proposal of Messrs. Westhead and Co., to treat with them as principals in the event supposed by them.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 5.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received April 14.)

My Lord, Temple, April 14, 1869.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Murray's letter of the 13th April instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from Mr. Hook, dated the 12th instant, requesting certain information regarding payments made to the person holding a power of attorney from Mr. Watson Vredenburg, Her Majesty's Consul and Commissary Judge at Loanda.

Mr. Murray was pleased to transmit to us the draft reply, which he stated your Lordship proposed he should address to Mr. Hook, and requested that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion whether the reply is right and proper.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we are of opinion that the proposed reply of your Lordship to Mr. Hook is right and proper.

We have, &c.
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
J. D. COLERIDGE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 6.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received April 24.)

My Lord, Temple, April 24, 1869.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Murray's letter of the 21st April instant, stating that, with reference to our report of the 14th instant, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter with the previous correspondence therein referred to from Mr. Hook, a claimant on Mr. Vredenburg, Her Majesty's Consul at Loanda, requesting copies of orders for payment of Vredenburg's salary, and to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion whether the accompanying draft answer to Mr. Hook is right and proper.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the proposed reply of your Lordship to Mr. Hook's letter is, in our opinion, right and proper.

We have, &c.
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
J. D. COLERIDGE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

1869

No. 7.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received July 31.)

Temple, July 30, 1869.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Spring Rice's letter of the 19th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me an accompanying despatch and its inclosure from Mr. Thornton, Her Majesty's Minister at Washington, by which it would be seen that the United States' Government are desirous of putting an end to that part of the Treaty of April 7th, 1862, between Great Britain and the United States for the suppression of the Slave Trade, which requires each Government to keep up Mixed Commission Courts for the adjudication of Slave Trade cases.

That he was to state that Her Majesty's Government are willing, if possible, to accede to the wishes of the United States' Government in this matter, and that your Lordship has therefore directed him to submit to me an accompanying draft of a Convention which had been prepared for giving effect to the United States' proposal, and Mr. Rice was pleased to request that I would take the same into consideration, and favour your Lordship with my opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken this matter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That I have no observation to offer to your Lordship on the Preamble, or on Article I of the Draft Convention.

With regard to Article II, it may deserve your Lordship's consideration, whether the provision in regard to slaves found on board a captured vessel, that they are not to be sent and handed over in any case with the captured vessel, may not prove inconvenient, as in many cases they may be necessary witnesses. I should venture to suggest that the words "slaves excepted" be omitted in the paragraph beginning "All the witnesses and the proofs necessary," and that the following paragraph should run thus: "All negroes or others, necessary witnesses excepted, who may be on board either a British or American vessel for the purpose of being consigned to slavery, shall be handed over to the nearest British authorities."

I have borrowed the phrase "All negroes, &c.," from the 13th section of the Act of Parliament passed to enforce the Treaty. I should, however, observe that this provision as it stands may be open to objection on the part of the United States, as it differs materially in principle from the corresponding provision in Article X of the existing Treaty, in regard to negroes in all cases being handed over to British authorities. With regard to the other Articles, I have no observation to offer to your Lordship.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 8.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received November 1.)

Temple, October 30, 1869.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 27th instant, stating that your Lordship, having instructed Her Majesty's Minister at Washington to submit to the Government of the United States the draft of an additional Convention, amended as suggested in my report of the 30th July last, for terminating the action of the Mixed Courts of Justice established under the Treaty of April 7, 1862, for the suppression of the Slave Trade, has received from him in reply a despatch in which he transmits copy of a note from the Secretary of State of the United States, proposing certain additions to Articles I and II of that draft, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me Mr. Thornton's despatch with its inclosures, and to request that I would take the additions referred to into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the propriety of admitting them.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands, I have the honour to report that, the proposed additions to Articles I and II of the draft Convention will require your Lordship's careful consideration, not so much with reference to the actual provisions of them, which are unobjectionable in themselves, as with regard to the presumption to which they give rise, that the United States' Government does not understand Articles I and III of the draft Convention in the same sense in which they are regarded by your Lordship, and that it considers the draft Convention will abrogate provisions of the existing Convention, which your Lordship anticipates would still remain in force. I allude to other provisions besides those referred to in the proposed additions, which your Lordship would probably desire to maintain as applicable to the Courts of either of the High Contracting Parties under any new Convention.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 9.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received December 20.)

Temple, December 18, 1869.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 27th ultimo, stating that, in my Report of the 30th October on a draft of Convention with the United States of America, for terminating the action of the Mixed Courts of Justice established under the Treaty of April 7, 1862, for the suppression of the Slave Trade. I stated that certain additions to the draft, which had been proposed by the American Government, required careful consideration, because they show that that Government does not regard Articles I and II of the draft in the same sense in which they are regarded by your Lordship, and that it considers the draft will abrogate provisions of which your Lordship does not contemplate the abolition, and which it may be desirable to maintain.

On this subject Mr. Otway was directed to state to me that it was contemplated by your Lordship; that the provisions of the Treaty of April 7, 1862, and of the additional Article thereto, signed on the 17th of February, 1863, should, after the suppression of the Mixed Courts, apply generally, mutatis mutandis, to the proceedings to be thenceforward instituted before the ordinary Courts of the two countries. That your Lordship agrees with me that the additions proposed by the American Government are unobjectionable in themselves; but that if it be necessary to make distinct provision with regard to the points embraced in those additions, it would seem to be equally necessary to make provision with regard to other stipulations of the Treaty, which it is desirable to retain, such as those of the IXth and Xth Articles, and that your Lordship therefore requests my opinion whether this object would be attained, (1) by adding to paragraph No. 1, suggested by the United States' Government, the following words:—

"Provided also that the stipulations of Articles IX and X of the said Treaty shall also apply, mutatis mutandis, to the awards made by the Courts of either of the High Contracting Parties;" (2) by making the 2nd paragraph of Article II of the draft additional Convention to begin thus: "All the witnesses, declarations, certificates, and proofs required by the Treaty of April 7, 1862, and the instructions annexed thereto, as necessary to establish, &c."

Mr. Otway was also pleased to state that if I could suggest any general words to be added to Article III of the draft Convention which might effect the desired object in a shorter compass without any of the proposed additions, your Lordship would be glad if I would do so. An amended draft of Article III was inclosed for my consideration. That although the additional Article of the 17th of February, 1863,* is declared to have the same force, as if it had been inserted in the Treaty, it might perhaps be well to make distinct mention of it in Article I of the draft additional Convention.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That it appears to me that it would simplify the question raised by the amendments of the United States' Government, if the words, "and to the sending in of vessels before such Courts for adjudication," which occur in Article I of the Draft Convention, were omitted. Article I would then only cancel or determine such parts of the Treaty of April 7, 1862, which is not intended should apply, mutatis mutandis, to the Courts of the High Contracting Parties. I should have also ventured to suggest, if the question had been res integra, that the words, "shall cease and determine as regards the said Mixed Courts," would be less liable to misinterpretation than the words "shall be cancelled."

The latter expression, coupled with the general terms of Article I of the Draft Convention, seem to have led the United States to misapprehend the extent to which your Lordship intends the engagements of the Treaty of the 7th April, 1862, to be still binding on the Contracting Parties, and may hereafter give rise to disputes. It will be

---

* Hertslet, vol. xi, p. 903.

1869

for your Lordship to consider whether the Article should now be amended. The amendment would be in harmony with the spirit of the first proposed amendment of the United States' Government.

The jurisdiction of the Mixed Courts having been abolished, it appears to me, that it will be necessary to provide in terms that the jurisdiction heretofore exercised by them, according to the provisions of the Treaty of 7th April, 1862, shall be exercised by the Courts of the High Contracting Parties. No such provision is made in the Draft Convention, as I understand it. I speak subject to your Lordship's correction, if I am in error. Article II provides for the detention and sending in of captured vessels; but I do not find any stipulation for their being brought to adjudication.

I should suggest that an Article should be introduced to the following purport, with a view to substitute the jurisdiction and procedure of the Courts of the High Contracting Parties, in place of the abolished jurisdiction and procedure of the Mixed Courts:—

"The jurisdiction heretofore exercised by the said Mixed Courts, in pursuance of the provisions of the said Treaty shall, after the ratification of the present Convention, be exercised by the Courts of the High Contracting Parties, according to their respective modes of procedure in matters of maritime prize, and all the provisions of the said Treaty with regard to the sending or bringing in of captured vessels for adjudication before the said Mixed Courts, and with regard to the adjudication of such vessels by the said Courts, and the proceedings consequent on such adjudication, shall apply, mutatis mutandis, to the Courts of the High Contracting Parties. It is, however, provided, that there may be an appeal from the decision of any Court of the High Contracting Parties, in the same manner as by the law of the country where the Court sits, is allowed in other cases of maritime prize." This Article would, I think, have the effect of keeping alive Articles VI, VII, VIII, IX, and X, of the Treaty, which would meet the views of the United States' Government on the one hand, as I gather from their first proposed amendment, and of your Lordship on the other, as I infer from Mr. Otway's letter. Article VII, although it is not referred to by Mr. Otway, or the United States' Government, ought clearly to be kept alive with the other Articles.

Article II of the Draft Convention, as it now stands, would become Article III, if the new Article as above proposed should be approved by your Lordship. I think it right to call your Lordship's attention to the last provision of this Article, as it stands, which rather conflicts with Article X of the Treaty of 7th April, 1862. It may, perhaps, be necessary to modify the Article, so as to secure that the negroes, who may be sent in as necessary witnesses, should have their liberty guaranteed, as provided by Article X of the Treaty.

With regard to the second amendment proposed by the United States' Government, I consider that Article II, in the form above proposed, if the word "cancelled" in Article I should be replaced, as suggested, by words not so peremptory, will have the effect of keeping alive Articles V and VII of Annex B, according to the desire of the United States' Government, as well as Articles II and VI, which your Lordship would probably desire to keep alive. As Article I of the Draft Convention stands at present, its terms are so large, that I think the whole of Annex B would be cancelled, at least it would be open to great doubts what Articles of Annex B, if any, continued in force.

I think the words in Article II, as proposed by me, namely, "with regard to the adjudication of such vessels by the said Mixed Courts," would include the Article of the Annex B touching the expenses of bringing a vessel to adjudication. The subsequent words of that Article II, "the proceedings consequent on such adjudication," would, I think, clearly keep alive Articles V, VI, and VII of Annex B.

I think it would be safer that the High Contracting Parties should annex to the Convention the "requisite instructions for the ships of the navies of both nations," which should form an integral part of the Convention. The Article might be in the following form:—

"It is mutually agreed that the instructions for the ships of the navies of both nations designed to prevent the African Slave Trade, which are annexed to this Convention, shall form an integral part thereof, and shall have the same force and effect as if they had been annexed to the Treaty of 9th April, 1862, in lieu of the instructions forming Annex A of that Treaty."

As it is proposed that the negroes shall be at once set free, with the exception of necessary witnesses, the instructions will require considerable modification.

I do not think it would be advisable to adopt the amendment of the second paragraph of Article II of the Draft Convention, as suggested in Mr. Otway's letter. It may be open to discussion and some doubt what witnesses and proofs are required by the Treaty of 7th April, 1862.

With regard to the additional Article of 17th February, 1863, it does not appear to me to be affected in any way by the Draft Convention, as Article I of the Treaty of 7th April, 1862, is not touched by it. I should only be disposed to allude to it in an addition, which I think will be necessary as regards the last Article of the Draft Convention, to the following effect:—"The present additional Convention shall have the same duration as the Treaty of 7th April, 1862, and the additional Article of 17th February, 1863. It shall be ratified, and the ratifications shall be exchanged," &c.

The readjustment of the provisions of the Treaty of 7th April, 1862, and the Annexes A and B, which the United States and your Lordship do not intend to be cancelled on the ratification of the present Convention, is a matter of some difficulty, and I may have overlooked some contradictions between the provisions of the Draft Convention, as it stands, and my suggestions, the consideration of which I submit to your Lordship's better judgment.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 10.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received December 20.)

Temple, December 18, 1869.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 27th ultimo, stating that he was directed to acquaint me that it is the intention of Her Majesty's Government and of the Government of Portugal to put an end to those stipulations of the Treaty with Portugal of the 3rd July, 1862, for the suppression of the Slave Trade, which require the two Governments to keep up Mixed Commissions for the adjudication of Slave Trade captures. The draft of a Convention for that purpose was also inclosed, and Mr. Otway was pleased to request that I would take it into my consideration in connection with the draft of Convention with the United States for a similar purpose, which was transmitted to me in Mr. Otway's letter of the 27th ultimo.

Mr. Otway was also pleased to state, that if it be considered that the suggested additions to the Draft-Convention with the United States should be adopted, it would seem proper that corresponding changes should be made in the Draft-Convention with Portugal. That, as Portugal has Colonies on the coast of Africa, the method proposed in Article II of the draft for disposing of captured slaves, differs from the corresponding provision in the Draft-Convention with the United States, which have no such possessions.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I would suggest that, instead of the words "shall be cancelled," there should be substituted in Article I of the proposed Convention the words, "shall cease and determine as far as regards the said Mixed Commissions;" and that the words, "and to the sending in of captured vessels before such Commission for adjudication" should be omitted.

I think it will be necessary, as in the Convention with the United States, to provide that the jurisdiction heretofore exercised by the said Mixed Commissions shall be exercised by the Courts of the High Contracting Parties. As the draft now stands there would be no engagement between the Contracting Parties to take any steps to adjudicate upon the captures, or to punish parties who may be engaged in the African Slave Trade.

I think that an Article very similar to the Article I have suggested, as Article II of the Convention with the United States, will be necessary in this Convention. It will also deserve special consideration from your Lordship as to which of the provisions of the three Annexes to the Treaty it will be desirable to keep alive. With regard to Annex A, some slight modification of Articles I, II, III, will be required, and Article IV will require considerable modification. With regard to Annex B, your Lordship will probably desire to keep alive Articles II, V, VI, and VII.

With regard to Annex C, it is possible that your Lordship will not desire to keep any of its provisions alive, but upon this point I can form no opinion further than from what appears to me to be its antiquated character, pointing to a state of things which has probably passed away.

I think it will be necessary to introduce into the proposed Convention other provisions analogous to those which I have suggested in the case of the United States. I forbear to repeat them until your Lordship shall have considered my Report on the Draft-Convention with the United States. There is no provision, I may observe, in the existing Treaty with Portugal or the additional Article for terminating the Treaty at the will of either of the Contracting Parties. I should venture to suggest, if your Lordship should approve the suggestions which I have made in my Report on the Convention with the United States, that a draft should be prepared, and I should be allowed to reconsider it en bloc. The readjustment of the arrangements between the Contracting Parties in this case, as in the case of the United States, I consider to be a matter of considerable intricacy, if doubts and disputes hereafter are to be prevented.

1869

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

Argentine Confederation.

No. 11.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received January 16.)

Temple, January 16, 1869.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 9th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Buenos Ayres (No. 58), inclosing a packet of dispatches addressed by President Lopez to the Paraguayan Chargé d'Affaires at this and the French Court, and stating the circumstances under which they have come into his hands; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take Mr. Stuart's despatch into my consideration, and that I would favour your Lordship, at my early convenience, with my opinion as to the propriety of forwarding the dispatches in question to their destination.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken Mr. Stuart's despatch into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That your Lordship may with propriety direct the despatches addressed to the Paraguayan Minister at London and Paris to be forwarded to their destination. The case appears to me to come within the principal laid down by Lord Stowell in the case of the "Caroline," 6 Ch. Robinson, p. 461. That case, it is true, was the converse case of despatches conveyed in a neutral ship to a belligerent State from its Ambassador resident in a neutral State, but the reasoning of Lord Stowell is equally applicable to despatches sent by a belligerent Government to its Ambassador resident in a neutral State. It appears to me that in the latter, equally as in the former case, the despatches may be presumed to be of an innocent character, and to be necessary for the purposes of the belligerent State maintaining its relations of amity with the neutral State.

On the other hand, the practice of nations has allowed to neutral States the privilege of receiving Ministers from belligerent States, and the interests of neutral States may require that the official channels of immediate negotiation should not be interrupted. I consider that the existence of a blockade does not vary the law as regards the conveyance of despatches of this highly privileged character.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 12.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received April 5.)

Temple, April 3, 1869.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 29th ultimo, stating that, with reference to my Report of the 25th January, 1868, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me a dispatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Buenos Ayres, from which I should see that the Argentine Government have offered to submit the case of the vessel "Prince Albert" to arbitration; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I should take this despatch into my consideration, and report to your Lordship my opinion as to the course which should be adopted in the present position of the case.

The previous correspondence in the matter was therewith returned to me for my convenience.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken this despatch into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That, as it appears from the despatch of the Argentine Minister for Foreign Affairs, that his Government persists in maintaining that the loss of the "Prince Albert" and her cargo is attributable to fortuitous circumstances, for which his Government is in no respect responsible, but that it is willing, nevertheless, to refer the claim "to the decision of arbiters to be named conjointly," it is in my opinion advisable for your Lordship to entertain the proposal, but on very different conditions from those suggested by his Excellency in his conversation with Her Majesty's Minister at Buenos Ayres has reported to your Lordship. Those conditions are clearly inadmissible, on the grounds suggested by Her Majesty's Minister, and, as the most important question for the arbiters to decide will be whether the Argentine Government can be held responsible as a Government for the damages inflicted by its troops when in a state of mutiny, I venture to suggest that Her Majesty's Minister should be instructed to propose to the Argentine Government that each Government should name a foreign Minister resident at Buenos Ayres as its Arbitrator, with power for the two Arbitrators to name a third foreign Minister as umpire, in case they should disagree.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 13.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received August 20.)

Temple, August 19, 1869.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified to us in Mr. Charles Spring Rice's letter of the 2nd instant, stating that, with reference to the Law Officers, Report of the 8th of September last, on the subject of the claim of Mr. Stewart on the Argentine Government, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Buenos Ayres (No. 62, June 4) inclosing a copy of a letter from Mr. Stewart with various certified copies of documents relating to the legal proceedings in this case; and he was to request that we would take the same into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion thereupon, and as to any further steps which Her Majesty's Government should take in the matter.

The previous papers were also sent therewith for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That it would appear from the letter of Mr. Stewart, and the various documents which accompany it, that there are three grounds on which Mr. Stewart rests his claims for compensation from the Argentine State:—

1. Loss by seizure and detention of a cargo of arms on it way to Paraguay.

2. Suffering by imprisonment at the suit of the masters of certain vessels, in the public prison for criminals.

3. Loss by increased Customs duty levied on the exportation of his yerba.

(1.) With regard to the first claim it appears that the arms, when seized, were waterborne on the River Parana on their voyage to Corrientes, a frontier port, for exportation to Paraguay. War had broken out between the Argentine State and Paraguay after they had been dispatched from Buenos Ayres, and they were suspected to be Paraguayan property. It was a seizure justifiable in virtue of belligerent right, if enemy's property, and justifiable under the VIth Section of the Treaty of July 10, 1853, if neutral property (8 Hertslet, p. 192), which closes the navigation of contraband of war, if war should break out among the Riverain States. It was, however, equitable to release the cargo, as it had been dispatched from Buenos Ayres before war was declared, there being in such case no mens rea, the property being shown to be neutral property, but it would not be a case for compensation for the detention.

(2.) With regard to the imprisonment of Mr. Stewart in the public prison for criminals, instead of the prison for debtors, his imprisonment was at the suit not of the Argentine Government, but of certain masters of merchant ships, who had brought actions at law against him for freight. As soon as the error was made known to the Executive Government, through Her Majesty's Consul, an order was at once issued for his removal to the proper prison. Under these circumstances we do not consider that Mr. Stewart would have a claim for damages against the Argentine Government. If he has a claim at all it would be against his creditors, or the public officers, who [illegible] in the discharge of the duty of committing him to prison.

[614] D

1869

With regard to the yerba, it appears that, by the revenue laws of the Argentine State, duties on merchandize are to be calculated upon the values in the market at the time when the goods are exported.

The yerba was seized under belligerent right, as enemy's property, being a peculiar article of export from Paraguay, the monopoly of which was in the State of Paraguay, the enemy.

The five cargoes of yerba imported by Mr. Stewart were, in fact, suspected to be owned by President Lopez, and the Court of First Instance condemned them as enemy's property; the Court of appeal however, thought there was sufficient evidence to restore them. We think that, from the peculiar character of the yerba, and the great value of the cargoes, it was a fair question for the Argentine State to raise, and there was probable cause for seizure and detention. If so, Mr. Stewart cannot maintain that detention was unwarrantable, or claim damages on that account. Besides, the decision of the Prize Court would be conclusive on the question of damages for detention. With regard to the higher duty leviable on the Yerba, it does not appear that Mr. Stewart will be in a worse pecuniary position if he pays the present higher duty on the exportation of the yerba, since he will be amply remunerated by the increased value of the yerba in the market. We see no grounds for differing from the previous Report of the Law Officers on this part of Mr. Stewart's case.

We have, &c.
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
J. D. COLERIDGE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 14.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received September 24.)

Temple, September 24, 1869.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the [illegible] instant, stating that, with reference to my Report of the 3rd of April last, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me a further despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Buenos Ayres, respecting his more recent communications with the Argentine Government, relative to the case of the "Prince Albert," and inclosing a statement of the case prepared for the proposed Arbitrator, Mr. Reverdy Johnson.

That he also inclosed letters from the parties interested expressing their willingness to accept Mr. Reverdy Johnson as Arbitrator, and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take these papers into consideration, and inform your Lordship, at my earliest convenience, whether I consider the statement drawn up by Mr. Stuart proper to be laid before the Arbitrator.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That the statement drawn up by Mr. Stuart is, in my opinion, a proper statement to be laid before the Arbitrator. I presume that copies of the transactions sent in Mr. Stuart's No. 2, Commercial, of December 3, 1867, will accompany the documents appended to the case, and if translations have not been already made to the Master's protest and the other documents annexed to it, I venture to suggest that such translations may be properly supplied for the convenience of the Arbitrator.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

Brazil.

No. 15.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received May 24.)

Temple, May 22, 1869.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Murray's letter of the 14th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to inclose the accompanying correspondence respecting a claim advanced by Messrs. Haycroft and Pethick, for the payment of the proceeds of the sale by the Italian Vice-Consul at Paranagua, of their portion of the cargo of the Italian vessel "Giuseppina," which funds are alleged to have been used for purposes unconnected with their interests; and also with reference to their proposal that the Italian Government should be held responsible for the payment of the balance stated to be due to them. And Mr. Murray was pleased to request that I would favour your Lordship with my opinion upon the course to be pursued in this case.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the Italian Government may properly be held responsible for the repayment of the money resulting from the sale of the portion of the cargo belonging to Messrs. Haycroft and Pethick, which has been used by the Italian Vice-Consul at Paranagua, in his official capacity for Italian purposes, unconnected with the interests of Messrs. Haycroft and Pethick.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

Central America.

No. 16.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received January 28.)

Temple, January 27, 1869.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 23rd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the accompanying copies of two despatches from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires in Guatemala, inclosing copies of a correspondence, which has passed between him and his Prussian colleague, with reference to a Decree lately promulgated by the President of Honduras, limiting the liability of the Government with reference to the claims of foreigners in case of damage sustained by them in consequence of revolutions within the territory of the Republic, and to request that I would take these papers into consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion upon the answer which should be returned to Mr. Corbett. The correspondence which took place in 1865 with respect to a similar Decree, which the new Granadian Government attempted to enforce, but which, as Mr. Bernhard states, that Republic was unable to put in force, was also inclosed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That it does not appear from either of the despatches of Mr. Corbett that he has received any official notification of the Decree of the President of Honduras, but if it may be taken to be publici juris, so that the Representatives of foreign Governments at Guatemala must be presumed to have knowledge of it, it would, I think, be proper for your Lordship to direct Mr. Corbett to adopt a course very similar to that which was adopted by Mr. O'Leary on the occasion of the Law passed by the National Congress of New Granada, namely, to transmit to the Honduras Minister of Foreign Affairs a declaration to the effect that, notwithstanding the Decree of the President, Her Majesty's Government would feel themselves entitled to demand redress in all cases in which the law of nations would justify their doing so.

1869

I venture to suggest that Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires might endeavour to concert an identical note with the North German and French Chargés d'Affaires, so that each Chargé d'Affaires might hand in a separate note of identical import in preference to a joint protest.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 17.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon—(Received February 24.)

Temple, February 24, 1869,

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Murray's letter of the 5th instant, stating that with reference to the Report of the Law Officers of the 23rd of October last, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires in Central America (No. 26), from which it appears that on the receipt by him of Lord Stanley's despatch No. 5 of July 31, 1868, draft of which was therewith inclosed, he considered himself as justified in solemnizing the marriage for which he had previously requested instructions in his despatch No. 18, which formed the subject of the reference to the Law Officers.

That we should perceive that Mr. Corbett was informed in the despatch on which he thus acted, that his district for the purpose of celebrating marriages was coincident with his Consular district as defined by his various commissions, copies of which were therewith inclosed for our information. The doubtful point raised by Mr. Corbett in his previous despatch (No. 12) seemed thus to be set aside.

That a short time, however, after Mr. Corbett had solemnized the marriage in question, he received Lord Stanley's despatch No. 6, draft of which was also inclosed, in which he was informed, in the terms of the opinion of the Law Officers of the 23rd of October, that it would not be competent for him to solemnize the marriage on the conditions proposed.

Mr. Murray was further to inclose copy of the marriage warrant supplied to Her Majesty's Consuls abroad, as alluded to in Mr. Corbett's despatch No. 12. The exact wording, however, of the copy supplied to Mr. Corbett could not be stated at present, as he had neglected to forward it to the Foreign Office, either in original or copy, in connection with his inquiries as to his powers in such matters. That point is, however, of less importance, as the limits of those powers formed the subject of Lord Stanley's despatch No. 5 of 1868.

Mr. Murray was pleased to request that we would take these papers into our consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion whether, under the circumstances of the case, the marriage in question may be held to be valid, or whether the matter should be referred to the decision of the Registrar-General, as the officer qualified to give legal certificates of marriages under the Act 12 and 13 Vict., cap. 68.

In obedience to the commands of your Lordship we have taken these papers into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we are of opinion that (assuming the late Law Officers to have been right in their view) this marriage, having been celebrated, is validated under 12 and 13 Vict., cap. 68, sec. 13.

We have, &c.
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
J. D. COLERIDGE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 18.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received February 24.)

Temple, February 24, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 3rd instant, stating that, with reference to my Report of the 7th September last, and to previous Reports on the subject of the claim of Captain Harris upon the Guatemalan Government on account of damage done to the San Geronimo Estate, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the accompanying two letters from Captain Harris respecting the conditions to be observed with regard to the reception of evidence by the Commissioners appointed to examine the claim of the owners of the estate; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take the same into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the answer which should be returned to Captain Harris. The previous papers were also inclosed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That your Lordship may properly direct Captain Harris to be informed, that the conditions upon which the Guatemalan Government have agreed to refer his claims to arbitration, appear to your Lordship to be perfectly equitable, and that having regard to the impartial character of the individuals who have been nominated on either side as Commissioners, you see no good reason why Captain Harris should decline to accept the arbitration on the terms upon which the Guatemalan Government have assented to it, and that your Lordship must decline to press upon the Guatemalan Government the acceptance of Captain Harris' conditions, which it might have been proper to urge if partizans on either side had been appointed Commissioners.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 19.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received March 29.)

Temple, March 27, 1869.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 13th instant, stating that with reference to my Report of the 24th ultimo on the subject of the claim of Captain Harris upon the Government of Guatemala, on account of damage done to the Estate of San Geronimo, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me a further letter from Captain Harris, objecting to the terms upon which the Guatemalan Government have consented to submit the case to arbitration, and requesting that Mr. Corbett may be instructed to decline the arbitration, except under the conditions originally proposed by Captain Harris; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take the same into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the answer which should be returned to Captain Harris. The previous papers were also inclosed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That Captain Harris' suggestion that all the expenses of the arbitration should be borne by the Guatemalan Government is reasonable, and I think your Lordship may properly insist upon that being the understanding on which the proposal of Her Majesty's Government to refer the question to arbitration was made, and upon there being nothing in the counter-proposal of the Guatemalan Government at variance or inconsistent with it. With regard to the original conditions proposed to the Guatemalan Government, Captain Harris may be informed that your Lordship considers those conditions to have been approved by Lord Stanley under the advice of the Law Officers of the Crown as proper conditions to be urged upon the Guatemalan Government, but not as conditions which should be enforced upon that Government, and that your Lordship considers that they embodied the wishes of the claimants as to the basis upon which they were desirous that the arbitration should proceed, and not the view of Her Majesty's Government as to the terms upon which it ought to insist, as essential to secure justice.

With regard to the observation of Captain Harris, that the introductional of a professional lawyer to advocate the case of the Guatemalan Government before the Arbitrators would, according to the laws of the country, convert the Arbitrators into a legal tribunal, which would very easily carry on the case for another thirty years, it may have escaped his notice that a special provision of the arbitration, as agreed upon between the two Governments, is, that the Commissioners are to investigate and decide upon the affair in the shortest possible time.

It may be added, that there is nothing unusual nor anomalous in a professional lawyer being allowed to state a case before Arbitrators, and to object to or comment on the evidence submitted to them. Captain Harris would be entitled to the same assistance if Mr. Hague should think it necessary.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 20.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received May 6.)

Temple, May 5, 1869.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 17th ultimo, stating that, with reference to my report of the 27th March, and previous reports on the subject of the claim of Captain Harris upon the Government of Guatemala on account of damage done to the estate of San Geronimo, he was directed to transmit to me two further letters from Captain Harris relative to this case; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take these papers into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the answer which should be returned to Captain Harris. The previous correspondence was also inclosed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That until the Arbitrators in this case have made their award, and stated the grounds for such award, it would be premature for your Lordship to anticipate that any injustice will be done to the claimant of the kind suggested by him, or for your Lordship to request the Guatemala Government to instruct their agent to pay over the amount which may be decided upon to the claimant. The circumstance of the Guatemalan Government having contracted a loan in this country to the amount of 500,000*l.*, may, I think, justify your Lordship in pressing, at the proper time, that Government to pay, without delay, the sum which may be awarded to the claimant by the Arbitrators.

With regard to the contingent request which Captain Harris makes at the conclusion of his letter, your Lordship may, I think, properly direct that he should be informed that you cannot, under present circumstances, entertain it.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 21.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received July 15.)

Temple, July 15, 1869.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 10th instant, stating that, with reference to my report of the 27th March, and previous reports on the subject of the San Geronimo estate, he was directed to transmit to me a further despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Guatemala, upon the subject of the payment of the expenses attending the proceedings of the Commission; and Mr. Hammond was to request that I would take Mr. Corbett's despatch into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the instructions which should be given to Mr. Corbett with regard to the matter. The previous correspondence was also inclosed for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I consider that equity requires in this case that the costs of the arbitration should be borne by the Guatemalan Government, but that the amount of costs, justly to be defrayed by that Government, may be properly decided by the Commissioners themselves, subject to a reference, if they cannot agree, to the Umpire.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 22.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received October 17.)

Temple, October 16, 1869.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 13th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me a letter from the Consul-General of Nicaragua in this country inquiring as to the course which he should pursue to carry out a decree of the Nicaraguan Government, copy of which was inclosed, requiring merchants exporting goods to that country to make a declaration on oath of the value of the same before the Consul of Nicaragua at the place of their residence, and requesting me to take these papers into consideration, and report to your Lordship, at my earliest convenience, what answer I think should be returned to this application.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That the Consul-General of Nicaragua may be properly informed by your Lordship that his doubts are correct as to his exequatur authorizing him to administer oaths within Her Majesty's dominions in the manner proposed by the Nicaraguan Government. With regard to the suggestion of the Consul-General that the objects of the Decree of Nicaraguan Government might be effectuated if his name were inserted in Her Majesty's Commission of the Peace, the compliance of Her Majesty's Government with the Consul-General's suggestion, if your Lordship should not think such compliance to be for other reasons inexpedient, would imperfectly meet the exigencies of the case, as the Decree in question directs the declaration on oath to be made before every Nicaraguan Consul in his proper district, and only in certain cases before the Consul-General.

As your Lordship, however, may be desirous to assist the Government of Nicaragua as regards the object which the President of that Republic had in view in passing the Decree, to which the Consul-General seeks to give effect, I venture to suggest that inquiry should be made of the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Customs as to the course of proceeding at present observed in Her Majesty's Custom-houses in regard to the declaration of value, if any such declaration is required to be made by the exporters of goods, and that the Consul-General should be informed that your Lordship proposes to make such inquiry with a view of ascertaining whether there is any practice in Her Majesty's Custom-houses which may be of assistance to him in effectuating the objects of his Government.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 23.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received November 13.)

Temple, November 12, 1869.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands, signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 18th ultimo, stating that, with reference to my report of the 15th July last, with regard to the question of the payment of expenses attending the proceedings of the Commission engaged in the examination of the San Geronimo claim, he was directed by your Lordships to transmit to me the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires in Central America, inclosing copies of further correspondence on this subject, which has taken place between himself and the Guatemalan Minister for Foreign Affairs; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take the same into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordships' commands I have the honour to report—

That I am not aware that it is in conformity with custom, as alleged by his Excellency Don Pedro de Aycinena in his despatch of May 11, 1869, when claims analogous to those in the present case are submitted to International Arbitration, for the claimants to pay their own expenses. His Excellency appears to me to have confounded the present case with cases in which there is some right asserted on both sides—such as cases of disputed boundary, cases of mixed claims, and other cases which will readily suggest themselves to your Lordship's experience—in which the expenses of arbitration are generally agreed to be equally borne by the respective Governments.

Mr. Corbett has indeed supposed it to be possible that no compensation may be accorded to the claimants, in which case he observes that "it would seem hardly just, if absolved from liability in the affair, that the Guatemalan Government should have to pay the expenses of attending its examination."

1869

But I apprehend it to be beyond the power of the Arbitrators to absolve the Government of Guatemala from liability, if the claimant should succeed in proving his damage, and if he fails in proving any portion of his asserted damage, it will be competent for the Arbitrators, under the terms proposed by your Lordship, to decide that the expense of the examination of such parts of his claim shall not be defrayed by the Guatemalan Government. In the improbable case supposed by Mr. Corbett, that the claim should prove to be a fabricated claim, which is the only case, in my opinion, in which the Arbitrators would be entitled to absolve the Guatemalan Government from all liability, it would be most proper for Her Majesty's Government not to insist upon any part of the costs of the inquiry being defrayed by the Guatemalan Government.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

Chile.

No. 24.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received March 22.)

Temple, March 22, 1869.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 19th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the accompanying letter from the Admiralty, inclosing a copy of a despatch from Commodore Powell, with a correspondence which has taken place between himself and Colonel Lynch, commanding a battalion of militia at Valparaiso, relative to a man serving on board Her Majesty's ship "Topaze," who has been claimed by the latter as a deserter from that corps; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take the same into my consideration and favour your Lordship with my opinion as to the course pursued by Commodore Powell in this matter. A copy of the Treaty between this country and Chile, of October 4, 1854, was inclosed for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken this matter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That the view taken by Commodore Powell of the proper interpretation to be placed on Article XIII of the Treaty between Her Majesty and the Republic of Chili is, in my opinion, correct. That Article provides for the mutual surrender of deserters from the naval and military service of either country, who shall have deserted from vessels within the ports, coasts, or waters of the country, before whose authorities they are claimed." As Benjamin Poblé, after his desertion from the naval service of the Republic of Chili, in the month of July 1867, as reported by the Chilian Commandant, appears to have returned to his native country of Peru, and to have been resident at Callao, when he joined Her Majesty's ship "Topaze" on 26th September, 1868. I consider that Commodore Powell was justified in holding that Article XIII of the above Treaty, under which his surrender was claimed, had no bearing on his case.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

China.

No. 25.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received January 1.)

Temple, January 7, 1869.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 19th ultimo, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying letter from the Rev. Mr. Turberville, editor of the "English Independent," requesting to be informed whether, under any Treaties between Great Britain and China, English missionaries are entitled to any other protection than that accorded to English traders. A draft which had been prepared in the Foreign Office in reply to Mr. Turberville's inquiry, together with an alternative draft proposed by Mr. Wade, Her Majesty's Secretary of Legation at Peking, who is now in this country on leave of absence, with an explanatory note from that gentleman, was also inclosed; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take these papers into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the answer which should be returned to Mr. Turberville. Mr. Hammond was also pleased to inclose copies of the French, Russian, and American Treaties of 1858 and of the French Treaty of 1860, and to state that the Treaties with China of 1858 and 1860 will be found at pages 86 and 112 of Hertslet's Commercial Treaties, Vol. XI.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That your Lordship may, I think, properly decline to answer the inquiry of the Rev Mr. Turberville, "whether, under any Treaties between Great Britain and China, English missionaries are entitled to any other protection than that accorded to British traders." The application of those Treaties to particular cases, as they may arise, must depend so much on the peculiar circumstances of each case that it might embarrass her Majesty's Minister at Pekin, if your Lordship were to answer Mr. Turberville's inquiry in the terms suggested Mr. Wade, as cases might occur in which Her Majesty's Minister at Peking might have to invoke in favour of English missionaries who had been exposed to outrage or persecution, as such, the protection which Article VIII of the British Treaty of Tientsin has especially accorded to teachers of the Christian religion. On these, not to mention other grounds, I think that the earlier part of the alternative draft prepared by Mr. Wade is open to objection, and it would also not be advisable, in my opinion, for your Lordship to promise to forward Mr. Turberville's letter to Her Majesty's Minister at Peking, as I understand him to have applied to your Lordship in his character of editor of a public journal, and not on behalf of any particular religious mission. On the other hand, I think there may be some justice in the apprehension which Mr. Wade has expressed in his letter to Mr. Hammond that your Lordship's reserve might be misconstrued by some of the missionaries to give countenance to their impression that, under the provisions of the French Treaty, which British subjects, as an equally favoured nation, might have a right to quote, they are entitled to protection as preachers. I venture, therefore, to suggest, for your Lordship's consideration, a third form of despatch by which your Lordship would avoid committing Her Majesty's Government to any general construction of the Treaties in their bearing upon English missionary enterprise, whilst you would supply information to Mr. Turberville, which, if made public by him in the columns of the "English Independent," might be useful by way of caution to English missionaries.

Your Lordship might, according to this suggestion, reply, as proposed in the original draft, that you cannot enable Mr. Turberville to state authoritatively what construction the Treaty engagements between Great Britain and China are understood by Her Majesty's Government to bear in relation to English missionaries, but that English missionaries should be aware that there is only one Article of the British Treaty of Tientsin which applies in terms to the Christian religion, namely, the VIIIth Article, which provides that "persons teaching it or professing it shall alike be entitled to the protection of the Chinese authorities, nor any such, peaceably pursuing their calling and not offending against the laws, be persecuted or interfered with."

That Mr. Turberville will perceive that this Article does not accord to the teachers of the Christian religion any other protection than is secured to persons professing it, and that one important condition for both alike to be entitled to such protection is, that they shall not offend against the laws. If English missionaries, therefore, in China should be in doubt as to the conduct they may in any particular case pursue, their best course would be to consult Her Majesty's Minister at Peking in each case as it may arise. On the other hand, as Mr. Turberville has alluded to certain impressions which the missionaries entertain that, under the provisions of the French Treaty of Tientsin, they are entitled to protection as preachers, your Lordship may, I think, inform Mr. Turberville that the XIIIth Article of the French Treaty of Tientsin, which is the only Article in which missionaries are mentioned, provides for the protection of missionaries in the following terms:—"Une protection efficace sera donnée aux missionaires, qui se rendront pacifiquement dans l'intérieur du pays, munis des passeports réguliers, dont il est parlé dans l'Article VIII;" and that no mention is made of missionaries in the Additional Convention between France and China, concluded at Peking on the 25th October, 1860.

1869

Your Lordship may add that, in communicating the above information to Mr. Turberville, you hope that it may prove serviceable in removing any erroneous impressions, if they exist, amongst missionaries in China, and that Her Majesty's Government trusts that in all their proceedings in China they will conduct themselves with circumspection; and, bearing in mind the feelings and character of the Chinese authorities and people, do their utmost to avoid any occasion of collision.

I have. &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 26.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received January 13.)

My Lord,
Temple, January 12, 1869.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 6th January instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us, together with the former papers,* a despatch from Sir Rutherford Alcock,† inclosing a copy of a despatch which, at the request of Prince Kung, he had addressed to Consul Markham, instructing him to issue a notification warning British subjects against engaging in gold mining at Chefoo; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that, we would take the same into our consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion whether Sir Rutherford Alcock's proceedings in the matter should be approved.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers submitted to us into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That your Lordship may properly approve the proceedings of Her Majesty's Minister at Peken, in the matter referred to us.

We have, &c.
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
J. D. COLERIDGE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 27.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received January 20.)

My Lord,
Temple, January 19, 1869.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 6th of January, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister in China, No. 260 October 19, 1868, and its inclosures, respecting a recent collision at Canton between tidewaiters in the Foreign Customs Establishment and native Chinese soldiers; and to request that we would take the same into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the instructions which should be given to Sir Rutherford Alcock with regard to the jurisdiction of the Chinese Government over British subjects in the Chinese service.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

---

* Sir R. Alcock, No. 178, July 6; No. 210, August 15, 1868.
† Sir R. Alcock, No. 262, October 24, 1868.

That your Lordship may properly instruct Her Majesty's Minister at Pekin, that, under the Treaty of Tientsin, the Chinese Government has renounced the exercise of criminal jurisdiction over all British subjects in China, by agreeing, under Article XVI of that Treaty, that "British subjects who may commit any crime in China, shall be tried and punished by the Consul or other public functionary authorized thereto, according to the laws of Great Britain."

That this agreement is binding upon the Chinese Government with regard to British subjects who may be in its service, equally as with regard to other British subjects; and that Her Majesty's Order in Council, of the 9th of March, 1865, would apply to all such subjects of Her Majesty in China. In the present case, the question being one of jurisdiction, we are of opinion that under the Treaty the jurisdiction is absolute and unqualified; but it is obvious that it would be unwise, and, indeed, unfair to insist upon the jurisdiction of our Consuls in cases where the offences committed by Englishmen may be slight offences against Chinese rules of discipline applicable to forces, of which by their own free act British subjects have become members, and to the reasonable discipline of which they have voluntarily subjected themselves.

We have, &c.
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
J. D. COLERIDGE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 28.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received March 3.)

My Lord,
Temple, March 2, 1869.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 10th ultimo, stating that he was directed to transmit to us, together with the previous correspondence, a letter from the Colonial Office, inclosing a despatch from the Governor of the Straits Settlements, representing the hardships which may be inflicted on British subjects of Chinese origin by a regulation recently issued by Sir R. Alcock, Her Majesty's Minister at Pekin, requiring them to wear a distinctive dress when travelling or resident within the Chinese Empire; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that, we would take these papers into consideration, and furnish your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the conditions on the matter of costume, under which British subjects of Chinese descent should travel in China, are a question of policy and of negotiation with the Chinese Government, rather than of law. British subjects have no international right to travel in China except so far as Treaty gives them permission, and it is within the strict Province of the Government to decide, on grounds of expediency, what conditions as to costume shall be prescribed. The regulation of Sir R. Alcock does not appear to us illegal or ultra vires; whether or not it is expedient we do not presume to decide, and, indeed, have not the materials for deciding.

We have, &c.
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
J. D. COLERIDGE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 29.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received March 20.)

My Lord,
Temple, March 19, 1869.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 27th ultimo, stating that, with reference to the Report of the late Law Officers of the Crown, dated March 16, 1868, in regard to the question of the extent of British jurisdiction in waters adjacent to Hong Kong, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch upon this subject, which your Lordship had received from Sir Edmund Hornby, Judge of the Supreme Court for China and Japan, and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take this despatch into our consideration, together with the correspondence upon this subject therewith transmitted to us, and favour your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

1869

In obedience to the commands of your Lordship we have taken this despatch into our consideration, together with the previous correspondence upon the subject, and have the honour to report—

That we cannot advise your Lordship to sanction the suggestion in Sir E. Hornby's despatch of 28th December, 1868, that Chinese subjects, who have committed crimes against the person or property of British subjects in the Colony of Hong Kong, should be pursued and arrested by the British authorities, notwithstanding they may have escaped to the Chinese mainland, to be sent back for trial at Hong Kong. We think that the arrest of such criminals on the Chinese mainland should be matter of Treaty arrangement with the Chinese Government, nor do we see why it should be deemed hopeless to conclude a Treaty on some such terms of co-operation as those suggested by Consul Medhurst, which should be effectual for the purpose; at all events we think that such an attempt should be made before resorting to the course recommended by Sir E. Hornby, which could only be justified, if at all, by the failure of all negotiations for the surrender or capture of escaped criminals, and the necessity of protecting the Colony.

We have to add that, in dealing with such a country as China (which recognizes no mutual international obligations, or if it does, is unable on its own side to inforce them), the British Government is justified in continuing to act, as it has hitherto acted, in defence of substantial justice, and with no unreasonable disregard of Chinese independence and dignity.

We have, &c.
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
J. D. COLERIDGE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 30.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received August 8.)

My Lord,
Temple, April 7, 1869.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified to us in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 23rd March, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from the Colonial Office, dated the 13th ultimo, inclosing a copy of a despatch from the Governor of Hong Kong, in regard to the question of placing the authorities of that Colony in direct communication with the Chinese authorities at Kowloon, with a view to the pursuit and capture, on Chinese territory, by the police of Hong Kong, of criminals when they escaped to the mainland; and further, stating that he was also to transmit to us, for our convenience, the previous correspondence upon this question; and to request that we would take these papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

Mr. Hammond further stated that he was at the same time to acknowledge the receipt of our Report of the 19th March, in regard to the question of British jurisdiction in waters adjacent to Hong Kong, but, before taking any action on that Report, your Lordship would be glad to be favoured with our opinion on the case then submitted to us.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we havet aken the papers submitted to us into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That upon the first question of law submitted to Her Majesty's Secretary of State for the Colonies by the Governor of Hong Kong, we beg to state that we are not aware of any existing Treaty engagement between Great Britain and China which would entitle a British authority to arrest in Chinese territory a British subject who may have committed a crime in British territory.

The jurisdiction conceded to British Consuls or other public functionaries under Article XVI of the Treaty of Tien-tsin (IX Hertslet, p. 90), which we believe to be the only Treaty in force bearing on the question of British jurisdiction within the Chinese territory, is only in respect of British subjects "who may commit any crime in China." We observe, indeed, that there was a provision in Article IX of the previous Treaty of Hooman-chae (VI Hertslet, p. 265) for the apprehension by the Chinese authorities, and the surrender to the nearest British functionary, of any British subject who should escape into Chinese territory; if any practice grew up under that Treaty, to which Her Majesty's Minister at Peking may refer, when he says that "there is no impediment to the police pursuing and arresting any British subject in Chinese territory," and if any such practice is, in fact, continued in the present day, we consider such arrest is to be regarded as a matter of sufferance on the part of the Chinese authorities, and not as a matter of Treaty right on the part of the British police for the provision in question of the Treaty of Hoomun-chae, not having been incorporated into the Treaty of Tien-tsin, must be held to have been abrogated by Article I of that Treaty.

It is hardly necessary for us to answer in the negative the second question of law submitted to Her Majesty's Secretary of State for the Colonies on the part of the Governor of Hong Kong. There being no Treaty-right, in our opinion, which entitles British Government officers to pursue and arrest British subjects who may escape into Chinese territory, if there should be in practice any comity in such matters on the part of the Chinese authorities, the extension of that comity to the arrest of Chinese subjects must originate with the Chinese authorities. No fiction of law would justify the British authorities in assuming an extension of that comity to the case of Chinese subjects who should escape from British custody in Kooloon or Hong Kong and take refuge on Chinese soil.

Upon the general question of placing the authorities of Hong Kong in direct communication with the Chinese authorities, we concur in the observations of Lord Granville in Sir F. Rogers' letter of March 13.

We have, &c.
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
J. D. COLERIDGE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 31.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received April 27.)

My Lord,
Temple, April 26, 1869.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified to us in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 21st instant, stating that with reference to our Report of the 7th instant, he was directed by your Lordship to point out to us that, although the Treaty with China of Hoomun Chae may be taken as abrogated by the Ist Article of the Treaty of Tientsin, the LIVth Article of that Treaty provides that "the British Government and its subjects are hereby confirmed in all privileges, immunities, and advantages conferred on them by previous Treaties;" and that he was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion whether, under that Article, the extradition of British subjects escaping into Chinese territory might not be claimed as a Treaty right conceded by the IXth Article of the Treaty of Hoomun Chae and kept alive by the LIVth Article of the Treaty of Tientsin.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the provision for the extradition of British subjects, contained in the latter part of Article IX of the Treaty of Hoomun Chae, is not, in our opinion kept alive by Article LIV of the Treaty of Tientsin.

We have, &c.
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
J. D. COLERIDGE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 32.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received April 28.)

My Lord,
Temple, April 27, 1869.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 15th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to us, with reference to our Report of the 2nd ultimo, a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Pekin, inclosing a petition from a Committee of British subjects of Chinese origin suggesting certain changes in the notification issued by Sir R. Alcock relative to the dress to be worn by them, and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would furnish your

1869

Lordship with any observations that may occur to us on the subject. The previous papers were also inclosed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That Her Majesty's Minister at Pekin appears to us to be the most competent person to form a right opinion upon the advisability of the changes suggested to be made in his notification relative to the dress to be worn by British subjects of Chinese origin within the Chinese dominions. The reasons given by him for not acceding to the prayer of the Memorialists, appear to us, as far as we are able to judge, to be sound, and such as your Lordship may approve.

We have, &c.
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
J. D. COLERIDGE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 33.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received April 30.)

Temple, April 29, 1869.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 23rd instant, stating, that with reference to our predecessor's Report of the 27th August last, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister in China (No. 31), inclosing a copy of an amended regulation for the prohibition of the use of the Shan Shoe Channel in the Yangtye River to British shipping, and that he was to request that we would take the papers into our consideration and favour your Lordship with any observations we might have to offer thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That the amended regulation appears to us to be properly made under the powers conferred by the 85th and 86th sections of the Order in Council relating to China of 9th March, 1866.

But we desire to submit to your Lordship's consideration whether it would not be advisable to mention the person or persons on whom the fine is to be levied. These, probably, should be the owner, charterer, captain, master, or person in charge; and it might be left to the discretion of the officers which of these several persons, whether one or more, in each case should be fined.

W have, &c.
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
J. D. COLERIDGE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 34.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received May 1.)

Temple, April 30, 1869.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 28th April instant, stating that, with reference to our reports of the 19th ultimo and 26th instant in regard to the question of the extent of British jurisdiction in waters adjacent to Hong Kong, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us two drafts of despatches upon that subject founded upon those reports, which your Lordship proposed to address to Her Majesty's Minister in China and to the Colonial Office, and to request that we would take the draft into our consideration and inform your Lordship whether they correctly represent our meaning.

Mr. Hammond was pleased to return to us the previous correspondence, together with a despatch which had recently been received from Her Majesty's Minister in China, inclosing a copy of Sir Edward Hornby's despatch to him in regard to this question, and which had been already received from Sir Edward Hornby, and referred to in his letter of the 27th of February.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have perused the draft despatches submitted to us, and have the honour to report—

That the drafts of the two despatches represent correctly our meaning.

We have, &c.
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
J. D. COLERIDGE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 35.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received May 13)

Temple, May 12, 1869

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 3rd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Sir E. Hornby (No. 4), as also one from Her Majesty's Consul at Shanghai (No. 9), in regard to the case of the British ship "Spray," which, in consequence of an irregularity in her papers, became liable to seizure at that port.

Mr. Hammond was also pleased to acquaint us that those despatches had been referred to the Board of Trade, and he was to transmit to us a letter which had been received in reply from that Department dated the 28th ultimo, together with a draft of a despatch to Sir E. Hornby, (No. 16, November 10, 1868) as to the construction to be placed on the provisions of the Foreign Enlistment Act, and which was founded on an opinion of our Predecessors dated October 31, 1868.

Mr. Hammond was also to request that we would take all those papers into our consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion on the legal point raised by Sir E. Hornby as to whether the Court at Shanghae can properly exercise any jurisdiction in the case of the "Spray," under the 103rd section of the Merchant Shipping Act, and with any other observations we might have to offer upon the subject.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken all the papers into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That the 103 section of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854, whereby it is provided that any vessel improperly assuming the British character may be seized by certain British authorities and brought in for adjudication "before the High Court of Admiralty in England or Ireland, or any Court having Admiralty jurisdiction in Her Majesty's Dominions," cannot in our opinion properly be held to authorize Courts exercising Admiralty jurisdiction in places not within Her Majesty's Dominions to adjudicate upon such vessels—nor do we think that an Order in Council can confer such a power on such Courts.

We have, &c.
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
J. D. COLERIDGE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 36.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received July 6.)

Temple, July 5, 1869.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of June 22, stating that with reference to our Report of the 28th of April, on the case of the "Spray," he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us, together with the previous papers, a further letter from the Board of Trade, calling attention to the stringency of the 103rd section of the Merchant Shipping Act, authorizing the forfeiture of vessels carrying informal papers, and the complications which may arise from Her Majesty's Consuls proceeding to enforce it, without having regard to the instruction cautioning them as to the manner in which they should exercise the power conferred on them in cases where no fraudulent intention is presumed.

A volume containing the Act and Instructions referred to (pages 160, 13, and 15), was also inclosed, and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the further instructions, if any, which should be issued to Her Majesty's Consuls at China or elsewhere, to prevent the recurrence of cases like that of the "Spray," and also on the general question as to the operation of the 103rd section of the Merchant Shipping Act.

1869

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That it does not appear anywhere in the papers submitted to us, on what grounds Her Majesty's Consul at Nagasaki cancelled his endorsement on the British certificate of registry of the "Spray." We are, therefore, unable to advise your Lordship what further instructions should be given to Her Majesty's Consuls at China to prevent the recurrence of cases like the "Spray," or to say more than that we consider the circumstance suggested by the Board of Trade; namely, the probability that Her Majesty's Consul consented to cancel his endorsement on finding that the new owner could not obtain American papers, would not have been sufficient to warrant, although it may not excuse, such an irregularity.

The Consul at Nagasaki should, we think, be directed to furnish the Board of Trade with a full Report of the circumstances under which he assumed the power of cancelling an endorsement once regularly made.

As to the instructions, page 13, c. 14, the word and in the last line of the page seems to us to be hardly justified by the Act, "or" would be the proper word.

The instructions on pages 13, 15, and 16 seem sufficiently clear and justified by sound policy. They, however, limit the action of British Consuls more than the Act itself does, and it may be well, on any revision of the Merchant Shipping Acts, to bring the language of the Act and Instructions more entirely into harmony.

We have, &c.
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
J. D. COLERIDGE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 37.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received September 14.)

Temple, September 13, 1869.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 26th ultimo, stating that he was directed to transmit to us the accompanying despatch and its inclosure from Sir E. Hornby, requesting to be furnished with instructions as to the exercise of jurisdiction over foreigners arriving in Chinese ports in British vessels, and to request that we would take these papers into our consideration, and furnish your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we are not aware of any Treaty with China which concedes to British Consuls jurisdiction over the subjects of other Powers who may be borne on the muster roll of a British merchant ship, in respect of offences committed on shore within the Chinese dominions, the XVIth Article of the Treaty of Tientsin (11 Hertslet, p. 90) being confined to British subjects exclusively; nor are we aware of any British Statute or Order in Council which authorizes Her Majesty's Consular Courts in China to exercise any such jurisdiction. We think that such an offender would be properly tried and punished by his own national authorities in China, under their Treaty engagements with that Power; and we think that in all cases where such an offender is claimed by his own Consul, as justiciable in his own Court, the British Consul should decline to exercise jurisdiction, and facilitate the action of such Consuls. With regard to the statement in Sir E. Hornby's despatch that, as a matter of practice, it has been usual in China for the Consul of the nationality of the vessel to assume and exercise jurisdiction over all the members of the ship's crew, even in the case of an offence committed on shore, such a practice might bring the case within the Foreign Jurisdiction Act (6 and 7 Vic., c. 94), as regards the protection given by that Act to the Consul against all proceedings against him in British Courts; but we do not think that it would supply any sufficient answer if the Consul of the nationality of the offenders should object to Her Majesty's Consul exercising jurisdiction in such a case, and should claim to try and punish the offender in his own Court, under the Treaty engagements between his own Government and the Chinese Government. Where there may be no such Treaty engagements, as in the case of Siamese forming part of the crew of a British ship, we see no objection to Her Majesty's Consular Courts relying on the usage, but in the case of Japanese, who are also mentioned in Sir E. Hornby's despatch, we should think that they would be more properly tried and punished by the Dutch authorities; but, if those authorities should decline the jurisdiction, we think that it may be properly exercised by our Consul.

The above observations do not apply to mere offences against the ship's discipline, such as staying on shore beyond the time permitted or drunkenness, for which the offender might properly be punished on his return to the ship.

We have, &c.
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
J. D. COLERIDGE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 38.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received October 5.)

Temple, September 30, 1869.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 9th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister in China, with its inclosures, urging, for the reasons therein stated, that in the event of any revision of the Treaties with China taking place, it would be advisable to modify the terms of Article XVII of the Treaty of Tientsin, as regards the mode of settling disputes between British and Chinese subjects; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would favour your Lordship with any observations we might have to offer thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the mode of administering justice in civil suits between Chinese and British subjects under the Order in Council of 1865 is clearly not in accordance with the provisions of the Treaty of Tientsin, and as the IVth Article of that Order forbids the jurisdiction exercisable in China to be exercised in any other manner, it is calculated to render the XVIIth Article of that Treaty inoperative, as far as regards the judicial action of Her Majesty's Consuls, although, as we understand, the Chinese authorities continue to act in conformity with the Treaty. We agree with Her Majesty's Minister at Peking that this state of things needs amendment. Her Majesty's Minister has suggested that two courses seem open, either to revise the Treaty and adapt it to the existing practice, or to modify the Order in Council so as to allow the practice under the previous Order in Council of 13th June, 1853, to be revived, under which all cases in which Chinese subjects were concerned were heard and decided by Her Majesty's Consuls and Her Majesty's Minister exclusively. But, on referring to that Order in Council (IX Hertslet, p. 210), we do not find any provision for associating Chinese authorities with Her Majesty's Consuls in the adjudication of such cases, as was clearly contemplated by the Treaty of Tientsin, and the non-observance of which provision we understand to be the grievance of which the Chinese authorities complain; nor do we find any such provision in the earlier Order in Council of the 17th April, 1844 (VI Hertslet, p. 276), which was passed to give effect to the General Regulations of July 1843 (VI Hertslet, p. 247), which contain provisions for the settlement of disputes between British and Chinese subjects identical in substance with Article XVII of the Treaty of Tientsin. How far this circumstance countenances the view of Sir E. Hornby as to the intention of that Article, that the framers of it never contemplated more than friendly intercession and ultimate arbitration by a Consul and a Faotai, we have not the means of judging; but we observe that there is no provision in the General Regulations allowing an appeal from Her Majesty's Consul to the Chief Superintendent, which was given by the Order in Council of 13th June, 1853; nor is there any provision in the XVIIth Article of the Treaty of Tientsin (26th June, 1858), which authorizes an appeal to Her Majesty's Minister, so that a return to the practice under that Order would not adjust it to the letter of the Treaty. We are, therefore, unable to advise your Lordship that a modification of the Order in Council of 1865 in this sense would remove the contradiction between the practice and the Treaty of Tientsin. On the other hand, we do not think it would be advisable to revise the Treaty and adapt its terms to the existing practice, as the practice is one-sided; whereas we understand that the principle of reciprocity is to be taken as the basis of the Treaty, and the XVIIth Article is framed on that principle, although Sir E. Hornby's opinion seems to be that the working of the present system, as regards proceedings on the part of British plaintiffs against Chinese defendants before the Chinese authorities is attended with anything but reciprocity of justice, as compared with proceedings before the British authorities where Chinese subjects are plaintiffs. We think it would be advisable to deal with the question of civil suits between British and Chinese subjects in a more general manner, and to provide in terms for the adjudication of such suits as is provided in regard to criminal actions under Article XVI of the Treaty of Tientsin, viz., that justice shall be equitably and impartially administered in civil suits on both sides; and, as regards procedure, that the plaintiff shall convene the defendant before his own judge, but if the defendant is willing to submit the dispute to the plaintiff's judge, the latter may hear and determine the case. Further, that the constitution of the tribunals on either side shall be settled by the law of the respective countries. We speak, of course, with great deference to the experience which Her Majesty's Minister has of the Chinese character, but, as far as we can judge from the letter of Sir E. Hornby, a British plaintiff would be likely to have as much justice done to him if the principle of actor sequitur forum rei, as regards civil suits, were the basis of the future Treaty, as under a complicated system of mixed tribunals. But, in adopting that principle, we think it of importance that an option should be given to the defendant to submit the matter to the plaintiff's judge, so that the practice, which is stated by Sir E. Hornby to be growing up, of Chinese defendants deferring to the jurisdiction of the Consular Courts, with the approbation of the local authorities, may not be interfered with. We think it right to add that we concur in the opinion of Sir E. Hornby, that it would be inexpedient, in the interests of justice, that a Chinese authority should be associated as colleague with the Judge of the Supreme Court in hearing causes; but we think that power might be given to Her Majesty's Consuls to invite Chinese magistrates to assist them as assessors with a consultative voice, but this should not be matter of Treaty engagement. We may further add, that the question involved in the despatch of Sir Rutherford Alcock seems to us to be rather one of policy than law, depending, to a great extent, on the state of our relations with China, and involving considerations upon which we feel great difficulty in expressing an opinion.

1869

We have, &c.
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
J. D. COLERIDGE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 39.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received October 5.)

Temple, October 2, 1869.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 21st ultimo, stating, with reference to his letter of the 9th ultimo, requesting us to favour your Lordship with our opinion on a despatch from Sir Rutherford Alcock, recommending a modification of Article XVII of the Treaty of Tientsin, in the event of a revision of the Treaties with China taking place, that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch which had been received from Sir E. Hornby, containing his comments on the terms of Article XVII; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take this despatch into our consideration, together with the one from Sir R. Alcock, and favour your Lordship with any observations we might have to offer thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this despatch into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we see no reason, from the perusal of the despatch of Sir E. Hornby, for altering in any way the Report which we have already made upon Sir Rutherford Alcock's despatch.

We have, &c.
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
J. D. COLERIDGE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 40.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received October 11.)

Temple, October 9, 1869.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified to us in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 29th of September last, stating that with reference to our Report of the 30th of April last, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from the Colonial Office, dated the 23rd ultimo, with a copy of a despatch from the Governor of Hong Kong, inclosing the draft of an Ordinance to provide for the extradition of fugitives from justice when applied for by the authorities at Macao.

For our convenience Mr. Hammond was pleased to return to us the previous correspondence on this matter, and he was to request that we would take these papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with any observations we might have to offer in regard to the Governor of Hong Kong's proposed Ordinance.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That with regard to the points on which Mr. Monsell has asked for the opinion of the Foreign Office, we think—

1. That there is no reason which occurs to us why British subjects should be excluded from the operation of the Ordinance.
2. That military deserters may very properly be included within its scope.
3. That persons accused of the crime of piracy, jure gentium, may likewise be properly included within its scope.
4. That no reason occurs to us why the sanction of the Consular authorities should be asked for before criminal fugitives of other countries besides China are surrendered to the Government of Macao; they are persons who by the supposition have rendered themselves amenable, or are said to have rendered themselves amenable, to the criminal law, and with regard to such persons as no question of nationality could arise, if they had not escaped from Macao or Hong Kong respectively, we do not see why any question of nationality need arise in an Extradition Treaty, such as this is in substance.
5. We see no reason for confining the operation of Section 10, as suggested in Mr. Monsell's letter. It can hardly be said that an attempt to murder becomes more political in its nature because it is directed against the person of a subordinate officer, and not of the Governor himself.

We need hardly observe that all these points are, after all, matters much more for your Lordship's judgment than questions of legal opinion.

We have, &c.
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
J. D. COLERIDGE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 41.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received October 20.)

Temple, October 20, 1869.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 4th instant, stating that with reference to our Reports of the 26th and 30th of April last, upon the question of direct communication between the Colonial authorities at Hong Kong and the Chinese authorities at Kowloon, with a view to the rendition of criminals escaping to the mainland, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch which has been received from Her Majesty's Minister in China upon this subject; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take this despatch into our consideration, and furnish your Lordship with our opinion on the questions raised by Sir R. Alcock as to the interpretation to be given to Articles XV and XVI of the Treaty of Tientsin. The previous papers were also inclosed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we are unable to concur in the interpretation of the XVth Article of the Treaty of Tientsin put forward by Sir R. Alcock in his despatch of July 13, 1869. Nor are we by that despatch at all led to doubt the correctness of what we wrote on the 26th and 30th of April last, as to the interpretation to be given to the XVIth Article of the same Treaty. But whether in dealing with a nation like the Chinese it is incumbent on Her Majesty's Government actively to interfere to put a stop to a practice which is now established, which works beneficially, and of which the Chinese do not at all complain, is a matter entirely for the consideration of your Lordship and the Government of the Queen.

We have, &c.
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
J. D. COLERIDGE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

1869

No. 42.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received October 20.)

My Lord, Temple, October 20, 1869.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 9th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch which had been received from Sir Edmund Hornby, inclosing a Judgment which he had recently delivered on the subject of oaths to be administered to Chinese witnesses, together with a series of questions which he proposed should be asked of Chinese witnesses, preparatory to administering to them an oath, and that he was to request that we would take the papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That it appears to us that Sir Edmund Hornby decided the case before him with perfect correctness, but we think it impossible to say, as matter of law, that the questions he proposes to address to Chinese and Japanese witnesses, and the form of words he proposes to make them utter, are or ought to be made conditions precedent to the reception of the evidence of such persons. They go far beyond what was decided to be necessary in the case of Omichund v. Barker, and we are not prepared to advise your Lordship to sanction, even by your approval, any greater minuteness of inquiry than was decided to be necessary in that famous case. Lord Chief Justice Willes, in that case, laid it down that belief in a God, and that that God could reward and punish, was sufficient for the reception of the evidence of a person so believing, and who swore according to the form of his own religion. The questions by which the presence or the absence of these essentials of belief is to be ascertained, must be left to the discretion of the Court, and may vary in each case; the points to be ascertained always remaining the same. We think it, therefore, far from desirable to fix rigidly the forms and number of the questions.

As to the oath itself, the point is the solemn invocation of the help, and, by consequence, the displeasure of the Divine Being by the person about to give evidence; forms by which this is attested, whether by kissing the Gospels or the Pentateuch, or holding up the hand, &c., are immaterial; and if, as Sir Edmund Hornby says, the forms hitherto adopted are absurd, and are so felt by the Chinese, there can be no objection to discontinuing them, and adopting any form felt by them to be solemn, and to witness to the world that they are speaking under solemn obligation.

We much doubt whether your Lordship ought to be called upon to express an opinion one way or the other on the subject; your Lordship's opinion cannot give these forms the force of law. That can only be done, if it be thought advisable to do it, by Act of Parliament. But the law on this subject, as to its principles, is ascertained with great clearness and force in Omichund v. Barker, and it must be left for the Courts in their discretion in this country and abroad to carry these principles into operation with regard to non-Christian witnesses, by such forms as may seem to them fit for the purpose in each case.

We have, &c.
(Signed) J. D. COLERIDGE.
R. P. COLLIER.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 43.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received December 1.)

My Lord, Temple, November 30, 1869.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified to us in Mr. Arthur Otway's letter of the 23rd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch from Sir Rutherford Alcock (No. 109), and its inclosures, respecting a recent trial for murder in Her Majesty's Supreme Court at Shanghae, and he was to request that we would take those papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with any observations we might have to offer thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That the view of the law taken by Sir E. Hornby is, in our opinion, correct, both as regards the sufficiency of the jury and the admissibility of the Chinese evidence.

We have, &c.
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
J. D. COLERIDGE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 44.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received December 22).

Temple, December 21, 1869.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 3rd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Consul at Shanghai, inclosing copies of rules which had been agreed upon with the Taontai for the prevention of shipping collisions, and also a letter from the Board of Trade inclosing a draft-order in Council for giving effect to those rules; and that he was to request that we would take those papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion, whether such an order was required, and if so, whether it should be made applicable to the local shipping in the waters of the Shanghai Province, or whether it should extend to British and Chinese shipping generally.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

We are of opinion that an Order in Council is required to authorize a British Court exercising Admiralty jurisdiction to apply the sailing regulations to cases of collision between British and Chinese vessels.

We think that the Order should extend to British and Chinese vessels generally, as the Taontai's letter applies to all Chinese vessels visiting waters frequented by foreign craft, and to all collisions between Chinese and British vessels.

We have, &c.
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
J. D. COLERIDGE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 45.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received December 29.)

Temple, December 29, 1869.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 4th instant, stating, that with reference to our report of the 8th of December, 1868, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us, together with previous papers, a despatch from Sir Rutherford Alcock, and its inclosures, reporting that the Land Regulations and Règlement Municipal for the Government of the British, French, and other Concessions at Shanghai, had been provisionally sanctioned by a joint Minute of the representatives of the Treaty Powers at Pekin; and that he was to request that we would take those papers into our consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion, whether that provisional sanction should be confirmed by Her Majesty's Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That Her Majesty's Government may properly confirm the provisional sanction given to the Land Regulations and Règlement Municipal for the Government of the British, French, and other Concessions at Shanghai by the joint Minute of the Representatives of the Treaty Powers at Pekin of 24th September, 1869.

We have, &c.
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
J. D. COLERIDGE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

1869

Denmark.

No. 45*.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received February 1).

Temple, January 30, 1869.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 27th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to acquaint us that on the 13th instant a Declaration, of which he inclosed a copy, was signed by Her Majesty's Minister at the Court of Denmark and the Danish Minister for Foreign Affairs, for the exemption of subjects of the one country residing in the other from compulsory military service and from forced loans. That on full consideration of the terms of that Declaration, your Lordship is apprehensive that they may be liable to misconstruction, and may cause embarrassment in other cases. That your Lordship has, therefore, caused the draft of an instruction to Sir Charles Wyke upon the subject to be prepared, together with the draft of an amended Declaration, and Mr. Otway was pleased to request that we would take those drafts into our consideration, and report to your Lordship at our earliest convenience whether we see any objection thereto.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken those drafts into consideration and have the honour to report—

That we concur in the view expressed by your Lordship in your proposed despatch to Sir Charles Wyke, and we think the draft submitted to us a much clearer and more convenient document than the French Declaration signed by Sir C. Wyke and the Danish Foreign Minister, and entirely free from objection.

We have, &c.
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
J. D. COLERIDGE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

Inclosure in No. 45.

Draft Declaration.

THE Undersigned, Sir Charles Lennox Wyke, Her Britannic Majesty's Envoy Extraordinary of Minister Plenipotentiary at the Court of Denmark, and the Count Krag Juel Vind Frijs de Frijsenborg, Minister for Foreign Affairs of His Majesty the King of Denmark, being duly authorized by their respective Governments, hereby declare that British subjects in the Dominions and Possessions of Denmark, and Danish subjects in the Dominions and Possessions of Great Britain, are exempted from forced loans and military exactions or requisitions, as well as from all compulsory military service, whether in the army, navy, or national guard or militia; and from all contributions, whether pecuniary or in kind, imposed as a commutation for personal service; provided they shall not have applied for and obtained naturalization in the country in which they reside.

---

Equator.

No. 46.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received September 18.)

Temple, September 17, 1869.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 14th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me, together with the former papers, a letter from the Chairman of the Ecuatorian Commission of Agency, inclosing copy of a letter addressed by the Minister of Finance of the Republic of Ecuador to their Agent in London, calling upon him to refund certain sums remitted to him for account of the dividends due to the bond-holders in this country, and to request that I would take this matter into my consideration, and advise your Lordship as to the proper course to pursue in this matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I am of opinion that your Lordship would not be justified in interfering with the funds in the hands of Messrs. E. de Murietta and Co., and that the Ecuatorian Commission of Agency must proceed in due course of law, if they wish to attach those funds.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

France.

No. 47.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received January 14.)

Temple, January 13, 1869.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 29th December last, stating that with reference to our report of the 23rd December he was directed by your Lordship to send us a note from the French Ambassador at this Court, dated the 24th ultimo, on the subject of the arrest at Hong Kong of some sailors belonging to the "Tigre," a French Messagéries steamer, and that he was to request that we would take this paper into our consideration, and furnish your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer that should be returned to it.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the note referred to in the said letter into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That a vessel, in order to be entitled under the Convention to the privileges of a vessel-of-war, must fall within the terms not only of Article 5, but of Articles 1 and 2, which are strictly confined to the object of conveying correspondence.

If we rightly understand the letter of the French Ambassador, the "Tigre" was not such a vessel, but one employed in the carriage of baggage only, and, if so, was not, in our opinion, within the fair scope of the Convention.

We have, &c.
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
J. D. COLERIDGE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 48.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received January 14.)

Temple, January 14, 1869.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of this day's date, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith a paper containing the demands expressed in the ultimatum addressed by the Porte to the Government of Greece, in regard to the conduct of the latter in countenancing and assisting the insurrection in Crete, and Mr. Hammond was pleased also to say that we are aware that a conference is now being held in Paris with a view to devise terms for the settlement of the differences between the two countries, and further to transmit to us a copy of a despatch received this morning from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris, in which we would find certain resolutions which the French Plenipotentiary proposes to submit to the Conference.

1869

Mr. Hammond further stated that we would see that Her Majesty's Ambassador, bearing in mind the caution contained in the despatch, which he inclosed (No. 11 of the 5th instant), requests to be immediately informed whether he may support these resolutions, as conformable to the view taken by Her Majesty's Government of the law of nations; and Mr. Hammond therefore added that he was to request that we would take the matter into our immediate consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion as to the answer which, bearing in mind the caution contained in the instruction to him in No. 11 of the 5th instant, may properly and safely be addressed to Her Majesty's Ambassador.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we see no objection to the propositions of International Law which Lord Lyons has underlined, but we suggest that it would be desirable to induce, if possible, the French Plenipotentiary to substitute in resolution 2 which follows, for the words "to make the necessary dispositions," such words as "to use her best endeavours," or "to do all that is possible." The words as they now stand might be construed to imply a duty on the part of the Greek Government absolutely to ensure that no armed vessel hostile to Turkey shall issue from her ports, whereas, in our controversy with the American Government, we have declined to accept the position of insurers against the departure from our ports of hostile cruizers, and contended that we had discharged our duty in doing all that we reasonably could to prevent such departure, even though we failed. It is true that the "Alabama" and the other vessels complained of left our ports unarmed, and that the second resolution is directed against the "armament" of such vessels, at the same time it may be unavoidable to admit that a neutral Government is an absolute insurer against even the armament of hostile cruizers in its ports.

Whether or not the objections which we have pointed out to the proposed wording of the second resolution by the French Plenipotentiary are of sufficient weight to be insisted on, if thereby the success of the conference should be endangered, is, of course, a question for your Lordship's consideration.

We have, &c.
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
J. D. COLERIDGE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 49.

The Attorney-General to Mr. Hammond.—(Received January 16.)

House of Commons, January 16, 1869.

My dear Mr. Hammond,

SPEAKING for myself (and I think I can speak for my colleagues), I understood "armements" as including "arming," though not confined to it. In the "Alexandra" case we had much discussion as to the difference between the English and American Foreign Enlistment Acts, the words of the American were (I speak from memory), "arming, equipping, fitting," &c.; and ours, "equipping, fitting," &c., without "arming," and a good deal of importance was attached to the omission of "arming" from our Act.

I thought it, therefore, as well to call attention to the word "armement," which I understood to include "arming," but our opinion did not turn upon that point; and if we were wrong in our interpretation of "armement," so much of oue opinion as relates to that matter may be considered as unwritten.

In a French dictionary in this (the House of Commons' Library), I find, "L'armement d'un vaisseau," translated "the arming, the fitting out of a vessel, equipment;" but recent usage may, perhaps, have restricted the meaning of the term.

Yours faithfully,
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.

P S.—I have written in a hurry, and may not have expressed myself clearly; what I would say is, that if "armement" means "equipment" only, still I think that it is the duty of a neutral not to "permit" it; and that therefore there is no objection to the words of the French Plenipotentiary.

R. P. C.

---

No. 50.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received April 19.)

Temple, April 17, 1869.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 7th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me a letter from Messrs. Brownlow, Lumsden, and Co., dated the 1st instant, in which, with reference to the stipulations of the Commercial Treaty between France and Austria, they request information as to the point, whether the privileges secured by Austria as to assimilation to French vessels, as regards port charges, can be claimed for British vessels trading from any port whatsoever to France. The previous correspondence connected with this case was also inclosed; and Mr. Otway was pleased to request that I would report to your Lordship my opinion as to the answer which should be returned to Messrs. Brownlow.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the reciprocity of port charges secured by the Convention of Navigation between France and Great Britain, in favour of French and British vessels, applies exclusively, in my opinion, to such vessels as are laden in a port of the one country, and carry their cargoes to some port of the other country. Such, I think, is the undoubted meaning of the stipulations of the Ist and IInd Articles, the latter part of the IInd Article expressly restricting, on the part of France, the importation in British ships of the productions of the countries of Europe, "unless such ships shall have been laden therewith in some port of the United Kingdom," and providing a power of making, by mutual consent, relaxations in the execution of this Article. The construction of the IVth Article, on the other hand, in the sense suggested by Messrs. Brownlow, Lumsden, and Co., is, I think, forbidden by the special reference to the conditions stipulated in the previous Articles. I think that reference restricts the prohibition to the grant of "any more favourable conditions to the vessels of any third Power" in pari materia, and that the view adopted by the Board of Trade, that the Convention applies to the direct trade between the two countries, is correct.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 51.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received April 23.)

Temple, April 22, 1869.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 7th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me a correspondence which has passed between the Foreign Office and the India Office, respecting a question which has been raised by the Governor of the French Settlements in India, in regard to the execution of the processes of British Courts within the limits of the French Factory at Calicut. A Memorandum, drawn up in the Foreign Office, bearing upon this subject, and also upon the general question of territorial arrangements between the Indian and French Governments, which is likewise referred to by the Indian Office, was also inclosed; and Mr. Otway was to request that I would take these papers into consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion upon the questions raised therein,

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the privileges which were enjoyed by factories in the East Indies, in the sense in which that term denotes an association of factors, have been frequently under discussion in our Prize Courts; and I consider it to be settled law that all persons admitted into any of such factories became clothed with the national character of the association, and were subject to the laws of the country which had established the factory. (The Indian Chief, 3 Chr. Rob. p. 29). But with regard to the soil upon which the trading establishment of the factors was built, and any surrounding land which was protected by fortifications, no similar legal discussions have taken place, as far as I am aware. That the sovereignty of the soil upon which the factory was established, was not granted to the country which established it, is, I think, clear from the history of the factories established by various European nations in the East Indies. The factory, however, in each case, seems to have had quasi-territorial privileges, and was, I consider, exempt from all exercise of jurisdiction on the part of the Sovereign of the country. With regard to the existing French Factory at Calicut, I am of opinion that persons within the establishment are exempt from service of process from the Madras Courts. Whether the grant of the use of the soil for a factory was in each case a grant in perpetuity, I am not sufficiently informed, so as to be able to advise your Lordship as to the rights which France may be entitled to maintain in respect of the sites of her ancient factories; but I am disposed to think, that in places where there is no existing association of traders, and no building, there is no factory; and the rights of France in respect of jurisdiction, would at least be in suspense. At the same time I would suggest to your Lordship, that before any action should be taken by the British authorities in regard to such sites, the papers which have been submitted to me should also be submitted to the Attorney- and Solicitor-General, that your Lordship may have the advantage of their views upon a somewhat novel subject.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 52.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received May 1.)

Temple, April 30, 1869.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 26th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a correspondence which has passed between the Foreign Office and the India Office, respecting a question which has been raised by the Governor of the French Settlements in India, in regard to the execution of the processes of British Courts within the limits of the French Factory at Calicut.

Mr. Hammond also inclosed a Memorandum drawn up in the Foreign Department, bearing upon this subject, and also upon the general question of territorial arrangements between the Indian and French Governments, which was likewise referred to by the India Office; and he was pleased to request that he would take these papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion upon the questions raised therein.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we are not quite sure that we understand clearly on what precise points our opinion is desired. If we are asked whether English process runs in factories restored to France in 1815, we are clearly of opinion that it does not, and that however inconvenient it may be, it seems from practice as well as principle that their independence of our authority (unless otherwise provided for by Treaty) must be respected. Even in cases where the factory has ceased to exist, it appears that hitherto the soil on which it stood has been considered French, and as such, exempt from English jurisdiction. If we are asked whether we think they ought still to be so respected, whether occupied by factories or not, where there is no French territory (in the larger sense) around them or adjoining, we reply that, in the face of the practice of our own authorities and Courts, a very heavy responsibility would lie on any one who now proceeded to enforce English process or English jurisdiction within such places, and that we have no materials for saying with certainty what was the exact nature of the tenure of the soil of the factories of the French when they first became occupied by French establishments. We cannot advise any alteration of the present practice on grounds of law. Whether negotiations on the subject are desirable is not within our province to determine.

We have, &c.
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
J. D. COLERIDGE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 53.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received May 11.)

Temple, May 11, 1869.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 4th May instant, stating that, on the receipt of our Report of the 13th January last, relative to the French Messageries steamer "Tigre," your Lordship addressed the note, of which the draft was inclosed (January 22), to the French Ambassador, and that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the reply of Prince de la Tour d'Auvergne, dated the 3rd instant, in which he states that his Government do not concur in the view that the Articles of the Anglo-French Postal Convention of 1856, apply only to vessels engaged exclusively in carrying correspondence.

Mr. Hammond also stated that his Excellency requested the further consideration of Her Majesty's Government in regard to the observations which he had been instructed to offer on the subject, and that he was to request that we would furnish your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer that should be returned to him.

Mr. Hammond was also pleased to say that the former papers were returned for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, upon reference to our previous Report of 13th January, 1869, your Lordship will perceive that we assumed from the letter of his Excellency the French Ambassador, of December 24, 1868, that the "Tigre" was not engaged in the conveyance of correspondence, but in the carriage of baggage (valise) only, and on that assumption we did not consider her to be employed in execution of Articles I and II of the Postal Convention, so as to be within the scope of Article V of that Convention. We did not, however, intend your Lordship to understand that we considered the Postal Convention of 1856 to apply only to vessels engaged exclusively in carrying correspondence. We consider vessels chartered or subsidized by either Government as packets will be within the scope of Article V of the Convention, provided they are actually conveying correspondence, notwithstanding they may also be conveying passengers and merchandize; and if the "Tigre" was such a vessel, she would be within the fair scope of the Convention.

We have, &c.
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
J. D. COLERIDGE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 54.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received May 13.)

Temple, May 12, 1869.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Murray's letter of the 4th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me two letters from the Board of Trade, and a letter from Mr. Parkes, regarding a claim preferred against the French Government by Mr. Simpson, as master and principal owner of the vessel "Mercutio," wrecked at Guadaloupe.

That the facts of the case are fully set forth in the Memorandum prepared by order of the Lords of Trade, but that with reference to that passage in which it is stated that the French Government detained the ship's papers until Mr. Simpson repaid a sum of 212*l.* 6*s.* 6*d.* (being the amount of loss incurred by the French Colonial Authorities on the sale of the vessel when abandoned), Mr. Murray was pleased to transmit the correspondence noted in the inclosed list, from which I should learn the steps taken by Her Majesty's Government as regards this special point. Mr. Murray was also pleased to state that I should observe that Mr. Simpson is represented to be acting on behalf of the Underwriters as well as in his own interest, and that besides Mr. Simpson more than one owner is alluded to. That as regards the allusion made in the Memorandum to the absence of explanations from the British Vice-Consul at Guadaloupe, who was concerned in the transaction, Mr. Murray was to state that it is understood that the Vice-Consul, who only held an unpaid appointment, has ceased to act on behalf of the British interests, and that the further explanations which might otherwise have been available are not likely to be forthcoming. That, subject to these observations, Mr. Murray was to request that I would take the case into my consideration, and report to your Lordship my opinion whether the claim of Mr. Simpson is one which Her Majesty's Government can properly urge on the French Government, and, further, as to the answer which should be returned to Messrs. Parkes.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the claim of Mr. Simpson is not one which Her Majesty's Government can, in my opinion, properly urge against the French Government, and that an answer to that effect should be returned to Messrs. Parkes.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

1869

No. 55.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received June 3.)

My Lord, Temple, May 31, 1869.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified to us in Mr. Murray's letter of the 22nd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from Mr. Syms, dated the 20th ultimo, requesting the intervention of Her Majesty's Consul at Paris in the steps necessary to effect the transfer of certain French railway shares.

Mr. Murray was pleased also to inclose the correspondence noted in the margin,* from which we would learn the steps which had subsequently been taken in the matter, and also that the Legal Adviser to Her Majesty's Embassy at Paris had advised that the parties interested must have recouse to legal proceedings before a French tribunal. As, however, it had been stated that difficulties of a similar character arose in this country in the case of French subjects dying here, your Lordship considered it desirable to consult the Secretary of State for the Home Department on the matter, and Mr. Murray was to inclose a letter from that Department, dated the 20th instant, conveying Mr. Secretary Bruce's suggestions as to the steps which could be taken to meet the requirements of the case. The question of the certificates required in France on the transfer of shares had already been referred to the Law Officers, whose Report, together with the correspondence connected with the case, then under consideration, was annexed therewith for our convenience;† and he was to request that we would take the subject into our consideration, and furnish your Lordship at our early convenience with the statement as to English law suggested by Mr. Bruce.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That by the law of England, before the testamentary executor of a French subject under a will made in accordance with French law would be entitled to claim to have transferred to him, as such executor, the personal property in England of the deceased, it would be requisite for him to constitute himself the personal representative of the deceased according to English law, and for such purpose to take out an English Probate of an authenticated copy of the French will, and to pay probate duty in respect of the property to be administered in England. We presume your Lordship would not be disposed to ask the French Government to dispense with the present requirements of the French law in respect of the personal property in France of an English testator, without being prepared to offer reciprocal facilities in the case of a French testator, who may die possessed of personal property in England.

We doubt whether a formal statement of the English law on this subject would be for the advantage of British testators who may die possessed of personal property in France.

The difficulty which may arise at present in France in respect of the transfer of French railway shares, the property of deceased British subjects, if the parties interested should be required to have recourse to legal proceedings before a French tribunal, appear to us to be no greater—indeed, we think they are in fact less—than those which at present exist in England in respect of the transfer of the personal property in England of French testators.

We have, &c.
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
J. D. COLERIDGE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 56.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received July 3.)

My Lord, Temple, July 2, 1869.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of this day's date, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me a despatch from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris (No. 664, June 30), relative to the arrest, during the recent riots in that capital, of a British subject named Mr. Washington Tremlett; and to request that I would furnish your Lordship with my immediate opinion on the case.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the view taken by the Consul of Her Majesty's Embassy of this case, with which Her Majesty's Ambassador agrees, may, in my opinion, be properly approved by your Lordship.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

* To Mr. Syms, April 24: to Lord Lyons, No. 45; Lord Lyons, No. 133, 1869.

† Law Officers, July 29; Mr. Mourilyan, July 9, July 27, and August 13; to Mr. Mourilyon, August 20; Messrs. Boys, July 26; to Messrs. Boys, July 30; to Consul Atlee, No. 3; to Mr. Fane, No. 12; Mr. Fane, No. 66, 1867.

---

No. 57.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received August 12.)

My Lord, Temple, August 11, 1869.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified to us in Mr. Charles Spring Rice's letter of the 6th instant, stating—

1. That, with reference to our Report of the 31st of May last, in regard to the difficulties which had arisen in France as regards the "certificats de coutume" required in the case of the transfer of railway shares he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Lord Lyons (No. 183) containing a Report from the Legal Adviser to Her Majesty's Embassy at Paris respecting the course to be pursued in order to place the matter on a satisfactory footing.

2. That we would perceive from that paper that M. Treitt had placed himself in communication with the railway authorities, who were themselves desirous that means should be devised to meet the difficulties of the case, which were stated only to occur as regards the shares held by British subjects.

3. That the railway authorities stated that they were prepared to accept the certificate of a solicitor in this country if the British Consul in France subscribed to his signature an attestation in the following words:—

"The Undersigned Consul certifies that Mr.           is solicitor of the Court of           , and that he is consequently qualified to deliver the above certificate, and faith is due to his attestation."

4. That M. Treitt added that, in case of the adoption of that expedient, and of contradictory certificates being presented, the decision must rest with the French Court competent to deal with that case.

5. That Mr. Rice was pleased also to request that we would take that subject into our consideration, and report to your Lordship at our early convenience our opinion whether the course proposed could be adopted, and specially whether solicitors in this country would be competent to sign the necessary certificate, and what steps would be be necessary to legalize their signatures, so as to enable one of Her Majesty's Consuls in France to add his attestation.

6. That the previous correspondence was returned for our convenience.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we see no objection to the form proposed, with a modification. We should suggest the form to be the following:—

"The," &c., down to "Court of           ," "and that before becoming so he must have a knowledge of English law sufficient to enable him to make the above statement, and to justify the French Companies in acting, if they think fit, upon the statement which he makes.

We have, &c.
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
J. D. COLERIDGE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 58.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received August 20.)

My Lord, Temple, August 19, 1869.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified to us in Mr. Arthur Otway's letter of the 12th instant, stating—

1. That with reference to our Report of the 11th instant, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from the Society of Notaries, dated the 7th instant, setting forth the grounds on which they requested that British Consuls in France might not be authorized to certify to legal documents.

2. That it was not expressly stated in that letter that the subject to which they referred was the course pursued in the matter of the "Certificats de Contume," brought under our considerotion in his letter of the 6th instant; and that if, however, such reference was intended, we would observe that the course pursued by Her Majesty's Consul at Paris was incorrectly described.

3. That in any case, however, your Lordship considered it desirable that the letter of the Society of Notaries should be referred to us for consideration, in connection with the question as to "Certificats de Contume;" and your Lordship requested that, in stating whether that letter modified the view conveyed in our Report above referred to, we would add our opinion as to the nature of the answer which should be returned to the Society of Notaries.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That it appears from the letter of the Society of Notaries, that there is no substantial foundation for the representation made by Mr. Mourylian, in his letter of 9th July, 1867, to your Lordship's predecessor in office, as to the necessity of Her Majesty's Consuls in France being allowed to certify the competency of English Solicitors resident in France to give certificates as to British law in matters of succession. This representation is to the effect that, "unless there be some means of supplying the (French) authorities with the Certificates of Custom which they require, the difficulties and expense of dealing with such property (i.e. personal property in France of British subjects dying domiciled in Engtand), after a testator's death, will be enormous."

What the precise character of the "Certificate of Custom" is, does not appear from Mr. Mourylian's letter, nor whether, in fact, it originated with Mr. Pickford, Her Majesty's late Consul, who was also a lawyer; but, it appears from the letter of the Society of Notaries, that it is of modern origin, or at least is a modern variety, and has no advantages of reduced expense over the practice which has been in use until a very recent period, and which is stated by them to have been admitted as satisfactory by the authorities in France. As we have stated in our previous Report, we see no objection to Her Majesty's Consuls being allowed to certify in the form as modified by us; but if it should not be held satisfactory by the French Companies, we see no reason, after the information suplied in the letter of the Society of Notaries, why the older, and, as we are disposed to think, safer, practice should not be resumed.

The last sentence of our Report will sufficiently indicate the answer which, if your Lordship thinks fit, it will be proper to return to the French Notaries.

We have, &c.
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
J. D. COLERIDGE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 59.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received November 3.)

My Lord,
Temple, November 3, 1869.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of this day's date, stating that he was directed to transmit to me a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Paris, respecting an application made to him by a British naturalized subject of the Jewish persuasion to be married in the British Embassy or Consulate at Paris. The draft of a despatch which your Lordship proposes to address to Mr. West in reply was also inclosed, and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take the same into my consideration, and report to your Lordship whether it may properly be sent to Paris.

In obedience to your Lordship's command I have the honour to report—

That this is not, in my opinion, a case in which your Lordship should authorize a marriage to be solemnized in Her Majesty's Embassy at Paris. Mr. Brandeis appears to be established as a banker at Vienna, and must be taken, I think, to have an Austrian domicile, whilst the lady is a French subject. The marriage would, therefore, not be solemnized according to the law of the husband's domicile, whilst it would be invalid according to the lex loci. I think it would be a matter of doubtful propriety for your

---

FRANCE.

No. 60*.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Twiss to the Earl of Clarendon.—
(Received December 2.)

Temple, December 1, 1869.

My Lord,

"Certificats de Coutume:" Proposed new form of.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands, signified in Mr. Spring-Rice's letter of the 25th ultimo, stating that, with reference to our Reports of the 11th and 19th August on the subject of "certificats de coutume," he was directed to transmit to us a further despatch from Mr. West, reporting that the French Railway Companies have refused to accept the form of certificate proposed by Her Majesty's Government, and submitting for approval a new form suggested under the circumstances therein set forth by M. Treitt, the Legal Adviser of the British Embassy in Paris.

The last papers on this question were also inclosed, and Mr. Spring-Rice was pleased to request that we would again take the matter into our consideration, and furnish your Lordship with our opinion on the proposal now made by M. Treitt.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands, we have the honour to—

Report—

That we do not think it necessary to insist on the form of certificate which we suggested, and inasmuch as it is stated that the form proposed by M. Treitt will be accepted by Railway Companies, and will cause the present difficulties to disappear, we think that, on the whole, it may be properly adopted, though not altogether free from objection.

We have, &c.
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
J. D. COLERIDGE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

[334]

1869

Lordship to sanction the solemnization of the proposed marriage under such circumstances at Her Majesty's Embassy.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 60.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received November 19.

My Lord, Temple, November 19, 1869.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Spring Rice's letter of the 17th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us an accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Consul at Bordeaux (No. 16), representing the circumstances under which the Avocat-Général in that city is desirous of obtaining authoritative information as to whether a judgment pronounced by the Court of Queen's Bench in this country, in the case of Clarkson and others v. Bentzen, would be open to any suspensory proceedings by the defendant, as in the contrary case the Court at Bordeaux would probably order the execution of the judgment, and Mr. Spring Rice was pleased to request that we would take this case into our consideration, and favour your Lordship, at our early convenience, with our opinion as to the instructions which may be right to give to Mr. Hunt in this matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this case into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That a judgment by default in the Queen's Bench, or any other superior Court, is a final judgment, and while it stands is conclusive.

There is no difference in its legal effect, quoad the right to issue execution upon it or otherwise, from that of a judgment after appearance and pleadings. There is no process by which, as of course, its effect can be suspended, any more than the effect of any other judgment. All judgments, within certain limits as to time, are open to be set aside upon terms, and at the discretion of the Court, but this is true of all, and in no especial way of judgments by default.

We have, &c.
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
J. D. COLERIDGE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

Greece.

No. 61.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received January 19.)

My Lord, Temple, January 18, 1869.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 16th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a copy of a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Athens No. 5 January 7, inclosing a translation of a Royal Decree authorizing the issue of Treasury notes to the amount of 15,000,000 drachmas, which are made a legal tender throughout the Kingdom in all monetary transactions. Mr. Hammond was pleased also to inclose a copy of the Treaty of the 29th of March, 1864, referred to by Mr. Erskine, and, with reference to the stipulations contained in Article VII of that Treaty, to request that we would favour your Lordship at our earliest convenience with our opinion as to its bearing upon the enforcement of the Decree in question in the Ionian Islands.

In obedience to the commands of your Lordship we have the honour to report—

1869

That, without being informed what were "the privileges conceded to the Ionian Bank" mentioned in Article VII of the Treaty, we are unable to advise that the Royal Ordinance amounts to a breach of that Treaty, or that it affords more than a subject of friendly representation to the Greek Government.

We may add, that if it distinctly and in terms infringes any such privileges, it would clearly be a breach of the Treaty; if, however, the injury to the Ionian Bank is only the injury, which must necessarily result to any Financial Company from a measure so ill-judged as that described by Mr. Erskine, we should think that, however disastrous such consequence might be, it would be no breach of the Treaty.

We have, &c.
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
J. D. COLERIDGE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 62.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received February 2.)

Temple, February 2, 1868.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 23rd ultimo, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 18th ultimo, he was directed to transmit to us a further despatch from Mr. Erskine respecting the financial measures of the Greek Government. The previous correspondence on this subject together with a copy of the Treaty of the 29th March, 1864, and the draft of a despatch, which your Lordship has addressed to Mr. Erskine, giving an account of an interview, which your Lordship had with a deputation from the Ionian Bank in London, was also inclosed, and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would consider and report to your Lordship, at our earliest convenience, our opinion whether, if Her Majesty's Government cannot properly invoke the VIIth Article of the Treaty of 1864, in order to induce the Greek Government no longer to resort to such measures, they might seek the co-operation of France and Russia with a view to attain this end, on the ground that such measures are in violation of the rights secured to the Three Powers under the XIIth Article of the Treaty of the 7th May, 1832, by which they guaranteed the Greek loan of 1832. A copy of this Treaty was also inclosed, and Mr. Hammond further stated, for our information, that Her Majesty's Government have declared, at various times with reference to other financial measures, that they cannot release Greece from the obligations thereby imposed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we have already stated our opinion that the measures of the Greek Government, however unsound, economically, and likely to be prejudicial to the interests of the Ionian Bank, do not constitute a casus fœderis as regards the Treaty of March 29, 1864; and we do not think that the Three Powers could interfere with the financial operations of the Greek Government under Article XII of the Treaty of May 7, 1832, so long as the revenues assigned to the payment of the guaranteed debt are not diverted to other objects. If, directly or indirectly, the effective receipts of the Greek Government should be diverted from the purpose mentioned in the Treaty, namely, the payment first of all of the guaranteed loan, this would amount to a breach of Treaty, and a case for interference by the Three Powers would immediately arise. But if the effect of the Greek financial measures be no more than to diminish the revenue and to increase the financial embarrassments of the country, we think that the Three Powers would only be entitled to make such representations, as sureties may fairly address to a principal whose reckless conduct makes it probable that they may be called upon to pay his debt.

We have, &c.
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
J. D. COLERIDGE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 63.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received March 27.)

Temple, March 25, 1869.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 8th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying despatch and its inclosures received from Her Majesty's Minister at Athens, No. 43, 16th February, with regard to the proceedings taken by the Greek authorities with respect to certain persons who had committed, at Zante, an assault upon the master of the British schooner "Sylph." The previous papers were also inclosed, and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take the same into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the instructions with which it would be proper for your Lordship to furnish Mr. Erskine in regard to this matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That, with reference to the assault on the master of the "Sylph," there are two points raised in the correspondence. The first regards the alleged inadequacy of the penalty; the second regards the evasion of the offenders. Upon the first point I would observe that there was a fact proved before the Court, which makes it appear doubtful whether the Procureur de Roi is fairly open to censure for want of energy in the conduct of the case on account of the penalty being inadequate to the offence. It appears from the introductory part of the Judgment of the Court that the extreme penalty, under the particular law applicable to the case of "an assault without premeditation," is six months' imprisonment, which the Procureur de Roi pressed the Court to inflict upon the offenders, but which the Court declined to do, and awarded them only four months' imprisonment. The Court, in awarding the milder penalty, may have been influenced by a fact to which it refers, as proved by the witnesses, and which fact is in direct conflict with the original declaration made by the master to Mr. Consul Wodehouse, that "no one on board his vessel had done anything to provoke the attack upon him." The Court, however, held it to be proved that the crew of the "Sylph" had, at an early part of the day, loosened the mooring chains of the Greek vessel, so that the attempt of the Greek sailors to loosen the chains of the "Sylph" would be an act of retaliation, provoked by the previous conduct of the "Sylph." Under such circumstances the Court may have felt itself at liberty to mitigate the penalty without any imputation resting upon the Procureur de Roi for want of energy. The second part, however, may be open to other considerations. It does not appear from the correspondence what the Greek law is in such a case, whether security ought to have been taken for the appearance of the accused parties at the trial, or how it came to pass that precautions were not taken by the Greek authorities to prevent seamen under a criminal charge sailing away from the port on the eve of their trial. It appears that the cause was heard and judgment given in default of their appearance, and it certainly would be a mockery of justice if the Greek authorities are to fold their hands, and take no measures to have the guilty parties apprehended, and the sentence enforced against them, wherever they may be found in the Greek dominions. I think your Lordship may, with good reason, instruct Her Majesty's Minister at Athens to urge upon the Greek Government the necessity of taking every step in their power to enforce the sentence; and it may perhaps deserve your Lordship's consideration whether Her Majesty's Minister may not be instructed to suggest that, if the Greek Government permits its laws to be violated by its subjects with impunity, to the grievous wrong of British subjects, it may become incumbent on Her Majesty's Government to demand some direct compensation for the British subjects who suffer by their violation.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 64.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received March 27.)

Temple, March 27, 1869.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 8th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the accompanying despatch and its inclosures from Her Majesty's Minister at Athens (No. 43 of February 16), respecting certain proceedings before the Correctional Tribunal at Corfu in the case of Luigi Farugia, a British subject; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take these papers into my consideration and report to your Lordship my opinion as to the instructions with which it will be proper for your Lordship to furnish Mr. Erskine in regard to this matter.

Mr. Hammond was also directed by your Lordship to transmit to me a further despatch, with its inclosures from Her Majesty's Minister at Athens (No. 57 of March 11) respecting this case, and to request that I would take the same into my consideration, together with the papers inclosed in his letter of the 8th instant.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That it does not appear from the Memorial of Luigi Farugia, nor from the judgment of the Correctional Court, what were the precise words used by Luigi Farugia in refusing to comply with the order of the Advocate Fiscal to provide him immediately with a carriage. M. Farugia admits that an order was brought to him which he could not read, being written in Greek, and he says that he simply requested the official to acquaint his superior with the true motives for which he considered it impossible to execute his order. It was, however, not the act of a reasonably prudent man to neglect to inform himself of the nature of the written order, nor was it consistent with due respect to the Advocate Fiscal's office to send by the bearer of a written order a verbal message, the tone of which would probably be rendered still more unpalatable to the Advocate Fiscal on its delivery by his subordinate. It is very probable in this case that Luigi Farugia has been somewhat harshly treated, but he is not, I think, altogether free from blame; and as the Correctional Court found him to have contravened the law, I think your Lordship cannot well comply with his request that he should be indemnified for the pecuniary losses which he has sustained by his imprisonment.

I observe that the Judgment of the Correctional Court describes M. Farugia twice as born in Zante, and therefore now a Greek subject, whereas he is described by Consul-General Saunders as a British subject domiciled in Corfu, and in the opinion of his Advocate (No. 5 in Mr. Erskine's No. 43) as a Maltese domiciled at Corfu. It may, perhaps, deserve inquiry from your Lordship whether M. Farugia is of Maltese extraction and of Ionian birth, as in the latter case I presume that he would not be considered by your Lordship as entitled to British protection in Corfu against the Greek authorities.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 65.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received April 10.)

Temple, April 9, 1869.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Murray's letter of the 5th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to us the accompanying despatch and its inclosures from Her Majesty's Minister at Athens respecting the alleged ill-treatment of two Maltese at Syra; and to request that I would take these papers into my consideration, and report to your Lordship my opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That your Lordship may properly approve the steps which have been taken by Her Majesty's Minister at Athens and by Her Majesty's Consul at Syra to procure a thorough investigation of the complaint of the two Maltese. As, however, Her Majesty's Consul considers it to be doubtful whether the two Maltese can be relied upon as witnesses to support their complaint in Court if the former Director of the Police at Syra should be put upon his trial, it may deserve consideration on the part of Her Majesty's Minister at Athens, as the Director of Police has resigned his post, whether it would be advisable to press for his trial upon the complaint of the Maltese, unless the Greek authorities are prepared to send him to trial upon the earlier and more serious charge of putting their own subject, Nicholas Stathato, to torture. The evidence of Nicholas Stathato, who has been declared innocent of the crime imputed to him, would weigh heavily against the former Director of Police, and would assist the case of the Maltese, whereas the evidence of the Maltese, if it stands alone, would be open to grave exception, and would be met by contradictory evidence of a formidable character; for it appears from the Report of the Procureur-Général that Michel Zamont, who alone had any marks of personal injury, had clearly taken part in the robbery of which he is accused, and knew where the stolen property was concealed; and the police officers will depose that he injured himself by a fall in pointing out to them "the out-of-the-way place where the money was concealed."

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 66.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received May 25.)

Temple, May 24, 1869.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 17th instant, stating that, with reference to that part of my report of the 25th March, on the case of Luigi Farrugia, which suggests that inquiry should be made in regard to his nationality, he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying despatch, which has been received from Her Majesty's Minister at Athens on that subject (No. 80, of May 8), and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would report to your Lordship my opinion as to the instructions which should be given to Mr. Erskine, in reply to the points raised in his despatch.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That with regard to the point raised in the despatch of Her Majesty's Minister at Athens, "whether he is to understand that henceforth it is the deliberate intention of Her Majesty's Government to decline to recognize as a British subject a person born abroad of British parents," I presume that his Excellency has in view the child of a British father, born in a country where the law of that country does not admit the child of a foreigner to the status of a subject, such as is represented to be the condition of Luigi Farrugia. As regards such persons, I would suggest that Her Majesty's Minister may be properly instructed by your Lordship, that it is not the intention of Her Majesty's Government to decline to protect them, as heretofore, against the obligations which the laws of the country of their birth may impose upon its natural-born subjects.

With regard to what Her Majesty's Minister conceives to be a well-established principle of the Common Law of England, Her Majesty's Minister may be properly informed that the privilege to which he refers is derived from the Statute Law of England, no person under the English Common Law being recognized as a natural-born subject, unless born within the allegiance of the Crown, and that the privileges which are granted by statute to the children of British fathers born abroad cannot of right be claimed by them, except within territory which is subject to British law.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 67.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received June 4.)

Temple, June 4, 1869.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 1st instant, stating that, with reference to my report of the 28th of March, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me, together with the previous papers, an accompanying despatch from Mr. Erskine, respecting the course pursued by the Greek Government in regard to the assault committed at Zante on the Master of the British schooner "Sylph," and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would again take this matter into consideration, and report to your Lordship my opinion as to the course which your Lordship should now pursue.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken this matter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That it appears to me that the most advisable course for your Lordship to pursue will be to instruct Her Majesty's Minister at Athens to express to the Greek Minister of Foreign Affairs your thanks for the inquiry which has been made, and the explanation given, as to the course pursued by the Procureur du Roi at Zante, and your satisfaction at his assurance that every effort will be made to enforce the judgment of the Court against the culprits, if they should come at any time within Greek jurisdiction.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

1869

Hayti.

No. 68.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received January 12.)

My Lord, Temple, January 11, 1868.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 8th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the accompanying correspondence, relative to the capture by the Haytian authorities of British and French vessels, and to the measures taken by the British and French naval forces, acting under the instructions of the Chargé d'Affaires of the two countries, to obtain the release of the vessels in question, and to request that I would take these papers into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to any steps which Her Majesty's Government should take in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That your Lordship may properly concur in the approval which the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty propose to convey to Commander Phillimore, of the proceedings of the British squadron, in concert with the French squadron, at St. Marc and Gonaives, which have resulted in the release of the vessels captured by the Haytian cruizers. As Hayti has acceded to the Declaration of Paris of 1856, any violation of its provisions in respect of vessels under the flag of any of the signataries of that Declaration would involve, in my opinion, a breach of faith towards all the parties to it, which would justify them in taking measures in common to redress it. Her Majesty's Government may, therefore, I think, with perfect right, authorize Her Majesty's naval officers to give effective co-operation to the officers of the French marine in procuring on all occasions a strict observance of the principles affirmed by Hayti, when she acceded to such Declaration, as regards the requirements to constitute a blockade binding upon neutrals.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No 69.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received April 3.)

My Lord, Temple, April 2, 1869.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 27th ultimo, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Port-au-Prince, inclosing a copy of a Convention which has been entered into between the Council of Secretaries of State of the Republic of Hayti and the acting Chargé d'Affaires of France, with regard to French commerce and debt, and which contains provisions with reference to French vessels, which it appears the Haytian Government propose to extend to the vessels of other Powers; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take the same into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands, I have the honour to report—

That the Convention contains provisions of a very novel character, and whilst from one point of view the second Article might be taken to involve a recognition on the part of France of a paper-blockade of the Haytian ports in the possession of the rebels, mitigated, as Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Port-au-Prince considers, by conditional licences for French vessels to trade with those ports; from another point of view it may be regarded as an undertaking on the part of the Haytian Government not to blockade any of those ports against French vessels, on condition that all French vessels bound to any of those ports shall put into Port-au-Prince or some port under the control of the Haytian Government, to have their cargoes examined and verified as not being contraband of war, before they proceed to their port of destination.

I am disposed to think that the latter is the more correct view, for two principal reasons. The former view would be inconsistent with the Declaration of Paris, on the subject of maritime right in time of war, to which both France and Hayti are parties. The latter view, on the other hand, harmonizes with the interests of both Powers. It is obviously for the interest of France, which has a Treaty lien on the Customs' duties, to be received in the ports of the Republic open to foreign commerce, that the Haytian Government should not establish a blockade of the ports in the possession of the rebels; whilst it is for the advantage of Hayti that French vessels should voluntarily come into the ports under the control of the Haytian Government to have their cargoes examined and verified as not being contraband of war, instead of the Haytian Government being obliged to maintain cruizers at sea, to exercise its right of search over French vessels.

The important question for your Lordship's consideration is, whether it is desirable that Her Majesty's Government should avail itself of the offer of the Haytian Government to extend to the vessels of other nations what it terms "the privileges" accorded by the Convention to French vessels. If the view which I have ventured to suggest, and I suggest it with great deference to your Lordship's better judgment, be the correct view, it would not, in my opinion, be desirable that Her Majesty's Government should avail itself of the offer of the Haytian Government. In the first place, as regards any right of the Haytian Government to establish a blockade of the rebel ports against the vessels of other neutral States than France, if they should not avail themselves of the offer of the Haytian Government, I am of opinion that it will not be competent for Hayti to establish any blockade of those ports, which will be obligatory on those States, as long as those parts are systematically open to French trade. No case precisely in point can be cited, for the arrangement between France and Hayti is without precedent. But if a blockade were to be established, the privileges, which would be enjoyed by French vessels under this Convention to violate the blockade, would tend to throw the whole trade into the hands of the merchants of one neutral State, to the exclusion of the merchants of other neutral States, which would operate greatly to the injury of the latter; whilst the liberty accorded to French vessels to carry to the rebel ports all kinds of supplies, excepting contraband of war, would be inconsistent with the principles upon which the right of a belligerent to exclude neutrals from any enemy's port rests, namely, that the necessities of war require the belligerant to cut off all communication of commerce with the enemy. This question, in its bearing upon licenses and Orders in Council, has been discussed very fully by Dr. Lushington in his judgment in the case of the "Franciska" (2 Spinks Eccl. and Admy. Reports, page 136), and by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council on the appeal in the same case (10 Moore, page 50), and the reasoning in both Judgments seem to me to warrant the opinion I have ventured to express on this part of the case. If it be assumed then that it will not be competent for the Haytian Government to establish hereafter any blockade of the rebel ports, which would be obligatory on British vessels, so long as this Convention shall be in force, it remains to consider whether in other respects British vessels would obtain any adequate privileges by Her Majesty's Government acceding to the offer of the Haytian Government. I am disposed to think that the Convention does not confer any privileges upon French vessels, which are commensurate with the novel obligations imposed upon them. For it may be observed that France has not stipulated for French vessels to be allowed to enter the ports under the control of the Haytian Government, if their owners are so minded, in order to have their cargoes verified, and to be at liberty to proceed to any Haytian port without molestation from Haytian cruizers, but the French Government has agreed that every French merchant-vessel with a cargo destined to a rebel port, shall previously enter a Governmennt port to have its cargo verified, and only after fulfilling this condition shall be at liberty to proceed without molestation to a rebel port (ce n'est qu'à la suite de cette formalité, qu'il pourra se diriger librement dans n'importe quel port de la Republique à son option). As it is stated in the concluding part of the IInd Article of the Convention, that vessels which have any contraband of war on board will be excluded from the benefits of the Convention, the so-called "privileges" will only apply to vessels having no contraband of war on board. But British vessels will be at liberty under the General Law of nations to trade with any port in the possession of the rebels, which is not under blockade, in all articles of merchandize which are not contraband of war, and for such trade do not require any Treaty privilege.

They will be subject no doubt to the right of search both on the high seas and in Haytian waters, but if that right of search should be vexatiously exercised by Haytian cruizers in Haytian waters, and it may be observed that this Convention only applies to the waters of the Republic, such conduct on the part of the cruizers would be properly matter for remonstrance on the part of Her Majesty's Government, and, if need be, might justify reprisals.

1869

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 70.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received April 6.)

Temple, April 6, 1869.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Murray's letter of the 3rd instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying despatch and its inclosures from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Port-au-Prince, relative to a claim for indemnity which he has preferred against the Haytian Government on account of the pillage of his house by the Government troops, and Mr. Murray was pleased to request that I would take the same into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion thereupon. The previous despatches alluded to by Mr. St. John were also inclosed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires is fully justified in demanding from the Haytian Government a complete indemnity for the pillage of his house by the Government troops, and that your Lordship may properly approve the demand which he has made upon that Government.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 71.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received April 17.)

Temple, April 17, 1869.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Murray's letter of the 9th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the accompanying letter from Messrs. Duranty and Co., of Liverpool, inclosing an account of a claim which they have upon the Haytian Government for goods and property stolen and destroyed at Port-au-Prince during the insurrection, and Mr. Murray was pleased to request that I would take the same into my consideration, and favour your Lordship with my opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That the papers submitted to your Lordship in this case are so meagre in their statement of facts, that your Lordship cannot safely admit the asserted ownership of Messrs. Duranty and Co. I think it by no means improbable that Mr. Nepomucene Cesvet may prove to be the person in whose name the claim should be made, if it should be proper to make it at all.

Your Lordship may therefore, I think, properly require Messrs. Duranty and Co. to furnish your Lordship with a fuller statement from themselves as to the conditions on which their goods had been consigned to Mr. Nepomucene Cesvet, and whether they had received any advances upon them.

With regard to Mr. Nepomucene Cesvet, as he omits to state in his affidavit, in which he describes himself as of Kingston in Jamaica, that he is a British subject, a further affidavit may be properly required from him on that head, as well as upon the nature of his commercial establishment in Port-au-Prince, and whether, as consignee, he had made advances on the goods of Messrs. Duranty and Co., or was factor for them under a del credere commission.

I venture to suggest to your Lordship that it would be desirable to obtain some information from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Port-au-Prince in regard to the establishment and national character of Mr. Nepomucene Cesvet.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 72.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received August 23.)

Temple, August 21, 1869.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 16th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the inclosed papers as marked in the margin, relative to the piratical acts of a steamer named "Telegrafo," at present detained at Tortola by order of the Governor-in-chief of the Leeward Islands; and that he was to request that we would take the papers into our consideration, and inform your Lordship at our earliest convenience what reply should be returned to Mr. Gautier's note, and what instructions should be sent out to the Governor at Tortola.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

There appears upon the papers submitted to us a primâ facie case of piracy against the "Telegrafo." We think that the Governor of the Leeward Islands should be instructed to detain her, in order to afford an opportunity to the Dominican authorities to present their case against her.

It would be proper for the Crown Proctor to put himself in communication with them, and if sufficient evidence of piracy is obtainable to justify proceedings in the Vice-Admiralty Court, to institute such proceedings.

These observations will indicate the nature of the reply which in our opinion it would be proper for your Lordship to address to Mr. Gautier.

We have, &c.
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
J. D. COLERIDGE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 73.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received September 25.)

Temple, September 23, 1869.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 8th instant, stating that, on receipt of my Report of the 17th of April last, respecting the claim of Messrs. Duranty and Co. to compensation from the Haitian Government for the loss and destruction of their property during an insurrection at Port au Prince, your Lordship called upon those gentlemen, and upon Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires, to furnish the further information relating to the matter, with which I desired to be supplied.

That Mr. Hammond was now directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the accompanying despatch from Mr. St. John, and letter from Messrs. Duranty, containing such further information as they can give; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take these papers into my consideration and favour your Lordship with my opinion as to the steps which should be taken in the matter.

The previous papers were likewise inclosed therewith.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That, as it appears from the despatch of Mr. Spencer St. John of the 19th June, 1869, that Mr. Nepomucene Cesvet, whose stores were plundered by the insurgents at Port au Prince on 22d February, 1867, was a natural-born Haytian citizen, I am of opinion that his stores were not entitled to British protection, and that your Lordship cannot properly authorize Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires to claim from the Haytian Government compensation for any goods which were in Mr. N. Cesvet's stores, and which were destroyed by the insurgents, on the ground that they had been consigned to him by British subjects.

There is nothing in this case, as far as I can gather from the affidavit of Mr. N. Cesvet of the 10th of March, 1869, or from the information furnished by Messrs. Duranty and Co., which takes it out of the general rule, that the consignment of the goods to Mr. N. Cesvet created a personal debt on his part to the amount of their value, which he tacitly admits in the fourth paragraph of his affidavit, when he says that the value of the goods will be lost to Messrs. Duranty and Co., in consequence of the loss of all that he possessed through the pillage.

1869

I think the observation of Mr. Spencer St. John is well founded, that Mr. N. Cesvet was the proper person to make any claim, if it could under the circumstances be maintained against the Haytian Government, and that he ought to have made that claim long ago, before the subsequent insurrection prevailed which drove General Geffrard from power.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 74.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received October 1.)

Temple, October 1, 1869.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 29th ultimo stating that, with reference to our Report of the 21st of August respecting the case of the steamer "Telegrapho," he inclosed a letter from the Colonial Office of the 30th of August with a despatch from Sir B. Pine, the Governor-in-chief of the Leeward Islands, reporting the reasons which induced him to order her release.

Mr. Hammond was also to inclose a further letter from the same Department with a Report from the Governor, from which it appears that he had refused to grant that vessel a British register, and is threatened in consequence with an action.

That the Governor, as we should see, asks for instructions, and the Colonial Office are anxious, if possible, to send them by the mail of the 1st of October.

A letter from the Admiralty was also inclosed respecting the sale of the "Telegrapho."

And Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take the matter into our immediate consideration, and report our opinion at our earliest convenience as to the instructions to be sent to the Governor.

The previous papers were annexed for reference if required.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into our immediate consideration, and have the honour to report—

That this case is incumbent with difficulty at the present time in consequence of the course taken by Governor Sir B. Pine in releasing the vessel when he was really convinced that there were strong grounds for her detention. The vessel having been released since a sale was effected to a British subject, it is not easy to justify the refusal to grant a British register. If, however, the Governor is really satisfied that the sale is not boná fide, we think he may be properly instructed not to grant the register except under compulsion of law, and whether, under all the circumstances of the case, it is not the more honourable and correct course for the Governor, as representing Her Majesty's Government, not to forward in any way, except under the like compulsion, the immunity of a vessel, the past of which is so highly objectionable, is a matter of which your Lordship is the best judge.

We have, &c.
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
J. D. COLERIDGE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 75.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received December 1.)

Temple, November 29, 1869.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 22nd instant, stating, that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Port au Prince, No. 61, October 25, reporting the circumstances attending the capture of the British schooner "Express," by a Haytian war-steamer, "Alexander Petion," on a charge of being engaged in contraband trade; and Mr. Otway was pleased to request that I would take the same into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the seizure of the "Express" upon the high seas, under the circumstances stated by Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires, cannot, in my opinion, be justified on the grounds set forth in the despatch of the Haytian Secretary of State, of 8th October, 1869, namely, that she had, when she was within Haytian jurisdiction, contravened the Haytian laws of trade, by communicating with a port not open under those laws to foreign trade. I am further of opinion, that your Lordship may, of right, require that the owners of the "Express" should be indemnified by the Haytian Government for the losses which they have incurred by the unjustifiable seizure and confiscation of the vessel and her cargo.

I am, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

Italy.

No. 76.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received January 22.)

Temple, January 22, 1869.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 16th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me a despatch and its inclosures from Her Majesty's Minister in Italy, respecting a question which has arisen with the Italian Government regarding the proper interpretation of certain Articles of the Treaty of Navigation between France and Italy of 1862, with reference to the exemption of French vessels from a double payment of anchorage dues. That it is not denied that the exemptions in question is extended to British vessels by the Xth Article of the Treaty with Italy of August 13, 1863; but the Italian Government contend that the exemption applies only to sailing-vessels, and not to steamers. Mr. Otway was, therefore, pleased to request that I would take the inclosed papers into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion upon the question thus raised. Mr. Otway was pleased to add, that the Treaty of Commerce with Italy, to which reference has been made, is to be found in Hertslet's Treaties, vol. xi, page 1112; copies of the XIth and XIIth Articles of the Treaty between France and Italy were also inclosed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I am of opinion that the proper interpretation of Article XI of the French Treaty would extend the exemption from double anchorage dues to all French vessels trading between a French port and one or more Italian ports, including steamers as well as sailing-vessels. As the provisions of the Treaty are of a character favourable to both parties, it would be in accordance with a rule of interpretation applicable to such Treaties (Vattel, l. ii, c. 18, page 307), that the most extensive meaning of which the word "navires" is susceptible according to common usage, should be given to that word, where it occurs in Article XI, unless manifest equity, or a great common advantage, requires it to be restricted. On the other hand, the more restricted interpretation suggested by the Italian Government, that the term "navires" should be construed to mean sailing-vessels only, would exclude a most important class of steam-vessels from all benefits of the Treaty, as I do not consider that Article XII is susceptible of a construction which would include steam-vessels passing from a French port to one or more Italian ports. I apprehend that the trade in which French steam vessels are to have equal privileges under Article XII with Italian steam-vessels, and Italian steam-vessels equal privileges with French steam-vessels, is the home trade of the respective countries, termed "Navigation d'escate" in the Mediterranean, and "Navigation de côte ou de cabotage" in France.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

1869

No. 77.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received September 11.)

Temple, September 10, 1869.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 7th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me two letters relating to a claim put forward by Signor Ippolyto de Riso, against the Italian Government, on account of certain property belonging to his brother, which was seized by Garibaldi. That Signor Riso claims the interference of Her Majesty's Government in the matter, on the ground that two English ladies are interested in the claim, under the will of his brother; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take the papers into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the answer which should be returned to Signor Riso.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That this application is made to your Lordship by an Italian subject, as the representative of his deceased brother, also an Italian subject, whom he states to have died in 1860, after undergoing political prosecution from the Bourbon Government. If I rightly understand his Memorial, he says that his brother left nothing behind him but a claim to be compensated for his sufferings out of the property of the Bourbons sequestrated by Garibaldi for the compensation of the victim of Bourbon tyranny; and he requests your Lordship to intervene with the existing Italian Government, contemporaneously with a demand which he proposes to make upon that Government, that a compensation for the sufferings of his deceased brother should be paid to himself. The ground upon which he asks for your Lordship's intervention is, that his brother appointed him his fiduciary legatee, under a trust, to pay an annuity to two British subjects during their lives, out of any compensation which he might realize. I am of opinion that your Lordship cannot properly comply with Signor de Riso's Memorial. His brother was an Italian subject, and had no title to British protection at the time when he underwent the alleged persecutions; and as he would have had no just claim upon Her Majesty's Government for its support, if he had been alive at the present moment to press his own claim, he cannot devolve upon his representative any better title than he himself possessed, nor give to his wrongs a British character by creating, under a testamentary bequest, a contingent interest in their remedy in favour of British subjects.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 78.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received September 14.)

Temple, September 13, 1869.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Spring Rice's letter of the 6th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me a despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Florence, No. 1, Commercial, relative to the case of the "Lady Briggs," the particulars of which are fully set forth in the correspondence therein inclosed; and Mr. Spring Rice was pleased to request that I would take these papers into consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the course which it would be proper to take in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That upon the statement of facts there appears to have been a primâ facie case for the proceedings on the part of the Custom's authorities of Messina against the master of the "Lady Briggs," as it is admitted that there was a considerable deficiency in his cargo, as compared with his manifest; and Mr. Herries states that the 67th Article of the Customs Regulations of the Port of Messina imposes a fine for every package enumerated in the manifest, but not actually forthcoming.

On what grounds the Correctional Tribunal at Messina pronounced the offence of Captain Famolaro was accused, to be not proved, and absolved him from the misdemeanour imputed to him, does not appear upon the face of the extract from the sentence of that Tribunal, which accompanies the papers; but, I infer, as the facts were admitted, that Captain Famolaro was acquitted under a beneficial interpretation, which the Tribunal upon the law ("il senso del Articolo"), that it was intended to punish attempts to defraud the revenue, and that the Tribunal held that Captain Famolaro's offence was within the spirit of the 67th Article of the Customs Regulations, although he had infringed the letter of it.

Under these circumstances I am of opinion that your Lordship would not be justified in instructing Mr. Harris to intervene in support of the claim which Captain Famolaro has made upon the Italian Government for compensation on account of losses which he has incurred by his detention at Messina. Upon general principles of jurisprudence he would not be entitled to damages, as a doubt as to the true construction of a law would be reasonable cause for proceedings under it; and, as the Director-General of Customs states in his note that no damages are recoverable by Captain Famolaro under the Municipal Law, the consideration of saving Captain Famolaro from the expense of a law-suit against the Customs' authorities, which he has put forward in his letter to Mr. Richards of January 22nd, would be an idle consideration.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 79.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received October 26.)

Temple, October 26, 1869.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Spring Rice's letter of the 23rd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me an accompanying despatch from Mr. Severn, Her Majesty's Consul at Rome, requesting instructions as to the course he should pursue, in a case where the Roman authorities refuse to recognise a marriage which was celebrated by civil rite in London in 1860, between a Roman artist and a Scotch lady, and the husband having since died the property left to the widow is about to be claimed by the Roman heir; and Mr. Spring Rice was pleased to request that I would take this case into my consideration, and favour your Lordship with my opinion as to the instructions which should be given to Mr. Severn in this matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken this case into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That before your Lordship can properly instruct Her Majesty's Consul at Rome as to the course which he should pursue in this case, it will be desirable that he should furnish your Lordship with more complete information on certain points:—

1. Under what circumstances the marriage between the parties took place in England? Whether the Roman artist was a domiciled subject of Rome at the time of the marriage, and died domiciled in the Roman States?

2. Under what circumstances the question of succession arises, whether under a will or an intestacy? Mr. Severn in his letter speaks of property left to the widow, which suggests that she is entitled by her husband's will to certain property.

3. Under what circumstances the decision of the Cardinal Vicar has been made, and what is the nature of the proceedings before the Judge, before whom Mr. Severn states that the widow has taken her case?

Different considerations of law may apply to this case according as the claim of the lady rests upon the will of her husband, or upon her right of succession, as his widow, under an intestacy. Her claim as widow would depend upon the validity of her marriage, but if her claim rests upon a will, her right of succession would be independent of the validity of her marriage, and care should be taken by Mr. Severn, if he is called upon in any way to act, not to allow the two questions to be confused.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 80.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received November 12.)

Temple, November 12, 1869.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Spring Rice's letter of the 10th instant, stating, that with reference to my report of the 26th ultimo, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me a further despatch from Her Majesty's Consul at Rome (November 4), containing replies to the inquiries, which you requested might be instituted with the view to enable me to form an opinion as to the instructions which it would be proper to give to Mr. Severn, in a case where the Roman authorities have refused to acknowledge the validity of a marriage celebrated by civil rite, in this country in 1860, between a Roman artist and a Scotch lady; and Mr. Spring Rice was pleased to request that I would take this despatch, together with the former papers, which were therewith inclosed, into my consideration, and favour your Lordship with my opinion thereupon.

1869

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken this despatch into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That your Lordship may properly instruct Her Majesty's Consul at Rome to give such assistance as may be in his power to the widow.

If the widow should fail, after obtaining a decree from the Judge, to procure restitution of the money in consequence of the action of the Cardinal Vicar, Her Majesty's Consul may be instructed to send your Lordship further information, as to whether the husband died in England, and whether the life assurance was effected in an English office, and the money paid over by the office to the widow.

It appears to me that the widow had reduced the money into her legal possession before she transmitted it to the banker at Rome, and that her right to it could not be questioned at Rome on the ground that her marriage was not valid according to Roman law.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

Japan.

No. 81.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received February 2.)

Temple, January 30, 1869.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 21st instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter from Messrs. Murray and Hutchins, requesting that Her Majesty's Consul at Kanagawa may be instructed to take such steps as may be necessary on behalf of their clients, the executors of the estate of the late Mr. William Kemptner, in order to put them in possession of a plot of land at Kanagawa formerly registered at Her Majesty's Consulate in the name of that gentleman, but transferred by him during his residence in Japan to trustees on behalf of a Miss Gutman in virtue of a deed of settlement executed in contemplation of a marriage between Mr. Kemptner and that lady, which is stated never to have taken place; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take Messrs. Murray and Hutchins' letter into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the course which your Lordship should pursue in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken Messrs. Murray and Hutchins' letter into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we are not informed and do not know what is the effect, according to Japanese law, of the transfer of 18th January, 1867, nor what persons would now be recognized by the Japanese authorities as occupiers of the land. But assuming, as for the purposes of this report we do, that the Japanese authorities would now recognize the fourth transferee named in the transfer of the 18th January, 1867, we think the British Consular jurisdiction is ousted, as three of the transferees are Prussians; at all events that the British Consul cannot deal with the case without the co-operation, or at least the consent, of the Prussian Consul. We see no reason why the erroneous entry as to the nature of the trust should not be corrected in the records of the Consulate, after proper proof of the deed of settlement and due notice to all parties concerned. But we think it doubtful in the highest degree, whether such correction will have any effect whatever upon the position of the parties.

We have, &c.
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
J. D. COLERIDGE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 82.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received February 23.)

Temple, February 23, 1869.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 1st of February, stating that with reference to the report of the Law Officers of the 24th of December, 1867, and 13th of January, 1868, on the question of an alien being able to hold the office of Her Majesty's Consul, and exercise jurisdiction under Orders in Council passed in pursuance of the provisions of the Foreign Jurisdiction Act, that your Lordship requested our opinion as to whether an alien born, but to whom the Queen might be pleased to grant letters of denization could in foreign countries in which Her Majesty's Consuls are empowered by Order in Council to exercise jurisdiction in civil and criminal cases, exercise such jurisdiction, if duly appointed by Her Majesty to the office of Consul.

That the difficulty in the case to which the Law Officers attention was called in 1867 and 1868 was understood to have been, that an alien could not properly be empowered to exercise such jurisdiction, and that his defect of birth could not be remedied by a certificate of naturalisation, inasmuch as an intention to reside in England was one of the necessary conditions to the grant of such certificate.

That it appeared, however, that on the 28th of February, 1857, the then Attorney-General advised the Crown in the case of Mr. Santillana, Interpreter to the British Consulate at Tunis, and who as such permanently resided in Tunis, that letters of denization might be granted to him notwithstanding his non-residence in this country.

That there are at the present time engaged in Her Majesty's Service in Japan certain aliens who, under the opinions of the Law Officers, to whom reference was made, are held to be incapacitated from advancement to the office of Consul, which in that country would carry with it the exercise of civil and criminal jurisdiction.

That the point, therefore, on which your Lordship desired to receive our opinion was whether, if Her Majesty should be advised to grant letters of denization to such persons or any of them, they could, if promoted hereafter to the rank of Consul or Vice-Consul, exercise the jurisdiction conferred by Order in Council upon such persons in Japan and in China.

In obedience to the commands of your Lordship we have taken this matter into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That inasmuch as the Prerogative of the Crown to grant letters of denization has not been taken away or interfered with, we see no legal objection to a person so created a denizen being advanced to the post of Consul in Japan, and exercising all the jurisdiction conferred upon Consuls by the Order in Council. The statute of 12 Wm. III, c. 2, s. 3, does not we think apply to such "an office or place of trust" as the one in question, the duties of which are not to be executed within the realm.

We have, &c.
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
J. D. COLERIDGE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 83.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received March 15.)

Temple, March 13, 1869.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 12th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us with the previous papers, a despatch from Sir Harry Parkes inclosing a copy of a Notification which he has issued forbidding British subjects from conveying troops, arms, or munitions of war to certain Japanese styling themselves the exiled Togukawa Kerais, who had taken forcible possession of the Treaty port of Hakodate; and that he was to request that we would take the same into our consideration, and favour your Lordship at our earliest convenience with our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we are of opinion that the notification issued by Sir Harry Parkes is proper and judicious.

We are, &c.
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
J. D. COLERIDGE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 84.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received April 20.)

Temple, April 19, 1869.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 13th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us, together with the previous papers, a despatch from Sir H. Parkes No. 36 February 9, inclosing copies of a correspondence which has passed between him and Admiral Sir H. Keppel respecting the denial of belligerent rights to the exiled Kerais, who have made a descent in the Island of Yezo; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take the same into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion thereupon at our earliest convenience.

In obedience to the commands of your Lordship we have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That whether civil war exists or not is a question of pure fact, to be decided from the condition of the country where it is alleged to exist. In Europe civil war means such a substantial suspension of the powers of the central Government as prevents its arm being felt, or its law administered by the ordinary Tribunals. But this definition is essentially European, and cannot be strictly applied with exactness or rigour to communities where the action of the central Government is different, probably more irregular, than our own, certainly quite unlike it, and the question of civil war or not is a question to be decided with special reference to local circumstances.

We think Sir Harry Parkes is the most competent person to judge of this question of fact; and his opinion as to the non-existence of anything which can properly be called civil war is clear. Nor is there anything in the voluminous papers sent to us to make us doubt the soundness of his opinion.

We may observe that the refusal of belligerent rights to the exiled Kerais implies that no war, in fact, exists; and that the Japanese Government have no more than the Kerais the right as against neutrals, like ourselves, to assume the exceptional rights of belligerents; but must confine their action, as far as our shipping and commerce are concerned, to their rights in time of peace, as modified (if they are modified) by express Treaty.

We have, &c.
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
J. D. COLERIDGE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 85.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received April 30.)

Temple, April 29, 1869.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified to us in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 13th instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 13th ultimo, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us, together with the previous papers, a despatch from Sir H. Parkes No. 31, February 9, reporting the cessation of the civil war in Japan, and inclosing a copy of a notification which he had issued, withdrawing the notification of the 13th of July last, in which he published Her Majesty's Order in Council of the 14th of May, enjoining neutrality on all British subjects in Japan; and to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion whether that Order in Council should now be formally revoked, and, if so, that we would draw up a Draft Order revoking it.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That it is not necessary, in our opinion, for Her Majesty to revoke formally Her Order in Council of 14th May, 1868. That order only applied to British subjects abetting either of the contending parties during the hostilities then existing between the Mikado and other belligerents within the Japanese dominions, and as such hostilities have come to an end, Her Majesty's Order in Council ceases to be operative for want of parties to whom it would be applicable.

We have, &c.
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
J. D. COLERIDGE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 86.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received May 10.)

Temple, May 10, 1869.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 8th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister in Japan, inclosing a communication he has received in common with the other foreign Representatives from the Japanese Government, inquiring what punishment can be inflicted on those foreigners who give assistance to the insurgents now in possession of Hakodate; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take Sir H. Parkes' despatch into immediate consideration, and furnish your Lordship with our opinion whether, with reference to his remarks, any fresh Order in Council upon the subject is required; and, if so, that we would prepare a draft of such Order, so that it may be submitted to the Queen for Her Majesty's sanction.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we are not sufficiently acquainted with the status of the Mikado to answer the question put to us with confidence. If he holds dominions independent of the Tycoon, we think that the Order in Council should be amended so as to make it applicable to him and his subjects, but no alteration beyond this appears to us necessary. If the Mikado is a subject of the Tycoon, no alteration seems to be necessary.

We have, &c.
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
J. D. COLERIDGE.

I am of opinion that the Order in Council should be amended so as to make it applicable to the Mikado in the place of the Tycoon. I have altered the Order accordingly.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 87.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received June 28.)

Temple, June 28, 1869.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 16th instant, stating that with reference to our Reports of the 30th January, he was directed to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister in Japan, in regard to the question raised by Messrs. Murray and Hutchins, as to the transfer to the executors of the late Mr. Kemptner by Her Majesty's Consul at Kanagawa, of a certain piece of land at Yokohama; and to request that we would take this despatch into consideration, and furnish your Lordship with any observations we may have to offer thereupon. The previous papers were also inclosed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That it seems from Mr. Fletcher's Memorandum, that there is really nothing to correct in the entry as to the nature of the trust referred to in our Report. All other circumstances attending the case appear to remain the same; and we see no reason to alter or to qualify the opinion we had the honour to convey to your Lordship in January.

We have, &c.
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
J. D. COLERIDGE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 88.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received July 1.)

My Lord, Temple, June 20, 1869.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 4th instant, stating that with reference to our Report of the 10th ultimo, he was directed to transmit to us, together with the previous papers, a despatch from Sir H. Parkes, and its inclosure No. 83, April 6, respecting the exercise of British jurisdiction over British subjects not registered in one of Her Majesty's Consulates, who may be concerned in the insurrectionary proceedings of the Tokugawa Kerais in the Island of Yesso; and to request that we would take the same into consideration, and furnish your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the interpretation given to the 114th clause of the China and Japan Order in Council of 9th March, 1865, by Her Majesty's Minister at Yokohama, in his despatch of April 2, 1869, addressed to his Excellency Date Chiunagon, is, in our opinion, correct. With regard to the two reservations engrafted on that interpretation by Her Majesty's Minister in his despatch of April 6, 1869, addressed to your Lordship, we consider them to be also correct. The further question raised by Her Majesty's Minister, whether the words "Tycoon of Japan" will prevent the enforcement of the 81st clause of the same Order in Council, now that the office of Tycoon or Shogoon has been abolished, will, we presume, have been sufficiently answered by Her Majesty's Order in Council, which has directed the title of Mikado of Japan to be read throughout Her Majesty's Order of 9th March, 1865, in the place of the title of "Tycoon of Japan."

We have, &c.
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
J. D. COLERIDGE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 89.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received December 18.)

My Lord, Temple, December 18, 1869.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 11th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to us the accompany. letter from Mr. Russell Robertson, of the Japanese Consular Service, and its inclosures, respecting a rule nisi, which has been granted by Her Majesty's Chief Judge at Shanghae, calling upon him to show cause why he should not refund a sum of money awarded by him when acting as Her Majesty's Consul at Yokahama, as Arbitrator in a case of collision at sea, which had been submitted for his decision by the Counsel of the parties concerned; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take these papers into our consideration, and furnish your Lordship with our opinion both as to the case generally, and as to the course Mr. Robertson should now be instructed to pursue. The Order in Council of March 9, 1865, and the Rules of the Japan and China Consular Courts, were also inclosed for convenience of reference; and Mr. Hammond added, that Mr. Robertson returns to Japan on the 2nd proximo.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, as far as we are able to understand the proceedings in this case, which is full of irregularities, it would appear that an action was entered in the Provincial Court of Yokahama for 10,000 dollars against the British steamer "Ocean Queen," when Mr. Vice-Consul Fletcher was in office, and that the plaintiffs filed a petition, and the defendants gave in an answer; that Mr. Consul Robertson, on succeeding to Mr. Fletcher's place, stayed the proceedings in the action, and gave notice to the parties that the cause was only justiciable at Shanghae. We consider Mr. Consul Robertson to have been correct in the view which he took on this occasion, that the Provincial Court had no jurisdiction over the case, and in staying the proceedings. The parties, by their Counsel, appear thereupon, at the suggestion of Mr. Consul Robertson, to have agreed to submit the question between them to the arbitration of Mr. Consul Robertson, and four nautical assessors. We consider this to have been a purely voluntary submission of the parties, and that no rule of Court could have been properly made, or was required, the powers given to the Provincial Court under sections 49 and 50 of the Order in Council of 9th of March, 1868, being confined to matters over which the Court has jurisdiction. So far then, we think, that the objection to the arbitration on the ground of it not having been made a rule of Court, is untenable.

We consider that the parties by their Counsel agreed to submit the question, which had been raised in the Provincial Court to the voluntary arbitration of the Consul and his Assessors, and that if there may have been any defect of authority on the part of the counsel to bind their parties, the parties must be held to have submitted themselves to the arbitration by appearing before the Arbitrators. The other objection, however, is of more weight, that the award of the Arbitrators was in excess of damages claimed in the petition. It is a settled rule that the award of an Arbitrator must follow the submission, but it does not appear to us quite clear that the submission was limited by the terms of the petition, and it would seem at least open to discussion whether the particulars of claim, which according to Consul Robertson's account reached the full amount of the award, may not be regarded as an amended claim on which the award was properly founded. We are, however, of opinion, that Mr. Consul Robertson had no power by an Order of Court to reduce the amount of the award. The 226th Rule, framed under the Order in Council of 9th March, 1865, is only applicable to awards made under arbitrations, the agreements for which are made Rules of Court (Rule 217). But even if this be so, the award may still be good. Mr. Consul Robertson's authority, however, was that of a private arbitrator, and no more, and he was clearly wrong in requiring or enforcing the payment of money by virtue of his judicial or Consular office, in which capacity he had no jurisdiction over the case.

Under these circumstances we are of opinion that he has rendered himself liable to an action for the recovery of the money paid by the owners of the "Ocean Queen".

In such an action the validity of the award would appear to us to come in question at least as affecting the amount of damages, for if the award were good, the damages might be little more than nominal; if it were bad, it would amount to the whole sum paid.

Such is the view, which we are disposed to take of the proceedings and liabilities of Consul Robertson. But we think it right further to observe, that we are not aware by what authority Sir E. Hornby, who professed himself unable to deal with the award, called upon the Consul in a summary manner, without any action or suit being instituted, to pay over a sum of money. This summary jurisdiction is exercised by the Courts of this country over their own officers, among whom attornies are included, but over no other persons, and we are at a loss to see how Consul Robertson could be regarded as belonging to the class, over whom the Supreme Court at Shanghae could exercise such a jurisdiction. On the whole we think that Mr. Robertson should appear and show cause against the rule, protesting against Sir E. Hornby's authority to grant it, and if it should be made absolute, we think that there would be ground of appealing. If an action should be brought he must seek professional advice as to his defence to it. We are not sufficiently informed to advise on this with any confidence.

We have, &c.
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
J. D. COLERIDGE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 90.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received December 28.)

Temple, December 27, 1869.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 18th December instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch with its inclosures from Her Majesty's Minister in Japan (No. 198), in regard to the difficulties experienced by Her Majesty's Consul at Hakodate in adjusting a dispute that had arisen between two British merchants at that port as to the tenancy of a house, and raising a question as to the extent of the assistance that may be claimed from from Her Majesty's Naval Officers by Her Majesty's Consuls in Japan in the enforcement of their judicial decisions.

1869

Mr. Hammond was pleased further to state that he was to request that we would take the papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with any observations we might have to offer thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into consideration and have the honour to report—

That the views of the Chief Justice of Shanghae are correct, and that the Commanders of Her Majesty's ships of war are not liable to be called upon to enforce the civil process of a Consular Court.

We have, &c.
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
J. D. COLERIDGE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 91.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received December 30.)

My Lord, Temple, December 29, 1869.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 18th of December instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us three despatches from Her Majesty's Minister in Japan (Nos. 205, 206, and 211), relative to a Treaty of Friendship and Commerce which has been recently concluded between Japan and the Austro-Hungarian Monarchy, and reporting that he had consented, as a temporary arrangement, that Her Majesty's Consuls in Japan should act as Consuls for the Austro-Hungarian Monarchy.

Mr. Hammond was also pleased to transmit to us the correspondence which had passed with Her Majesty's Representatives at Vienna and Peking upon this subject,* and to say that he was to request that we should take the papers into our consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to how far Her Majesty's Consuls can safely exercise the jurisdiction, thus conferred on them, over Austro-Hungarian subjects.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we think that there is no legal objection to Her Majesty's Consuls personally acting also as Consuls for the Austro-Hungarian Monarchy, in matters which concern the administrative functions of Consuls in China and Japan; and as regards their jurisdiction over Austro-Hungarian subjects, conceded by the Treaties with China and Japan, we consider that British Consuls, as such, would not be personally precluded from exercising such jurisdiction, if duly authorized, according to Austro-Hungarian law, but we are of opinion that Her Majesty's Consuls could not properly cite Austro-Hungarian subjects into their provincial Courts, and put in force the coercive jurisdiction of those Courts, as established by Her Majesty's Order in Council against Austro-Hungarian subjects upon the authority of the Circular of his Excellency Baron Petz. To render the exercise of such a jurisdiction lawful as regards Austro-Hungarian subjects, there would be, in our opinion, necessity for a Diplomatic Convention between Great Britain and the Austro-Hungarian Monarchy conceding that jurisdiction, and an Order of Her Majesty in Council providing for the exercise of the jurisdiction conceded by the Convention.

We have, &c.
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
J. D. COLERIDGE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

* Sir R. Alcock, No. 85; to Lord Bloomfield, No. 203; Sir R. Alcock, No. 40; to Sir R. Alcock, No. [illegible]

Madagascar.

No. 92.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received January 6.)

My Lord, Temple, January 5, 1869.

WE are favoured with a letter from Mr. Murray, dated the 28th of August last, stating that, with reference to a report made by the late Law Officers on the 11th of August, respecting the proposed alterations in the Order in Council conferring power of jurisdiction upon Her Majesty's Consul in Madagascar, he was directed by Lord Stanley to transmit to them the Order in Council in which the clerical alterations suggested by the Procureur-General of Mauritius, as marked, together with a duplicate of his letter containing the more important amendments which were proposed by him, both of which papers were stated in the Law Officers' Report to have been omitted to be sent in the last reference from the Foreign Office, and Mr. Murray was pleased to request an opinion of the Law Officers upon the Order as now proposed to be amended.

In compliance with the request contained in Mr. Murray's letter we have the honour to report—

That the clerical amendments which have been made in the draft Order are such as your Lordship may properly approve.

We have, &c.
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
J. D. COLERIDGE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 93.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received October 5.)

My Lord, Temple, October 4, 1869.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 24th September, stating that, with reference to our Reports of the 3rd February, 1868, therewith inclosed, on the subject of Consular jurisdiction in Madagascar, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a copy in print of amended rules and regulations framed by Her Majesty's Consul, under the Order in Council of the 4th of February last.

Mr. Hammond was pleased to inclose, for our information, the former rules, and to request that we would take the papers into consideration and report to your Lordship whether we were of opinion that the amended rules were correct, and might be approved of by your Lordship.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we are of opinion that the amended rules may be properly approved by your Lordship as correct.

We have, &c.
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
J. D. COLERIDGE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

1869

Mexico.

No. 94.

The Attorney- and Solicitor-General to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received February 22.)

Temple, February 22, 1869.

My Lord,

WE are favoured with your Lordship's commands signified to us in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 26th January last, stating that he was directed by you to state that the Queen's Advocate's report of the 18th September, respecting the proceedings of Commander Bridges, of Her Majesty's ship "Chanticleer," at Mazatlan, was communicated to the Board of Admiralty, and the substance of it by that Department to the Commander-in-chief in the Pacific, who, as we would see by his letter sent therewith, was of opinion that, if acted upon, it might lead to inconvenience; and further stating that he was therefore directed by your Lordship to transmit to us and the Queen's Advocate the whole of the papers on the subject, and to say that you would be glad to receive his and our common opinion on the doubts raised by the Admiral.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we (the Attorney- and Solicitor-General) have taken the papers into our consideration, and we have the honour to report—

That the power of making war or reprisals belongs alone to the sovereign nation; nor are the captains of the Queen's ships intrusted by her with authority to commit his country to either.

If we are asked whether the acts of Commander Bridges are of the nature of war or of reprisals, we must reply that they appear to us to be of the nature neither of one nor of the other, unless adopted by Her Majesty's Government, in which case the Mexican Government would be entitled to treat them as acts of war. They are acts of violence done by a naval officer to Mexican property, public and private, and to the sovereignty of the Mexican Government, for which he is responsible to his own Government, and for which his own Government in him are responsible to Mexico, unless it disavows them Acts of the Sovereign Nation alone can be deemed either war or reprisals.

On consideration we think there is no sound foundation for the distinction between war and a naval captain's blockade of a port, amounting only to reprisals, because neutral ships have been allowed ingress and egress. We think there must be some misapprehension as to the meaning of the Queen's Advocate's opinion, which has not been sent to us, for it is clear that an English captain cannot, proprio motu, make war, reprisals, or blockade, nor create neutrals.

The questions raised by the conduct of Commander Bridges are two:—First, assuming what was done by him to be adopted as done by the authority of the English Government, would the English Government be justified in thus dealing with Mexico by the practice and opinions of the civilized world? It is the practice of civilized nations, when dealing with other nations in amity, to abstain from war and reprisals alike till an appeal has been made to the Government for redress. Commander Bridges did not so abstain, for the nearest Mexican General was not the Mexican Government. If, indeed, the English Government (for reasons of which alone it is competent to judge) has resolved to deal exceptionally with Mexico, of course it can do so; but if Mexico is to be treated as an ordinary nation, not beyond the pale of amity, the English Government would not have been justified by international practice in treating Mexico as Commander Bridges treated it on behalf of England.

The next question is, how far the Queen has delegated to Commander Bridges authority to redress injuries of the sort described? This is a question of fact to be answered from his instructions. We have before intimated that, as a general rule, officers of men-of-war are not authorized to use violence, except in cases of necessity, such as the actual defence of ship or flag, and independently of the Order of the 23rd May, 1867, which had for its object the preventing of acts of this very kind on the part of Her Majesty's navy, there is no trace to be found of any power given to Commander Bridges which would justify his proceedings. This was not a case of instant necessity, and the proper course of Commander Bridges was to report what had taken place and to suspend further action until he had received orders from his Government.

We have, &c,
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
J. D. COLERIDGE.

---

Opinion of the Queen's Advocate.

I AGREE with the Attorney-General and the Solicitor-General that the authority to make reprisals, equally as to make war, is derived from the Sovereign Power of a nation, and that the Commanders of Her Majesty's ships, without special authority from the Crown, cannot commit the nation to one or the other; but I cannot agree with them that there is no sound distinction between the closing of a foreign port against the commerce of the foreign State alone, by way of reprisals, and the closing of that port against the commerce of all nations, by way of belligerent blockade.

With regard to my previous opinions, the reference to reprisals was intended to meet the charge of the Mexican officials that the act of Commander Bridges was an act of hostility, whereas I considered it to amount, at the most, to an act of reprisal, not constituting war. I had also stated, in my first opinion, that, under the circumstances detailed by Commander Bridges, I considered there had been a denial of justice to him after flagrant wrong, such as would have justified Her Majesty's Government in authorizing reprisals against Mexican vessels, with a view to obtain the restitution of the doubloons and satisfaction for the indignities offered to Her Majesty's flag, and it was in the same sense that I stated, in my second opinion, that I considered that the closing of the port of Mazatlan, as an act of reprisal, was justifiable in an international point of view, that is, as between Great Britain and Mexico, but I did not thereby intend it to be understood that the act of Commander Bridges, being done without due authority, would not require the adoption of Her Majesty's Government.

The Attorney-General and the Solicitor-General are of opinion that, under the circumstances of the case, Commander Bridges ought to have reported what had taken place, and to have suspended further action until he had received further orders from his Government. I agree with them, that it would have been the more proper course for Commander Bridges to have remained cruizing off the Mazatlan without interfering with Mexican commerce, until he had received further instructions from the Admiral of the Station; but in the reports which I submitted to your Lordship's predecessor, I had in view not so much the question between Commander Bridges and the Admiral of the Station, as the questions which might arise between the two Governments, and how far the conduct of Commander Bridges could be justified, assuming it to be adopted by Her Majesty's Government.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

Monte Video.

No. 95.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received June 26.)

Temple, June 25, 1869.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 17th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me for my opinion the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Consul-General at Monte Video, inclosing a correspondence relative to the forcible seizure by the Uruguayan authorities of the

1869

"Commercial Bank of Salto." The previous despatch from Major Munro, to which reference is made, was also inclosed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That Her Majesty's Acting Consul-General at Monte Video may be properly instructed not to interfere in this case, unless the Directory of the Bank of Salto is prepared to conform itself to the requirements of the Uruguayan Law, with which it appears hitherto to have refused compliance, and should request his good offices with the Uruguayan Government.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

Netherlands.

No. 96.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received June 14.)

Temple, June 12, 1869.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 7th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me a letter from a Mr. Davidson, complaining of having been subjected to ill-treatment at the hands of the Netherlands authorities at Sourabaza, in Java; and to request that I would inform your Lordship whether there are any such circumstances in the case as would in my opinion call for the intervention of Her Majesty's Government with that of the Netherlands. A précis of the letter which has been made in the Foreign Office was also inclosed for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That Mr. Davidson in his Memorial to your Lordship rests his complaint on two grounds, first, that he had done nothing to deserve the punishment inflicted upon him; secondly, that the treatment to which he has been exposed is in violation of the Treaty of 1824. It appears on reference to that Treaty (3 Hertslet, page 285) that Great Britain and the Netherlands agreed to admit the subjects of each other to trade with their respective possessions in Eastern Archipelago "upon the footing of the most-favoured nation, their respective subjects conforming themselves to the local regulations of each Settlement."

Mr. Davidson states that it is a local regulation at Sourabaza that Europeans residing there, irrespective of nationality, are held to military service in the locrl militia. Mr. Davidson appears to have conformed to this regulation on his first arrival at Sourabaza, and to have procured from the local authorities an exemption from service for six months, on the ground of temporary lameness, and to have been put upon the contribution list for that period. He does not appear to have made any appeal to Her Majesty's Consul at that time on the ground that the requirements of the local authorities were in excess of the Treaty Stipulations of 1824, neither does he appear on the recent occasion of the complaint, which he addressed to Her Majesty's Consul on being ordered to comply with the sentence of the Court Martial, to have appealed to the stipulations of that Treaty. It would, therefore, seem to be an afterthought on the part of Mr. Davidson, when he alleges that the authorities at Sourabaza "have exceeded their legal powers as defined by that Treaty." I am of opinion that the obligation to serve in the Schuttery of Sourabaza, being a local regulation of the Settlement, is binding under the Treaty of 1824 upon all British subjects, who settle there for trade unless there be "any more favoured nation" which is by Treaty exempt from it. I think this to be the legitimate construction of the Ist Article of that Treaty, and I consider that Her Majesty's Government must be taken to have accepted that construction, as special exemptions in favour of Consular Officers have been introduced into a later Treaty, to which Her Majesty's Consul refers in his letter of July 10, 1868, namely, the Consular Treaty between Great Britain and the Netherlands, of March 6, 1856 (10 Hertslet, page 480). Under the XIIIth Article of that Treaty it is specially provided, that the Consuls of the two Contracting Parties in the Colonies and possessions of the other shall," unless subjects of the country, "be exempt from all military service and from military requisitions, as well as from all pecuniary compositions in lieu of military service." There remains for your Lordship's consideration the first averment of Mr. Davidson, that he had done nothing to deserve the punishment inflicted upon him. It appears from the correspondence that on 13th June, 1868, Mr. Davidson had been served with an order to receive the Schuttery Arms, and supplied with a copy of the regulations,—that he thereupon applied by letter to Lieutenant-Colonel Coster to be exempted totally from active service: that he was informed on the same day that he could only be excused on "proving by a due certificate that he was not fit for actual service;" that Mr. Davidson thereupon requested an interview with the Lieutenant-Colonel, and was informed by him on 20th June, that the Lieutenant-Colonel would see him on that evening or the next day: that Mr. Davidson does not appear to have waited on the Lieutenant-Colonel, which he was bound to have done, that he subsequently received notice on 22nd June to attend a Court Martial on 25th June to be tried for disobedience to the order to receive the Schuttery arms. On that day he was heard on his defence before the Court, and his reasons for refusing to receive the arms were held by the Court to be not satisfactory, and he was thereupon sentenced for wilful negligence in fulfiling the orders given to him to "one day's Provost arrest." It would appear that the Court Martial proceeded in accordance with the Code of Regulations for the Schuttery in Java, and Mr. Davidson does not impugn the sentence of the Court on the ground of its not being warranted by those Regulations, but upon the ground that the punishment of twenty-four hours' imprisonment in the Military (Schuttery) Prison was ignominious, and that the sentence was harsh and unusually severe for a first and involuntary offence. But Mr. Davidson's statement in his Memorial, that his neglect was unintentional, is hardly reconcilable with the conclusion of the Auditor of the Court, that Mr. Davidson has refused "to take delivery of his arms after having received often repeated orders."

I have gone somewhat minutely into details in this case, as I am aware how properly jealous Her Majesty's Government is in protecting British subjects resident for purposes of trade in foreign countries, where the law of military conscription prevails. from forced military service, but the conditions upon which British subjects are allowed to trade in the Dutch Colonies of the Eastern Archipelago are exceptional, and it would appear from the letter of Her Majesty's Consul already referred to, that the rule is for every foreigner who takes up his residence in Java, to obtain a permission to reside, and give a promise to obey the laws of the country. Mr. Davidson from his own statement appears neither to have applied for, nor to have received any such permission, and although he states that he is aware that he owes obedience to the laws of the country, he seems to have shown both a singular carelessness in making himself acquainted with those laws, and at the same time a wilful determination to resist the execution of them, when made known to him. His ignorance of the Dutch language may afford some excuse for his imperfect knowledge of the law, although Lieutenant-Colonel Coster properly pointed out to him that he should have recourse to a translator, but Mr. Davidson can have no excuse for resisting the execution of the sentence of the Court Martial, and his conduct in that matter was highly unbecoming a British merchant, as he compelled the local authorities to enforce the law against him in a manner calculated to lower the European character in the opinion of the natives.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

New Granada (Colombia).

No. 97.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received March 23.)

Temple, March 23, 1869.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 10th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to us the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Bogota No. 3, inclosing a copy of a Convention between the United States of America and the United States of Colombia, respecting the construction of a ship canal across the Isthmus of Panama. A despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Washington upon this subject was also inclosed, and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take the same into consideration, and furnish your Lordship with our opinion whether this Convention is consistent with the VIIIth Article of that between Her Majesty's Government and the United States of the 19th of April, 1850.

1869

The previous correspondence relative to this matter, and a copy of the Convention of the 19th of April, 1850, between Her Majesty and the United States of America, were also inclosed for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That it is observable that one of the objects of Article VIII of the Clayton and Bulwer Convention would appear to be the encouragement of all practicable communications between the two oceans, and that Article III of the Convention between the United States of America and those of Colombia seems to have an opposite tendency; at the same time we are unable to say that there is any absolute inconsistency between the two Conventions, or to advise your Lordship that there is any ground of remonstrance with the American Government.

We have, &c.
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
J. D COLERIDGE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 98.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received May 8.)

Temple, May 8, 1869.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 30th ultimo, stating that with reference to my report of the 28th December last, he was directed to transmit to me a further despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Bogota, upon the subject of Mr. Percy Brandon's claim on the Colombian Government on account of the detention of the steamer "Patrono," and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take Mr. Bunch's despatch into consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion thereupon. The previous papers in the case were also inclosed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the explanation given by Mr. Brandon of an apparent contradiction between his own statement and the protest of the master of the "Patrono" is satisfactory, but it does not furnish any additional support to his claim for compensation for the detention of the "Patrono" by the Governor-General of New Granada.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 99.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received June 1.)

Temple, May 31, 1869.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 12th May instant stating that, with reference to our Report of the 23rd of March last, relative to a Convention signed by the United States of America and the United States of Colombia for the construction of a ship canal across the Isthmus of Panama, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us, for any observations we might have to offer, a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Washington, inclosing a copy of a Memorandum drawn up by the Government of the United States of America, with reference to the accordance of the Colombia Convention with the Clayton-Bulwer Treaty of 1850.

Mr. Hammond was pleased to inclose a copy of the Convention, and to say that the Convention had lately been thrown out by the Senate of Colombia.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That with regard to the Memorandum drawn up on behalf of the Government of the United States, we consider the observations to be well founded, that the Government of the United States would not have been precluded by the IIIrd Article of the proposed Treaty with Colombia from giving its consent to the construction of other inter-oceanic communications across the isthmus, which connects North and South America, in accordance with its engagements to Great Britain under the Clayton-Bulwer Treaty.

As Mr. Hammond's letter states that the Convention has lately been thrown out by the Senate of Colombia, we presume its ratification has been thereby postponed sine die, otherwise with regard to the further observations in the Memorandum, "that the effect of Article VIII of the Clayton-Bulwer Treaty seems to the Government of the United States to entitle them to call on Great Britain to unite in guaranteeing the protection and neutrality of the proposed ship canal," we would in reply observe that there is a condition attached to the Treaty engagement of Great Britain on this head, namely, that the parties constructing or using the same shall impose no other charges or conditions of traffic thereupon than the two Governments shall approve as just and reasonable. It would therefore be necessary for the United States to obtain, as a condition precedent to any such title on their part, the approval of Great Britain to the charges which the United States are authorized to impose under Article VII, and to the conditions of traffic which have been stipulated in Article IX of the proposed Treaty. With regard to the conditions stipulated in the latter Article, that "The United States shall have the right to use the canal for the passage of troops, munitions and vessels of war in time of peace." We think it right to point out to your Lordship, that under Article XIII this right of the United States would be enjoyed by an individual citizen or association of citizens of the United States, if the United States should devolve under that Article upon such person or persons it Treaty-right to construct and maintain the canal. Such a result would be at variance with the stipulation of the Clayton-Bulwer Treaty, that the inter-oceanic communications should be open to the subjects and citizens of Great Britain and the United States on equal terms.

We have, &c.
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
J. D. COLERIDGE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 100.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received June 23.)

Temple, June 21, 1869.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 16th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me, for my opinion, an accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Bogotá, requesting to be informed whether Mr. Peter A. Aria, who is stated to have been born in Jamaica, and to be the son of a Spaniard who married a Jamaica woman, is entitled to British protection in Colombia.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That if Mr. Peter A. Aria was really born in Jamaica, he owes allegiance under the English Common Law to the British Crown, and is therefore for certain purposes to be regarded as a British subject. Whether in the present case he would be entitled to British protection must depend upon the purposes for which he claims it, as he may have so incorporated himself with a foreign country by domicil, that for commercial purposes he may be properly refused British protection in that country.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 101.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received July 17.)

Temple, July 16, 1869.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 13th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the accompanying correspondence, respecting the claim of Mr. George, a British subject residing at Barbacoa, on the Colombian Government for damages, which he alleges he has sustained during the Revolution of 1861; and Mr. Hammond was to request that I would take the same into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That your Lordship may, in my opinion, properly decline to give any support to Mr. George's claim in its present form. It appears from the Judgment of the Supreme Court that if any damages are due from the Colombian Government by reason of the forced occupation in 1861 of the gold mine leased to Mr. George, they are by the law of the Republic due to the owner, not to the lessee, of the mine, and the lessee may recover whatever he may be entitled to from the owner. Under what precise title Mr. George has sued the Colombian Government does not clearly appear from the portion of the Judgment of the Supreme Court which Mr. Bunch has forwarded to your Lordship, but it would seem as if he has claimed as inheritor ("cessionaria") of the rights of the owner of the mine, and that the owner on receiving from Mr. George his full rental "declared that he had ceded to the lessee of the mine the value of the damages which were caused to the mine during the time it was occupied against the will of Mr. George." If this be so, Mr. George is in fact suing the Colombian Government for damages which are properly due to his father-in-law, a Colombian citizen, and your Lordship is asked to support Mr. George's claim as if it were a bonâ fide British claim. This would clearly not be a case in which the interference of Her Majesty's Government could be properly invoked. With regard to any claim which Mr. George may have in equity against the Columbian Government, the possibility of which is hinted at by Mr. Bunch in his despatch of May 19, 1869, I think your Lordship may properly require as a condition precedent to considering any such claim, that Mr. Bunch should be satisfied that the lease of the mine was not a colorable transaction between Mr. George and his father-in-law, the true purport of which was not to create a bonâ fide British interest, but to give to Columbian interests the protection of a fictitious British character.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 102.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received August 9.)

Temple, August 7, 1869.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Spring Rice's letter of the 31st ultimo, stating that he was directed to transmit to me a despatch from Her Majesty's Consul at Carthagena, in Columbia, reporting certain proceedings in which he has been concerned connected with the discharge and relief of a British seaman, and which have served as the grounds of legal proceedings instituted against him in the Colombian Courts; and to request that I would take Mr. Fonblanque's despatch into my consideration, and report to your Lordship such observations as I might have to offer thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That as regards the general question raised in the despatch of Her Majesty's Consul at Carthagena, I see no objection, on principle, to his availing himself of the protection (under the favoured-nation clause of the Treaty between Great Britain and Colombia), which is enjoyed by several of his colleagues, if proceedings should at any time be instituted against him in the local courts at Carthagena in regard to matters in which he has acted officially under instructions from Her Majesty's Board of Trade. I am, however, not conversant with the particular Treaty which contains "the favoured-nation" clause to which Her Majesty's Consul refers. I do not find any such clause in the Treaty of 1825, but I presume that a clause to the purport suggested by Her Majesty's Consul is to be found in some later Treaty.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

No. 103.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received August 23.)

Temple, August 21, 1869.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 18th instant, stating that, with reference to my Report of the 28th of December last on the subject of the claim of Messrs. Stiebel Brothers on the Colombian Government, he was directed to transmit to me, together with the former papers, a further despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Bogota, inclosing copies of a correspondence which has passed between him and the Colombian Minister for Foreign Affairs on this case, and stating that Señor Pradilla had informed him, in the course of conversation, that, before this claim can be settled, it is necessary that Messrs. Stiebel should make an affidavit before the Lord Mayor (whose signature should be certified by the Colombian Consul) to the effect: 1, that the lead was sent to Antioguia in the ordinary course of trade, and for mining purposes only; and, 2ndly, that it was bonâ fide and absolutely the property of Messrs. Stiebel, and that no foreigners, and especially no Colombian, had, directly or indirectly, any share in it. That this affidavit, as I should perceive from the inclosed letter from Messrs. Stiebel, they decline to furnish, on the plea that sufficient proof of their ownership to this property has already been produced; and Mr. Otway was therefore to request that I would again take this case into consideration and inform your Lordship whether I am of opinion that Her Majesty's Government should continue to press this claim upon the Colombian Government in the absence of the affidavit required.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That before your Lordship should decide not to press this claim any further on the Colombian Government, as Mr. Bunch has always been of opinion that it is a bonâ fide claim, it will, I think, be proper to inform Messrs. Stiebel, Brothers, that the affidavit is required to rebut a presumption against the lead being their property at the time of seizure, which presumption arises upon documents presented by them to the Colombian Government of a date subsequent to the shipping documents to which they refer in their letter of 13th August last. That Messrs. Stiebel, Brothers, will readily perceive that, however sufficient the latter documents might be, according to mercantile usage, to prove that Messrs. Stiebel were the owners of the lead at the time of shipment, they are not conclusive that it was their property when it was seized at Remolino, and that your Lordship thinks it reasonable that they should make a declaration before the Lord Mayor, as required by the Colombian Goverbment, to the effect, if not in the words suggested by Mr. Bunch, the object of such declaration being to satisfy the Colombian Government that the lead was imported by Messrs. Stiebel, Brothers, in the ordinary course of trade for mining purposes, as stated by themselves in their letter of the 26th October, 1868, to the Colombian Consul-General in London, and that, at the time of seizure, it was the property of Messrs. Stiebel, Brothers, and not of Messrs. Echeverri, Boteri, and Co., or any Colombian citizen.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 104.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received October 11.)

Temple, October 9, 1869.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 4th ultimo, stating that, with reference to my Report of the 31st December last, on the subject of the claim of Mr. Percy Brandon against the Colombian Government, on account of certain bonds issued by the former Government of New Granada, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the inclosed further correspondence, as per list inclosed, which had passed between the Foreign Office and the Colombian Minister in London, and also a further despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Bogota, with reference to this case.

That from this correspondence I should perceive that the Colombian Government have declined to acknowledge the claim, and that they now propose to reopen the case in London, expressing the hope and belief that, after a fresh examination, it may be found that justice is on the side of Colombia. Mr. Hammond was therefore pleased to request that I would take these papers into my consideration, and favour your Lordship with my opinion as to the course which your Lordship should pursue at this stage of the proceedings.

1869

The former papers were annexed for reference, if required.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That the aspect of this case is, in my opinion, materially affected by the facts elicited before the Committee of the Senate of the United States of Colombia, whose Report is communicated to your Lordship in Señor Torres Caccido's letter of the 6th of August, 1869, and the substance of which is also set out in Mr. Bunch's despatch No. 44, of July 15, 1869, without comment.. I presume therefore, that those facts may be taken to be established to Mr, Bunch's satisfaction. I am of opinion that they constitute just ground of complaint against Mr. Percy Brandon for not having fully disclosed to Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Bogota, in the first instance, the circumstances under which he became the holder of the greater part of the "Vales," viz., that they are in fact the property of Mr. Michelson, a Danish subject, and that Mr. Percy Brandon holds them as a part security for a debt due from Mr. Michelsen to the house of Messrs. Fruhling and Goschen, of which Mr. Percy Brandon is agent. The history of the "Vales," as now established, would appear to be as follows:—

1. They were originally issued in 1854, pursuant to the Convention of January 26, 1854, to Mr. B. Watts, the agent of Mr. J. W. Jones, a British subject, in payment of a debt due to Mr. Jones from the Government of New Granada.

2. They were sold in 1855 in market overt, by Messrs. Schloss and Co., the agents of Messrs. Watts and Jones, to Mr. Laverde, a Colombian citizen, and they remained in his possession until his death; and after that event, in possession of his executors until 1866.

3. They were transferred in 1866 by the executors of Mr. Laverde to Mr. Michelsen, a Danish subject, in exchange for 3 per cent. bonds, under a special deed of agreement.

4. Mr. Michelsen subsequently deposited them with Mr. Percy Brandon, a British subject, as part security for a debt due from Mr. Michelsen to Messrs. Fruhling and Goschen, British subjects.

A copy of the deed of agreement, under which Mr. Michelsen obtained these "Vales" from the executors of Mr. Laverde, has also been forwarded to your Lordship by Señor Torres Caicedo, in his letter of 22nd January, 1869, in which he invites your Lordship's special attention to the terms of the agreement. It recites, in substance, that as the regulations in force require the floating bonds of the eighth class to be converted into floating bonds of the 3 per cents., in order to perform this operation the executors have agreed to exchange the said bonds with Mr. Michelsen for the other corresponding bonds. The executors accordingly hand over to Mr. Michelsen 149 floating bonds of the eighth class "Vales," each of 100 dollars (original value), calculated to be worth only 40,395 dollars at their depreciated value, in exchange for 59 floating 3 per cent. bonds, estimated at a capital sum of 42,550 dollars, the balance of 2,025 dollars being added by way or gift or bonus, as it is termed in the correspondence, for the minor children of Mr. Laverde. It is extremely difficult to understand this transaction, more particularly how the bonus came to be added for the children of Mr. Laverde, unless on the hypothesis that Mr. Michelsen, at the time of purchase, knew where to place the bonds with advantage, and intended to operate with them in a manner likely to be more profitable to himself than the conversion of them into 3 per cents., according to the agreement. In what manner they found their way into Mr. Percy Brandon's hands does not precisely appear; but within three months after the deed of agreement had been signed, Mr. Percy Brandon, in the character of agent of the representatives of Messrs. Watts and Jones, petitioned the Colombian Treasury that the "Vales" should be received at their original value in the Custom-house at Bogota; and on the 1st of October following, brought his complaint to the notice of Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Bogota.

The case, however, was then presented to Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires under a very different aspect from that which now seems to be its true character. Your Lordship will perceive, on reference to Mr. Bunch's despatch of January 7, 1867, inclosing copies of certain papers from Mr. Percy Brandon, that Mr. Percy Brandon, in his memorial to the Secretary of the Treasury at Bogota, represents himself to have received the bonds "from the agent of the first owners at a value based upon their character according to the Convention," and in his letter of October 1, 1866, to Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires states, that "his principals will incur the enormous loss of about 85 per cent. if the 'Vales' are to be converted into 3 per cents. at that present moment." Further, it appears from Mr. Bunch's despatch of January 7, 1867, that Mr. Percy Brandon had represented to him that Mr. Michelsen had acted throughout these transactions as the agent of Messrs. Watts and Jones; that he (Mr. Michelsen), as such agent, had sold the "Vales" to Mr. Laverde; that Messrs. Fruhling and Goschen had become the attorneys or representatives of Messrs. Watts and Jones; that he, Mr. Percy Brandon, as the agent of Messrs. Fruhling and Goschen, had applied to Mr. Michelsen for the bonds in his possession, which were delivered to him, including those sold to Mr. Laverde. Further, Mr. Michelsen appears to have stated to Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires that he had to repurchase the "Vales" at a cost to himself of 2,000 dollars, "as Mr. Brandon claimed the very identical securities which had originally been delivered to Mr. Michelsen." Upon reading these statements, to which my attention was chiefly directed when I prepared my previous Report for your Lordship, I was under the impression that, unless Her Majesty's Government interfered, Messrs. Watts and Jones, to whom the "Vales" had been originally issued, would lose part of the benefit intended to be secured to them by the Convention of 1854, and that Mr. Michelsen, their agent, would also incur a personal loss of 2,000 dollars; whereas it would now appear that the result of your Lordship's intervention, if successful, would be to secure to Mr. Michelsen a very large profit upon the purchase which he has made of the bonds from the executors of Mr. Laverde—namely, the difference between their depreciated value, plus 2,000 dollars, and their original value; or, in other words, upon Mr. P. Brandon's own calculation of the possible loss to which he states that his principals might be exposed if the original value of the bonds should not be realized, a profit of not less than 85 per cent.!

It does not appear from Mr. Bunch's despatches that he had ever seen the deed of agreement under which Mr. Michelsen obtained possession of the "Vales" from the executors of Mr. Laverde, and he may not have attached due weight to the Report of the Colombian Senate in the absence of that deed; but it is difficult to peruse the deed of agreement, which I have now before me for the first time, and reconcile it with the original representation of Mr. Percy Brandon. Whether there may have been error or bad faith in Mr. P. Brandon's conduct, it will be for your Lordship to consider. Mr. Michelsen's statement to Mr. Bunch, that Mr. P. Brandon required him to procure the identical "Vales" which had been sold to Mr. Laverde, would seem to suggest that Mr. Michelsen, in obtaining possession of Mr. Laverde's bonds, was an instrument in the hands of Mr. P. Brandon. On the other hand, Mr. P. Brandon's representations to Mr. Bunch, that his principals will lose 85 per cent. by the transaction, seems to suggest that he has been the victim of some misrepresentation on the part of Mr. Michelsen. It is possible, however, that both parties may have acted in good faith towards one another, and have considered themselves justified in co-operating to procure from the Colombian Government the redemption of the "Vales" at their original value under the Convention of 1854, and to enforce that redemption, if necessary, through the action of Her Majesty's Charge d'Affaires, to their common profit.

It is for your Lordship to determine whether this is an error on their part. In my previous report to your Lordship's predecessor I have stated my opinion, that Her Majesty's Government has the right, if it pleases, to insist on the Colombian Government fulfilling to the letter its obligations under the Convention of 1854. I retain the same opinion, and I gather from the letter of Senor Torres Caicedo of January 22, 1869, that the Colombian Government does not contest the question of right with Her Majesty's Government. But upon the propriety of your Lordship's instructing Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires to insist upon the Colombian Government fulfilling its obligations towards Her Majesty's Government according to the letter of the Convention in this particular case, I entertain very great doubt. I had originally been led to think that great injustice would be done to Messrs. Watts and Jones, in whose favour the "vales" were issued, if the bonds were not to be redeemed by the Colombian Government at their original value, and that to prevent that injustice the intervention of Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires might be properly exerted. It is possible indeed that Messrs. Watts and Jones may have an infinitesimal interest in the question as regards some few bonds which Mr. T. Brandon has in his possession, as he speaks in his letter of October 1, 1866, of having received "part of the bonds a long time since from the agent of the first owners." With regard to any such bonds, if Messrs. Watts and Jones have never received full value for them, I apprehend that, according to the principles laid down in the despatches of Senor Torres Caicedo, the Colombian Government would not object to provide for such bonds being redeemed at the Custom-house at Bogota as bonds of the eighth class. Their objection, if I understand their case correctly, is confined to the "Laverde bonds," the value of which had been depreciated under a municipal ordinance before they were purchased by Mr. Michelsen at their depreciated value. It is open, indeed, to Her Majesty's Government still to contest the right of the Colombian Government to depreciate those bonds, whilst they were in the possession of Mr. Laverde, but the further discussion of this question would be without practical consequences as regards Mr. Percy Brandon's interest, seeing that the value of the bonds has not been affected by any municipal ordinance since they were purchased by Mr. Michelsen, and were handed over (howsoever) to Mr. Percy Brandon.

1869

Under the altered aspect of this case, I am of opinion that your Lordship may properly instruct Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Bogota to inform Mr. Percy Brandon, that the deed of agreement between Mr. Michelsen and the executors of Mr. Laverde, which has been recently communicated to your Lordship by the Colombian Minister in London, appears to your Lordship to be inconsistent with the representations made to Mr. Bunch by Mr. P. Brandon and Mr. Michelsen, and upon the faith of which Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires was instructed by your Lordship's predecessor to insist upon the Columbian Government fulfilling its engagements to Her Majesty's Government. That Mr. Michelsen and Mr. P. Brandon should be invited by Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaiars to offer explanations as to the deed of agreement and subsequent transactions between them, and should be informed that your Lordship will suspend your decision as to the future course which Her Majesty's Government may think it right to adopt, until those explanations have been furnished to Mr. Bunch.

I have, &c.

(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

Pacific Islands.

No. 105.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received May 17.)

Temple, May 15, 1869.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Murray's letter of the 4th instant, stating that, with reference to previous correspondence regarding the steps which would be taken to confer upon Her Majesty's Consul at the Fiji Islands increased powers of jurisdiction over British subjects, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from the Treasury, inclosing the draft of a Bill prepared under instructions from that Department, by which it was proposed that the provisions of the Foreign Jurisdiction Act should be extended so as to confer the necessary powers on Her Majesty in places where Her Majesty had no jurisdiction by Treaty or otherwise.

Mr. Murray was pleased further to state that we would observe that, in transmitting this draft to the Foreign Office, certain objections were raised by the Lords of the Treasury to the proposed legislation, and that your Lordship considered it, therefore, desirable, before proceeding further in the matter, to consult the Colonial Office which, as the Department that had to deal with matters in Australia, would be concerned in the matter of the proposed connection between Australia and the Fiji Island so far as affected the question of legal proceedings and penalties.

Mr. Murray further stated that he was also to inclose a letter from the Colonial Office, dated 26th February last, from which we should observe that, in replying to this reference, Lord Granville had suggested that the difficulties of the case might be met if the law of this country were assimilated to a law of the United States said to be in force for the same purpose; but that we would learn from the inclosed correspondence with Mr. Thornton that the United States' law had been practically found to be inoperative; and further that he was to request that we would take this subject into our consideration, and in so doing he was to state to us that unless we could suggest any mode of overcoming the difficulties which had been raised, your Lordship feared you would be compelled to abandon the idea of fresh legislation on the matter. In the latter case you would propose to limit your instructions to Her Majesty's Consul to those contained in an annexed draft (No. 2), unless, indeed, we should have any suggestions to make as to the mode by which the powers of the Consul in dealing with offences could, under existing powers, be beneficially extended.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this subject into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we are not prepared to suggest to your Lordship any adequate mode of overcoming the difficulties which have been raised in regard to giving effect to the proposed Bill as prepared by Mr. Reilly, and we consider those difficulties inherent in the subject upon which it is proposed to legislate, nor does it occur to us to suggest any amendment to your Lordship's proposed instructions to Consul March.

We have, &c.

(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
J. D. COLERIDGE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 106.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received July 16.)

Temple, July 15, 1869.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Spring Rice's letter of the 9th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me an extract of a despatch from Her Majesty's Consul at Tahiti, calling attention to the terms of an oath which, according to an Ordinance issued by Queen Pomare and the Imperial Commissioner, is required to be taken by every member of the General Council of Tahiti, and from which I could see that Mr. Miller requests to be instructed as to whether a British subject, taking such oath, would thereby forfeit his right to claim British protection, whilst residing at Tahiti; and to request that I would report to your Lordship my opinion as to the answer which should be returned to Mr. Miller on this point.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the terms of the oath are such that a natural-born British subject, who has taken it, may be properly held to have no claim to British protection as long as he continues to be a member of the General Council of Tahiti. Whether his disqualification to claim the benefits of his native character in Tahiti should be maintained, after he has ceased to hold office, if he continues to reside in Tahiti, may depend upon the obligation of the oath, whether it is of a permanent character, or expires upon his quitting office. Primâ facie, the taking of such an oath would imply permanent allegiance to the Queen of Pomare and the Protectorate, and unless upon inquiry Her Majesty's Consul should report to your Lordship that the obligation of the oath expires with the office of Councillor, I should be of opinion that a British subject taking such an oath would thereby forfeit all claim to British protection, whilst residing in Tahiti.

I have, &c.

(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

x No. 107

Persia.

No. 107.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received June 30.)

Temple, June 29, 1869.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 11th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying despatch and its inclosures from Mr. Alison, requesting to be informed whether under the circumstances therein stated Meerza Aly Akbar is to be considered as entitled to British protection in Persia; and to request that I would take these papers, together with the correspondence which took place in the year 1860 in regard to the right of this man's father and grandfather to receive British protection, into my consideration, and report to your Lordship my opinion thereupon.

1869

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That it is not quite clear from Sir H. Rawlinson's despatch of March 27, 1860, on what ground Hajee Abdul Azeem was held to be entitled to British protection, whether under the provisions of the British statute law in virtue of his father's Anglo-Indian character, having been himself born at Shikarpore, at that time under the Talpoores of Scinde, or whether in virtue of his own Anglo-Indian character acquired upon the annexation of Scinde to the Anglo-Indian territories in 1843-44. His son, who was born at Meshed, would have no statutory rights derivable from his father's national character, but he may have been held to have such rights as the grandson of a natural-born British subject. It is possible, therefore, although open to some doubt, that Her Majesty's Mission at Teheran may have properly granted British protection to Hajee Abdul Ajeem, and to his son Meerza Aghen Jan. But the statutory link fails in the case of the grandson Meerza Aly Akbar, whom I presume to have been born in Persia, and I am of opinion that he would not be entitled, under any view of his case, to British protection in Persia.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

Peru.

Not

No. 108.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received January 8.)

Temple, January 8, 1869.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 28th ultimo, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying despatches from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Lima (Nos. 117 and 132) respecting a motion which has been introduced into the Peruvian Congress to enact a Law declaring that foreigners cannot claim from the Government of the Republic any compensation or indemnification whatever for damages or losses sustained by them in consequence of political commotions or disturbances, unless such damages or losses may have been caused by the legitimate authorities, and further to enact that foreigners may institute proceedings for such injuries against a third party in accordance with the rules laid down by the laws of the country; and to request that I would take these papers into my consideration and furnish your Lordship with my opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That upon a careful examination of the text of the law, as published in "El Commercio" of 4th December, 1868, it appears to me to be susceptible of two constructions, and it may be advisable before any action is taken on the subject by Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Lima, that he should ascertain what is the interpretation which the Peruvian Government intends to be put upon the IIIrd Article as regards the words "only in the exceptional case established in Article II.'

If the Peruvian Legislature has intended to enact "that in all cases when private persons have suffered damage or loss in person or property in consequence of political commotions, except in the case where such damage or loss has been inflicted by the legitimate authorities, they shall not be at liberty to make any direct claim against the Executive Government, but, whether they be foreigners or natives, they shall have a right to sue the authors of the damage in the Peruvian Courts;" in such case no objection could, I think, be raised with reason against such legislation.

Further, if it is intended to provide by the IIIrd Article "that the Executive Government shall not be at liberty to entertain diplomatically the claim of foreigners for compensation in such cases, until they have had recourse to the Peruvian Tribunals, and there has been a refusal or delay of justice to them," it may be that foreign Powers would not have any right to remonstrate against the passing of such a law, and they may properly wait to see how it is administered. But I am clearly of opinion that the Peruvian Legislature is incompetent, by any municipal law, to exempt the Republic from any responsibility for injuries done to foreigners within its territory, to which it may be liable either under the general law of nations or under special Treaty engagements.

I am, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 109.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received January 14.)

Temple, January 13, 1869.

My Lord.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 31st December last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us an accompanying despatch and its inclosures from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Lima (No. 140), relative to the case of Mrs. Stevenson, a British subject resident in Scotland, who claimed, as next of kin, certain property in Callao, and that we would perceive from Mr. Jenningham's despatch that this case had been tried in the various Courts in Peru, and the Supreme Court of that country had decided that, although Mrs. Stevenson was admittedly the legal heir to the property in question, she could not be allowed to succeed to it in consequence of her being a foreigner and not resident in Peru.

Mr. Hammond was pleased to add that he was, therefore, to request that we would take these papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion on the course which it would be right that Her Majesty's Government should take in this matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That this case appears to us to turn entirely on the true construction to be given to Article 635 of the Peruvian Civil Code. This is as follows:—

"A foreigner can inherit property in Peru, if he prove that Peruvians enjoy a similar right in the country to which he belongs."

We think "a similar right" means a right of inheritance, and that the Code intends to provide that a foreigner in Peru may inherit according to the law of Peruvian descent, when he belongs to a country wherein a Peruvian might inherit according to the law of descent in that country, i.e., wherein a Peruvian would not be disqualified from inheriting by reason of being an alien.

The details of the respective laws of descent do not appear to us to be material. The question, then, is, Can Peruvians inherit in England the sort of property which Mrs. Stevenson claims to inherit in Peru?—Clearly they cannot. Mrs. Stevenson, therefore, cannot claim to inherit in Peru by Peruvian Law, and we are not aware of any other ground on which she could claim. We are, accordingly, of opinion that there is nothing in the proceedings of the Courts in Peru which calls for any interference on the part of your Lordship.

We have, &c.
(Signed) R. P COLLIER.
J. D. COLERIDGE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 110.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received May 31.)

Temple, May 31, 1869.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified to us in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 10th instant, stating that with reference to our report of the 13th of January last, relative to the case of Mrs. Stevenson, a British subject, resident in Scotland, who claimed as next of kin certain property at Callao, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter and its inclosures from Sir J. Ogilby upon that case; and he was to request that we would take those papers into our consideration, and inform your Lordship whether they contained any grounds to induce us to alter our opinion above referred to.

1869

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That the papers transmitted by Mr. Hammond for our consideration do not contain any grounds which induce us to alter the opinion which we have expressed to your Lordship in our report of 13th January last. We should wish, however, to correct a misapprehension which appears to exist in the mind of Mr. James Shield, as we infer from his letter to Sir J. Ogilby of 26th April last, that the opinion expressed by us to your Lordship had any reference to the right of succession which Mrs. Stevenson might have to any moveable property of her deceased relative. Under the law of England an alien would enjoy similar rights of succession to moveable property, which a British subject enjoys, and accordingly if Article 635 of the Peruvian Code applies to the moveable as well as to the immoveable property of Miss Maria Stevenson, her grandmother Mrs. Stevenson would be entitled to succeed to the former upon the identical principle of reciprocity, which excludes her from inheriting the latter.

We have, &c.
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
J. D. COLERIDGE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

Portugal.

No. 111.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received April 3.)

Temple, April 2, 1869.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 27th ultimo, stating that with reference to the report of the Law Officers of the Crown of October 7, 1867, and to previous reports on the subject of the claims of the bondholders of the South Eastern Railway of Portugal, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith, together with the previous papers, the further correspondence which has taken place with regard to this matter, from which we should learn that a Decree has been recently passed by the Portuguese Government, confiscating the property of the railway in question; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take the case into our consideration, and favour your Lordship at our earliest convenience with our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the case into our consideration, together with Mr. Hammond's letter of this day's date, inclosing a further letter from Mr. Mangles relative to this matter, and have the honour to report—

That we consider the course of proceeding suggested by Mr. Daniel, the Chairman of the holders of debentures of the first issue, and supported by Lord Somers, to be the most desirable both for the parties whom they represent, and the parties represented by Mr. Mangles. Your Lordship has already instructed Her Majesty's Minister at Lisbon to give Mr. Daniel's proposal unofficial support, and if Lord Somers is correct in his view, that the payment of the compensation money named in the Decree of the Cortes is included in the conditions of the loan, which is shortly to be brought out in London, it may be wiser on the part of all parties concerned to acquiesce. The forms of law appear to have been observed, but Sir C. Murray is no doubt right in saying that the substance of justice has been violated. Under these circumstances we think your Lordship will be perfectly justified in using any power or influence at your disposal to prevent the effecting of a loan till the incumbrancies on the railway prior to the contract, or supposed contract, with the Portuguese Government are satisfied. Whether as a matter of policy your Lordship chooses to interfere actively, and whether if you did it would effect the objects of those who are asking for your Lordship's interference, are matters on which we have no means of properly advising your Lordship.

We have, &c.
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
J. D. COLERIDGE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 112.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received May 31.)

Temple, May 29, 1869.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 6th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying papers relative to the case of Mr. Cassels, a British subject resident at Oporto, who has been accused of "disseminating opinions contrary to the doctrines of the Church of Rome;" and to request that I would furnish your Lordship with my opinion on this case, and as to whether any steps should be taken in its present stage.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That it is not advisable for your Lordship to take any steps as regards the Portuguese authorities in the present stage of the proceedings. I may observe, however, that Mr. Cassel's advocate, before the Court of Appeal, appears to have stated that Mr. Cassel had not proper notice of the day of his trial, so as to be able to prepare the necessary elements for his defence, documents, witnesses, &c. If a new trial should take place, it may be hoped that such an irregularity will be avoided, otherwise it might be matter for remonstrance on your Lordship's part. The statement, however, of the advocate may prove to be only an objection on a point of form, which he was justified in taking, although no substantial injury may have resulted to Mr. Cassel. Your Lordship may perhaps think it right to direct Mr. Crawfurd to make some inquiry, and to report to your Lordship on this point in Mr. Cassel's case.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 113.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received June 23.)

Temple, June 22, 1869.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 5th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter from the Colonial Office, inclosing an account of the proceedings which have taken place at Hong Kong in the case of the "Queen against Saint," in which an ex-officio information was filed by the Acting Attorney-General against Mr. Saint for the publication of a Libel against Senhor Amaral, a former Governor of Macao, and afterwards Minister of Marine and for the Colonies of His Majesty the King of Portugal; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take the same into consideration, and furnish your Lordship with our opinion upon the case, and as to the course to be pursued by Her Majesty's Government with regard to it.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the Crown appears to have been unnecessarily brought into Court to vindicate the character of an ex-Governor of Macao, by the indiscreet and improper conduct of Mr. Ball, while Acting Attorney-General of Hong Kong. This was an error: and the determination of Mr. Pauncefoote to go on with a process, which ought not to have been begun, was, we think, a mistake also. It is true he had before him a choice of evils, and although we think he was mistaken, he was so naturally and pardonably in circumstances of great difficulty, which he had no hand in bringing about. Having determined to proceed, however, it was a serious mistake to proceed by halves, and to resign into other hands the conduct of a Government prosecution.

These mistakes have led to a serious legal and technical difficulty in the further prosecution of the case. The defendant pleaded a plea of justification, his right to do which, in answer to an ex-officio information, is at least extremely doubtful. But it appears from the Attorney-General's note and from the Judgment of the Chief Justice, that this plea was pleaded by consent. This leads to most inconvenient and embarrasing consequences, and we are asked to advise your Lordship whether an appeal should be applied for in a proceeding which has been most unfortunately begun and unfortunately carried on.

1869

The raising of very important constitutional questions by the Judgment of the Chief Justice is another unhappy incident in this matter. On the whole, however, we are unable to advise the further prosecution, for the sake of settling questions of law, of an appeal in a proceeding which ought not to have been begun, and ought to have been, if begun, conducted very differently. Inconvenient consequences may arise, no doubt, from discontinuing the proceedings in this stage, but they are a less evil in our judgment than continuing them. It is easy by some statement or minute to prevent the Judgment of the Chief Justice from being taken as accepted by the Crown, or standing as an uncontested precedent. The Portuguese Government may properly be informed by your Lordship, that grave questions of procedure have arisen, which render it unadvisable to carry these proceedings further. But that Government may also be told that it will always be open to the Government of Macas to take proceedings in a less objectionable form against any one who libels it. The two pending informations should be put an end to by nolle prosequi.

We have, &c.
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
J. D. COLERIDGE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 114.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received July 12.)

My Lord,
Temple, July 10, 1869.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 24th ultimo, stating that with reference to my Report of the 31st August, on the subject of Mr. Andrews' claim on the Portuguese Government, he was directed to transmit to me a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Lisbon, No. 64, inclosing the refusal of the Marquis de la Bandeira to admit Mr. Andrews' claim, together with a copy of the opinion of the Portuguese Attorney-General, upon which that refusal is founded. The previous papers, and a letter from Mr. Mee Mathew, the Counsel of Mr. Andrews, containing observations on the opinion of the Portuguese Attorney-General, were also inclosed; and Mr. Hammond was to request that I would take these papers into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I am unable to advise your Lordship that there are any solid grounds for disputing the view taken by the Portugese Government of Mr. Andrews' claim.

Mr. Andrews' Counsel, in his observations on the recent Report of the Portuguese Attorney-General has suggested, that he cannot have been in possession of all the documents which have passed between the Portuguese and British Governments in Mr. Andrews' case. I have accordingly examined very carefully the voluminous correspondence which has been submitted to me, but I have failed to find any documents in that collection calculated to shake the conclusion at which the Portuguese Attorney-General has arrived, as to the insufficiency of the proof tendered by Mr. Andrews in support of his claim. Those conclusions, I may observe, are not conclusions arrived at for the first time by the Law Officers of the Portuguese Crown, as I find them to be in substance identical with the conclusions contained in a former Report made by the Attorney-General to the Portuguese Treasury on the 4th July, 1849. There is, however, one document to be found in the correspondence to which no reference is made in the recent opinion of the Portuguese Attorney-General, namely, the letter marked "private," and addressed by Baron de Luz to Mr. Andrews on December 9, 1847, in which he states, that he and his colleagues "thought the claim a just one, as it had been proved that the damages had been caused by troops in the Civil War."

Upon this letter Mr. Andrew's counsel has laid considerable stress, as being an admission by the Portuguese Government of the sufficiency of the proof tendered by Mr. Andrews in support of his claim. But I am of opinion that Mr. Andrews' counsel is not justified in setting so high a value upon this letter. It was, in fact, a private communication to Mr. Andrews of the primâ facie view, which had been taken by the Council of Ministers at Lisbon of the statements in the petition presented by Mr. Andrews, before that petition had been referred to the Law Advisers of the Government; and it concludes with announcing that "all the papers have been sent to the Procuradores de Fazenda e da Corôa for the purpose of knowing their judicial opinions." What those opinions may have been does not appear from the correspondence, but it does appear that some few months afterwards, upon Sir Hamilton Seymour referring for the first time to this letter, M. Gomaz de Castro, who had succeeded Baron de Luz as Minister for Foreign Affaires, replied that "the Baron de Luz had been misled, and that Sir Hamilton Seymour must see that the claim in question was of so dubious a nature, that it had not deserved protection from home, otherwise M. de Castro would have heard of it." The letter, however, of the Baron de Luz was brought to the attention of the Law Advisers of the Portuguese Crown in 1849. Mr. Andrews has, therefore, had the advantage, if there was any, of the opinion expressed by the Baron de Luz being brought under the consideration of the Portuguese Law Officers, notwithstanding which, upon a judicial examination of his proofs, they have held them to be insufficient.

It may deserve your Lordship's attention that such also was the view expressed by Sir John Dodson as to "the real and intrinsic merits of Mr. Andrews' claim" in his opinion of the 16th March, 1842, when the proofs tendered by Mr. Andrews were submitted to him, as well as on the 7th February, 1849, after "the private note" of the Baron de Luz had been laid before him.

I am of opinion that the utmost use has been made of the letter of the Baron de Luz in the correspondence between the two Governments, and that it may have justified Her Majesty's Government in pressing the Portuguese Government to reconsider Mr. Andrew's claim, notwithstanding the adverse Report of the Portuguese Law Officers in 1849. But as the proofs offered by Mr. Andrews have been again pronounced, after reconsideration, to be insufficient by the Portuguese Attorney-General, not upon a question of form only, as suggested by Mr. Andrews' Counsel, but upon material questions of fact, and his view is confirmed by the opinion expressed on two occasions by my predecessor in office, I consider that it would not be proper for Her Majesty's Government to insist upon the conclusiveness of those proofs upon either of the grounds suggested by Mr. Andrews' Counsel, namely:—

(1.) That the proofs cannot now be impugned, as the Judge before whom the inquiry took place must be presumed to have been satisfied of the fact.

(2.) Or that the claim has been admitted under the Commission of Inquiry instituted by the Portuguese Government, as is shown by the letter of the Baron de Luz.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 115.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received September 3.)

My Lord,
Temple, August 31, 1873. ?1869

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Spring Rice's letter of the 2nd instant, stating that, with reference to my report of the 10th ultimo, on the subject of Mr. Andrews' claim on the Portuguese Government, he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying letter from Mr. Mee Mathew, in reply to a communication founded on my opinion, which was made to that gentleman, and to request that I would take the same into my consideration and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to any further steps that can be taken in the matter. The previous papers relating to this case were also inclosed for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I am not prepared to recommend your Lordship to take any further step in this case, unless your Lordship should think it advisable to request Mr. Andrews to forward to your Lordship a copy of the two vouchers referred to in the so-called index of his printed case, as containing the testimony of witnesses in support of his claim. Mr. Andrews' legal adviser, in his last letter to your Lordship of 20th July, 1869, has taken the liberty of suggesting that your Lordship seems to forget that his claim had been established previously to the letter of the Baron de Luz, of 9th December, 1847, under a Commission of Inquiry instituted by the Government of Donna Maria after the termination of the Civil War. I do not, however, find amongst the voluminous papers submitted to me, any copy of the evidence taken before that Commission, but if it be identical with the evidence submitted to Sir John Dodson in 1842, which he pronounced to be "not favourable to the claim of Mr. Andrews," Mr. Mee Mathew would clearly not be justified in asserting, as he does indirectly, that his claim was established by that evidence. As Mr. Andrews' legal adviser intimates an intention, on his part, to bring Mr. Andrews' case before Parliament, it is the more important that this evidence should be at your Lordship's command, inasmuch as in the case already printed by Mr. Andrews, apparently to be laid before the House of Commons, Mr. Andrews has availed himself of what may be styled "the fallacy of reference," as respects the testimony of his witnesses, and excuses himself for not adding it to the case, as "being too voluminous; and, moreover, the facts, far from being contested, were admitted;" whereas the case, as it stands at present, is precisely otherwise, the facts alleged by Mr. Andrews being contested by the Portuguese Government, and the proofs being declared by the Portuguese Law Officers to be insufficient.

1869

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

Prussia.

No. 116.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received June 24.)

Temple, Jnne 23, 1869.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 4th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to request that I would furnish your Lordship with my opinion on the following point:—A naturalized British subject has a son born in Frankfort; the latter, now fourteen years of age, is resident in the country of his birth. Has he any claim to be considered a British subject in right of his father's naturalization; and if so, to what extent?

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the answer to be given to the question proposed by your Lordship must depend upon the interpretation which a Court of Law would put upon the 6th section of 7 and 8 Vic., c. 66, which defines the benefit of naturalization to be the enjoyment, with certain exceptions, of all the rights and capacities which a natural-born subject may enjoy or transmit. This section, it may be observed, omits to enact that the naturalized British subject may "transmit" any of the rights and capacities which he is enabled to "enjoy;" and upon the well-known principle of "expressio unius est exclusio alterius," it may be reasonably held that the intention of the Legislature was to confer upon the naturalized alien the personal status of a British subject, without communicating to his offspring any delivative rights or civil capacities, leaving them to be settled by the English common law. Under that law, the son of a naturalized British subject, born abroad after his father's naturalization, would have no claim, in my opinion, to be considered a British subject, nor do I think that he could claim any statutory privileges under 4 George II, c. 21. Whether he might claim to inherit land under 25 Edward III, sec. 2, would depend on the degree of equity which would be admitted by a Court construing that statute, as the framers of the statute clearly did not contemplate naturalized subjects of the Crown in speaking of persons "who were within the faith and liegeance of the King of England."

If the question raised by your Lordship has an immediate practical application, I would suggest that the opinion of the Attorney-General and the Solicitor-General should be taken upon the interpretation which I have ventured to suggest that a Court of Law would probably give to the Naturalization Act, as important interests may be affected by that interpretation, and I may have taken too limited a view of the statute.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

No. 117.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received December 27.)

Temple, December 24, 1869.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Spring Rice's letter of the 23rd instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the correspondence, noted in the margin,* respecting an application made to your Lordship by Messrs. J. Cobb and Pearson on points connected with the serving of writs in Prussia, and to request that I would report to your Lordship my opinion whether the matter is one in which Her Majesty's Government is called upon to interfere.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That this is not a case in which Her Majesty's Government can be properly required to take any steps. The writ and notice appear to have been served on Mr. Glacis personally, and it is a question for Counsel to advise in what form the circumstances of the service should be brought under the notice of the Court, with a view to obtain its leave for the plaintiff to be at liberty to preceed with the action, as Mr. Glacis must be taken to have wilfully neglected to appear to the writ.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

Russia.

No. 118.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received January 18.)

Temple, January 16, 1869.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 28th ultimo, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the correspondence, as marked in the margin,† upon the subject of a complaint brought by the Russian Authorities against Her Majesty's Consul at Kertch, whom they accuse of having connived at the clandestine escape from Russia of a British subject, named Blair, against whom an action had been brought by a M. Novostiltzoff, on account of an alleged breach of contract in regard to the erection of certain naptha works; and Mr. Otway was pleased to request that I would furnish your Lordship with my opinion upon this case, and as to the steps which it would be advisable for Her Majesty's Government to take therein.

I am also honoured with Mr. Otway's further letter of the 13th January, transmitting a further despatch and its inclosures from Her Majesty's Ambassador at St. Petersburgh (No. 1) relating to this case.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the last Report of Her Majesty's Consul at Kertch,‡ in reply to the charges made against him, gives a totally different colour to the transactions which have been made a subject of complaint against him by the Russian Authorities at that place. According to the Report of the Governor of Kertch, inclosed in Sir A. Buchanan's despatch of 16th December, 1868, Her Majesty's Consul not merely gave an asylum to Mr. Blair, and raised every obstacle to his being served by the Russian police with a notice not to quit Kertch, but seconded him in escaping from that place. Her Majesty's Consul, however, has, I think, been successful in his last Report in defending himself against some of these charges. Against the first charge, for instance, of giving an asylum to Mr. Blair, his explanation is, in my opinion, satisfactory, as it shows that he

---

* Messrs. Pearson and Cobb, December 13; to Messrs. Pearson and Cobb, December 20; Messrs. Pearson and Cobb, December 21, 1869.

† Sir A. Buchanan, Nos. 220, 224, 235, 241, 257, 73, and 74; to Sir A. Buchanan, Nos. 113, 114, and 14.

‡ Inclosure in Sir A. Buchanan's despatch of January 6, 1869.

1869

admitted him to reside at the Consulate by an arrangement made before Mr. Blair left England, and long before any dispute arose with Mr. Novostiltzoff. His defence, however, against the second charge, of raising obstacles in the way of the Commissary of Police serving a notice on Mr. Blair, is not so complete. He meets, however, directly the charge that he undertook to deliver the ukase of the Tribunal of Commerce to Mr. Blair* and obtain a written declaration from him, by explaining that what he undertook to do was to communicate to Mr. Blair the contents of the ukase, for which he gave a receipt, engaging to return it when translated, and "that they never even told him that he was to write anything upon the paper." "I kept my promise," he says, "in communicating to him the contents and then returning it. Here my part ended." It may deserve remark, in reference to the contradictions on this part of the case between the Report of Her Majesty's Consul and that which was made by the Commissary of the Russian Police to the Governor of Kertch, that Her Majesty's Consul professes to "know nothing of Russian." † It would not, therefore, be matter of surprise, under such circumstances, that Her Majesty's Consul, who distrusted the interpreter Laticheff, should not have fully comprehended the communication of the Commissary of Police, if the Report of the latter is correct; but the fact, which is admitted on both sides, that the ukase was left with the Consul at his own request, throws discredit on the Russian statement that the ukase was left with the Consul in order that he might obtain a written engagement from Mr. Blair not to leave Kertch. Her Majesty's Consul states that "they were on the point of taking away the paper, which the Governor had strictly charged them to do, but he declined to communicate its contents unless the paper was left with him. They then asked him to give a receipt for it, which he did, engaging to return it when translated." A reference to this receipt, which ought to be found in the hands of the Police authorities at Kertch, might clear up the difficulty which besets this part of the case, as regards the undertaking of Her Majesty's Consul. Upon the third charge, of improperly assisting Mr. Blair to escape from Kertch, the defence of Her Majesty's Consul is complete, if it can be relied on, as he states that the Governor's Secretary came to the Consulate on the afternoon of the same day on which the police had brought the ukase, and "urged Mr. Blair in the strongest terms to leave Kertch by any sailing-vessel, and let them settle the matter in England;" and that later on that afternoon Mr. Blair left Kertch in the steamer "Kotzebue" to visit the works at Saman, since which time Her Majesty's Consul has never seen him.

With regard to the steps which it would be advisable for Her Majesty's Government to take in this matter, it appears to me that the gravamen of the charge brought against Her Majesty's Consul is that of abusing his official position at Kertch to second the escape of Mr. Blair from justice. I am disposed to think that he is open to the charge of not having treated the Police authorities with due courtesy, but they did not call at the Consulate in order to serve Mr. Blair with a judicial notice not to quit Kertch, but with a summons to appear before the Police authorities in order that he should be officially notified not to leave Kertch, and Mr. Blair may be open to blame for having sheltered him from being so summoned. On the other hand, if Mr. Blair was advised by the Secretary of the Governor of Kertch, on his visit to the Consulate on the same afternoon, to leave the country and let the matter be settled in England, it would be hard, I think, for the Russian Authorities to impute blame to Her Majesty's Consul for having seconded Mr. Blair's departure for England. If your Lordship can rely upon the statement of Her Majesty's Consul on this head, bearing in mind that "he knows nothing of Russian," I think that his explanation will supply a fair answer to the charge which the Russian Minister of Foreign Affairs has brought to the attention of Her Majesty's Minister at St. Petersburgh.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 119.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received January 21.)

Temple, January 21, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's further letter of the 16th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me a despatch, with its inclosures, from Her Majesty's Consul at Kertch, respecting the complaint of the

---

* Despatch of Governor of Kertch, Inclosure 3 in Sir A. Buchanan's No. 74.

† Inclosure 2 in Sir A. Buchanan's No. 73.

Russian authorities against him in the case of Mr. Blair, and to request that I would take the same into consideration and report to your Lordship my opinion thereon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I have considered the further papers transmitted to me, and with reference to the statement of Mr. Consul Barrow, beg leave to refer your Lordship to the report already made by me to your Lordship. Mr. Consul Barrow has, however, since transmitted to your Lordship the final judgment of the Commercial Court at Kertch upon the claim made by Mr. Reuter for damages against Mr. Blair, and as it appears from that Judgment that the Court has declared that Mr. Reuter's claim could not at present be taken into consideration by the Court, that decision ought, in my opinion, to relieve Mr. Consul Barrow from any imputed responsibility for the sum so claimed by Mr. Reuter, as it appears that Mr. Reuter had no right of action against Mr. Blair for any such sum at the time when he sought to detain him at Kertch until he found security to meet the claim.

The great difficulty for your Lordship in this case appears to me to arise from the tone adopted by Her Majesty's Consul towards the authorities at Kertch, as exemplified more particularly in his letter of 7th December, 1868, addressed to his Excellency the Governor of Kertch. Mr. Consul Barrow may have had good cause for dissatisfaction with the treatment which he had previously received from those authorities, but he had been specially informed by Her Majesty's Ambassador at St. Petersburgh, in his despatch of November 5th, 1868, that in his view "the most satisfactory manner for all parties for settling the question in dispute would be the adoption of such a compromise as Mr. Blair had proposed to the Governor of Kertch in his letter to his Excellency of the 17th ultimo." It was, I think, clearly the duty of Her Majesty's Consul, after receiving the Ambassador's despatch, to have adopted a conciliatory and respectful tone in his communications with the Governor, instead of using language of passion and reproach. On the other hand, Her Majesty's Consul seems to have honestly intended to protect a British subject from what he conceived to be great oppression and wrong. It is not for me to suggest to your Lordship the propriety of complying with Mr. Consul Barrow's request to remove him to another post in a more civilized country, but I may perhaps venture to observe that the mode in which he has dealt with the difficulties in Mr. Blair's case is a bad earnest of his capacity to grapple successfully with future difficulties of a like nature which may beset him if he is continued in his present post.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 120.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received March 8.)

Temple, March 6, 1868.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Murray's letter of the 2nd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the accompanying correspondence, as noted in the list inclosed, relative to a case of two British engineers charged with murder in Russia, and to request that I would take these papers into consideration and furnish your Lordship with any observations I may have to offer thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That it appears from Mr. Carruthers' despatch of 21st December, 1868, that Mr. Nichol, one of the British engineers, has been released by the Preliminary Commission from all further prosecution, and I presume that no question can be raised before the Criminal Court at Novo Tcherkask as to his guilt or innocence. With regard to the other engineer, Mr. Miller, it is not quite clear from Mr. Carruthers' despatches whether he is to be formally tried before the Criminal Court at Novo Scherkask, in which case the evidence of Mr. Nickel would be of the greatest value to him, or whether that Court will proceed to pass sentence upon Miller upon a review of the facts proved in evidence before the Parliamentary Commission. On the supposition that Miller is to undergo a formal trial before the Criminal Court, it would clearly be desirable that Mr. Carruthers should procure a sufficient delay of the trial to allow of Nichol giving evidence on behalf of Miller. If, on the other hand, the evidence is closed, and all that remains for the Criminal Court is to declare what section of the Russian statute law is applicable to the facts of the case, it would be advisable for Mr. Carruthers to ascertain whether counsel may be heard upon the point of law, as the alternative suggested in Mr. Carruthers' despatch of February 15, 1869, between "incarceration during a certain time," and "penal servitude in Siberia for eight years," would imply that the law applicable to the case is by no means clear. The release of Nickel by the Preliminary Commission, in my opinion, goes a long way to corroborate the story told by the engineers how the Russians assaulted them. How far Nichol may have confirmed Miller's statement that Nichol was in peril of his life, when Miller fired and shot the driver, does not appear. The difficulty in Miller's case may possibly be found in the circumstance that he fired his revolver three times when struggling with the driver's companion, which he accounts for by saying that the latter endeavoured to wrest his revolver from him. If Counsel may be heard before the Criminal Court on behalf of Miller upon the point of law, I venture to suggest that Mr. Zitsorenco, or some other competent person, should be instructed to appear on behalf of Miller, as the Procureur is stated to have prejudicially affected the Criminal Court by a protest, and a Russian newspaper is also reported to be exercising an unfavourable influence on the opinion of the Criminal Court, so that there may be some risk of that Court being biassed by statements not in evidence before the Preliminary Commission, the effect of which Counsel might be able to neutralize, if allowed to be heard. If Counsel, on the other hand, are not permitted to be heard before the Criminal Court, it would be desirable at least that some one should attend when Miller is called upon to receive sentence, and report the grounds of the Court's decision, and if that decision should be widely at variance with the view taken by the preliminary Commission, your Lordship would be enabled to judge from the report how far your Lordship might be justified in intervening with a view to procure an arrest of judgment on the ground of an unfair decision, or otherwise to obtain a mitigation of the sentence as excessive.

1869

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 121.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received March 24.)

Temple, March 24, 1869.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 13th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying letter with its inclosures from Mr. Furness, stating the course he wishes to have taken in order to inquire into and settle a difference in regard to a contract entered into by Messrs. Furness and Co. with the Paving Committee at Odessa; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take this case into my consideration, and report to your Lordship my opinion thereupon,

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the most convenient solution of the difficulty in this case will probably be found in the appointment of an Umpire, whose competency and impartiality should not be open to any reasonable question. The Paving Committee of Odessa, under the terms of the paving contract, have an unfettered discretion in the selection of an arbitrator on their side in case of any misunderstanding with Messrs. Furness and Co. upon pecuniary questions, and I think your Lordship may properly decline to instruct Her Majesty's Ambassador at St. Petersburgh to intervene, as suggested by Mr. George Furness, for the purpose of procuring, through the action of the Imperial Government, the cancellation of the appointment made by the Paving Committee, as it is not essential to justice that the arbitrator on the side of the Paving Committee should be a disinterested party. Different considerations, however, may apply to the appointment of an umpire; and as the paving contract has pointed out how that appointment should be made, I consider that Messrs. Furness and Co., before having recourse to your Lordship's aid, should endeavour to bring about the appointment of an impartial person as umpire, by an amicable arrangement between the two arbitrators before they enter upon the examination of the accounts. If the arbitrator on the side of the Paving Committee should decline to concur in the appointment of a disinterested person as umpire, and the appointment should devolve under the terms of contract to the Paving Committee and the contractors, an occasion may arise in which it would not be unreasonable for Messrs. Furness and Co. to request your Lordship's aid, and under which it might be proper for your Lordship to use your good offices with the Imperial Government.

In the present state of the proceedings I think Messrs. Furness and Co. would act wisely if they were to offer to waive the objection which they had raised to the appointment of Prince Surion Michaelevitch Woronzow, against whom personally they appear to have no objection, on the understanding, if it can be brought about, that the Paving Committee will be prepared to consent to the appointment of a disinterested party as umpire.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 122.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received May 26.)

Temple, May 25, 1862.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Murray's letter of the 18th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying letter from Messrs. Robinson and Preston, dated the 8th instant, preferring, on behalf of Dr. Buckell, a claim for compensation at the rate of five guineas a-day for his detention at Poti, owing to the delay of the Russian authorities in granting him a passport. A despatch from the British Vice-Consul at Poti reporting the facts of the case was also inclosed, and Mr. Murray was pleased to request that I would furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the course which should be pursued in this matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That your Lordship may, I think, instruct Her Majesty's Minister at St. Petersburgh, to bring to the attention of the Russian Minister of Foreign Affairs the conduct of the Director of the Custom-House at Poti, as reported by Her Majesty's Vice-Consul at that place, and to inquire whether his refusal to countersign Mr. Buckell's national passport, after the Chief of the Police had put his visé to it, and when the police at Poti had no Russian passports to deliver to him, was justified by any Russian law or regulation of the Imperial Government.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 123.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received June 17.)

Temple, June 16, 1869.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 3rd instant, stating that, with reference to my Report of the 24th of March last, respecting the claim of Messrs. Furness and Co. on the Paving Committee of Odessa, he was directed to transmit to me a further letter with its inclosures from Mr. G. Furness, reporting the steps taken since the date of my above-mentioned Report to bring about a settlement of his claim; and to request that I would take this case into consideration and report to your Lordship my opinion as to the course that it would be right and proper to take in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I am of opinion that Mr. G. Furness is acting in so reasonable a manner and in so fair a spirit, that he deserves any assistance that Her Majesty's Government can afford him. The difficulty arises from the existence of a written contract, and an express provision for settling all disputes by arbitration in a particular manner. But as it appears from the letter of Mr. Consul-General Stevens that the arbitrator named on behalf of the Paving Committee is absent in Paris, and that the arbitration may be indefinitely deferred, I see no objection to your Lordship directing Her Majesty's Minister at St. Petersburgh to bring the circumstances of the case to the attention of the Russian Minister for Foreign Affairs, and to request the good offices of the Imperial Government, if they can be properly afforded, to procure a speedy settlement of Messrs. Furness' claim by arbitration in accordance with the terms of their contract with the Paving Committee.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS

1869

No. 124.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received December 15.)

Temple, December 14, 1869.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 7th instant, stating that, with reference to my Report of the 25th May last, he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Ambassador at St. Petersburgh, respecting the detention of Mr. G. A. Buckell, at Poti, by the Russian authorities; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take this case into my consideration and furnish your Lordship with my opinion thereupon.

The previous papers were inclosed for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I am of opinion that your Lordship cannot properly press this question further on the attention of the Russian authorities. It appears that the Custom-house officers at Poti were acting in conformity with the Russian regulations as to passports in refusing to allow Dr. Buckell to leave the Empire without a Russian passports, and that Dr. Buckell might, if he had made proper inquiry, have obtained a Russian passport at Kutais, where he was resident, before he left that town. I am of opinion that his ignorance of the Russian regulations, if he was ignorant of them, cannot entitle him to claim compensation from the Russian Government for his detention at Poti, until a proper passport could be procured by him.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

Salvador.

No. 125.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received September 18.)

Temple, September 17, 1869.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 8th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires in Central America, inclosing the answer of the Salvadorian Government to his representations in support of the claim of Messrs. Kerford and Co., now represented by Messrs. Keogh and Hardiman, on account of the loss entailed upon them by a Decree of the Salvadorian Government, dated February 1865, by which certain bonds up to that time receivable in payment of 8 per cent. of Custom dues were rendered no longer so receivable, and were ordered to be exchanged for "billetes" of considerably less real value. That this claim, as I should see from the accompanying correspondence, was brought before Her Majesty's Government in 1865, and that, acting on the advice of Sir Robert Phillimore, they gave it their support, first, through Her Majesty's Consul at Sonsonate, and afterwards through Mr. Corbett; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take Mr. Corbett's despatch into my consideration, together with the former papers, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the course which should be pursued in regard to this claim.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the question in this case appears to me to depend upon the terms upon which the Government of Salvador are prepared to give the new "billetes" in substitution for 8 per cent. orders held by the representatives of the late Messrs. Kerford and Co. I think your Lordship will be justified in claiming for those gentlemen the full value of the 8 per cent. orders at the time when the law was passed declaring them no longer receivable at the Custom-house, and that, if the Salvadorian Government is prepared to give "billetes" at their present value in exchange for the 8 per cent. orders at their current value estimated at the time when the new was law passed, it will be an equitable arrangement which the representatives of Messrs. Kerford and Co. will do well to accept.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

Saxony.

No. 126.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received April 21.)

Temple, April 20, 1869.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 17th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to forward us a despatch from Mr. Burnley, Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Dresden (No. 7), inquiring whether there is any limitation as to the hour at which marriages can be celebrated at his house, under the Act 4 Geo. IV, cap. 91, and inclosing a telegraphic inquiry received from Mr. Burnley in September last, as to the legality of marriages celebrated in his house under the Act in question, together with the instruction addressed to him in reply (No. 20, September 14, 1868), from which Mr. Otway stated we would perceive that it was considered that, as Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at the Court of Dresden, Mr. Burnley must be held to be the permanent head of a Mission, and, as such, a Minister for the purposes of the Act.

Mr. Otway inclosed a copy of the Act for the purpose of reference, and further stated that he was to request that we would take the papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship, at our earliest convenience, with our opinion whether the instructions thus given to Mr. Burnley were correct, and if so, what further directions should be given to him as regards the hour at which marriages should be solemnized in his house.

Mr. Otway further stated that it was necessary to observe that Mr. Burnley did not, as might be supposed from Lord Stanley's despatch of the 14th September, hold what is technically called a "commission" as Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at the Court of Dresden, but that his appointment was made in the usual manner by a letter from Her Majesty's Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs to the Minister of Foreign Affairs at Saxony, of which a copy was therewith inclosed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into our consideration and have the honour to report—

That the instructions given to Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Dresden in September last are, in our opinion, correct. There is no legal restriction as to the hours within which marriages may be solemnized abroad under 4 Geo. IV, cap. 91.

We also think that Mr. Burnley is a Minister within the meaning of that Act.

We have, &c.
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
J. D. COLERIDGE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 127.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received June 3.)

Temple, June 1, 1869.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 29th ultimo, stating that I, on the 21st of February, 1868, reported upon the subject of the imprisonment of a Mr. Joseph Warburton at Dresden, and expressed my opinion that the case was not one which called for the interference of Her Majesty's Government. That since that date further papers had been received on the subject, from which it appears that no further attempt has been made to obtain the assistance of Her Majesty's Government by Mr. Warburton's friends, but that a Mr. Lister, who is his accuser, has been applying to Her Majesty's Representative at Dresden to assist him in obtaining materials for the prosecution of Mr. Warburton's brother in this country, and seems to think that he has reason to complain of the dilatoriness of the Saxon Courts of Justice. That Mr. Otway was accordingly directed by your Lordship to forward these papers to me, together with my previous Reports, and the papers bearing on them, and to request that I would favour your Lordship with my opinion as to whether there is anything in the case in its present phase, which would justify the intervention of Her Majesty's Representative.

1869

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That there does not appear to be any sufficient grounds for the intervention of Her Majesty's Representative at Dresden, in the present stage of the proceedings against Mr. Joseph Warburton.

It appears from Dr. Gruner's Memorial to Mr. Burnley, that the books to which Mr. Lister refers are the books of the firm, which were embargoed by the Counsel of Mr. Joseph Warburton as necessary for his defence, and not the books of Mr. Lister himself. And the statement on the Lister-Warburton case, drawn up by Mr. Lister's own lawyer at Dresden, sufficiently explains the circumstances under which the preliminary proceedings have extended over so long a period of time, the fact being attributable partly to the character of the numerous documents to be used in the case, which require to be translated for the use of the Court, and partly to an interruption in the proceedings caused by Mr. Lister's own application to have the books and other documents delivered up for transmission to England.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

---

Spain.

No. 128.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received January 27.)

Temple, January 26, 1869.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 4th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to us, with reference to the Report of the Law Officers of the 8th September last, the accompanying despatch from the British Vice-Consul at Santo Domingo, containing an answer to the inquiries which under their advice he was called upon to furnish with regard to the claim of Mr. Moxey on the Spanish Government on account of loss of property sustained by him on the occasion of the capture of the British steamer "Forward," by a Spanish cruizer for attempting to break the blockade of St. Domingo in 1864; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take the same, together with the previous correspondence, into our consideration, and furnish your Lordship with our opinion. 1. As to the manner in which Mr. Moxey's claim should now be dealt with. 2. How Mr. Leon should be instructed to deal with the money which was handed over to him by the Commander of the Spanish steamer "Africa," on account of certain passengers on board the "Forward;" and 3, whether the money so paid to him can properly be applied to the relief or necessities of the persons on whose account he received it.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That on a perusal of the papers we have been unable to satisfy ourselves of the good faith of Mr. Moxey, or of the evidence of any real foundation for his claim. Nothing really has been added by the despatch of Mr. Leon of the 7th November, 1868, to the facts or information already before Her Majesty's Government, and we entirely concur in the reasoning and the conclusions of the former Law Officers on this part of the case contained in their two Reports of the 30th December, 1867, and the 8th September, 1868, respectively.

We think that the statement of Mr. Moxey should be communicated to the Spanish Government, and that they should be requested to take the necessary steps to ascertain from the captain of the "Africa" whether he received any and what sum of money from Mr. Moxey, as Mr. Moxey alleges. If the captain admits the receipt of it, the Spanish Government ought to insist on its restitution. If, as is most probable, he denies any such receipt, his denial, we think, may properly be accepted.

2. We think Mr. Leon can only discharge himself of the moneys he has received by paying them to the persons, or to the legal representatives of the persons, on whose account he received them from the Spanish Government. If the keeping of the moneys in specie at the Consulate is either inconvenient or unsafe he must place them elsewhere, but, in such a case, at his own risk.

3. As far as relates to the three passengers on whose account he received money, Mr. Leon would probably have a right in any action brought by them against him to recover their money in an English Court, to set off what he had paid for their necessary relief and subsistence. And in the event of any demand from or on behalf of these three persons he would be justified, we think, in paying what he has received for them, less any sum which for such objects he has paid for them.

We have, &c.
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
J. D. COLERIDGE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 129.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received February 17.)

Temple, February 17, 1869.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 5th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letters from the Colonial Office and Admiralty, inclosing correspondence which related to the state of affairs in connection with the insurrection in Cuba, and to the use which is being made of the Port of Nassau by the insurgents, for the purpose of carrying on their operations; with the request that we would take the papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship at our earliest convenience with our opinion as to the course which Her Majesty's Government should pursue under the circumstances.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That as the Spanish Consul, in his letter of January 1869, to the Governor of the Bahamas, complains of English subjects making use of those islands for the purpose of raising recruits, which would clearly be a breach of the Foreign Enlistment Act, we think that Her Majesty's Secretary for the Colonies may properly instruct ths Governor to issue a Proclamation warning all persons against so doing, or otherwise infringing the Foreign Enlistment Act; and on proper evidence, to put in force the provisions of that Act, both such as relate to prosecutions and the detention of vessels; and as the Governor anticipates a considerable movement amongst the inhabitants of Nassau to give active support to the rebels, we consider it would be prudent to direct a ship of war to be placed upon that station, as suggested by the Governor.

We have, &c.
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
J. D. COLERIDGE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 130.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received February 18.)

Temple, February 18, 1869.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 6th February instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter from the Colonial Office, dated the 14th ultimo, inclosing a copy of a despatch from the Governor of the Bahamas, in which he requested instructions for his guidance in regard to the claim of Spain to exercise jurisdiction to a distance of three miles from the outlaying Cays off the Island of Cuba.

Mr. Hammond was pleased also to transmit to us the correspondence which had previously passed upon the subject,* and also the correspondence referred to in Governor Rawson's despatch, as having taken place in 1842–63, relative to a similar claim put forward by Her Majesty's Government in regard to jurisdiction off the coast of the Bahamas; and to request that we would take the papers into our consideration, and that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer which should be returned to the Colonial Office.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers submitted to us into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That it is difficult to answer confidently the question put to us, without some definition of the word "Cay," and some description of the character and situation of the particular "Cays" to which the question refers. The evidence on the subject, however, so far as it is before us, tends to the conclusion that the "Cays" are capable of being the objects of territorial dominion, and that Spain has acquired such territorial dominion over them; in which case the Spanish jurisdiction will extend to three miles from their coasts.

We have, &c.
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
J. D. COLERIDGE.
TRAVERS TWISS.

---

No. 131.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received April 3.)

My Lord,
Temple, April 2, 1869.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Murray's letter of the 31st ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Consul-General at the Havana, reporting the circumstances under which the British schooner "Galvanic" has been seized and condemned by the authorities in Cuba whilst, as is stated, on a voyage between Nassau and Santo Domingo. Mr. Murray was pleased also to inclose copies of despatches from the Governor of the Bahamas referring to this vessel; and to request that we would take this subject into our early consideration, and to report to your Lordship our opinion as to the instructions which should be addressed to Mr. Dunlop for his guidance in dealing with the case.

Mr. Murray also inclosed the draft of a letter to the Colonial Office in which, in consequence of our Report of the 17th ultimo, your Lordship suggested that a Proclamation should be issued by the Governor of the Bahamas, warning all persons against infringement of the Foreign Enlistment Act. That your Lordship is not, however, as yet informed as to the actual issue of such Proclamation.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this subject into consideration, and have the honour to report—

